This conference is being arranged by a special committee of which the Rev. R. H. Baker, Jr., of Waynesboro, is chairman, under the Department of Religious Education. The object of the Diocesan Young People's Conference is to consider plans for young people's activities other than Church School work and probably to effect the organization of a Diocesan Young People's Service League. In a way this conference is comparable to Camp Robert Hunt, which is operated by the Diocese of Southern Virginia.

MISSISSIPPI.

The first Regional Conference on Rural Work will be held at All Saints' College, Vicksburg, Mississippi, June 11-21, 1929. First planned at the 1925 General Convention, the Conference has been brought into being through the cooperation of the dioceses in the Province of Sewanee, together with the dioceses of Arkansas and those in the State of Texas.

The Regional Rural Conference is to unite our church workers in a study of the problems of Rural Work as carried on by the Episcopal Church. It supplements the excellent work of the rural schools which are being conducted on interdenominational lines by various universities.

The expense including room, board and registration for ten days, will be $18. Each person attending is asked to bring six towels, three sheets, three pillow cases, soap.

All correspondence should come to Rev. Val. H. Sessions, Rector's Study, St. Mary's Parish House, Bolton, Mississippi.

WINSLOW, ARKANSAS.

The Young People's Conference for the Province of the Southwest will be held at the Helen Dunlap School, Winslow, Arkansas, July 11-24.

For information concerning the Conference, write Dorothy M. Fischer, 1117 Texas Avenue, Texas.

WEST VIRGINIA.

The West Virginia Summer Conference of Church Workers will be held at St. Hilda's Hall, Charles Town, West Virginia, June 10-15.

Bishop Gravatt is the Conference Pastor and Bishop Strider, Dean of Instructors.

Registration Fee (except for West Virginians), $3.00; board and lodging for entire period (two in a room), $12.50: daily rates—rooms, $1.00, meals each 50 cents.

Information may be obtained from Miss Janet Treich, St. Hilda's Hall, Charles Town, West Virginia.

Robert E. Lee Hall, Blue Ridge, North Carolina, where inspirational conferences are held throughout the summer.

A card to the Blue Ridge Association, Blue Ridge, North Carolina, will bring you full information.

ALABAMA.

Under the auspices of the Young People's Service League of the Diocese of Alabama, Camp McDowell will be opened at Battles Wharf, on the Eastern Shore of Mobile, June 11-18.

The camp director is the Rev. R. A. Kirchhoffer, of Christ Church, Mobile, assisted by Miss Ruth Bettner. The Chaplain is the Rev. V. C. McMaster, rector of St. Andrew's Church, Birmingham. The Rev. T. H. Evans, of Christ Church, Tuscaloosa, and Mrs. W. M. Vaughan will act as chief counselors for the boys and girls, respectively. Other counselors and instructors are: the Rev. H. F. Schroeter, Mrs. H. F. Schroeter, Miss Ella Charles, Mrs. Florence Tarrant, and Mr. Leon C. Palmer, of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

The Department of Christian Social Service of the National Council is organized primarily for the promotion of social service and the social gospel, through the eighty-seven dioceses of the Church into the parishes. It provides annually, at the same time as the meeting of the National Conference of Social Work, opportunity for an exchange of methods and of suggestions dealing specifically with a religious approach to social problems, through addresses by experts in their particular fields, at its conference on Social Service.

This year in San Francisco, June 26-30, at its ninth annual Conference on Social Service, the Department plans to take up the relation of the Church to family life; publicity and social service, the plan and purpose of the Church Mission of Help; the possible cooperation between clergymen, psychiatrists and social workers; the care of the aged; the constructive use of leisure time; directors of institutions.

The Hotel Whitcomb offers rates (European plan) of $5 per room per day in double rooms with twin beds andbath, a nd $3.50 for single rooms. The reservations should be made early through the Department of Christian Social Service, 281 Fourth Avenue, New York.

MICHIGAN.

The Diocese of Michigan offers an opportunity for inspiration and training in a comprehensive summer plan comprising a series of six camps and conferences for various age groups. The Older Boys' Conference, June 20-27, under the direction of Mr. I. C. Johnson, Boys' Worker in the Diocese, is devoted to leadership training, vocational counselling and Christian fellowship for boys of high school age, and will be held at Camp Frisbie, Waterford, Michigan. Hillsdale Summer Conference is a leadership and study conference for men and women, with special attention to young married people, Church School leaders and clergy. The conference has been planned by Mr. E. E. Piper, Diocesan Superintendent of Religious Education, and will be carried out under the direction of the Rev. R. W. Woodroofe, rector of St. John's Church, Detroit, and chairman of the Hillsdale Summer Conference Commission. Camp Frisbie will be open for boys between the ages of nine and thirteen from June 29 to August 24. Camp Chickagami, a new venture, will operate at Black Lake, near Onaway, Michigan, from July 5 to August 16, and is especially for boys from 13 to 17 years of age. The summer program for the diocese opened with a great Young People's Conference at Alpena May 24, 25 and 26, and will close with a similar conference at Black Lake, August 26-September 1. The latter is designed especially for the convenience of young people in the extreme north end of the diocese.

THE CORNELL CONFERENCE.

The Church Regional Conference on Rural Church and Social Work will hold its fifth annual session at Ithaca, New York, July 22-August 3, inclusive. This conference is an extension of that held annually at Madison, Wisconsin, and is fostered by the National Division for Rural Work.

The purpose of this conference is educational, for clergy actually engaged in rural work, and those whose work is so strategically placed as to have rural possibilities.

The time and place of this conference are arranged to include attendance at the School for Town and Country Ministers conducted by the Agricultural Department of Cornell University, for which an excellent faculty of experts in rural study has been assembled.

The conference group will room and dine together to promote fellowship and exchange of ideas, to make possible a program of daily devotions, and to reduce expenses. Father Hawkins of the Order of the Holy Cross, on furlough from Liberia, will be the conference chaplain.

The registration fee is $2.00: one registration includes both the Cornell School and the Church Regional Conference.

The Rev. C. H. Allison, of Warsaw, New York, is Conference Director, and the Rev. Leslie F. Chard, of Dunkirk, New York, is Registrar, to whom all inquiries shoulld be addressed.

L. F. C.

MOODY BIBLE INSTITUTE OF CHICAGO.

The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago has announced its usual summer Bible Conferences. The eight already named are located at convenient points reaching from the Atlantic to the Rocky Mountains. Eminent Bible teachers and evangelists have been secured to build programs for each conference that will prove both highly instructive and inspirational. Attention is also given to work with children and young people, and as heretofore skilled leaders of the song program have been assigned to each gathering.

The locations and dates of the conferences are as follows: Ocean City, New Jersey, June 30 to September 2; Eagles Mere, Pa., July 6 to 14; Ocean Grove, N. J., July 22 to August 4; Montrose, Pa., teacher training school, July 8 to 14, followed by the ministerial institute, July 15 to 25; Hendersonville, N. C., July 28 to August 11; Colorado Springs, Col., August 11 to 25; Cedar Lake, Indiana, August 17 to 25.

TENNESSEE.

Camp Gailor-Maxon, Ovoca, Tullahoma, Tennessee, will be held July 2-9. The camp while under the auspices of the Y. P. S. L. of the Diocese of Tennessee, is for all young people between the ages of 14 and 25.

All registrations accompanied by check for $2.00 should be sent to Mrs. R. W. Nicolson, Grace Church, Vance and Lauderdale, Memphis, Tennessee, before June 10.

The object of Camp Gailor-Maxon is to furnish to the nation and the Church men and women of lofty ideals and strong purpose as they render service in the Kingdom of God.

Church Intelligence

Forward Movement For Church Unity.

The Associated Press reports that action to effect Church unions has been taken at conventions in three cities here and abroad.

In Indianapolis the Synod meeting of the Reformed Church of the United States adopted a report favoring union with the United Brethren Church and the Evangelical Synod of North America.

In Edinburgh, Scotland, the Church of Scotland and the United Free Church of Scotland agreed, at their respective assemblies to unite.

The most significant move has come from the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, which met in St. Paul, Minn., May 24. By practically unanimous rising vote the Assembly adopted a far-reaching recommendation looking toward organic union of five large Protestant Church bodies.

The proposal, made on the floor of the Assembly, provided for appointment of commissions to confer with similar commissions from the Protestant Episcopal Church, the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the Presbyterian Church of the United States, generally known as the Presbyterian Church, South.

The action was taken in answer to an invitation for a commission to consider union, extended by the Protestant Episcopal Church at its General Convention in Washington in October, 1928. Similarly, other Church bodies have had under consideration proposals for union, but this action is the first concrete movement towards union.

St. Luke's Tokyo.

Dr. Teusler, head of St. Luke's International Hospital, Tokyo, has recently received word from the hospital's training college for nurses that more than six hundred applicants had been received. Only thirty-three could be accepted on account of limited dormitory space. Only high school graduates are accepted. These were all from good schools, and were the daughters of doctors, educators, bank officials, officers of the department of education.

This is a striking and gratifying proof of the changed attitude toward the profession of nursing. Fifteen years ago the term "Trained Nurse" carried with it much odium and distaste. Doctors and others in Tokyo assured Dr. Teusler it would be practically impossible for many years to interest educated Japanese women in the problems of nursing. Dr. Teusler says: "When the school (St. Luke's) was formally opened about 1921 our insistence that only high school graduates would be accepted would have been laughed at had it not been for the native courtesy of the Japanese, and every one connected with the undertaking prophesied failure." Now St. Luke's College for Nursing is the first to receive government recognition as a training school of college rank.

Dr. Teusler writes further: "No organized public health or charity relief work, as we know it in the United States exists in Japan. All through the country small private groups of people are struggling, with almost no funds to help the conditions immediately about them. Probably nowhere in the world is there open such a magnificent opportunity for a great, effective demonstration as the capital of Japan affords us in the relief of human suffering. Famines in China, India, and in other great sections of the world, are terrible and pitiful in their appeal. The difference is, however, that in Japan there is an intelligent public, capable of wiping out these pest-holes of suffering, if leadership can be provided in their midst to work out, along practical lines, methods that are adequate. It has taken us many decades in the United States to progress from sporadic, ill-judged, and badly organized individual efforts at charity, to concentrated, organized, efficient methods whereby actual relief is really afforded to those suffering and in need.

"The growth of public health and preventive medicine in the United States is a splendid tribute to the guidance and cooperative power of the American people. As yet no such cooperation exists in Japan, and because of the highly individualistic tendency of the people and their patriarchal form of government, it is absolutely essential that a demonstration be made in their midst along convincing lines, if public health and disease prevention methods are to be introduced into Japan successfully during the next forty to fifty years. The Japanese know this as well as we do, and that is one reason they have such faith in the leadership and value of St. Luke's International Hospital and Medical Center."

Brotherhood to Conduct Jamestown-Williamsburg Pilgrimage.

The eighth annual Jamestown-Williamsburg Pilgrimage of Episcopal Churchmen will be held this year June 15-16. The pilgrimage is conducted under the auspices of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, but is not limited to the members of the organization.

The purpose of the pilgrimage is the celebration of the Holy Communion at the Robert Hunt Shrine in Jamestown, Virginia, commemorating the first Communion held on American soil. The pilgrimage is usually largely attended by Churchmen from Richmond, Norfolk and other Virginia cities. This year a number from cities outside the state have indicated that they expect to attend.

Dean Peacock of Christ Church, Norfolk, will conduct the service this year in conjunction with the Rev. W. A. R. Goodwin, rector of Bruton Parish Church, Williamsburg, Va. Through the courtesy of Dr. J. A. C. Chandler, President of William and Mary College, the pilgrims will be accomodated at the college dormitories. Meals will be served in the college dining hall.

The party from Richmond will leave Mayo Memorial House in automobiles at 3:00 P. M., Saturday, June 15. The cost for Richmond pilgrims will be $3.75, which includes lodging and meals at the college and the incidental expenses of the pilgrimage. The registration fee should be paid to Mr. Everard Meade, Jr., on Saturday afternoon before leaving Richmond.

Any further information concerning the Richmond pilgrimage may be secured through Mr. Richard P. Winston, 205 North Plum Street, Richmond, Va.

Prayer For Commander Byrd.

Bishop Freeman, of Washington Diocese, has authorized a special collect, to be said daily in the Cathedral at Washington for Commander Richard E. Byrd, of Virginia, and his party, now encamped in "Little America" prepared for a dash for the South Pole. The collect follows:

"Almighty Father, in whose constant keeping are all Thy children, we commend to Thy loving care and protection Thy sons who in the spirit of high adventure have gone forth into the far seas and lands of the South. Guard them and their kinsfolk from all dangers, sustain and reward them with Thy Favor, and in Thy good time fetch them home and give them the joy of service well done; through Him who ever liveth to make intercession for us, Thy Son, our Saviour, Jesus Christ."

The Consecration of Dr. Abbott.

The Rev. H. P. Almon Abbott, D. D., was consecrated the second Bishop of Lexington on Wednesday morning, May 15, in Christ Church Cathedral, Lexington, Ky.

The day of consecration was begun with a celebration of the Holy Communion in the Cathedral at eight o'clock, the Rev. C. S. Hale, acting Dean, being the celebrant.

Long before the hour of the service of consecration, the Cathedral was packed, and when finally the procession entered, every available foot of space was occupied. The long line of procession was broken into three parts, each headed by a crucifer. Choir, diocesan officials, visiting and diocesan clergy, the bishop-elect, the nine visiting bishops and finally the Presiding Bishop with his chaplain, the Rev. G. Warfield Hobbs, formed in the parish house and marched through the streets to the main doors of the Cathedral. The bishop-elect was accompanied by his attending presbyters, the Rev. James D. Gibson and the Rev. Theodore S. Will. The Rev. Wm. Dern was master of ceremonies.

The Presiding Bishop was celebrant at the Holy Communion. The Rt. Rev. James M. Maxon, D. D., Bishop-Coadjutor of Tennessee, read the Epistle; the Gospel was read by the Rt. Rev. Durwyn T. Owen, D. D., Bishop of Niagara. The certificate of election was read by the Rev. C. S. Hale; the canonical testimonial by Mr. W. W. Pettis; the evidence of ordination by the Rev. Robert J. Murphy; the consent of Standing Committees by Mr. C. M. Harbison, and the consent of bishops by the Rt. Rev. R. E. L. Strider, D. D., Bishop-Coadjutor of West Virginia.

The Presiding Bishop as consecrator was assisted by the Rt. Rev. Lewis W. Burton, D. D., retired Bishop of Lexington, and the Rt. Rev. Charles E. Woodcock, D. D., Bishop of Kentucky, as co-consecrators. The Rt. Rev. Edward T. Helfenstein, D. D., Bishop-Coadjutor of Maryland, and the Rt. Rev. Frank DuMoulin, D. D., were the presenters. The Rt. Rev. Wm. T. Capers, D. D., read the Litany, and the Rt. Rev. Philip Cook, D. D., Bishop of Delaware, was the preacher.

Bishop Cook's sermon had for its text, "Let a man so account of us as ministers of Christ, stewards of the mysteries of God" (1 Cor. 4:1). Concluding a careful survey of the place and work of the Apostolic Ministry in the Christian Church, Bishop Cook addressed himself directly to the Bishop-elect.

After the consecration, a luncheon was served at the Lexington Country Club, at which time Bishop Murray, Bishop Burton and Bishop Abbott spoke briefly. Later in the afternoon, a reception was given in the Parish House of the Church of the Good Shepherd, in honor of Bishop and Mrs. Abbott.

"Dick" Sheppard Appointed Dean of Canterbury.

The Church of England Newspaper reports that the King has approved the appointment of the Rev. Hugh Richard Lawrie Sheppard, C. H., M. A., D. D., Honorary Chaplain to His Majesty the King, to the Deanery of Canterbury, vacant by the appointment of the Very Reverend George Kennedy Allen Bell, M. A., D. D., to the Bishopric of Chichester.

Hugh Richard ("Dick") Lawrie Sheppard, noted primarily in America as the author of "The Impatience of a Parson", was edccated at Marlgorough and Trinity Hall, Cambridge. It was in 1914 that he was appointed vicar of St. Martin's-in-the-Fields, where he did the work which made him universally beloved. He threw the church open day and night throughout the war, and this practice was continued afterwards for the benefit of the "down and out". "Dick" Sheppard acted also as a chaplain in France, receiving many decorations. His popular services were broadcast regularly, and he became known to thousands as the "Wireless Parson". In 1921 he was lecturer on pastoral theology and select preacher at Cambridge. Next year he was appointed Proctor in Convocation for the Diocese of London. He was also honorary secretary of the Life and Liberty Movement. In November, 1926, he was compelled by ill-health to resign his charge, being succeeded by the Rev. "Pat" McCormick. In the New Year Honours list of 1927 his name appeared as a Companion of Honour, a high distinction. He also received an hon. D. D. from Glasgow University.

WASHINGTON.

Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman, D. D., Bishop

Seven Communions Confer at Washington Cathedral.

The Commission on Faith and Order, which in cooperation with the representatives of six communions other than the Episcopal Church, is working to carry forward the work done at the Lausanne Conference in 1927, has been in conference during the past week at Washington Cathedral, under the auspices of the College of preachers. This has brought to the city many clergymen from other places and of unusual ability, a number of whom were assigned to the several churches in Washington and preached the sermons on Sunday, June 2.

The Bishop's Garden.

The Bishop's Garden, Washington Cathedral Close, was dedicated on May 31 by Bishop Freeman at the annual meeting of "All Hallows' Guild", which has direct charge of all landscaping of the grounds in the Cathedral Close. In his address, the Bishop spoke of the historic interest of the box and other shrubs and trees in the garden and expressed the hope that there would soon be in bronze or marble a statue of the late Bishop Satterlee, first Bishop of Washington, and founder of the Cathedral.

Emmanuel Church, Anacostia, observed with special exercises on Monday evening, May 27, the sixtieth anniversary of the founding of the church. Service was held in the church with addresses by Rev. Wm. Oscar Roome, Jr., former rector of the church, and the Rt. Rev. George W. Davenport, of Easton, Md., son of the late Rev. W. G. Davenport, who was rector of the church for twenty-six years. The Rev. Luther B. Frank is doing splendid work as its present pastor.

M. M. W.

VIRGINIA.

Rt. Rev. H. St. George Tucker, Bishop.

Impression of the Last Diocesan Council.

As an onlooker, though some time participant as a member, the first impression was the eminent success attending the services of the hundredth anniversary of the Diocesan Missionary Society. The note struck in the first address was a high one, and to this eminence those that followed readily and easily attained, and sustained the noble qualities of the theme and thought throughout. Old-time memories were revived for those who could remember Bishops Johns and Whittle. The furore was vividly recalled over the use of flowers in the churches, which Bishop Whittle in his pastoral had advised against, if not forbidden, and the notable debate at Fredericksburg Council, when the matter came up for discussion at the council, resulting in an overwhelming endorsement of the Bishop in the loyalty of the delegates to him. When the lavish display of palms and flowers is now observed, with its necessary cost to the churches, while the missionary effort is being cut to the quick to meet the want of funds, we wonder how far wrong was the Bishop as he saw the temptation to over do the desire "to tell it with flowers"?

Again the Zion movement among the colored people toward our Church. What was to be done about it so as to help them and not hurt the Church? Council after Council discussed the matter till it was finally settled as stated by giving them a separate place in the Church as a convocation under the control of the Bishop and Council. Many other subjects of like interest might be mentioned, whose revival made glad the memories of those who had cognizance of them if not being active participants in them.

Again, it was well that the younger brethren might be told of them, that new inspiration might be gathered as they are busy now in furthering and commending the claim of the Protestant Episcopal Church to its share in holding the people to a due and proper appreciation of the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

But, ah! these buts how they obtrude themselves on all things mundane—there was regrettable omission in the name of Dr. Pike Powers as the personality behind the D. M. S., who brought it to its success and usefulness of which the speaker having this period in charge emphasized so splendidly. Dr. Powers was the D. M. S. No society or movement runs itself. There must be a person, a personality behind and about it. This was shown in the delightful and informative address on the mountain work by Archdeacon Neve. He was the personality behind that work. Living he had the opportunity to tell about it. Dr. Powers being dead, a king had arisen who knew not Joseph, and his name is not mentioned except in a casual way which only emphasized the lack of the proper mention which he so eminently deserved. It seemed to be the fault of no one. His name and person did not come within the vision and purview of any of the writers or speakers. But his works do follow him and the D. M. S. lives today at its best, because of the splendid impetus and movement—even life—that he put into it.

Coming to the Council proper the first impression was the splendid presiding officer the council has in its Bishop. Urbane, dignified, fair and just, business moved along with wisdom and placidity to the time set for adjournment with everything ready for that event, happy to those who at this time and day are fast making the council a thing of committees in their desire to hurry through the work of the council. This was not so noticeable at the present session as the addresses and sermons touching the anniversary saved it from the barrnness of spiritual food and uplift, which is too often lacking at our present-day church gatherings.

The reports to the council were many and of much and general interest, but received by the council all too perfunctorily. A speaker appointed to discuss one of these reports would perhaps have emphasized their salient points and perhaps stirred up some discussion of them and thus prevented their being received in a merely formal way, which is not wise, in the writer's opinion.

The resolution on Unity (so-called) brought out the only animated discussion of the council and gave the reporters something to write about. To the writer it seemed a harmless affair, though its opponents saw in it a chance for looseness in keeping the law of the Church without showing any more liberality to other churches than that which has always been practiced in Virginia. A more outspoken and decided opposition to it might have brought about a different result.

(Continued on page 22.)

Family Department

JUNE.

1. Saturday.
9. Second Sunday after Trinity.
11. Tuesday. S. Barnabas.
16. Third Sunday after Trinity.
23. Fourth Sunday after Trinity.
24. Monday. Nativity of S. John Baptist.
29. Saturday. S. Peter.
30. Fifth Sunday after Trinity.

COLLECT FOR SECOND TRINITY AFTER TRINITY.

O Lord, Who, never failest to help and govern those whom Thou dost bring up in Thy steadfast fear and love; Keep us, we beseech Thee, under the protection of Thy good providence, and make us to have a perpetual fear and love of Thy Holy Name; through Jesus Christ Our Lord. Amen.

COLLECT FOR ST. BARNABAS THE APOSTLE.

O Lord God Almighty, Who didst endue Thy Holy Apostle Barnabas with singular gifts of the Holy Ghost; Leave us not, we beseech Thee, destitute of Thy manifold gifts, nor yet of grace to use them always to Thy honor and glory; through Jesus Christ Our Lord. Amen.

SILENCE.

God must have loved the silence,
For He laid a stillness on the sunset and the dawn;
Upon the moment when the bird has gone,
Leaving a note high-hung within the glade
More sweet than when he sang it. Moons that pass,
Too full of forest's changelessness for sound;
Creeping of little frosts along the ground;
Silences of summer growth among the grass—
God must have deeply loved the silence.
For is there one of us who has not known
Promptings to silence that he speaks not of?
What of an old remorse, a hope that is too deeply hoped.
A grief outgrown, and silent old unconquerable love?

—Barnet.

The Message of the Jerusalem Council.

Our message is Jesus Christ. He is the revelation of what God is and of what man through Him may become. In Him we come face to face with the Ultimate Reality of the universe; He makes known to us God as our Father, perfect and infinite in love and in righteousness; for in Him we find God incarnate, the final, yet ever-unfolding, revelation of the God in whom we live and move and have our being.

We hold that through all that happens, in light and in darkness, God is working, ruling and over-ruling. Jesus Christ, in His life and through His death and resurrection, has disclosed to us the Father, the Supreme Reality, as almighty Love, reconciling the world to Himself by the Cross, suffering with men in their struggle against sin and evil, bearing with them and for them the burden of sin, forgiving them as they, with forgiveness in their own hearts, turn to Him in repentance and faith, and creating humanity anew for an ever-growing, ever-enlarging, everlasting life.

The vision of God in Christ brings and deepens the sense of sin and guilt. We are not worthy of His love; we have by our own fault opposed His holy will. Yet that same vision which brings the sense of guilt brings also the assurance of pardon, if only we yield ourselves in faith to the spirit of Christ so that His redeeming love may avail to reconcile us to God.

We reaffirm that God, as Jesus Christ has revealed Him, requires all His children, in all circumstances, at all times, and in all human relationships, to live in love and righteousness for His glory. By the resurrection of Christ and the gift of the Holy Spirit God offers His own power to men that they may be fellow workers with Him, and urges them on to a life of adventure and self-sacrifice in preparation for the coming of His Kingdom in its fulness.—International Missionary Council—Jerusalem 1928.

The Child's Right to Play.

We are working toward a great ideal of American childhood—the ideal of every child sound in body, mind, and spirit. Though the experience of the world teaches us that we shall never quite realize the entire fulfillment of our ideal, it teaches likewise that by holding the ideal before us, by working courageously toward it, we are traveling on the only road to success for tomorrow and tomorrow's children. Out of our efforts to reach perfection, something great will come. The national observance of May Day, which last spring was proclaimed Child Health Day by a joint resolution of Congress, is an earnest of our hopes and our endeavors. It is a visible sign of our inward pledge that American childhood shall be made and kept sound.

With each succeeding May Day a new problem is laid before us and we, as a nation, expand our child health programs to meet the new demand as well as to carry on the work we have already begun.

This May Day challenges us to supply such leadership as shall assure to every child opportunity for real play, in the right amount, of the right kind, and in the right place. So complex has our civilization become that we are in danger of creating a world where children literally will have no proper space for play and where many artificial sources of amusement will have crowded out real recreation. Mrs. Herbert Hoover has said recently in a foreword to a book on girls' athletics: "It is a great mistake to think we 'love sport' because we like to watch others. Far from it. That is merely an ability to let ourselves be entertained by big public games, by spectacles, as we are by a host of other things—movies, radios, automobiles, anything that will do the work for us. We must learn how much more of a thrill it is to throw ourselves into play and action, and get from it refreshment and invigoration of muscles, nerves, and spirit."

In the lives of the children and youth of our land, or of any other, all the movies and radios and automobiles that could be manufactured could not supply the need for active play. The need is serious. The instinct to play is one of the great natural forces, urging youth to physical development, mental growth, and social adaptation. If, as educators and those concerned with child welfare believe, the opportunity to obey this instinct is seriously endangered, then for us, who are responsible both for the children we have brought into the world and the environment into which we have brought them, it becomes an obligation to protect the inalienable right of childhood to real play.

Fortunately we have learned to appreciate the importance of this play. We have learned that it is a fundamental for physical and mental health. Play is a major source of physical vitality in childhood and youth alike. Through it, heart, lungs, blood vessels, kidneys and nervous structures are developed and strengthened. When youth runs and jumps in out-of-door play, it does vastly more than "work off surplus energy". It creates energy not for today only but for the tomorow of maturity.

Nor is it only the physical body which profits. Through play youth acquires motor skill, that great asset to every human being, that great liberator from the bonds of self-consciousness and a sense of inferiority. And beyond the acquisition of motor skill, youth rises through real play with others out of doors to such social adaptability as is a vital part of the art of living.

This playtime of life, the years of childhood and youth, is a period for us to respect, to protect, to lead. Therefore, because we know that real play is fundamental to the well-being of youth and because we are aware of the forces of life today which threaten, we need to take the child's right to play clubs. Before all of these civic agencies, childhood and youth bring their need for real play and real leadership in it. This is the message and appeal of May Day—Child Health Day 1929, Youth is the Strength of America; Make American Youth Strong.—American Child Health News.

Danger in Making Threats.

Billy did not come in until dark one evening.

"Billy, the next time you stay out after dark, you shall spend the following evening in bed," threatened his mother.

It was not long before Billy did stay out after dark. He had become so interested in a ball game on the vacant lot a few blocks away from home that he forgot the time.

"Tomorrow night," his mother said, "you will go to bed as soon as you have finished your supper. Now remember."

So the next evening when Billy was being served his desert his mother reminded him that as soon as he had finished he was to go to bed. He objected and coaxed but Mother was holding out firmly when some friends from another town drove up. There was a boy just Billy's age. These friends had often entertained Billy in their home and it would never do to put him to bed and leave his visiting chum to pass the evening alone.

Consequently Billy was allowed to stay up, and not only that, but he went over to the ball ground again and stayed even later than the previous evening. And was anything done about it? Not a thing. The parents were having a good time and the children were forgotten until they reappeared.

It is apparent, then, that the next time Billy is threatened he will be quite unmoved, for he will hope that something will turn up to rescue him from the penalty.

Gertrude was noted for her carelessness in losing her handkerchiefs, mittens, pencils and other belongings that are easily misplaced by an active child.

The truth was that her mother fussed about these losses without doing anything to help Gertrude correct the habit. The child had no pockets in her dresses, and her coat pocket was too shallow for mittens, so these should have been fastened together in some way by snappers or tape in order that she could care for them at school. Her pencil could have been tied to her notebook.

However, no such helpful devices were prepared for her, and Gertrude continued to be most unfortunate in losing things, so her mother finally said that the next time she lost anything she couldn't play with her dolly for a whole month.

Now it can readily be seen that this punishment, aside from being out of proportion and unsuited to the offense, was a threat that showed the mother's lack of understanding. In her impatience to cure her of carelessness she unwisely threatened her little daughter with what she felt was a real penalty that ought to bring quick results.

Within a few days Gertrude lost her new pencil. In her anxiety not to let Mother know and not to have Teacher's disapproval when class time came, Gertrude took a pencil from another girl's desk. To add to the difficulty she denied the pencil was stolen.

It was a pitiable situation. Controlled by fear, the child had been driven from mere carelessness to stealing and lying. Her mother might easily have said, "Now, let's see if you can't go a whole day without losing your things." Then this time could have been extended to three days or a week, always with the sympathy of Mother displayed at each report. Gertrude would then have felt safe in confessing when she did make a mistake or experience a loss. But as it was, Mother's effort—a threat—was the rock upon which she was wrecked.

To Billy the threat had proved unreliable, to Gertrude it had proved tragic. In neither case was any constructive result obtained, nor will a threat ever solve a problem of discipline satisfactorily. Threats nearly always result in complications rather than in character-building.—Edith Reid, in National Kindergarten Association Release.

HIS.

Whate'er my charge, in Him no charge is seen,
A glorious sun, that waves not, nor declines;
Above the clouds and storms He walks serene,
And sweetly on His people's darkness shines.
All may depart—I fret not, nor repine,
While I my Saviors am, while He is mine.

He saves me falling, lifts me up when down:
Reclaims me wandering, guards from every foe;
Plants on my worthless brow the victor's crown,
Which, in return, before His face I throw,
Grieve that I cannot better grace His shrine,
Who deigns to own me His, as He is mine.

While here, alas! I know but half His Love,
But half discern Him, and but half adore,
But when I meet Him in the realms above
I hope to love Him better, praise Him more,
And feel and talk, amid the choir divine,
How fully I am His, and He is mine

Selected.

For the Young Folks

For The Southern Churchman.

PRAYER OF YOUTH.

Julian R. Meade.

I pray that I may gracefully mature
Near this wood now wild with song:
Placidly wise that worlds must endure
Of men both impotent and strong.

Then I shall not doubt when white moons wane,
Nor when darkened suns shall not rise;
For I will know no detriment or pain
Is feared by trusting eyes.

For The Southern Churchman.

Queen Victoria Sends a Present!

(True Story.)

George Morgan Knight, Jr.

Chapter I.

Captain Robertson Tells a Story.

Outside a storm was blowing in from the sea. The wind blew the rain against the old window panes and the lightning flashes lighted up the wet scene, while the trees bowed down to let the king of the storm and his train of attendants pass.

The tin roof acted as the drum in the parade and the rain beat out the time in a regular military step with a flourish, when the rain came abreast of the house.

Before an open fire with logs constantly popping and the flames stealing across them, sat an old sea captain gazing in the fire and seemed to see the procession of his past days march before him in his reverie. The smoke from his pipe made slow circles as it rose.

His daughter sat by a lamp reading. Her mother, gray and bent with the years, was knitting on the other side of the cheerful hearth and seemed to keep time with the popping logs, as she knitted away.

Suddenly from the doorway came a child's voice: "I'm scared, muvver. The storm waked me up. The thunder and lightnin, is so bad. I just had to come down."

"Why, Thomas!" his mother exclaimed, as she looked up and saw her son in the doorway in his little pink pajamas, peering at them all so comfortably fixed, while the storm raged outdoors. "I thought you were asleep and didn't hear the storm."

He was on the verge of tears, and they glistened in the corners of his big, brown eyes. His mother had not the heart to make him go back.

"Come to grandpa, Thomas; you can sit on my lap," Captain Robertson said, coming out of his reverie; "but my boy mustn't get scared of storms. You'll be a man some day and perhaps sail the seas. What then, when the storms come?"

"But the lightnin' is so terrible, grandpa. And the wind, listen," and as he came and climbed up in his grandfather's lap, the wind gave a mighty growl; "hear it? When I am bigger I won't be scared But I'm little now. It might blow me away, you see."

"Never, not while you're with us, Thomas," spoke up his grandmother, and she stopped knitting a moment and smiled across at him. "No, you're safe here. This house is old but it is strong."

"Tell me a story, grandpa; you know so many. Please, and I won't hear the storm or see the lightnin'."

He had nestled up in his grandfather's arms and was snug and warm. It was cozy here and he was safe with his beloved grand-parents and nothing could harm him now! So many menacing things seemed to have lurked in the shadows and corners of his room, and along the hall and long winding stairway. But with courage of his seven years he had managed to get to the library and find his friends, and how happy it was that he was here. And now his good grandpapa was going to tell him a story. He just knew it.

"Indeed I will, for my little boy," he answered for his mind was full of past events; "for this storm reminds me of many things when I was on the sea. We had to buck up against many a storm and we didn't have wireless then either, to aid us."

"Tell about getting the present from Queen Victoria," suggested the boy's mother, for she always liked to hear it, and it was one of her father's favorites, besides.

"Very well, then," Captain Robertson said, as he filled his pipe and Thomas snuggled down again into the warm place by his left arm. "It was many years ago when I was quite young, and had your grandmother's promise to be my wife, when I returned. She had begged me not to go to sea again, but I had promised the captain I would go, for I was then first mate, and I stood in position for a promotion in the near future."

He stopped for a moment and drew from his pipe, and then continued.

"We had been having rough sailing for five days since we left New York; and the rain and winds had swept nearly everything movable on deck overboard, that wasn't under hatches. On the fifth day out the weather cleared, the sun shone out. And mighty glad we all were to get out from the stuffy inside of the cabins, and feel the warm August sun on our backs. The passengers were relieved, and in fact, we all were. For a storm at sea wasn't pleasant, with lightning flashing, the roar of thunder overhead, mountains of water in front, and all around us.

"Toward evening of that fifth day, I was called on deck along with many of the crew. On the pitching horizon there was a tiny object. The Captain handed me a spy-glass and said to report what I saw. When I had gotten the range, although it was a long distance away, I made out an English ship in distress. All of her riggin' was gone."

(To be continued.)

For The Southern Churchman.

Bedros Winning His Letter.

W. Edward Raffety.

Bright was the Syrian morning on which I met him.

I had spent two hours listening to the heartening tales of orphan graduates of Near East Relief orphanages who are now making good. My informant is the Near East Relief director for a large area. But more than that, he is a chum and father to scores of these boys. Many of them affectionately call him "Hairig", the Armenian word for father.

"Would you like to see some of these boys at their work?" I accepted the invitation eagerly. It was a triumphal march for me from stall to stall and shop to shop through the narrow crooked streets of that ancient city. On the right and on the left boys greeted my friend. "You see," he said, "I am a Pharisee. I love salutations in the market place."

"But you deserve their grateful courtesies," I replied.

Finally we came to Bedros, the keenest, cleanest-looking of them all. He was busy at his bench in a cabinet shop, and what beautiful work he was turning out. A clever designer, a maker of wonderful inlaid pieces.

Returning to the bachelor home of my friend, I heard more fully the story of Bedros.

Away up in the interior, picked up as an orphan, gifts from American friends of little children had fed, housed, clothed and trained him. The very day he was leaving the orphanage, which had been home, school and church to him, the superintendent called him into his office, where the two alone had a heart-to-heart talk. The Superintendent told him how American boys in high school and college, anxious for all-round development, through meritorious conduct, literary ability, or athletic achievement, won the school or college letter. "And," said the Superintendent, "Bedros, I have made this letter, a big 'B' out of a piece of blue cloth. You have no sweater on which to sew it, but I want you to take from me this letter 'B', first letter of your own name; also stands for Behavior: yours has been excellent; but it also stands for Business, the trade you have learned here in the industrial school. You are leaving this sheltered place to go to a distant city to serve a new master. For awhile you will be in a working boys' home, but very soon you will be expected to be fully self-supporting. Then that 'B' will mean Bed and Board and later on a Bank account, and maybe a Business all your own. Bedros, you will keep this letter as our secret pledge to each other. Whenever you look at it think of me. That 'B' means that I Believe in you."

My friend turned to me and said, "Surely Bedros, in his quiet, modest way, has made good. Do you know he was not here with me long until he said, 'I believe I can now support myself'. For months he has done this very thing. So the letter 'B' really means Bed and Board, and it also means a Bank account. I am his 'bank' and I know. For a long time he has been saving so he can pay his boat passage to South America.

"Now comes what to me is the thing that makes that 'B' Beautiful. In the market one day he met a boy of the same town in which he was born. The new-old chum from whom so long ago he was separated, said, 'I know where your brother is.' Bedros' heart leaped with excitement. The money he had been saving for his trip for South America at once found its way to that only and long-lost Brother. What a 'B' for him! Yes, his brother Krekor is here. He had learned the shoe-makers trade. They live together."

I could tell from my friend's radiant face that the best part of the story was about to come. And it did come. Here it is. "The two brothers, thriftily, industrious, were laying by their joint earnings so that together they might go to the land of their dreams, when one day a man stopped in front of Bedros' shop whom he recognized at once as a neighbor and friend of his father. The man knew him and told Bedros of the sad death of Bedros' father, but', said the old neighbor, 'I have good news for you. Your mother is living. I saw her only two weeks ago. She is matron of a Working Boys' Home'.

"Now," said my friend, "Bedros and his brother are saving every day so that they can bring their mother here and be a reunited family, with the Blessed Mother embracing her two lost Boys."

Have they given up their dream of a new chance in South America? My friend replied, "I think not, for only the other day Bedros said to me: 'If mother wants to go, Krekor and I have decided that when we can save enough money we will all go. Then, "Hairag," my "B" will mean Bon Voyage. That's a wonderful "B"!' "

So may it be, and let us even hope that Bedros will some day have a Business of his own. And don't we wish it might be in Boston, or Buffalo, or Burlington, or Bozeman, or even in Beautiful California, where the writer of these lines lives and will often think of Bedros who won his letter.

THE BEE'S WISDOM.

Said a little wondering maiden
To a bee with honey laden:
"Bee, in all the flowers you work,
Yet in some doth poison lurk."

"That I know, my little maiden,"
Said the bee with honey laden,
"But the poison I forsake,
And the honey only take."

"Cunning bee, with honey laden,
That is right", replied the maiden.
"So will I from all I meet,
Only take the good and sweet."

—The Presbyterian of the South.

A Living Chair.

To suggest that four boys may sit comfortably, each on the knee of another, sounds like telling them to lift themselves by their own bootstraps. One wonders what the "last one" is going to do.

Yet the trick is perfectly simple, and when the boys act quickly and in unison the effect is very amusing.

They must stand first in the form of a cross, with each boy's right arm touching the arms of his neighbors at the center of the group and each one's back at right angles to the one behind.

At a signal, all four sit down simultaneously as if about to sit in chairs. Each one will find himself on the knee of the boy behind him. There will be no "last" boy.

The same "stunt" can be performed by more than four persons by enlarging the circle to take in the increased number. In this case each boy must be careful to stand at a sufficient angle to his neighbor in front to furnish the necessary support.—Western Recorder.

MUSIC IN MY HEART.

The music I play for my dolls to enjoy
May not sound like I've learned to play much;
But they sit in their chairs and applaud when I'm through
Just like I had mastered the touch.

Of course, I'll admit that no grown-up who hears
Ever understands even a part;
For the gladness and joy never ring in the notes
Like the music that sings in my heart.

—Christian Index.

What the Princess-Daughter Wanted.

Once upon a time there lived a king in a splendid castle on the top of a hill. Now, this king had a daughter who was very beautiful, and every one loved her and wanted to do nice things for her. Every time she wished for anything, some one was sure to overhear the wish and see that it was fulfilled. It was almost like having a fairy grandmother right in the house!

But one day the princess-daughter wanted something that no one could get!

"I don't even know what she wants!" wailed the queen-mother.

"Nor I!" said the king-father. "Let us hear what the soothsayers can tell us."

The soothsayer was called in, and he listened to what the princess-daughter wanted.

"I want something that will make my heart sing," said princess-daughter. "I want something without a price, which can not be bought, and yet which I would not exchange for a king's ransom."

The soothsayer stroked his whiskers thoughtfully. The king-father looked at the queen-mother, and none of them had the faintest idea what the princess-daughter wanted.

So the king-father issued a proclamation. In these days he would have advertised. But in those days they posted up big notices on the gateways and doors and posts and prominent places in the kingdom, and then people answered them at the castle.

When the notice appeared asking for something rare and wonderful for the princess-daughter, a number of people at once came to the castle bringing all kinds of queer things. I just wish you could have seen the things that some of them thought were priceless!

But the princess-daughter thought differently. She already had most of the things, and they didn't make her heart sing.

Now, it happened that away in one corner of the kingdom there lived a little boy with his grandmother in a little house. Little boy tended to the garden and kept ducks, and when he was not doing anything else he whittled wood with his jackknife.

A long time before, little boy had been driving his ducks along the road, and he saw a beautiful girl in a handsome coach. Some one told him that she was the princess-daughter, and right then little boy decided that she was the loveliest person he had ever seen. He took his knife that very night and began to whittle on a nice, smooth stick. After awhile his grandmother could see that the stick was growing into a doll, but she couldn't imagine what little boy would want with a doll! And little boy didn't tell her. He just went on whittling.

After awhile the doll was done, and it was a very beautiful one. It was carved perfectly, and then polished with sand and stained with the juice of walnut-hulls until it was a lovely, shiny brown. Then little boy put on his best clothes and went to the castle.

The man at the castle gate stopped him, but he said he had something for the princess-daughter, so the man at the gate, who had been ordered to let any one through who had a gift for the princess-daughter, opened the gate, and little boy went right in. He went right to the room where the king-father and the queen-mother were playing checkers and the princess-daughter was reading by the window.

The king-father looked up when little boy came in, and when he saw the parcel which little boy carried so carefully he smiled.

LINEN for the CHURCH

PURE IRISH LINEN FOR ALL CHURCH USES, yard or piece lengths, at lowest import prices. New Special Number for Cottas, eighty-two and one-half cents. Samples on request.

MARY FAWCETT CO.,
350 Broadway, New York.

CHURCH VESTMENTS
Cassocks, Surplices, Stole.
EMBROIDERIES
Silks, Cloths, Fringes.
CLERICAL SUITS
Rabats, Collars, Shirts.
COX SONS & VINING,
131-133 E. 23d St., New York.

Church and Sunday School Furniture

THE SOUTHERN DESK COMPANY,
Hickory, N. C.
Send for Special Catalogue.

J. & R. Lamb
23-25-27 SIXTH AVENUE NEW YORK
MEMORIALS IN STAINED GLASS
MOSAIC · MARBLE · STONE · GRANITE
CARVED WOOD · METAL · ETC.

When in need of
MONUMENTS and TOMBSTONES
and want honest treatment see

BURNS & CAMPBELL,
Granite and Marble Works
PETERSBURG, VA.

Designs furnished on application and all orders receive prompt attention.

R. GEISSLER, INC.,
56 W. 8th STREET, NEW YORK, N.Y.
Church Furnishings
IN CARVED WOOD AND MARBLE · BRASS · SILVER
FABRICS + WINDOWS

CHURCH FURNITURE

Pews, Pulpit and Sunday School Furniture. Catalog on request.

T. W. ALEXANDER & SON,
Box 147. Waynesboro, Va.

We talk about a tax on our patience. It is the patience of God which is the wonderful thing! Evil is tolerated, not because Omnipotence could not root it up, but for some great and gracious purpose which covers all our life. Think of the patience of Jesus Christ under every form of contradiction! Think of His patience when He hung upon the Cross for us! How patient He has been with His Church, so full of inconsistencies—so unlike Himself! How patient He is with you and me, with our mixed motives, our good intentions and besetting sins like the wheat and the tares, growing in the same field!—Dr. M. Devine.

"You have come to try for the reward," he asked, "which little boy carried so carefully he ward?" he asked.

"I didn't know about a reward," said little boy, shyly. "I brought this to the princess-daughter because I love her."

He held out the parcel, and the princess-daughter took it and opened it.

As soon as the princess-daughter saw the doll, her heart sang. "Where did you buy this?" she asked.

"I—I made it," said little boy. "I thought you might like it."

"Then, it has no price!" cried the princess-daughter, "and can not be bought; but it was made for me out of love, and so I would not exchange it for a king's ransom!"

"That is what you wanted!" cried the queen-mother.

"Why, of course!" cried the king-father.

"Not the doll!" said the queen-mother.

"Of course not!" cried the king-father.

"Just some one to make something for me because he wanted to!" said the princess-daughter, softly. "Something I hadn't asked for, or offered a reward for!"

"Why, of course!" they all said together. "Why didn't we think of that before?"

MEMORIAL BELLS
A tribute to your loved ones; eloquent, enduring, inexpensive. Write for illustrated Free Catalog.
THE JOHN B. MORRIS FOUNDRY CO.
Dept. 70 Cincinnati, O.

CHURCH FURNITURE

Pews, Pulpits, Chancel Furniture
Sunday School Seating
American Seating Company
1029 Lytton Bldg., Chicago.

CHURCH FURNISHINGS
Gold, Silver and Brass
Church and Chancel Furniture
Write for Catalogue for Episcopal Churches.
W. & E. SCHMIDT CO
308 THIRD ST. MILWAUKEE, WIS.

EMBROIDERED ALTAR LINENS, SILK ALTAR HANGINGS.

Burses, Veils, Stoles, Markers, Chasubles, Damasks, Fringes, Altar Laces, Embroidery Supplies. Materials stamped for embroidering. MISS M. C. ANDOLIN (formerly with Cox Sons & Vining), 45 West 39th Street, New York. Hours 9 to 1.

INCORPORATED 1882
Virginia Fire and Marine Insurance Company

Of Richmond, Va.

Assets - - - $3,640,152.88

Fred'k E. Nolting, President.
B. C. Lewis, Jr., Secretary — J. C. Watson, Treasurer
J. M. Leake, General Agent — Wm. P. Hill, Asst. Secretary

JOHN TYLER
THE GREAT STATESMAN
AND
ABRAHAM LINCOLN
THE CREATURE OF ACCIDENT AND VIOLATOR OF OUR CONSTITUTION.

WHO WAS THE DWARF?

A REPLY TO A CHALLENGE.

By Lyon Gardiner Tyler.

In this neat little book of forty-four pages, with three illustrations, Dr. Lyon G. Tyler draws a parallel between two Presidents of the United States. It is brim full of facts and interest. Price, $1.00 a copy, postage prepaid. Address

MEISTER & SMETHIE, Bookbinders,
107 Governor Street, Richmond, Va.

"Little boy," said the queen-mother, "bring your grandmother here and live at the castle with us. We love all our subjects—"

"Of course!" nodded the king-father.

"But we love those the most who do something for us out of love for us!"

"Of course!" nodded the king-father again.

"Of course!" echoed the princess-daughter. And so little boy and his grandmother came to live at the castle, because he was the only one of king-father's subjects who made something for the love of the princess-daughter and not for the reward!—Presbyterian Banner.

BIBLE INSTITUTE OF PENNSYLVANIA

1418 North Sixteenth Street,
Philadelphia, Pa.

Interdenominational, homelike atmosphere, sixteenth year, ending June, 1929.

Excellent faculty of well-trained men. Comprehensive curriculum of Bible and related subjects, together with training in practical Christian work in Sunday-school teaching, rescue missions, hospitals, shops and factories, open-air meetings, and work among seamen. Two-year course leading to the diploma of the Institute.

No charge for tuition, the work being supported by the voluntary contributions of consecrated men and women.

Upwards of two hundred graduates from day and evening schools, forty-five being on the Foreign or Home Mission fields.

Since our opening in September, 1923, seventy-six persons enrolled in our day school and three hundred and twelve in our evening school, a total of three hundred and eighty-eight persons.

Catalog sent on request.

LEW WADE GOSNELL, Dean;
ORMOND RAMBO, President;
W. W. RUGH, Associate Dean.

LITTLE TEA ROOM

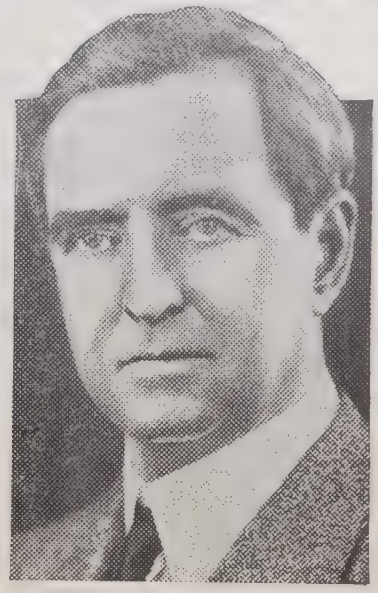
SANDWICHES

Special Prices to
Clubs, Lodges and Paties

211 N. Jefferson Ran 3958
Richmond, Va.

DIANA DAUNTLESS
By Paul Kester

Author of "His Own Country", etc.



A spirited novel of the Romany roads and the gay court of early eighteenth century England. Sir John Dauntless, of Irish royal rank, has lost his title and lands by supporting the Pretender. Blind and poverty-stricken he and his lovely granddaughter, Diana, come to England to regain their fortune which has fallen to an old cousin, Lady Bridget O'Malley. But, through intrigue and forgery, their relations believe them dead and no one will recognize them. Only after many and diverse adventures do they come into their own. Diana is a fascinating figure with her quick Irish wit and warm friendliness, and the men and women who cross her path are as vivid. Each plays a distinctive part in this colorful, quick-moving drama.

$2.00

J. B. LIPPINCOTT & CO.
Philadelphia, Penn.

Opportunity knocks more than once at everyone's door

No age limit on success if you keep fit

PEOPLE used to think that if you hadn't made your mark by the time you were 40, you never would. "That's all bunk," people say today. There's many a man who'll tell you he was past 50 when he made his first big success. Their experience runs something like this.

"I'd been going through life, always just missing out on everything. Worked like a dog, too. But never seemed to get anywhere.

"It was a doctor who put me wise to myself. Told me not to blame it on luck. That the trouble was with me—right inside myself. He recommended Nujol. I took it for three months. Never missed a day. And, say, I began to feel like a younger brother myself. Decided there was life in the old dog yet. When my big chance came, I was all ready, waiting to grab it. And I did."

Nujol keeps your body functioning just as Nature meant it to, under all conditions. Contains no drugs or medicines. Just a pure substance that works normally and naturally. It not only keeps an excess of body poisons from forming (we all have them) but aids in their removal. These poisons slow you up mentally and physically, dull your whole outlook on life, make you half-hearted.

Buy a bottle of Nujol today. Perfected by the Nujol Laboratories, 2 Park Ave., New York. In sealed packages only. Your druggist carries it.

WHILE IN RICHMOND LET US KNOW IF YOU LIKE OUR FOOD

Mrs. Cook's Cafeteria

Near St. Paul's Parish House
Richmond, Va.

Mosquitoes Die, or Money Back

Flit is the world-famous "sure thing" in killing mosquitoes, flies, roaches, bed bugs, ants and fleas. More people use Flit because it kills faster (thanks to more insect-killing ingredients), and is easier to use in the handy Flit sprayer. More for your money in the quart size.

FLIT

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

© 1929 Stanco Inc.

Classified Advertising and Notices

All notices and advertisements, excepting positions wanted, will be inserted in this department at a rate of 20 cents per agate line, each insertion. Special rates to contracts of any length. A rate of 15 cents per line is made to persons seeking positions. No advertisement accepted for less than 50 cents.

Copy for this department must be received not later than Tuesday of the week in which it is intended that the first insertion shall appear.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

ANTIQUES.

WE PAY THE HIGHEST CASH PRICES for old-time furniture and antiques of all kinds. H. C. Valentine, 209 East Franklin Street, Richmond, Va.

SUMMER BOARD.

SPEND YOUR VACATION IN THE BLUE RIDGE MOUNTAINS. care of Mrs. H. Cramer, Front Royal, Virginia.

RELIGIOUS TRACTS.

GOOD RELIGIOUS TRACTS MAY BE had by writing to LEVI C. SULLIVAN, blind tract minister, P. O. Box 43, Roanoke, Va. Some excellent tracts for prison work.

SOLD BY A SHUT-IN.

MEDIUM SIZE ORANGE COLOR SELF-Filling Fountain Pens, with gold bands and solid 14K gold pen points, $1.00 each. Jumbo Pens, color black, $1.25. Edward P. Broxton, Keysville, Ga.

BOARDING.

WANTED, TO BOARD TWO SMALL GIRLS, or boy and girl, for June and July, or six weeks, in private home in the country, at the foot of Blue Ridge Mountains. Modern Bungalow, good water and country board. References given. Address Mrs. M. C. O'Sullivan, Ivy Depot, Virginia.

—CATHEDRAL STUDIOS—
Washington London

Church Embroideries and Vestments, Silks, Fringes, Gold Thread, Stoles with crosses from $7.60, Burse and Veil from $15. Surplices and exquisite Altar Linens, Church Vestments imported for the Churches free of duty.

MISS L. V. MACKRILLE,
11 W. Kirke St., Chevy Chase, Washington, D. C. D. C. Telephone Cleveland 52.

SUMMER BOARD.

IN SHENANDOAH VALLEY—LIMITED NUMBER of people desired. Large house and grounds, conveniently located. M. I. $12 and $15 per week. MISS D. L. BRISCOE, Charles Town, Jefferson County, W. Va.

SITUATION WANTED.

CHURCHWOMAN, COLLEGE GRADUate and Teacher of high school, with several years' experience, wishes to teach pupils in a private home, or do individual coaching in some nearby place during summer months. Address "C. G.", 132 Fillmore Street, Petersburg, Va.

WANTED, POSITION AS DIETITIAN or matron by woman of experience, in good health, capable of managing for a large group. Now employed, but desires change for more salary. A-1 references, Address "T. O.", care of Southern Churchman.

ORGANIST AND CHOIRMASTER, ENGlish trained, desires change of climate, account of wife's health. Very successful boys' voices, recitalist, director of choral societies, teacher pipe organ, vocal, piano. Excellent references. Address "Organist", care of Southern Churchman.

Deaths

WILLIAMS: Died, May 7, 1929, in Beckley, West Virginia, CHARLES WILLIAMS, youngest son of the late Charles Williams and Mary Carter Burwell, of Roanoke county, Virginia.

DORA CHINN JETT.

Entered into Eternal Life, Saturday morning, May 18, 1929, at the Mary Washington Hospital, Fredericksburg, Virginia, DORA CHINN JETT, well known and popular writer, daughter of the late Judge J. Bailey and Lucy Chinn Jett, of St. Paul, Minnesota, formerly of Fredericksburg, Virginia.

"Father, in Thy gracious keeping,
Leave we now Thy servant sleeping."

"There is no death! The stars go down
To rise upon some fairer shore;
And bright in Heaven's jeweled crown
They shine forevermore."

CHURCH INTELLIGENCE.

(Continued from page 16.)

The council was harmonious and full of committee work by which useful and important advances were made—notably in connecting up the mountain work more intimately with the D. M. S. and in continuing the committee on Rural work—that much vexed and misunderstood subject.

J. R. E.

Chapter Closes.

The tornado which recently caused dire havoc at Woodville, Virginia, completely destroyed the little Episcopal Church there, St. Paul's, leaving not one timber upon another. Every tree in the cemetery surrounding the church was either blown down or mutilated. The Bible, Font, silver collection plates and a few small articles alone remained unharmed.

The little church was built in 1850, and had the Rev. Mr. Leawell as its first minister. In latter years the congregation has been dwindling until now it consists of only fifteen members. These have decided not re buildardlu These have decided not to rebuild. They will attend services either at Culpeper or Sperryville in the same parish as St. Paul's.

The treasurer recently sent in to diocesan headquarters $4.50, the balance due on the contingent fund. This, he said, is the last payment ever to be made by St. Paul's, Woodville.

A Statewide Rural Church Conference will be held in St. Paul's Parish House, Richmond, June 13, with sessions at 10 A. M., 2 P. M., 8 P. M., for the purpose of considering the report of the Virginia Rural Church Survey Findings Committee. Though primarily for leaders, all interested persons will be welcome.

WESTERN NEW YORK.

Rt. Rev. D. L. Ferris, D. D., Bishop.

A Local Challenge.

By George T. Ballachey.

While great things in Christian enterprise have been accomplished all around the world, there has been a piece of work done at our very door greatly worthy of note.

About 1893 Mr. Thomas H. Clough, a layman of St. Mary's Parish, a lay-reader and member of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, was attracted by the work then recently started among the Indians on the Cattaraugus Reservation near Irving.

He made personal visitations and began conducting services for the Indians and also at Irving village. In due time churches were built and interest developed.

After about thirty years as a lay-reader, and following a period of difficult study, Mr. Clough was ordained a deacon, and now the Rev. Mr. Clough continues his devoted ministry.

It is a wonderful story of service, this thirty-five years of work, during all of which time Mr. Clough had to make his living in Buffalo as a business man. Just visualize the years of travel back and forth every Sunday, many times during Lent and for extra services, trudging the roads of the Reservation in visitations to Indian homes, interesting these people, young and old, in the work of our Church.

When a commemoration service was held in the fall of 1928 celebrating Mr. Clough's thirty-fifth anniversary on the Reservation, the Indian chosen to present the compliments of their people, and to express their appreciation for his loving service, quite broke down emotionally in doing so, and his feeling is typical of that whole district.

Well! Times change.

The younger Indians require recreation, and the place to have it. We want to build a community house for these people, adjoining the church, and to name it, while he still lives, the "Thomas H. Clough Memorial". The building will be about forty by ninety feet. It will cost approximately $8,000, and will serve the young people in a population of about twelve hundred. We have already, from interested friends, about $4,000 on hand with which to begin work. The building has been planned by North and Shelgren and will be plain, but adequate for basketball, gymnasium and social activities. At the present time the young people are doing the best they can in a poor, wretched old schoolhouse. The Indians are so anxious for this that they have already begun to dig a cellar and about twenty of them have signed up to give each at least one week of labor to help with the building.

To any one with a sense of responsibility to these people, the descendants of the original occupants of this country, this opportunity to give should be greatly welcomed. Those of us who live so comfortably, and have so much, have little conception of the limitations placed upon a whole community by inadequate opportunities for development.

In spite of the fact that we are asked to give and give until it seems that there is no limit, will not the members of the Church throughout the diocese rally to the support of this much needed enterprise and subscribe quickly and generously so that the balance of about $4,000 may be immediately procured?

The committee to solicit this fund, under the authority of the Executive Council of the Diocese, is composed of George T. Ballachey, Chairman; James T. Gunning, Treasurer, and representatives of all the active Church organizations in the Diocese.

Please send contributions to Mr. Gunning, care Marine Trust Company, Buffalo, N. Y.

MARYLAND.

Rt. Rev. J. G. Murray, D. D., Bishop.
Rt. Rev. E. T. Helfenstein, D. D., Coadjutor

Bishop Murray at Lonaconing.

Bishop Murray made an address on Saturday, May 25, at the banquet of the night mining classes of Western Maryland, in Lonaconing, Maryland. Lonaconing is the Bishop's birthplace and as a very young man he was employed in a mine there. On Sunday he confirmed in St. Peter's Church, Lonaconing, St. John's Church, Frostburg, and St. James' Church, Westernport.

The Convocation of Towson was held in St. Mark's-Church-on-the-Hill, Pikesville, Wednesday, May 29. The sermon was preached by the Rev. Horace W. B. Donegan, the new rector of Christ Church, Baltimore. After luncheon, the Rev. Hobart Smith, Dean of the Convocation, read a paper on "Gospel According to St. John".

The Rev. Arthur M. Sherman, D. D., recently called to the rectorship of Grace and St. Peter's Church, Baltimore, has declined the call to that church and wil shortly resume his work in Wuchang, China, under Bishop Roots.

N. E. P.

SPRINGFIELD.

Rt. Rev. John C. White, Bishop.

St. Luke's, Tokyo.

Dr. Metz, as Diocesan chairman, and Mrs. George Thomas Palmer, as chairman of the Women's Division of the drive for St. Luke's Hospital, Tokyo, are working hard to complete Springfield's quota of $8,000 for this fund.

Church Club Dinner Meeting.

Great interest was aroused over the Diocese in this year's Church Club dinner meeting, held at the Champaign Country Club on the evening of Tuesday, May 14, the evening before the opening of the fifty-second annual Synod of the Diocese. Mr. H. Lawrence Choate, the National President of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, was one of the speakers, and the others were the Rev. Stephen E. Keeler, rector of St. Paul's, Akron, Ohio; the Rev. Frederick G. Dies, one of the General Secretaries of the National Field Department of the Church in New York; the Rt. Rev. Dr. Francis, Bishop of the Diocese of Indianapolis, and Bishop White, the Diocesan.

F. H. S.

OKLAHOMA.

Rt. Rev. Thomas Casady, S. T. D., Bishop charge.

Crowded Church.

A crowded church, with many turned away some Sundays, is the experience of St. John's, Norman, seat of the State University, where the Rev. John Morris Evans, D. D., is in charge. So many faculty members attend that one of the university deans remarked that the congregation was like a faculty meeting.

New Church.

Ground has been purchased for a new church at Duncan, Okla. This town is flourishing, with not less than ten thousand people. The Rev. Keppel W. Hill, of Chickasha, is in charge.

C. L. W.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Rt. Rev. Thomas J. Garland, D. D., Bishop

Special Convention.

Owing to the refusal of Dr. Samuel Smith Drury to accept his election as Bishop Coadjutor of the Diocese of Pennsylvania, Bishop Garland has issued a call for a Special Convention to meet June 13 for the purpose of making a sixth attempt to secure a Bishop Coadjutor. The Bishop accompanied the official notice of the convention with a special letter to the clergy and laity. In this he stated that up to this time he had refrained from offering any suggestion, but now he would like to offer for consideration, that the next man elected for the office be one of the clergy now connected with the diocese, or one who has at one time been connected with the diocese. Such an one will have the interest of the diocese at heart and will be more ready to take upon himself the responsibilities in this "great field of usefulness".

The convention will be preceded by a service of the Holy Communion.

DALLAS.

Rt. Rev. H. T. Moore, D. D., Bishop.

There has been a recent development in the life of St. Matthew's Cathedral in Dallas. In order to stimulate the ideal of a Diocesan center, the Rt. Rev. Bishop Harry T. Moore has appointed the Revs. H. Ellis, G. R. Fenner and W. J. H. Tetter as Honorary Canons of the Cathedral and of the Diocese. The first named is the rector of Corsicana, Texas, the others are rectors of Christ Church and All Saints', Dallas, respectively.

Personal Notes

The Rev. R. Bland Mitchell, Director of the Sewanee Expansion Fund, University of the South, will become rector of St. Mary's Church, Brmingham, Ala., on September 1, 1929. Address after that date, 1910 Twelfth Avenue, South, Birmingham, Ala.

The Rev. George Victor Bell has resigned his charge in Southwestern Virginia, to accept a call to St. Barnabas' Church at Rumford, Maine, the change effective May 31.

The Rev. Lewis Sassell, has accepted a call to the rectorship of the Free Church of St. John, Philadelphia. He took up his new duties the last Sunday in May, coming to St. John's from the Church of the Redeemer, Los Angeles, Cal.

The Rev. Waldo D. Parker, rector of the Church of the Transfiguration, Ironwood, Michigan, will take charge of the Bucks County Missions, Pennsylvania, change effective June 23.

The Rev. Jules L. Prevost, who resigned May 1 as minister in charge of the Bucks County Missions has accepted a call to the Diocese of Florida.

The Rev. George T. Gruman was instituted rector of Trinity Church (East New York), Brooklyn, on the evening of Ascension Day by Bishop Larned. He succeeds the Rev. Jacob Probst, D. D., who died last summer.

ORDINATIONS.

Frederick John Warnecke was ordained Deacon on Trinity Sunday, May 26, by the Rt. Rev. Wilson R. Stearly, Bishop of Newark, in St. Barnabas' Church, Newark, New Jersey. The candidate was presented by the Rev. Marshall F. Montgomery, rector of St. aBrnabas' Church, who also read the epistle. The Preface was read by the Rev. Rowland Gimson, City Missionary of the Diocese of Newark. The Rev. F. C. Todd, rector of St. Andrew's Church, South Orange, read the Litany. The Bishop preached the sermon.

Mr. Warnecke will be in charge of Luray Parish, Luray, Virginia, after June 15, with address, The Rectory, Luray, Virginia.

Mr. Warnecke is a member of the Senior Class at the Virginia Theological Seminary.

Trinity Sunday, May 26, 1929, at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, the Bishop of New York ordained to the Diaconate Mr. Merritt Williams (for the Bishop of Alaska), presented by the Rev. Cranston Brenton; and advanced to the Priesthood the Rev. Daniel Morse Welton, presented by the Rev. Philip Caswell; the Rev. William Clark Wilkins, presented by the Rev. Frederick H. Handsfield; the Rev. C. Avery Mason, presented by the Rev. Canon Jones! the Rev. Henry James Charles Bowden (for the Bishop of West Texas), presented by the Rev. H. C. Bishop, D. D.; the Rev. Frederick Dean King (for the Bishop of Western Michigan), presented by the Rev. Canon Jones. The Very Rev. Wm. P. Ladd, D. D., Dean of the Berkeley Divinity School, New Haven, preached the sermon. The presenters, together with the preacher, the sacrist and the precenter, and the Rev. Arthur H. Judge, D. D., united in the laying on of hands.

Charles Leon Parker was ordained Deacon at Nashotah House, May 22, by the Rt. Rev. John Chanler White, D. D., Bishop of the Diocese.

George Francis Schiffmeyer and Mark Theodore Carpenter were also ordained Deacons by the Bishop of Springfield, acting for the Bishop Coadjutor of Milwaukee.

The candidates were presented by the Rev. Professor Whitman.

Mr. Parker has been appointed for the summer to work in the southern end of the Diocese of Springfield, Illinois, and is already in residence.

New Courses At Blue Ridge Will Help Your Church

Three sets of new courses this summer at Blue Ridge make this vacation and conference spot even more worth while. Every church should have the assistance the courses offer.

FOR BOYS' WORKERS

No place in America affords such help for workers with boys and girls. Courses include all details of organizing and managing camps and fundamentals of boys' and girls' work. Six sections in physical education with instruction in all phases of play leadership. Send for booklet.

FLETCHER S. BROCKMAN

Problems of Christian Internationalism, led by Mr. Brockman, with particular reference to China, Japan, India. This three hour course will be very popular.

YOUR VACATION

Blue Ridge has a thousand attractions all summer. The 1,600 acres in the mountains, with lake, excellent accommodations and scores of conferences, make this spot the vacation place supreme for the whole family.

Plan to visit Blue Ridge this summer. Make reservations early.

BLUE RIDGE ASSOCIATION

Blue Ridge, N. C.

Commander of the Confederate Veterans Aroused at Hatreds of "Uncle Tom's Cabin"

BY ED. M. HARRIS

The book that seventy years ago fanned into flames a sectional hatred that was to send armies thundering together in the most disastrous struggle of American history has been given to Montgomery, the first capital of the Confederacy, in the screened version of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," and viewed by General Albert T. Goodwyn, Commander-in-Chief of the soldiers of the Confederacy.

Seventy years ago Harriet Beecher Stowe gave to the public a Northern woman's version of s avery in the South. Feeling, already inflamed by increasing numbers of abolitionists, was whipped into a conflagration that saw its climax at Bull Run, in the Wilderness, in the Valley, at Gettysburg, and finally at Appomattox.

The screen version of this book, being presented at a local theater, was witnessed by General Goodwyn. He brought the following statement to "The Advertiser" last night:

"I have just been to see 'Uncle Tom's Cabin,' having heard that any objectionable features had been eliminated. I had curiosity to see the presentation of what was advertised as a great film.

"I can truly say I have never before seen any pictures or heard of any conditions in screen presentation more revolting, more heart-rending, more brutal and more at variance with the truth of history than those shown in the pictures of Uncle Tom's Cabin.

"Whatever pictures could do to excite the indignation of the Southern people, as well as the negroes, at a time when the interests of both rest on a better understanding of each other, when efforts are made for a harmonious relationship, these pictures are calculated to do. I say calculated because the treatment of the theme is much more harassing and exaggerated than is given in the book by Mrs. Stowe.

"The picture is historically false, malicious and indefensible. It is an insult to our ancestors and a laudation of the maligners and traducers, invaders and despoilers of our Southland. The picture does not show that New England had a monopoly of the African slave trade and became enriched by it.

"When Abraham Lincoln issued his proclamation of emancipation of the negro in the Southern states, he did what, under the circumstances, was the most disastrous thing that could have befallen them. Thousands of the old and infirm, thousands of the very young, were left to starve. Having no guiding hand, they knew no way to help themselves and were incapable of providing food, clothes and shelter.

"The South had been wantonly desolated by the most barbarous and vindictive war in military annals. This indefensible war of economic greed was waged under the direction and congratulations of Abraham Lincoln—by duplicity and prevarication, deceiving and misguiding the good people of the North.

"This strong statement is clearly justified by the true history now being exposed.—Montgomery (Ala.) Advertiser, April 24, 1929.

DESIGNED FOR THE PROMOTION OF PRACTICAL PIETY, THE DIFFUSION OF RELIGIOUS AND GENERAL INTELLIGENCE, AND THE MAINTENANCE OF THE PRINCIPLES OF THE PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL CHURCH

Southern Churchman

DOMINUS NISI FRUSTRA 1835

Vol. 94. RICHMOND, VA., JUNE 15, 1929. No. 24.

When Jesus sat at the last supper with his chosen few he talked over with them and said, among other things: "YE ARE THEY WHICH HAVE CONTINUED WITH ME IN MY TEMPTATIONS," and that was surely a very fine thing to record about these men—they CONTINUED in His trials.

It is a pity history has to spoil that record by telling us how they lost their nerve, and courage, and could not keep on. It was their life-long regret that in the supreme moment of their lives they utterly lost the power to endure.

IT IS NOT THE START THAT IS THE HARD THING IN A RACE—BUT THE FINISH, and it is not the beginning with Christ that is the most difficult thing, but continuing with Him. Now the only way to continue is to do as Moses did. HE ENDURED AS SEEING THE INVISIBLE—the great spiritual reality behind and all over our professions and forms. The only way to endure is to keep our eyes on Christ and off OURSELVES AND OTHERS.

My short message for the week is this: Just as Christ needed His disciples in the days of His flesh, so He needs us now—ONLY MORE SO, because He has left us to take up and carry on His work in His name and for His sake. This only can be done by patient endurance, not by fits and starts, but by keeping constant in prayer and fellowship. Here are one or two things to continue:

"CONTINUE YE IN MY WORD." John 8.

"CONTINUE YE IN MY LOVE." John 15.

"CONTINUE in the things which thou hast learned and have been assured of, knowing of whom thou hast learned." 2 Tim. 3, 14.

There is litt[le] need of comment on these things. They [speak] for themselves. [Take] your Bible and read them over an[d] grace not only [to] keep on, but to keep on getting strong stronger. Mos[es] endured, and that word means not mere going but was [willing], to keep on. You see, he had his eyes invisible yet [the] present Saviour.

GEORGE W. HUN[T]

Form 3579. POSTMAS[TER] THE ADD[RESS] LABEL MUST [SHOW] SUBSCRIPTIO[N]

EDUCATIONAL

The Gundry Home and Training School For The Feeble Minded

Falls Church, Fairfax County, Va.

Established 1892.

For terms and information address

MISS M. GUNDRY.

The General Theological Seminary

CHELSEA SQUARE, NEW YORK.

The next Academic year egins on the last Wednesday in September.

Special students admitted and Graduate Courses for graduates of othre Theological Seminaries.

The requirements for admission and other particulars can be had from THE DEAN, 1 Chelsea Square, New York, N. Y.

The Bishop Payne Divinity School

The accredited Seminary of the Church for training colored men for the ministry. The curriculum covers the full course for Deacon's and Priest's Orders. The degree of B. D. is awarded.

For catalogue and information apply to
Rev. F. G. Ribble, M. A., D. D., Dean,
Petersburg, Va.

The Protestant Episcopal Theological Seminary Virginia

The One Hundred and Sixth Session
Opened Wednesday, Sept. 19, 1928.

For catalogue and other information address The Dean, Rev. Berryman Green, D. D., Theological Seminary, Alexandria, Va.

Schermerhorn Home School

Located six miles north of Richmond on the Washington Highway. A Home School for Children who need Special care and Training.

SUE I. SCHERMERHORN,
Box 57, West End Sta,
Richmond, Va.

STUART HALL

STAUNTON, VA.

Episcopal school for girls, maintaining best Virginia traditions of refinement and culture.

Thorough College Preparation. Varied General Course. Outdoor Life.

EIGHTY-SIXTH YEAR BEGINS
SEPTEMBER 13, 1929

For catalogue, address
MRS. H. N. HILLS, Principal

Episcopal Theological School

Cambridge, Massachusetts.
Affiliated with Harvard University.
For catalog address
The Dean.

SAINT MARY'S SCHOOL AND JUNIOR COLLEGE

Raleigh, North Carolina.

Rev. Warren W. Way, A. M., Rector.

An Episcopal School for Girls. Have your daughter receive her education in a Church School.

Saint Mary's offers four years' High School and two years' College work all fully accredited by the Southern Association. Also Courses in Music, Art, Expression, Home Economics and Business.

20-acre campus. Gym and Field Sports. Tennis, Indoor Tiled Swimming Pool. Horseback Riding.

For Catalogue and View Book address
A. W. TUCKER, Business Manager.

Southern Churchman

SOUTHERN CHURCHMAN COMPANY,
628 E. Main Street - - - Richmond, Va.

LANGBOURNE MEADE WILLIAMS
President
ALFRED B. WILLIAMS..Associate Editor
THE REV. FRANK COX
Associate Editor
THE REV. JAMES W. MORRIS, D. D.
Associate Editor
MRS. CONRAD H. GOODWIN,
Associate Editor
MISS SUSANNE WILLIAMS..News Editor
JOHN H. COOKE..Secretary and Manager

Entered at the Post Office in Richmond, Va., as second-class mail matter.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE.

$3.00 a year in advance. To the Clergy, $2.00. Six months, $1.50. Trial subscriptions, 3 months, 50 cents; 10 cents a copy. Foreign postage, 50 cents additional.

For the convenience of subscribers, subscriptions are continued at expiration unless otherwise ordered. Notice of renewal, discontinuance or change of address should be sent two weeks before the date they go into effect.

RECEIPT OF PAYMENT is shown in about two weeks by change of date on address label. If date is not properly extended after each payment, notify us promptly. No receipt for payment will be sent.

Notice post office address. The exact post office address to which we are directing the paper at the time of writing MUST ALWAYS BE GIVEN. Our mailing list is arranged by post offices and not alphabetically.

Make all checks and money orders payable to the Southern Churchman, and not to an individual.

ADVERTISEMENTS—Rates quoted on request. For classified see head of that department.

Representatives wanted in each Parish; liberal commissions.

News concerning the Church at large always welcome.

CONTENTS

Page.

Thoughts for the Thoughtful..... 4
Editorial 5
Earliest of Church Assemblages in America—Alfred B. Williams.... 6
The Harvest—Margaret C. Worthington 7
The Bible—W. R. Chapman..... 8
Bishop Brent—An Appreciation.... 9
The Sunrise of Truth—J. de Hart Bruen 9
Book Reviews 10
Letters to the Editor 10
Favorite Scripture Verses 11
Church Intelligence 12
Family Department 16
Personal Notes 23
Children's Department 18

ST. JOHN BAPTIST SCHOOL for Girls

In the Country near Morristown. Under the care of the Sisters of St. John Baptist (Episcopal).

College Preparatory and General Courses. Music and Art.

Modern Fireproof Building open September, 1929. Ample Grounds. Outdoor Life. Moderate Rates.

For Catalog address
THE SISTER SUPERIOR,
St. John Baptist School,
Mendham, New Jersey.

MARY BALDWIN COLLEGE

For women. Courses lead to B. A. and B. S. degrees. Music, art, spoken English, physical education. Gymnasium and field athletics. Modern equipment. In beautiful Shenandoah Valley. Founded 1842. Catalog. Staunton, Va.

Five Virginia CHURCH SCHOOLS

FOR BOYS: St. Christopher's School, Richmond; Christchurch School, Christchurch, Middlesex County.

FOR GIRLS: St. Catherine's School, Richmond; St. Anne's School, Charlottesville; St. Margaret's School, Tappahannock.

(For Catalogs, address Principals.)

LEGAL TITLE for wills: Church Schools in the Diocese of Virginia (Inc.).

(About gifts or bequests, address Central Office, 110 West Franklin Street, Richmond, Va.)

St. Agnes' Episcopal School

Alexandria, Virginia.

Boarding and Day School for Girls on Braddock Heights overlooking the Potomac River.

On the interurban trolley and bus lines between Washington and Alexandria.

Athletics and open air life; sixteen acre campus. Primary, Intermediate, General and College Preparatory Courses. Music.

For information apply to
THE PRINCIPAL.

HOBART COLLEGE Geneva N. Y.

A Church College for men, founded 1828. Four year liberal arts course, leading to the degrees A. B. and B. S. High standards; faculty of thirty. For catalogue and information, address
REV. MURRAY BARTLETT, D. D., Pres.

St. Margaret's School

Tappahannock, Virginia.

A Church School for girls with modern equipment and moderate cost. Intermediate and College Preparatory. Accredited.

Country life and simplicity without isolation. Beautiful grounds on Rappahannock River. Three dormitories for different ages. Supervised Athletics.

EDITH LATANE, Headmistree.

The Emergency Hospital

School for Nurses.
Washington, D. C.,

offers a three years course to High School Graduates. Credit given for college work. Classes admitted January and September. Accredited School. Hospital 200 beds. $10.00 Monthly allowance. Affiliations provided. School announcement on request Superintendent of Nurses, 1711 New York Avenue.

St. Albans The National Cathedral School for Boys

Thorough Preparation for Leading Universities, splendid equipment, unexcelled location on Mt. St. Alban overlooking Washington.

Eight years' course. Athletics for every boy.

Address:
WILLIAM H. CHURCH, Head Master,
Washington, D. C.

HAMPDEN-SYDNEY COLLEGE

Invites your careful consideration of its Faculty, Courses of Study, Wholesome Christian Atmosphere, and Physical Equipment.

For catalogue write,

REGISTRAR
Hampden-Sydney, Virginia

CHURCH EQUIPMENT SERVICE

J. & R. Lamb
23-25-27 SIXTH AVENUE NEW YORK
MEMORIALS IN STAINED GLASS
MOSAIC · MARBLE · STONE · GRANITE
CARVED WOOD · METAL · ETC.

DEAGAN
Tubular Bell Tower Chimes
Standard Sets $4375 up.
A living memorial—a lasting tribute.
Write for information.
J. C. DEAGAN, Inc.
112 Deagan Building, Chicago
Played Direct From Organ Console

National Cathedral School
A Home and Day School for Girls
The Bishop of Washington, President Board of Trustees. Mrs. Marvin Bristol Rosenberry, Acting Principal. Mount St. Alban, Washington, D. C.

DIVINITY SCHOOL
of the Protestant Episcopal Church in Philadelphia
42nd and Locust Streets.
Graduate Courses in Theology, Privileges at the University of Pennsylvania
Address: The Rev. G. G. Bartlett D. D., Dean.

THE HANNAH MORE ACADEMY
The Diocesan School of Maryland. Founded 1832. A Country School for Girls—fifteen miles from Baltimore. College, Preparatory and General Courses. Music, Art, Supervised Athletics.
Principal, LAURA FOWLER, A. B., Reistertown, Maryland.

CATHEDRAL CHOIR SCHOOL
CATHEDRAL OF ST. JOHN THE DIVINE
NEW YORK.
Rev. W. D. F. Hughes, M. A., B. Litt., Precentor and Head Master; Miles Farrow, M. A., Mus. Doc., Organist and Master of the Choristers.
Boarding school for the forty boys of the Cathedral Choir. Fine modern building and playground in the Cathedral Close. Fee $250. Boys admitted 9 to 11. Catalogue upon request. Entrance Examinations June 15.

Chatham Hall

A Church School for girls in Southern Virginia. Thorough college preparation. General and graduate courses. Art, music, expression, home economics, secretarial course. Superb location; 175 acre estate, gardens, dairy; modern, well equipped buildings. Riding, swimming, golf. Address Rev. Edmund J. Lee, M. A., D. D., Box S, Chatham, Va.

GUNSTON HALL
School for girls. Kindergarten, primary, academic, collegiate. Art, music, expression, domestic science courses. Small classes. All the refinements of a beautiful Washington home. Three handsome residences near Dupont Circle. Instructors with highest standards and ideals, with personality and experience. Riding, swimming, golf, tennis, dancing, fencing. Estab. 1892. Catalog. Mary L. Gildersleeve, Mary B. Kerr, M. A., Principals.
Richard N. Mason, Business Manager, 1930 Florida Avenue, Washington, D. C.

CHRISTIAN PARENTS! YOUR BOYS
should go to Dr. Howard Guinness' Boys' Camp at Doe Lake, Northern Ontario, Canada, this summer. Its purpose is to lead them to know the Lord Jesus Christ as Saviour and Friend, and strengthen them in the Christian Faith. Its situation and variety of activities are such that any boy would be more than happy there. Dr. Guinness is highly recommended by Dr. Dyson Hague, of Toronto.
Further information from:
Hon. Sec., Pioneer Camp for Boys
366 Bay St., Toronto 2, Ontario.

Study at BLUE RIDGE
this Summer
Vacation place supreme
WORKERS with boys and girls will welcome new courses this summer. 1. Camp craft. Includes study of all details of organizing and running camps. 2. Methods in Boys' Work. Special course for those who do not plan to specialize in boys' work. 3. Physical Education. Six sections covering play leadership for boys and girls, folk dancing, indoor games, practice teaching, tennis, camp activities. Ask for booklet.
Every church of any denomination would be helped by sending two or three young men or women.
Blue Ridge attracts thousands every summer. Conferences of many sorts.
BLUE RIDGE ASSOCIATION
Blue Ridge, N. C.

MOLLER PIPE ORGAN
Endorsed by the most eminent organists. Built in the world's largest factory. Every organ a special creation for a particular use and fully guaranteed. Moller Organs lead all quest.
Booklets and specifications on reother makes for church, school and auditorium use. The Moller "Artiste" Reproducing Organ for residence use is without equal.
M. P. MOLLER
Hagerstown, Maryland.

PIPE ORGANS
Highest quality. Superb tone. Modern accessories. Durable construction. All sizes.
Write for catalog of Pipe Organs, Reed Organs, or Electric Blowing Outfits.
HINNERS ORGAN CO.
PEKIN, ILLINOIS

CASSOCKS
Surplices, Stoles, Eucharistic Vestments, Choir Cassocks, Cottas, Ties and Collars, Altar Linens, Materials, Tailoring.
J. M. HALL, Inc.
174 Madison Ave.
(Bet. 33d & 34th Sts.)
New York.

BEVERLEY HEATING
The Best for Homes, Churches, Stores and Buildings for all uses.
R. C. BEVERLEY HEATING CO., INC.,
308 E. Main St., Richmond, Va.
QUALITY—SERVICE.

LINEN for the CHURCH
PURE IRISH LINEN FOR ALL CHURCH USES, yard or piece lengths, at lowest import prices. New Special Number for Cottas, eighty-two and one-half cents. Samples on request.
MARY FAWCETT CO.,
350 Broadway, New York.

CHURCH VESTMENTS
Cassocks, Surplices, Stole.
EMBROIDERIES
Silks, Cloths, Fringes.
CLERICAL SUITS
Rabats, Collars, Shirts.
COX SONS & VINING,
131-133 E. 23d St., New York.

Church and Sunday School Furniture
THE SOUTHERN DESK COMPANY,
Hickory, N. C.
Send for Special Catalogue.

When in need of
MONUMENTS and TOMBSTONES
and want honest treatment see
BURNS & CAMPBELL,
Granite and Marble Works
PETERSBURG, VA.
Designs furnished on application and all orders receive prompt attention.

R. GEISSLER, INC.
56 W. 8th STREET, NEW YORK, N.Y.
Church Furnishings
IN CARVED WOOD AND MARBLE · BRASS · SILVER FABRICS + WINDOWS

CHURCH FURNITURE
Pews, Pulpit and Sunday School Furniture. Catalog on request.
T. W. ALEXANDER & SON,
Box 147. Waynesboro, Va.

Washington Cathedral

A Witness for Christ in the Capital of the Nation

♦ ♦ ♦

THE CHAPTER appeals to Churchmen throughout the country for gifts, large and small, to continue the work of building now proceeding, and to maintain its work, Missionary, Education, Charitable, for the benefit of the whole Church.

Chartered under Act of Congress.

Administered by a representative Board of Trustees of leading business men, Clergymen and Bishops.

Full information will be given by the Bishop of Washington, or the Dean, Cathedral Offices, Mount St. Alban, Washington, D. C., who will receive and acknowledge all contributions.

♦ ♦ ♦

Legal Title for Use in Making Wills:
The Protestant Episcopal Cathedral Foundation of the District of Columbia

VIRGINIA TRUST CO.

Richmond, Va.

THE SAFE EXECUTOR,

Was organized in 1892 to act as Executor-Guardian and Trustee.

Many prudent men and women in every section of the State have named this Company Executor and trustee in their wills.

Inquiries cordially invited—no cost and confidential.

Capital Stock .....$ 1,000,000.00
Surplus earned .....$ 1,500,000.00
Held in trust.....$45,000,000.00

Woody's Art Glass Shop

Art Stained and Leaded Glass.

Church Windows a Specialty.

513 East Main Street, Richmond, Va.

XANTHINE

Will hereafter be sold in the new style bottle and package. Always best for the hair. Not a dye, but restores the color, promotes growth and prevents dandruff.

Price $1.00 at druggists, or sent prepaid by us.

XANTHINE CO., Richmond, Va.

RAISE MONEY!

For Your

$ CHURCH & SUNDAY SCHOOL $

You can make a generous profit with only a few hours' pleasant work selling Mistex Dish Cloths—a new woven cloth that finds instant favor and sells quickly. Send ten cents for sample and full particulars.

STOCKTON PRESS
516 N. Charles St., Baltimore, Md.

LITTLE TEA ROOM

SANDWICHES

Special Prices to Clubs, Lodges and Paties

211 N. Jefferson Ran 3958
Richmond, Va.

Thoughts For the Thoughtful

"God's silences are never due to forgetfulness."

If any one remains modest under blame, be assured he is so.—Jean Paul.

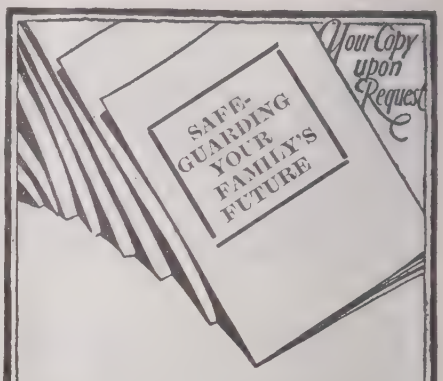
"Men fight most fiercely against those arguments which almost persuade them," says Heywood Broun.

"Read the Bible as an ordinary book, and you will soon find that it is different from any other book in the world."

"The least disciple need not say
He hath no alms to give away,
If love be in his heart."

"Teach me to love Thee as Thine angels love,
One holy passion filling all my frame:
The kindling of the heaven-descended Dove,
My heart an altar, and Thy love the flame."

Whoever fights against truth is sure to lose in the end.



To go to church, and then not worship, is time poorly invested.—Rev. Wm. Porkess, D. D.

A little bit of Hope
Makes a rainy day look gay,
And a little bit of Charity
Makes glad a weary way.
A little bit of Patience
Often makes the sunshine come,
And a little bit of Love
Makes a very happy home.
—Selected.

One prize achieved, ahead then glows the next.
He who would win must make the further quest.
Success is his, who, weary and perplexed,
Still ever onward to new goals has press'd
Who sees each day more misty heights to climb,
Who feels each day new thrillings in his breast,
Who does not count the loss of thought or time,
Which bring him, step by step, up to his best.
—Selected.

"Into Thy hands I commend my Spirit!" humility to which the first crown is given. Unless a man becomes as a little child, he cannot enter the Kingdom of Heaven, and unless he remains a little child, he can make no progress therein. The man who is always teaching must be evermore a learner.—Charles E. Jefferson.

A Hindoo woman, who had been given light of Jesus Christ came to our country to study education for women. When asked what impressed her most, she replied: "The most impressive and amazing fact in America is that there are countless women who do not love and adore Christ. We women of India know He is our only hope. He is the only light which shines upon the womanhood of the world."—Exchange.

The American has just printed a booklet which gives authoritative information on the important subject of wills and modern methods of "Safeguarding Your Family's Future" (this is its title).

It will gladly mail you a copy, with no obligation on your part, upon request, as long as the supply lasts.

Kindly mention this paper.

AMERICAN
BANK AND TRUST COMPANY
Richmond, Virginia

CARPETS for CHURCHES

We carry a large stock of Church Carpets, embracing a wide assortment of designs, colorings and qualities and at prices to meet every requirement. Write and our representative will call with a selection of patterns and give an estimate, or we will send samples, at our expense, for your consideration.

Sydnor & Hundley

700 E. Grace Street, Richmond, Va.

Insure against Skin Troubles by daily use of Cuticura Soap
Assisted by Cuticura Ointment
Sold Everywhere 25c. each

Kill All Flies!

THEY SPREAD DISEASE

Placed anywhere, DAISY FLY KILLER attracts and kills all flies. Neat, clean, ornamental, convenient and cheap. Lasts all season. Made of metal, can't spill or tip over; will not soil or injure anything. Guaranteed.

Insist upon
DAISY FLY KILLER
from your dealer.

HAROLD SOMERS, Brooklyn N. Y.

SOUTHERN CHURCHMAN

Catholic for every truth of God; Protestant against every error of man.

EDITORIALS

Vol. 94. RICHMOND, VA., JUNE 15, 1929. No. 24.

HOME

How many of the families enlisted in church membership continue the fine and lovely old custom of daily family prayer, of making the home a place of worship and dedication, the source of endless loyalty to God and allegiance to noble principles and purposes? How many heads of such families honestly and frankly and bravely explore their own consciences and face the actual facts when they abandon and neglect that duty? Is it not true that in cities, towns and country alike we get every year nearer practical acceptance of the horrible communist and Soviet system of surrendering the training and development of our children to the government or to strangers?

Counting fourteen waking hours to the day, one hundred and eight to the week, how many hours of the week do we use for personal and earnest contacts with our children grown past infancy and for directing their minds and nourishing their souls? No statistics on this most serious of all subjects can be collected. There is unhappy probability that a large majority of parents supposed to be Christians send their children to Sunday School and church Sundays, if the weather be good and general conditions entirely convenient, and there end the religious side of education—two hours and a half, say, of the hundred and eight, or one seventy-second of the week for the most important influence and element in the life of a human being. Presumably, the boys and girls are taught to "say their prayers", an expression frequently and dismally accurate, slipping trippingly and glibly from tongues of those who overlook the wide and dreadful difference between saying prayers and praying. Away from the mother's knee the prayers may be said hurriedly and carelessly, with thoughts straying idly, a morning and evening affront instead of appeal to the Almighty; or, are omitted more and more frequently as months and years pass and interests increase and are diversified.

No slot machine is so prompt and generous in yielding its contents as is the human mind in producing and rushing out excuses and exculpations in response to insertion in our consciousness of unavoidable realization of one of our own faults or sins. Doubtless every day of every year some theoretically pious parent is disturbed and shocked by discovery that son or daughter has neglected to say prayers or has said them indecorously. Excuses and apologies of the young delinquent are rejected with scornful and indignant rebuke by those who themselves should be in depths of contrition and shame at thought of how abjectly base and hypocritical in the eyes of the Power to whom the secrets of all hearts are revealed must be their own self-made excuses for avoidance of clear duty and solemn obligation.

To the Sunday-school teacher and the clergyman an hour or two on fair and convenient Sundays, to the secular teachers five days of the week, to random associations and employments Saturdays, children of very many church families are committed absolutely through most of the year. The Sunday and secular teachers may be capable and conscientious, or otherwise. A shamefully large proportion of parents never take the trouble to enquire by whom or what or how their children are taught—if at all. Most of the teachers try earnestly to improve and lead aright the childhood and youth entrusted to them. Far, far too frequently they are discouraged and baffled by lack of cooperation and aid from parents. Men and women, respected, substantial citizens, contributing in the sight of men their full shares to church and civic work, feed and clothe their children, perhaps send them to expensive schools, and leave their characters to be formed and souls and minds cared for by persons who may or may not be fit and faithful. Roman Catholics argue, with much force, for the confessional that it gives the parish priest intimate knowledge of the spiritual life of individuals of his flock. We Protestants, for many good reasons, discard the confessional, but fail to replace it with the better methods our theology and doctrine intend and enjoin. How many of us ever make definite attempt to explore the innermost thoughts, the dreams, hopes, fears, ambitions, doubts, of our children or to cooperate with our pastors in doing it? How many of us Episcopalians, as the time for the bishop's visit approaches, join with the rector in impressing on those of our own families of suitable age the need for confirming the baptismal vows that we, perhaps, made for them and making open confession of faith? Those of us who look backward know the grotesque, often perilous, vagaries and wanderings of the young and forming mind, its black and ugly, beautiful and radiant, impulses. Those of us who had loving, patient, constant guidance are grateful for it to our last days. Those to whom it was denied feel the loss and lack always. The value of training from the dawn of consciousness and the need for it have been urged since the beginning of recorded observation and philosophy, in a thousand ways, in all language. Yet, it is a common, grim, fearful absurdity that we give a child the tenderest and most unremitting care and watchfulness while it totters on its feet and is learning to speak and leave it untended and unwatched as it begins spiritual, moral and mental growth and expression; guarding it against temporary physical perils, disregarding its dangers of inward disasters and straying which may bring disgrace, degradation and ruin and final destruction.

No maxim is more familiar or more persistently disobeyed than that telling the uselessness of precept and advice unsupported by example. Even when we are at pains to tell our children, with many words, that the Creator must be revered and obeyed, that the Sacrifice for us of the Saviour must be remembered always with love and gratitude and loving service, that fervent devotion and prayers are our highest privileges and most sacred duties, the flow of words becomes contemptibly worthless when contradicted by daily acts. More harm than good must result when we admonish our children to pray and then for ourselves use business and social engagements, plans and attractions as pretexts for turning our backs on God and refusing to lead in acknowledgment of His countless gracious mercies, confession of our sins and petition for forgiveness and continuing mercy.

We are in time of intense test and trial, making more necessary than ever before, close and ceaseless vigilance over ourselves and our families and homes. Races, countries, nations, civilizations, one after another, have been wrecked by prosperity, power and wealth, have risen and fallen, like the waves of the sea, as their peoples in eager pursuit of riches and pleasures defied God by ceasing from worshipping and honoring Him and by violations of His laws. The family of Noah was the one righteous of the sons of men multiplying on the earth. In the prosperous, bustling, city of Sodom were not ten righteous to save it from Divine wrath. In our busy, swiftly progressing, ever-changing modern life, there is constantly pressing temptation to imitate the wickedness and defiance of Deity that brought the flood and the obliterating fire, to forget and disregard the unseen, the stories of the past and the infinite beyond, to live and think for today and tomorrow only. The ever alert and industrious enemies of the Almighty and mankind are at work actively and continually in innumerable ways and with open and hidden agencies to bring new destruction.

On the one hand we have more and wider opportunity and hope for splendid advancement, elevation and regeneration of mankind than the world ever has known; on the other hand the peril of being rotted and dragged down by weight of our own power and wealth. We, here in America, are living in an invisible Armageddon, an enormous conflict of good and evil, between the allurements of material gain and glittering luxury and self-indulgence and the invitation of the Christ spirit and teaching to use for the establishment of God's Kingdom on earth the dominance entrusted to us. The home and family make the soil from which Christianity must draw vitality and energy with which to grow and win new and spreading victories, the one foundation on which the safety of government and people may rest securely. If the homes are but places in which to sleep and eat and mutual affection and confidence and spiritual contacts are banished, the soil is arid, lifeless, poisonous; the foundation must crumble.

The conditions command us to self-searching, to courageous candor with ourselves, to imploring God to help us to hold to virtue and righteousness and lead us to wisdom of action in our varying and shifting circumstances. Homes and families are more distinct and larger responsibilities now than in any preceding generation, responsibilities certainly far beyond food and clothes, protection in early childhood, shelter and schooling. The nation is an aggregation of homes and families. It is for each home and family to do its part toward keeping the mighty republic true to the Almighty, the stronghold and fountain head of Christianity, the benefactor of humanity. We can not shirk nor evade the facts. It is for the head of each household to determine whether the home, spacious or small, in country, town or city, shall be a mere temporary living place or a sanctuary; whether those who go from it into the world shall go spiritually barren and morally adrift, or shall carry with them influence for good, hallowed and beautiful memories to guide, lead upward and inspire until the sojourn here ends.

Alfred B. Williams.

EARLIEST OF CHURCH ASSEMBLAGES IN AMERICA

Alfred B. Williams

CONVENTION OF 1847.

The reports presented at this Convention give a fairly clear idea of the progress the Church was making. In the fifteen years since 1832, when the first definite reports were made, the number of dioceses had increased from eighteen to twenty-eight; clergy, from five hundred and ninety-two to 1,404; communicants, from 30,939 to 67,650. The gain in communicants had been quite uniform, ranging from twenty-two and one-half to twenty-five per cent each six years. The Convention met in St. Bartholomew's Church, New York, and the newspapers there reported it quite fully and gave it prominent place. One of the first matters submitted for consideration was a petition from Georgia for establishment of a Church newspaper, to supply ecclesiastical news strictly without editorial comment. No definite action was taken on this. The Diocese of Wisconsin was admitted. Nearly the entire time, from October 7 to 28, was taken up with what seem now to be trivialities. Days were spent in discussion of the case of Bishop Benjamin T. Onderdonk, New York, suspended from the bishopric for improper conduct. The Rev. Mr. Hawks spoke four and a half hours on this subject in one day. An entire day was spent in debate on a resolution to limit speeches to thirty minutes. Altogether, this may be considered the most unprofitable of all the Conventions in the history of the Church.

CONVENTION FOF 1850.

This Convention was notable as the first to meet in what was then the West. It convened at Cincinnati, in Christ Church, October 3. The local newspapers recognized the distinction conferred on the young city by giving many columns and prominent place to the assemblage and its proceedings.

The first debate recorded was regarding the postures to be taken by participants in baptismal and other services. Delegates from the Western States were very earnest in urging adoption of general law on this subject. They said that one glory of the Church was in the thought that everywhere through the country all its members were using the same words, breathing the same prayers at the same time; but that the Western men, going East, found some persons in the churches standing at certain parts of the service, others kneeling, others sitting. No definite action was taken, but the debate, as reported in the newspapers, developed distinct jealousy by the laymen of the use of authority by the bishops. Attention was called to the fact that much of the confusion in American Churches regarding the proper places and attitudes during baptism resulted from the fact that in the English Church the fonts were at the doors, while in the American Churches they were placed at the chancel. Another discussion was over the question whether bishops should be allowed to appoint lay delegates to supply vacancies or when diocesan conventions failed to meet or to elect. Sentiment was distinctly against appointments by bishops. An attempt to change the month of meeting from October to September was defeated, chiefly by the earnest opposition of Southern delegates. Another protracted debate arose over the General Theological Seminary and propositions to enlarge the board of trustees and to permit voting of trustees by proxies. Several speakers expressed regret at attacks on the institution, apparently coming from several sources. During a discussion on a proposition to allow the printing of a Prayer Book in the German language it was said that a German congregation at Newark, New Jersey, had come bodily and unanimously into the Episcopal Church. One question on which the lower house acted decisively was that of having more than one member of the standing committee from the same diocese. Sentiment limiting each diocese to one member on that committee was expressed unequivocally.

1853—General Convention met in Trinity Church, New York. Metropolitan newspapers by now gave two to three columns a day on prominent pages to the proceedings. The church was so crowded with spectators that many delegates were compelled to stand. The sermon, by Bishop McIlvaine, of Ohio, was published in full by all the morning papers. The Rev. Dr. Creighton, New York, was President of the House of Deputies. The first contention was on a resolution by Mr. Duncan, Louisiana, that the rule forbidding the insertion in the journal of names of those offering resolutions be rescinded. Supporters argued that constituents of delegates should be informed of their activities, opponents that "pride and ambition" would incite delegates to cumber the journal with worthless suggestions. Mr. Duncan's resolution prevailed, 85-53. Hilarity was caused by a protest from a clergyman against a resolution permitting a bishop and "seven inferior clergy" to take certain action in a diocese, the objection being to use the word "inferior" as applied to any clergy. It was reported that a delegate from California was present and he was admitted to membership, by unanimous vote, after a vigorous speech in which the Convention was told that a great new empire was being opened to the Church on the Pacific coast, where the first English prayer had been said two hundred and seventy-four years before. Favorable report was made to the House on the nomination of Dr. Thomas Atkinson as Bishop of North Carolina to succeed Bishop Ives, who had gone into the Roman Catholic Church. A decree of "Apostasy and Abandonment" was asked against Dr. Ives. Debate on methods for the trial and removal of a bishop continued through this Convention and the two succeeding and elicited some very brilliant and profound argument on civil and ecclesiastical law. Bishop Atkinson and Bishop Davis, the latter of South Carolina, were consecrated in St. John's Church October 17. October 13, it was agreed by both houses to appoint bishops for California and Oregon. In this Convention a dispute, which was protracted to several Conventions, developed between South Carolina and Pennsylvania. Frederick Kohn, living in South Carolina, had bequeathed to the General Theological Seminary $100,000. Under the rules then existing, the State of which he was a citizen became entitled, by this bequest, to seven members of the board of trustees of the Seminary. It turned out to be a very fine legal question whether Mr. Kohn really was a citizen of South Carolina or Pennsylvania.

Protracted debates were caused by a proposed rubric regulating the responses in Church service. A delegate from Virginia said a clergyman in that State, officiating in a section where people were unacquainted with the service, had undertaken to make his own responses, changing his voice to a falsetto, causing ridicule and disappearance of his congregation. The House of Deputies took the first definite action in establishing, or re-establishing, a permanent fund for disabled clergymen and the widows and children of deceased clergymen. The Rev. Dr. Kipp was chosen missionary bishop to California and was consecrated in Trinity Church, New York City, October 28. The two houses divided and deadlocked on several questions, the importance of which has since vanished.

THE HARVEST

Margaret C. Worthington

SOME thoughts about "the Harvest" were set in motion in the writer's mind by receiving a beautiful card bearing the inscription,"Let us not be weary in well-doing; for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not." So will we. And "What shall the Harvest be?" are words that come echoing down the years from an old song learnt in childhood and fastened in memory (as many true things may be) by a rhyme and a pleasing tune.

Our Bible never speaks with vagueness as to a harvest, whatever our sowing may be. For action, or inaction, inevitably produces results. Today will meet us again in the great future. And "the present moment," says Upham, "furnishes the safest criterion of character." So what purposes are we fulfilling now? The presentation of the body of the believer is unto spiritual service (Rom. 12:1, R. V. Marg.). "The field is the world," we are living in it now.

Sowing for a spiritual harvest must be through the Holy Spirit Himself teaching and guiding us; He must give the initiative, it is impossible for another beside oneself to altogether suggest how to utilize one's individual opportunities since it is the Lord who gives "to every man his work." And the place of enlightenment as to meeting and using our responsibilities is the place of quiet adoration and prayer, accepting God's will first, and then our service is an entrustment. The piece of silver in the parable was of no value whatever while lost from the hands of the owner—so are we useless to God until we are in His hands. Thinking over the work that has been accomplished for the Gospel by bed-ridden and suffering saints, one is easily led to the conclusion that many of them, because cut off from usual activities, have diligently sought their service from God, and done it in "the communion of the Holy Ghost." While many another picks up some work, supposing indefinitely it must be pleasing to God, yet without ascertaining His will. The Church of the New Testament was guided as a body of individuals. The efforts of each would then enrich the work of the whole, while collective effort would widen that of individuals when all were under the command of the Holy Spirit, who came to abide in the church, and to preside. Then 'the carpenter might encourage the goldsmith', and every one say to his brother, 'Be of good courage' ", Isa. 41:6, 7; 1 Cor. 12:5-7; Phil. 4:8, 9.

On first walking about in an Oriental country our attention was attracted by the sight of a tiny but luxuriant patch of grain that had been sown on a piece of ground on a cliff beside a roadway. Its existence exhibited the laborious thrift of the farmer who thought that bit of yield worth his while—it was an opportunity to gather a sheaf. If some of us think our opportunities are very restricted, that Oriental farmer is a model for us. For how many bits of fallow ground have we in our days, or in our ways, lying uncultivated and unused that should yield a return for eternity!

A Western Union boy came to a door with his message. The lady who received him gave him a Gospel; glancing at it, he slipped it into his pocket, promising to read it. The lady and the lad may never meet again, but a used opportunity will not come back with a regret. This to a stranger. But believers may be constantly serving one another in the circle nearest to each one, if there are spiritual actualities holding sway in their own lives. We may find great stretches of service in prayer, preceding and following our own work, and that of others in fields beyond our actual bodily endeavors, but where we may work by proxy. And "he that soweth" and "he that reapeth" will both rejoice together in the light of the Uncreated Sun when the harvest is gathered in.

Redeemed one, are not the "wages" enough that life's stewardship should create no zeal in the heart? Yes, but this is not sufficient incentive. Faith must work by love. In the parable of the Talents and of the Pound, the condemned servant is one who considers the service of the Lord a hard task, and shirks the responsibility he must meet at last by hiding it from himself and others as long as he may. The Lord is not a taskmaster. His people are willing in the day of His power in their lives. Faithful stewards consciously fulfill their stewardship, and will joyfully give account. They are those that know they have a wondrous privilege in serving the Lord who bought them with His own blood.

As a suggestion: It is best to apply at once as far as one can, what is learned in the daily Bible reading and prayer time, turning it into action as far as possible immediately. The Lord has a blessing for the wise servant who at His Advent will be found daily "doing" according to His appointment. A China missionary writes of a U. S. marine who was converted in Shanghai. Later, on his first experience of an earthquake while walking on a country road elsewhere, being unfamiliar with the phenomenon, he lifted his eyes to heaven and stood at salute, expecting to see his Master face to face—ready. The faithful stewards of "the manifold grace of God" will be those who are ready for Him at His Appearing (Luke 12:35, 36, 41-43).

THE BIBLE

By W. R. Chapman, Ph. D., D. D.

"Heaven and earth shall pass, but my words shall not pass away" (Matt. 24:35).

THE word "words" certainly comprehends and includes the words of both the Old Testament and the New Testament, but especially those of the New Testament, and more especially those of the Four Gospels. The Words of Jesus occur in these Gospels. Yet, taken in the larger and more general sense, when we speak of the words of God or the words of Jesus, we mean the Bible. We often speak of the Bible as the word of God or the word of Jesus.

As illustrations of this great truth I suggest you read John 14:7, 9, 10, 11, 20; John 1:1-4; 10:30.

These Scripture texts teach clearly the Oneness of God and His only begotten Son, the Lord Jesus Christ. So then the words of the one are the words of the other. . . .

The very first Hebrew word applied to God and translated God seems clearly to carry this idea. The word Elohim translated God, is plural and should be translated according to the law of all languages and according to the rule governing translation, by the word "Gods". Therefore, this word includes God, Jesus Christ, and the Holy Spirit. And all three being comprehended and included in this one word, we at once see the Great Oneness of the Godhead.

I am to confine myself to the subject, the Bible. . . . I maintain its sufficiency and supremacy. It is the greatest of all books. It is by far the greatest literature in all the world. It is filled with the basic and fundamental teachings of history, literature, poetry and science. Nothing is like it in all the field of learning. It stands at the very pinnacle of all learning. In all the fields of learning, it is a useful work, not only for reference, but for real teaching; and then when one enters the field of Theology it is the first, it is the one textbook which may be termed the great All in All. It is the Spiritual Guide Book. It is the chart by which man who is sailing on the sea of life checks his course, and which will enable him to enter the haven of rest, in the harbor of his God. It is an unerring chart, because given to man by inspired men.

By knowing this book, we know God, and His Son, Jesus Christ, and the Holy Spirit, who is our comforter and shield and guide. By studying it, we are enabled to talk with and to walk with God. By a knowledge of it, we learn the way to heaven by learning that Jesus is "The Way, the Truth and the Life."

The Bible is the revelation of God. By this, I mean to say, that the Bible reveals God, His Son, Jesus Christ, and the Holy Spirit to men. I wish to emphasize, and so I say that the Bible is the peerless revelation. This leads me to add, that the Bible, being the inspired word of God, it is therefore, all-sufficient and all supreme; and it has been in all past ages, and in all countries and it is now, and will always be. It is unchangeable. It is just this in all stages and conditions of the human race.

God has inspired this writing of the Old Testament in its original Hebrew, and the New Testament in its original Greek. No Christian will deny this, Grant us but this, that God through the inspired writers of the Bible, has given man a book for his guidance, and I at once argue that book must be amply sufficient for all men; no matter when, where, or how we find him.

I will clinch this argument by quoting from this inspired Book—2 Tim. 3:16, 17: "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness"; "That the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto good works," or "thoroughly perfected unto all good works."

This, surely, is enough. To be perfect and thoroughly furnished, must needs render a man independent of all the boasted things that would lead us from God.

I believe, and I am persuaded that every Christian fully believes that The Bible, as written in the original Hebrew and Greek languages, is the very word of the only wise, the only pure, and the only true and living Good, ...

The Bible affords us ample guidance and complete instruction for the present moment, and for every moment of our the only pure, and the only true and living God, ...

How could it be otherwise if we admit the Bible to be the inspired Word of God? The mind of God made nothing less than a complete and perfect chart by which to govern His children on their way to their home in His House. His finger could sketch no imperfect chart. All God has done, does, and will do, is, has been, and will be absolutely and completely perfect. The reason is: because He is all-wise, all-perfect, all-seeing and all-powerful.

I admit the sufficiency of the Bible, because I admit the divinity of the Supreme Beings of God, of Jesus Christ, and of the Holy Spirit. But some one will say that this book has not made or enabled all men to walk in the true way, the true truth, and the real life, which the book points out to all men. Ah, to a large extent this is truth. But nevertheless it is a perfect book and a correct chart of the way, the truth, and the life.

There came a day when many men went away from this book, which was pointing out to them the true and perfect way, and the real and absolute life.

When God created Adam and Eve, or our first parents and put them in the Garden of Eden to dress and keep it, He also taught them the pure and undefiled religion; now this religion did not become Christianity until after Jesus Christ came into the world and had finished His work and returned to His Father in Heaven.

When God created man He made him a free moral agent, and thus endowed man with faculties which gave him power to discern right and wrong. Instead of man exercising his faculties to do good, he exercised them to sin. Though he thus strayed away from God, yet he never absolutely forgot the true religion, which at first had been taught him. Some of the things he never really forgot were these: love, worship, adoration, sacrifice and God. These lingered with him, though only in a shadowy form. He had come so far away in sin that he had forgotten the real essence of those qualities. He had almost forgotten the true God, and in some instances he had forgotten Him.

When man reached this stage he began to try to make or discover a religion, and to make for himself a god. He formulated a rude and crude religion, and a god, or many gods. This false religion grew along side of the true religion. There were a few people all the time that never forgot the true religion and the true God. Then came a day when this knowledge must grow and spread out to all men. So God revealed Himself to one person, Abraham, and then to his sons, and later to his descendants, the Hebrews. Because of this, the Hebrews are called the chosen people of God. Later in history God saw that His people needed a leader and a deliverer, and appointed Moses as their leader and teacher.

Before Moses there was no written record of God's words to man. Moses began the writing of God's word. Such work continued by means of His seers, prophets, kings, and others; and then after the coming of Jesus and His return to His Father in Heaven; then by His apostles, Paul and other teachers, until the New Testament was finished.

There must come an end to all idol worship. There must come a great day when the whole Bible must have its rightful place. We read of its dawn and of its advance into a full day, in Acts 19.

From this time, the phantoms of Paganism, of Idolatry, and Heathenism faded before the light of Christianity and her Bible, and the religion of Jesus Christ, which has now become Christianity, has been diffused all over the world, where that of the heathens has passed away like a dream of the night.

What brought about this great change? The Bible is the answer to this question. The Bible is the all-sufficient guidebook. The heathen world wanted a perfect standard; and indeed, all the world wanted a perfect standard, and this can only be found in the great book which we call the Bible. We should bless God for it. This book settles everything. From the decision of the Word of God as found in the Bible there is no appeal. The Bible points out the way that leads to an eternal home in our Father's house. Neither tradition nor expediency will do for the true servant and follower of Jesus, our Lord and Saviour. The all-important thing is, "What saith the Scripture?" Turn to the Bible, search it and find out, after finding out, then obey it. Make it your guide. By it, you will reach your home in heaven. So, my benediction is, make the Bible your chart, your way, and your ultimate truth. May God, and His Son Jesus, and the Holy Spirit, who are the authors of the Bible, produce in the author, readers and hearers of this feeble effort to portray the Bible a more ardent and a more determined will and disposition to know the Bible. May they enlarge our experimental acquaintance with its great and noble contents, and lead us into a more perfect and complete subjection to its injunctions, precepts and teachings in all things, that we may the more glorify God through Jesus Christ our Lord and Saviour. Amen.

BISHOP BRENT

An Appreciation

The following appeared in "The Record," a Church newspaper, published in London, England:

IT would be difficult to exaggerate the loss to the Protestant Episcopal Church in America, our own, and indeed the whole Church of Christ, in the death of Charles Henry Brent at Lausanne on the Wednesday in Holy Week, at the early age of sixty-six.

He was a man of prodigious labor and the most earnest devotion; as a thinker, leader and preacher he is worthy of taking a place alongside of Phillips Brooks. Indeed, one wonders how long it will be before such books as "Adventure for God" (a Missionary Classic if ever there was one), "With God in the World," "The Consolations of the Cross," "The Splendor of the Human Body," "Liberty, and Other Sermons," and the priceless 1907 Charge, "The Mind of Christ in the Church of the Living God," become as well known as they deserve to be.

Bishop Brent was the Canadian son of a Canadian clergyman—Canon Henry Brent. He was a classical honorsman of Trinity College, Toronto, and from early manhood a man who read both widely and deeply, and one who learnt to think independently as he kept abreast of new knowledge.

He was ordained in 1886 to an Assistant Curacy at St. Paul's Cathedral, Buffalo; within two years he was called to be rector of St. John's, Washington, and in the same great centre of culture he later went to St. Stephen's, at the same time working on the staff of the New York "Churchman."

He was a born leader of thought and men; when necessity arose he could speak, as by right, for his Church and his Nation.

Only with great difficulty was he ever persuaded to take high office. But, fired by the Missionary Call, and America's high duty towards the Philippine Islands, he went there as Bishop, elected by the General Convention of 1901. Not a little of the United States' success there was due to his indefatigable labors, and wise statesmanship.

Once out there offer after offer came to him from the homeland; twice he refused the Bishopric of Washington. once that of New Jersey because the call of the work in the Philippines was so imperative. He carried on there for over sixteen years. He was the last man in the world to be a Militarist, but his Anglo-Saxon blood, his sense of Europe's peril and America's duty, his very virile Christianity made him the ideal Chaplain-General and there was immense satisfaction when he accepted the appointment as Chief of the Chaplains Service at American G. H. Q.

Those who knew him in war times can testify what manner of man he was. Early every day, long before his office-hours were due to start in Paris, he was to be found on his knees, agonizing in prayer, in a corner of the British Embassy Church of the Rue d'Aguesseau—again the lunch hour found him seeking Divine guidance, and spiritual refreshment in the same quiet place.

One who for some time had charge of sick American Troops in the very uncongenial surroundings of a French Military Hospital (so very primitive to the eyes of American youth) soon found what his grasp of detail allowed him to get through, and learnt his power with individual men, his power in prayer and comfort, as well as in dealing with large groups. He had a wonderful manly courtesy, and an innate, unforced dignity of which he was entirely unconscious. He had all the American virtues without the slightest trace of that boastfulness which, in lesser men, was so uncongenial to the Britisher. No wonder that over and over again he was the chosen spokesman of the Church in America to our own Church—no wonder those in authority here delighted to put him in the pulpit of St. Paul's or Canterbury on the big occasion when some authoritative statement was needed.

He had a passion for Unity, and one naturally wonders how hard the disappointments of Lausanne must have weighed on his soul. All those who labor for Peace find that, when they speak thereof, so many rather make ready for battle. He must have been disappointed, but with magnificent faith he ended the preamble of Lausanne's culminating Declaration to All Christian People by turning away from the Ecclesiasticism which hold so hard to externals, and looking to the faith of Youth (that dares to trust the future) to carry on the torch of Unity.

It was there, at Lausanne, by the lake shore, he died, full of sure and certain hope. In 1918 he had been elected Bishop of Western New York, with his seat at Buffalo, where he had served his apprenticeship.

He was an Ambassador of Christ wherever he went, his preaching was sincere and evangelical. With a most statesmanlike mind he did more than most Ambassadors for Anglo-American friendship, on which so much of the hope for world peace depends.

Some words from his Charge of 1907 reveal the man: "My conclusions have been reached rather by seeking to gain the mind of Christ than by mere loogic or reference to the external authority of history or tradition with their manifold and conflicting voices." No wonder he longed, prayed and worked for Unity in Christendom.

He was a master of epigram: "Dogmatism dines daily on the discomfiture of its antagonists," "Dogmatism is conviction, clothed in the authority of arrogance," but "Magnanimity partakes more of the nature of love."

He did not advocate or believe in general inter-communion, but when as a Missionary he was the first Minister to visit a community unshepherded for over eighteen months, he said: "I was but following the dictates of the Spirit of God in inviting all communicants of other Churches in good standing to receive Communion with me" (he was no haughty dispenser of Sacraments, but himself received the Bread and the Wine at his Lord's hands), and there followed one of those services where the Power of God was manifest to the least susceptible.

He pleaded for extemporary prayer in Mission and intimate services: "None should be so well able to pray spontaneously as those who have had a sound liturgical training." He believed in the interchange of pulpits when there was sense of responsibility. "I never refuse, when invited and free to avail myself of the opportunity, to preach to Christ's people of whatever name"; and again, "I cannot refrain a feeling of admiration for those who extend this courtesy to us in the face of our statutory frigidity towards others." This is the stuff of which his passion for unity was made, and one might go on quoting from every page in the charge. It is a slender book, but it might well be in every Bishop's hands.

The man was never hidden behind the Bishop, the Christian was never lost in the keen Churchman that he was. Many will rise up and call him blessed because of his faithful ministry of Word and Sacrament, and for his life of faithfulness to the principles which he labored so hard and prayed so steadily to attain.

E. H. W.-A.

The Sunrise of Truth

J. deHart Bruen.

I stood before my tent far up on Mt. Ranier peering out into the night. Although it was late in the summer, great snow banks were all around me. The white-robbed mountain towered thousands of feet above me. A faint light indicated the coming of the day. A touch of red was appearing on the top of the mountain. It slowly deepened until the summit glowed with the fiery red of the rising sun. One by one the lower peaks received the golden crown. The sun unveiled the magnificent Paradise valley, carpented with flowers growing and blooming to the very edge of the snow and some of them forcing their way through it.

Again, I stand looking at the Light of the World, not on Mt. Ranier, but at the summit of a long life. Jesus is both the Creator and Revealer of things material and spiritual. He is the life and light of both. As standing on Mt. Ranier I could not doubt the sun, so now I cannot doubt the Christ. I see Him. The presence and power of Christ is a matter of experience. As Mary saw Him and heard His voice, so we see and hear Him now.

He is also the Light of the Scripture. Without Jesus, the Old Testament is a mass of broken pieces of meaningless national history. With Jesus, it is the magnificent sunrise of truth. One after another the Divine attributes appear crowned with glory until we see in Jesus that "God is Love".

He is the Light of the World. Without Jesus the world is rushing on to ruin. The means of destruction develop faster than the means of construction. Without Him, the dynamite of class war, of social revolution may explode at any moment. With Jesus, we are advancing to the broad daylight of cooperation, of fraternity, of the Kingdom of God. The Kingdom of God has extended from the fishermen of Galilee to the nations of the earth. Jesus had no wealth, led no armies, sought no political power. He cast forth the truth. He taught the truth. He lived the truth. He is "The truth, the way and the life". The unaided truth marched forth triumphant to the conquest of the world. This is the supreme miracle implying all else. Beginning in the manger at Bethlehem He passed down the ages bringing light and joy into millions of homes, and millions of lives. These are the greater miracles of the present. The miracles of the past were the garments of His life. They were the inbreaking of the higher laws, the servants of the Son of God. We control the little material world within the limits of our bodies, in defiance of the world beyond. Every time we think and will and move, the spiritual conquers the material. We raise our hands in defiance of gravity. The will of Jesus went further and the wind and sea beyond Him.

Jesus is the Light of the future. He has revealed all we know of the future. At the end we stand far up upon the mountain waiting for the sunrise and the revelation of the Paradise of God.

Book Reviews

FROM ABRAHAM TO CHRIST: By Vernon F. Storr, Canon of Winchester. Doubleday, Doran Company, Garden City, New York. Price, $2.50.

The book is splendidly written and easily read. The author presents his subject in a clear and concise manner. It is refreshing in its treatment of the Old Testament from the Higher Critic's viewpoint in that it is thoroughly reverent throughout. And whether one accepts the author's conclusions or not, he must feel high respect for the scholarship and earnestness of the Canon.

R. R. CLAIBORNE.

THE LIFE AND WORK OF GEORGE WILLIAM PETERKIN: By Robert Edward Lee Strider, D. D., Bishop Coadjutor of the Diocese of West Virginia. George W. Jacobs & Company, Philadelphia, Pa. Price, $2.50.

Bishop Strider, in his "Life and Work" of Bishop Peterkin, has done a real service to his diocese and to the Church at large, for no one can lay down the book without being conscious that he has seen a splendid picture of a splendid man—for man he was every inch of him. The author has faithfully portrayed him in his splendid virility—giving all that he had and was to the spreading of the Church and his Christ to the utmost bounds of his diocese, and not failing at the same time, to do his all and best, for the advancement of the Church at large, exemplifying finely his favorite text, "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, it with thy might". Bishop Peterkin moves through the book on every page, as the author faithfully and sincerely follows him. In his advance from soldier to Bishop, all along the line, a Character is forming which stands out at last, as he concludes his thirty-seven years as Bishop in a mountainous diocese, as death comes to give him a merited reward, to exact praise from one and all, and rich encomiums of admiration from the Church, by and large.

The book is well-made and strong, in keeping with the character of the subject, with copious footnotes and a well-ordered index of persons and places and subjects. Noting the evidences in the book of painstaking research and accuracy of statement the reader is ready to believe him when the author says it was five years in preparation. Again the thoughtful reader will be struck with the absence of word or phrase, when church matters are discussed, which the Bishop was not accustomed to using, and the nomenclature of the book is that which would be used by an Evangelical Low Churchman to which the Bishop had been trained and to which he was ever loyal. No banal ritualistic nor quasi-Romish word or expression is found anywhere in the book. A sure evidence of loyalty and faithfulness to the Bishop and his diocese, for it has been truly said that while a man may juggle words and trifle with the truth in talking, if he writes much he will betray himself and the writing will show him as he is. So the writer shows himself loyal to his Bishop and his Churchmanship, as well, which no doubt accounts for the fact that there is no recorded word of the good Bishop that he had any doubt as to the future Churchmanship of his diocese, but that his splendid successors in office would carry on in the Evangelical ways of Prayer Book Churchmen.

We know nothing of the technique of the writing of biographies, and so in that regard do not speak, but may say that any one who wants to read a well phrased book, with accurate and pleasing portrayal of a great character, which we would do well to emulate, will find it here.

J. R. Ellis.

THE CATHOLIC CHURCH AND CONFESSION: By Leonard Geddes, S. J., D. D., and Herbert Thurston, S. J. With Imprimatur of Archbishop Hayes of New York. Cloth. Pp. 104. Published by the Macmillan Company, New York City. Price, $1.00.

"All sorts and conditions of men" profess and call themselves Christians. From the silent Quaker who sits in the presence of his own thought during the hour of service, to the outbursting of the choral service with all the power of organ and voice, the range lies open to us. One as much as the child of God as the others. So here we enter a realm of experience distinctly foreign to myriads of men. The "confessional" means nothing to them; the rather it offends them.

The analysis of the problem becomes us in this limited space. The true and living child of God, who approaches his Heavenly Father through the authority of the one Mediator (1 Tim. 2:5) can see no reason why he should unbosom himself to any man. Between himself and his God there is a vital communion, a momentary dependence, a loving sense of care and keeping. What has he to confess, with the knowledge that" there is no judgment to them that are in Christ Jesus" (Rom. 8:1) and that so long as he walks in the light with his Lord, the blood of Jesus Christ keeps him clean from all sin (1 John 1:17)?

There are others, who despairing of such a familiarity with Deity, who, dreading with great terror, the wrath of the Almighty, never get to a place of rest. These are they who find refuge in the confessional. They are of that class, who ever recognizing their unworthiness, determine that what is now experimental must always be. To them there is no advance into the realms of spiritual conquest. They hang dependently upon the priestly intervention of their spiritual superiors. And they come to love to have it so.

True: there are moments when the counsel and prayers of a godly minister, even among Protestants, may be of great value. We may plead that this is all too infrequent. The real servant of God longs to be this very thing to his flock. But he is denied it, not because there is no need, but from the unhappy state of mind which so many possess that they must not unbosom themselves to even the pastor. Again, there are not many to whom the people of the parish would care to unfold their inner life. They do not invite confidence. But in the Roman Church, the obligatory confession, covers all this field of reluctance. So there we are, in the heart of a dilemma. If there be any virtue in confession, we who do not engage in it are the losers; if it is only a man-made system, the evils of which are all too flagrantly admitted, we are well off not to be in bondage to it.

So here is a study to show us the way to see it aright. The Scriptural grounds, the history and essence of auricular confession are plainly and clearly stated.

Kenneth Mackenzie.

Letters to the Editor

In this Department the Editor will at all times welcome communications expressing opinions on the various topics which are engaging the attention of the Church. But the Editor will not hold himself responsible for such opinions.

No "Letters to the Editor" will appear in our columns except those coming to us signed by writer.

SERVICES ON BOARD CUNARD LINERS.

Mr. Editor:

When one attends a service on an English liner where the laymen officers of the ship conduct it, one feels a sense of safety in the personnel of these men if any peril should come to the ship. These English lines have found it more practical to have a service regularly carried on by its own officers than to rely on clergymen who happen to be on the ship.

Coming back from Europe on a Cunard liner, I found four clergymen of our Church on board, and in a talk with them and some lay men and women, we all felt the lack of a Communion service on board. Speaking of it later, but too late, to the purser, I found that the Cunard line has placed a silver Communion service on each of its ships, and any clergyman who desires to hold a Communion service will be given the use of this and a suitable place to hold the service. I am sure it is meet and right, and indeed my bounden duty, to send some word of this to our religious press, in order that clergymen may avail themselves of this opportunity, which I feel would be regarded as a privilege by the ship's company, both crew and passengers. In posting the notice of such service, would it not be well to make it so broad and comprehensive that men and women of all faiths would feel free to "do this in remembrance of Me?"

Joseph Buffington.

Philadelphia, Pa.

GIFTS TO KORIYAMA CITY.

Mr. Editor:

I shall be most grateful if any one having the great kindness to make a gift of money for the work at this place (Koriyama City, Japan), through the Department of Missions or other third party, will do me the additional favor of letting me know of it.

There is another Koriyama, not a city, in one of the other dioceses in Japan, and it appears to have happened, at times, that gifts intended for this place have been receipted for as for that, and sent to the other diocese.

The opposite error has never yet been made.

John Cole McKim.

Koriyama City, Japan.

PAPER WITH BACKBONE.

Mr. Editor:

I like a paper, secular or religious, with a backbone, with an editor who is free and fearless to express the truth. The world demands fundamental bankers, doctors, and lawyers, which convinces me that we need fundamental preachers who believe the same things week days as when repeating the Creed.

Doubters never win victories, and are poor comforters. God help the sinking Peters.

John L. Saunders,
Rector St. Jude's and the Nativity.

Philadelphia.

TREND OF EVENTS.

Mr. Editor:

In the issue of "The Living Church" of May 4, under the title, "Our Reduced Program", appears a communication from Mr. George F. Alexander, of Baltimore, Maryland, directing attention to the fact that at the last General Convention the budget submitted by the National Council was reduced $127,320 and that in January two-thirds of the dioceses had informed the National Council of their inability to raise their quota, to the amazing total of $677,277. Mr. Alexander then proceeds to say:

> "I lay the responsibility for this incredible failure squarely at the door of our Bishops. They are our leaders; they themselves admit it. And in many if not most instances our Bishops are not strongly and vigorously leading their dioceses in this vitally important part of our common work. And, worst of all, they do not appear to be even decently ashamed of their failure."

Undoubtedly the program of the Church cannot be carried out without money, but the question arises as to whether the responsibility for this deficit rests upon the Bishops as a whole.

Notwithstanding the silence of Bishops and Clergy and their efforts to prevent discussion of them, there exist in the Church certain conditions which may well have a most important bearing upon this matter of raising the budget.

By Constitutional provision, the Church has expressly rejected the doctrines of transubstantiation, the reservation and adoration of the Sacrament, the Mass, Purgatory, Invocation of Saints and Worship of Images and Relics. Notwithstanding this, some of the Bishops and a great many of the clergy, aided by between fifty and sixty organizations, are engaged in introducing all of these alien doctrines and ceremonies into the Church. No word of protest is heard from Bishops, save two, and from but few of the clergy.

Letters coming to me from many sections of the United States, widely separated, tell of the grief and sorrow created by this condition in the Church. Some of these letters tell of parishes disrupted; some tell of people leaving the Church; some tell of communicants absenting themselves from services and attending none, while still others express an unwillingness to contribute funds for the dissemination of teachings which the Church rejects.

No one questions the right of the "Anglo-Catholic" to reserve the Sacrament, worship it, say Mass, pray to the Saints, or do anything else best suited to his spiritual needs, but is it possible to believe that the attempt to drag into the Protestant Episcopal Church all of these doctrines and ceremonies utterly foreign to its genius can do otherwise than produce discord?

Why criticise the Bishops for failing to raise money with this condition actually existing in the Church? Regardless of all efforts to conceal it, there is an issue before the people of the Church. That issue is very plain. Is the Church to be Protestant Episcopalian, as its Constitution, Articles of Religion and Book of Common Prayer prescribe, or is it to be "Catholic", that is, teaching the doctrines of transubstantiation, reservation and adoration of the Sacrament, the Mass, Purgatory, Invocation of Saints and worship of images and relics?

"Anglo-Catholics" themselves admit that "Catholicism", as defined above, and "Protestantism", as the Protestant Episcopal Church defines it, are two different religions and that our Church cannot permanently include both.

Mr. Alexander states in his letter that the General Convention reduced by $127,320 the budget submitted by the National Council, and that two-thirds of the dioceses have informed the National Council of their inability to raise their quota by the amazing total of $677,207. Is this the fault of the Bishops? When we come to investigate, grave doubt arises about that.

There is an issue before the Church. The people in the pews are becoming aware of that fact. Despite all of the efforts to prevent it, information as to what is transpiring is reaching the laity. Because of the very nature of the issue, it will, of itself, force a settlement of it, one way or the other, and the trend of events, one of which is quite possibly that mentioned by Mr. Alexander, indicates that a show-down is not far off.

C. L. Marsilliot.

Memphis, Tenn.

APPRECIATED APPROVAL FROM A VETERAN.

The Southern Churchman has been favored with a very kind and pleasant note from Mr. John B. Reeves, of Charleston, South Carolina, expressive of approval of a recent editorial article in The Churchman, calling attention to the strength and value of fraternal orders and organizations in the United States. More intimate cooperation and connection between the Church and those powerful instruments for good was urged and Mr. Reeves shares this opinion.

This approval is especially valued and warmly appreciated because Mr. Reeves is one of the oldest and most honored Past Masters in the country. Orange Lodge, 14, of Charleston, recently put on record the fact that Mr. Reeves was made a Mason in that Lodge in April, 1869, sixty years ago, and since has served as Worshipful Master. Notice of the entry was sent to Mr. Reeves and elicited from him a very graceful and appropriate reply, the closing sentence of which was earnest exhortation that the good will and friendliness which are among the cornerstones of Masonry be extended always to include mankind.

FAVORITE SCRIPTURE VERSES

(In this space each week will appear a favorite passage of Scripture as sent in by a different reader. Every one is, therefore, invited to send us their favorite verse. It is suggested that all who can, join with the rest of us in committing to memory the verse which so appears here each week, including its location in the Holy Book; and in due time your memory chest will be laden with choice eternal treasures, indeed. "Thy word have I hid in my heart, that I might not sin against thee"—Ps. 119:11.)

This week the following verse was submitted by Miss Eliza G. Murphy, of Baltimore, Maryland:

> ". . . Count it all joy when ye fall into divers temptations; knowing this that the trying of your faith worketh patience.—James 1: 2, 3.

Who will send one from the far-away places as well very near us?

Church Intelligence

Class of Thirty Confirmed at Wusih, China.

On April 14, at the Church of the Holy Cross, Wusih, Bishop Graves confirmed thirty persons. Until about a year ago the property at Wusih was occupied by Nationalist troops, though fortunately comparatively little damage was done to the building. On the morning at the confirmation service, Dr. Claude M. Lee, of St. Andrew's Hospital, received a gift of $1,000 from the Chinese committee, which has been raising funds to help maintain the institution. The attitude of the Wusih merchants has been most cordial and helpful ever since Dr. Lee returned in April, 1928, to reopen the institution.

Latin-American Christians Will Confer in Havana.

By Rev. S. A. Neblett,

Politically, the Caribbean area is one of the sore spots of the world. Some experienced observers consider it equal to the Balkans as a disturber of world peace. The evangelical churches of North America, however, have an interest in this area which does not involve them in diplomatic entanglements. We see in the thirteen countries of the Caribbean area thirty-eight millions of people in need of the full Gospel message. Of these, nineteen millions, one-half, are Indians and mestizos; about fifteen millions are white; more than four millions are Negroes and mulattos, most of whom have become Latinized, speaking Spanish or French, and enjoying full citizenship.

To study questions relating to the evangelization of these people the Caribbean Congress on Christian Work will be held in Havana, Cuba, June 22 to 30, 1929.

Geographically Latin-America is composed of two great parts, namely: The Caribbean Area, which comprises the Antilles, Mexico, Central America, Panama, Colombia and Venezuela; and, second, all of South America except Colombia and Venezuela. A great Congress on Christian Work was held for the latter section at Montevideo in 1925. Now the Caribbean area is to get together.

There has been a notable advance in religious work in Latin-America since the holding of the Panama Congress thirteen years ago. The churches have grown in numbers and stability, and there has been a gratifying development of leadership among the nationals, notably in Mexico, Porto Rico and Cuba. The sessions of the Panama Congress in 1916 were conducted in English, the preparatory work was done largely by American missionary experts, and the objective of the Congress seemed to be to place before the churches of North America the vision of the call of Latin-America rather than to bring the young churches on the field into a study of their task. This was materially changed at Montevideo in 1925. Leaders from the mother churches, experienced missionaries and able nationals developed a program that is giving wonderful results in projecting the churches on the field into a larger grasp of their task, pointing out at the same time the most approved lines of cooperation between these churches and the mother churches.

And we are coming to Havana in June, 1929, with a further advance in that the inception, plans and arrangements for the Congress are largely the work of Latin American Christian leaders, and methods of preparation and discussion of subjects in vogue in Latin-America will be followed. The official language will be Spanish, with ample interpretations into English for the benefit of those members and visitors who do not understand Spanish.

The principal objects of the Congress are three: to bring about a better acquaintance and closer relations between the Christian workers of the Caribbean Area; to study ways and means for obtaining the evangelical literature needed by the workers; and, to discuss a series of problems which are common to all Christian organizations, but which are not easily solved. The preparatory work for the Congress consists in the study by group discussion in the several countries of the main questions which will be taken up by the Congress, and in the publication of monographs and reports which will challenge the consideration of important questions.

The Congress will be composed of two hundred delegates. Of these forty will be sent by the boards of missions having work in the Caribbean Area. Two-thirds of the delegates from the Caribbean countries are expected to be nationals, with one-third chosen from among experienced missionaries.

The Congress will be held in Candler and Buenavista Colleges, Southern Methodist institutions in suburbs of Havana, thus providing ample room for housing the delegates and for all kind of small and large gatherings. The Havana office of the Committee of Arrangements is under the direction of Dr. Jose Marcial Dorado, its President.

Y. W. C. A. Worker in India.

Miss Agnes Hill is an American Churchwoman who has recently returned to India where for many years she was on the staff of the Y. W. C. A. She is now retired but continues volunteer work. She went to India in 1894, from Trinity Church, Toledo, Ohio, when Dr. Scadding, later Bishop of Oregon, was rector. Her American home is now in Monrovia, California. Writing just after her return to India, she says:

"It is a great joy to be again in my beloved India, and the warm welcome on every side is almost more than one can stand. After three weeks in my own station, Gwalior, near Agra, I came by a long railway journey to Octacamund in South India, the summer capital, and will return to Gwalior in July after the heated term is over, at least the rains will have come.

"I have come up here to help for a month at the Quadrennial Conference of the Y. W. C. A. for all India, Ceylon and Burma. Lady Irwin and Lady Goschen are the patronesses and there will be more than one hundred delegates, Indians, Anglo-Indians and Europeans. Our work is one of the few which illustrates international good will and racial and denominational fellowship. . . . . The Student Department is doing a fine work in training Christian girls to take their part in the new day in India. For there is a new day. Old India still lives and its illiteracy is a drag, but young India has a new vision and is willing to pay the price for a new day. . . .

"To live and work here now is as interesting as it must have been in America in Colonial days, when so many things had to be decided. I do not want to get old yet! And I do feel grateful to the Y. W. C. A. for its pension fund which enables me to carry on and to lend a hand in many a good work. In Gwalior, I am in the diocese of Nagpur, but have not yet met the new bishop. His predecessor I knew well. We have a sweet little English Church there and a lay-reader's service. I went there to find an unoccupied field. It is allotted by mission comity to the American Presbyterian Board, with which I work in happy fellowship. I have begun a school for girls and also visit in zenanas."

Problems for the Church of England.

The Church of England, like our Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States, has the same harrassing problems and divisions of opinions: Anglo-Catholics vs. Low Churchmen; Modernists vs. Bible Believers; advocates for interdenominational Church unity and its opponents. In England the problems are even more complicated, owing to the union of Church and State. This offers another subject of division; some wish to continue the National Church, others wish to have Church authority and state authority distinctly separate.

The Revision of the Prayer Book is still the ever-present subject of serious consideration in England for the bill for revision did not pass in Parliament, where it was put to the vote. Every one seems restless for necessary changes —the Bishops more so than all others. They also seem to be the more radical element along ecclesiastical lines. English Church papers carry various views.

"The Record," which bears the inscription of "The Church's Oldest Newspaper", is outspoken in its attitude towards a recent letter of the Bishop of London, which he wrote in reply to twenty-one clergymen of his diocese who explained in an open letter their reasons for declining obedience to the Bishop's Directions concerning the use of the reserved sacrament. Two of this number have not received visits from the Bishop, owing to their having processions with the Sacrament. "The Record" writes:

" 'All that is forbidden is Devotions directly connected with the reserved Sacrament. All I have forbidden you to do is to move the reserved Sacrament from its appointed place, to open the aumbry or tabernacle, to cense it, or to allude to the Presence of the reserved Sacrament in your prayers.' Thus the Bishop of London defines his regulations on devotions in the neighborhood of the reserved Sacrament, for he would be 'extremely sorry if those informal little services of meditation and prayer, which many, including the very poor, love and understand more than they do the statutory services, should cease to be held.' If there ever was a ruling which gives the substance and removes the shadow this is the ruling. It permits and praises services that owe all their specific character to the Presence in the Reserved Sacrament, and simply says that certain ceremonies and expressions should not be used in connection with them. The whole teaching which has been the real source of these services is praised, the practice is continued, and the plea of the attachment of the "very poor" is made the ground for a continuance that is entirely opposed to the spirit and the letter of the authorized Formularies of the Church of England. The Bishop of London has given a lead to lawlessness or better said uncanonical disloyalty that is an object lesson to the whole Church and Nation.

"The Bishop uses plain language on the inconsistency of claiming as a ground for disobedience objections to the methods of appointing Bishops which were in force when the revolting twenty-one took orders. Does not this apply with equal force to the action of those men who knew the teaching of the Church and obtained 'things by disobedience in the past?' Even Diocesans cannot have it both ways, and the lawlessness that led the Bishops to sanction or attempt to obtain sanction for lawless practices is just as bad, as the lawlessness that refuses canonical obedience to instructions that meet the wishes of the Bishop when these instructions themselves are opposed to the law of this Church and Realm. We observe that when the Bishop strives to drive home his point he refers to the Deposited Book of 1927, not the Book of 1928—a deliberate going back on the adoption of the 1928 Book by the Church Assembly and the Bishops. We cannot discover any logical or consistent basis for this letter of the Bishop, unless it is to be found in the determination that his own preferences should be made the rule of the Diocese irrespective of the Law of the Church. He will take no action against nineteen of the twenty-one who have written to him, but he will take steps that their successors will accept his rulings on these matters before they are given charge of Parishes.

"The situation created by the action of the Bishop of London is one that must claim the attention of his brother Diocesans. They will soon meet to consider the entire outlook, and they are in the presence of a definite policy by the Bishop, who has more Clergy under his cure than any other Diocesan. His Diocese is the Diocese of the Metropolis of England, and on this account occupies a strategic position of very great importance. Are the Bishops collectively prepared to stand by this open defiance of the provisions of the Constitution under which the Church submitted the Deposited Book to Parliament and thereby pave the way for Disestablishment and Disendowment? Their Lordships must know that the Deposited Book has very few who weep over its demise, and that the Church as a whole has endorsed its rejection by the country. They are aware of the widespread discontent with the policy of defying the Constitution—a discontent that is by no means confined to those who opposed the passage of the Book in the Assembly and in Parliament. It is all very well for the Bishop of London to appeal to the twenty-one "to give back that peace and unity to the Church which it sorely needs for its world-wide work at the present time.' The Twenty-one are by no means the sole enemies of 'peace and unity.' The Bishop, who has strained to the utmost the provisions of the Deposited Book in favor of the 170 who had his illegal permission to reserve has on his shoulders a very heavy responsibility for the existing disorder."

The Bishop of Exeter seems more orthodox than his brother Bishop in his attitude towards the law and the Rejected Book. In his visitation charge recently published, he recalls "that he would not vote against the revision in the House of Lords, but I could not support it. I felt that there were passages in the book which were so dangerous to the position of the Church as to make its acceptance a disaster. On the other hand, I felt that the need for some revision was great. I had hoped, and do hope, for a book not claiming indeed to be a final revision, but one to which all parties would have agreed, even if many thought it insufficient and only of temporary value."

He refuses to sanction the use of the revised Prayer Book, though permitting the adoption of some of the new collects, ascribing as authority a certain latitude of interpretation of rubrics given by the book itself and confirmed indirectly by the Public Worship Act. Continuous reservation, which is practiced in twenty-four churches, he absolutely forbids except in the case of hospitals and similar institutions. The Athanasian Creed must be said once a year at least. The language of the Baptismal Service may be modernized and the exhortation in the Marriage Service altered, if the clergy think fit to do so. He is "doubtful as to the rightness of reintroducing the custom of the Viaticum", and says that "to suggest that death without the Viaticum is less blest than death with it is, I am sure, wrong." He gently chides Evangelicals for omitting to say daily Morning and Evening Prayer.

On the subject of Church unity, which will be brought to the front at Lambeth Conference next year "The Record" quotes the Archbishop of York: "Our task is to facilitate a union based on the Catholic principles which we hold in trust. We fail in our task if we either assist a union at the cost of these principles or so maintain these principles as to frustrate the union."

"The Record" writes:

"This puts the matter in a nutshell. The South Indian scheme provides for all future ordinations during the interim of thirty years on an Episcopal basis. As far as we understand history, this is the essential point in all schemes of Reunion which profess to base themselves on the acceptance of Episcopacy. And if the so-called Catholic principles involve the acceptance of accidents that have been evolved in the centuries at the expense of the essential differences between primitive and later systems, then the so-called Catholic principles are simply the predilections of men with a theory to uphold, not with the dynamic of Christianity to maintain. Union will take place on another basis if the narrow rigidity of un-Christian prejudice block the way to the acceptance of the Episcopal basis.

"Mr. Slosser, who was a Delegate to the Lausanne Conference, tells us in his volume, 'Christian Unity', that in the face of the advocacy of the reception by the Conference of the 'Unity' Report by the most prominent Anglicans and other Catholic leaders, a little group of fifteen out of the whole Conference prevented the act, that lay nearest the heart of practically all those who attended the Conference. It is hardly too much to say that what has been called 'the tragedy of Lausanne' has been brought about through the action of this little knot whose representatives in this country are the protagonists of those who fight against the acceptance of the South Indian Scheme. Dr. Temple rightly says: 'Denunciations of rumored proposals are very futile and rather embittering. We need careful enquiry and united prayer for the guidance of the Holy Spirit.' The issues at stake are most serious. Christian Nationals will have union. Their spiritual unity transcends denominational differences. In the Mission world the Anglican Communion stands for only one-eighth of the non-Roman Missions, and on what will be done next year depends whether this one-eighth will dwell in isolation from their brethren and inevitably decrease in influence or by linking up with the other Churches maintain Episcopacy on lines that are constitutional and catholic. For our part we have no doubt as to the calm and unfettered judgment of English Churchmen on the question."

St. John's Church, Cradle of American Liberty, in Immediate Danger of Destruction by Fire.

The people of St. John's Church and Richmond have awakened to the fact that Old St. John's, precious in historical and patriotic value to Richmond, Virginia, and the Nation, is in hourly danger of complete loss by fire.

On three occasions since 1927 St. John's Church has been in danger of immediate destruction. Once during this period fire broke out, but was extinguished before damage was done.

These fires were the result of the present dangerous heating arrangement, the boilers being located underneath the chancel of the church which is of wooden structure and very old.

It has long been the desire of the congregation to remedy this condition, but finances, with a limited membership of people of small means, has made it impossible.

To protect St. John's from fire hazard it is absolutely necessary that the boilers be removed and placed in a small separate building erected for their housing.

There is no way of doing this except by appealing to those who realize what the loss of St. John's Church would mean to all lovers of our own history and traditions. Checks may be mailed to the Rev. Hugh Sublett, rector, and Chairman of the Special Committee for Removing Fire Hazard from Church. "Every dollar contributed will be used directly and solely for the necessary fire protection and buildings."

The following letters from the Mayor of Richmond and L. S. Jones, Chief of Bureau of Fire Prevention, show the necessity for prompt action, and the need of substantial support of all those who have the preservation of this invaluable shrine truly at heart:

Office of the Mayor.
Richmond, Virginia.

May 15, 1929.

To the Vestry of
St. John's Episcopal Church,
Richmond, Va.

Gentlemen: In the absence from the City of Mr. L. S. Jones, Chief, Bureau of Fire Prevention, I wish again to call attention to the existence of the fire hazard at St. John's Church.

I strongly urge adoption of the recommendations of Mr. Jones contained in his report.

The loss of St. John's Church, one of America's most precious shrines, would be irreparable, and immediate action should be taken to protect the structure.

Very sincerely yours,
J. FULMER BRIGHT,
Mayor.

Hon. J. Fulmer Bright,
Mayor of the City of Richmond,
Richmond, Va.

Dear Sir: In accordance with your directions, contained in a letter to Captain James R. Sheppard, Jr., under date of December 23, 1926, I most respectfully submit the following report concerning fire hazards now existing in or near St. John's Church.

On October 30, 1926, I made a thorough inspection of St. John's Church, and reported in writing certain conditions to the Building Inspector that came under his jurisdiction, and other matters I reported direct to the church officials. On this day I have again inspected this building, as well as the other three structures on the grounds.

Concerning the church building, which is built entirely of wood; the furnace is located in a hole dug under the chancel of the church, and while the furnace itself seems to be in good condition and safe as an ordinary fire hazard, the smoke pipe from the furnace to the brick chimney runs along the earth, in places resting on the ground, and about twelve or fifteen inches from the wooden joists and, as far as I could see, these joists were protected by sheet asbestos and metal over the smoke pipe. The hot water pipes leading from the boiler under the church are covered with what appears to be corrugated asbestos, bound to the pipes with a cotton cloth, which covering is placed to conserve the heat and in no sense as a fire preventative. This cloth covering constitutes a fire hazard, as a spark from any source would possibly ignite the cloth and probably cause a fire, which would naturally be very serious in this isolated basement of the church.

In the rear, under the church, there is stored a lot of very small kindling wood, which constitutes an outside fire hazard, as it is only protected by an open lattice of wood, and a spark or burning brand from a fire in the neighborhood could easily ignite it.

I am strongly of the opinion that this entire heating plant and storage of fuel should be removed from the building and placed in a fireproof structure isolated from the church, and all necessary hot water pipes under the church should be free from such innammable material as the cotton cloth now covering them.

As the most reliable and efficient fire preventative measure, especially in a building of this nature, I earnestly recommend that it be protected by the installation of automatic sprinklers, particularly under the roof and in the basement.

To the southeast, a short distance from the church, there is a small frame shingle roof keeper's house, with a stove, the pipe extending through the roof. This should not be allowed—there should be a brick chimney and the roof should be of some fireproof material.

To the northeast of the church there is a large frame structure, used as a Sunday School, with a stove, and the smoke pipe extending through the roof, which is a fire hazard. This also should have a brick chimney. I also notice in this building that open gas radiators are used, which are dangerous under the conditions.

In the southwest part of the grounds there is an old brick structure, with a stove pipe through one of its windows.

While all of these buildings, if they are to be heated with stoves, as at present, should have properly constructed chimneys, it would be much safer if a new heating system is installed to have all of them heated from the one plant.

If the proposed sprinkler system is not installed, then there should be provided a sufficient number of acid and soda type fire extinguishers in all of these buildings.

Should you desire additional information or explanation of this subject, of course, I am always at your command.

Very respectfully,

L. S. JONES,

Chief, Bureau of Fire Prevention.

A Home Chapel.

In marked contrast to the ever-evident truism "the world is too much with us" is a unique and lovely little home chapel recently brought to our attention.

Mrs. George C. Remey (the widow of the late Rear-Admiral Remey), has converted one room of her home in Washington, D. C., into a chapel. She is advanced in years and going to church is difficult for her, so her rector, the Rev. C. Ernest Smith, of St. Thomas' Church, or one of his assistants, holds regular weekly services in the home. Her son, Mr. Charles Mason Remey, writes that this upper chamber for worship in the home has added so much to the religious life of the household and has so attracted their friends who frequently join them at worship, that he would like to pass the idea on to others. He writes:

"An unused storeroom in the upper part of the house was with a very little work transformed into a chapel that has a real atmosphere of worship and devotion. Doubtless there are many families who would have an oratory in the home if they knew how simple it would be to install a family altar."

A Half Million for Agnes Scott College.

Friends of Agnes Scott College, Decatur, Ga., are rejoicing in the splendid offer of the General Education Board, of New York, to give the College $500,000 if the friends of the institution will raise an additional $1,000,000, the whole sum of $1,500,000 to be used for better equipment and larger endowment funds. This was announced May 23.

It is the fourth time that the General Education Board has helped Agnes Scott; but the circumstances this time are quite unusual. The Board announced several years ago that it would discontinue gifts to colleges, and so the offer to Agnes Scott is an exception to its policy. It is also much larger than the gifts formerly made to strictly undergraduate institutions. In addition, the gift may be used for buildings or land or equipment, whereas the general rule of the Board has been to give only for endowment.

The offer was made after a thorough investigation of the College, its field of service, its alumnae activities and its development plans. President Trevor Arnett and several other officers of the Board made personal visits before recommending the grant. Friends of Agnes Scott all through the South have aided in meeting previous offers of the Board, and College officials believe that at this time they will be loyal in providing for this great advance in education for young women in the South.

Organs For Two Churches.

The Women's League of St. John's Church, Charleston, S. C., reports $800 obtained for purchase of a new organ, which the League has undertaken to provide. By rummage sales and other appropriate enterprises it is hoped that the balance required will be completed this summer.

Old Pohick Church, near Alexandria, Va., is more fortunate than St. John's. This is the church of which General Washington was vestryman and a wealthy parishioner has given it a very fine new pipe organ. The baptismal font of old Pohick was taken when the building was used as shelter by Federal troops in the Civil War and was not found until a few years ago when it was accidentally discovered in use as a water trough for the animals of a neighboring farm.

Slipping.

Last month we congratulated ourselves on being $69,709 ahead of 1928, now we are $50,873 behind. Only thirty-two dioceses and districts are in the 100 per cent class as compared with forty-one on June 1, last year.

Please read the following parable borrowed by the Church of the Mediator, Philadelphia, from the Philadelphia Inquirer:

Parable of the Vacationists: Now it came to pass as summer drew nigh that Mr. Church Member lifted up his eyes unto the hills and said:

"Lo, the hot days cometh and even now are at hand. Come, let us go unto the heights, where cool breezes refresh us and glorious scenes await."

"Thou speakest wisely," quoth Mrs. Church Member, "Yet three, yea four, things must we do before we go."

"Three things I can think of, but not four," responded Mr. Church Member. "We must arrange for our flowers to be cared for, our chickens fed, and the mail forwarded, but the fourth eludes my mind."

"The fourth is like unto the first three, yet more important than all. Thou shalt dig down into thy purse and pay the Church pledge, that the good name of the Church be preserved and that it may be well with thee, for verily I say unto thee, thou hast more money now than thou wilt have when thou dost return."

And it came to pass that Mr. Church Member paid his pledge for the summer and the Treasurer rejoiced greatly, saying, "Of a truth there are those who care for the Lord's work and bethink themselves of the Church's expenses which continue in the summer as in the winter."

And it was so.

Faithfully yours,

Lewis B. Franklin,

Treasurer.

Disagreement in Pennsylvania Diocese.

After five attempts to secure a Bishop Coadjutor, the Diocese of Pennsylvania is not unnaturally suffering from a "case of nerves". Two decided factions have arisen among the clergy.

A special dispatch to the New York Times says that six clergymen, in a letter just sent to all clergy in the diocese have termed a previous letter circulated by another group last week "highly discourteous" to Bishop Thomas J. Garland.

The original letter, in the form of a petition requesting an expression of opinion regarding the special convention scheduled for June 18 for the sixth election of a Bishop Coadjutor, contained the following sentence:

"I believe it unwise to attempt to elect a coadjutor June 18."

This letter also quoted a resolution to this effect passed by a vote of 54 to 32 at a meeting of the clergy on Tuesday.

The second letter protested against the petition as an attempt to "influence opinion' of the clergy in the meeting called for June 10 to discuss the advisability of holding another election.

It was signed by Dean H. St. Clair Hathaway of the Pro-Cathedral of St. Mary, the Rev. Richard J. Morris, secretary of the diocese to Bishop Garland; the Rev. Francis C. Steinmetz, the Rev. Archibald Campbell Knowles, the Rev. Charles Steel and the Rev. Charles Townsend, Jr.

Bishop's Son Foremost Student.

Henry St. George Tucker, Jr., youngest member of the graduating class of the Episcopal High School, led his class and the entire student body in average made in studies in the session closed last week. He is sixteen years old and the son of Bishop Henry St. George Tucker, of the Diocese of Virginia, and grandson of Bishop Beverley Tucker, of the Diocese of Southern Virginia.

His average in his studies for the session was 97.2. He also won the Meade prize for excellence in general class work, the Llewellyn Hoxton prize memorial and the Minor Blackford Medals for Mathematics and Latin. He has been the outstanding student since his enrollment at the school, six years ago. He won the Liggett memorial medal for the student under fifteen attaining the highest average in class work and in 1927 led the entire school. He was born in Japan while his father was missionary, but was brought to this country when six years old and began his education at the St. George's School, Norfolk, and Norfolk Boys' School. He speaks fluently Japanese, Latin, Greek, French and English. He has entered for the University of Virginia for 1930, but probably will take a post-graduate course at the Episcopal High School. It is not known whether he will follow the men of his father's family into the Episcopal ministry, or those of his mother's family, two of her brothers and her uncle being physicians.

WASHINGTON.

Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman, D. D., Bishop.

Military Service in Amphitheatre.

Another great service in the Amphitheatre on Mt. St. Alban, the first since General Convention days last October, was held on Sunday afternoon, May 26. The occasion was the "Massing of the Colors", sponsored by "The Military Order of the World War", and the day chosen as the Sunday nearest Memorial Day. The wooden chancel against a background of trees held a plain wooden cross banked at the foot with masses of red flowers. The color bearers of many organizations numbered more than 200 and the massing of these flags on either side of the cross presented an unusually inspiring picture. The U. S. Marine Band played before and after the service and during the singing of familiar hymns, conducted by Captain Taylor Branson, U. S. M. C.

The sermon was preached by the Bishop of Washington, and was a masterful challenge to the right kind of patriotism, loyalty and statesmanship. Taking his text from Isaiah, he referred to it as a remarkable program for a nation, reading as follows: "A Builder of all Waste Places, a Repairer of the breech and a restorer of parts to dwell in." Several thousands of people were present. Arrangements for the service were made by a committee consisting of the Very Rev. G. C. F. Bratenahl, Dean of Washington Cathedral, Dr. G. Freeland Peter, Canon of Washington Cathedral; Captain Curtis H. Dickens, Chief of Chaplains, U. S. N., and Captain Arlington A. McCallum, of the Military Order of the World War and rector of St. Paul's Church.

M. M. W.

Organ Recital at the Church of the Epiphany.

Miss Charlotte Klein, A. A. G. O., organist of the Church of the Transfiguration and well-known as an outstanding woman organist in this country, gave an organ recital at the Church of the Epiphany on Wednesday evening, May 29, under the auspices of the District of Columbia Chapter of the American Guild or Organists. The program which Miss Klein played is the same which she played later in Memphis at the Convention of the American Guild of Organists in the first week of June, and was played entirely from memory.

MARYLAND.

Rt. Rev. J. G. Murray, D. D., Bishop.
Rt. Rev. E. T. Helfenstein, D. D., Coadjutor

Hannah More Academy.

On Tuesday, June 4, 1929, the Hannah More Academy, Maryland's Diocesan School for Girls, held their annual commencement exercises.

Morning Prayer was said at 10:30 A. M. and the Graduation Exercises were at 11 o'clock. Both Bishops Murray and Helfenstein were there and presented the diplomas and awards. The address was made by the Rev. C. Leslie Glenn, Secretary for College Work under the National Council.

There were seven graduates: Misses Sarah Lloyd Lowndes Bennett, Margaret Snowden Boss, Victoria Cranford, Marietta Wise Derby, Margaret Sothoron Harris, Margaret Perkins, and Eleanor Washington Scott.

Miss Laura Fowler is Principal of Hannah More Academy and the School has made marked progress since she has been in charge.

The Convocation of Annapolis, met at Grace Church, Elkridge, on Wednesday, June 5. The Rev. Charles E. McAllister, rector of the Church of St. Michael and All Angels, Baltimore, preached the sermon at the opening service, and after luncheon, the Rev. Dr. John I. Yellott, rector of Emmanuel Church, Belair, Md., read a very interesting paper on "Development in Religion."

N. E. P.

TENNESSEE.

Rt. Rev. Thos. F. Gailor, D. D., Bishop.
Rt. Rev. J. M. Maxon, D. D., Coadjutor.

Centennial Celebration for Parish and Diocese.

A joint observance of the centennial anniversary of the organization of the parish and of the diocese was held in Christ Church, Nashville, Tenn., the Rev. Edmund P. Dandridge, D. D., rector, May 22 and 23.

The parish anniversary was celebrated on the twenty-second, the program for the day beginning with a Corporate Communion of present and former members at 7:30 A. M., with the Bishop of Tennessee as celebrant, assisted by the Bishop of Georgia, a former rector, and the present rector and his associate, Rev. J. F. McCloud. At 10:30 there was a festival service of Morning Prayer, with an historical address by Bishop Gailor. The offertory was a special "Centennial Anthem" composed for the occasion, the words being selected from the Psalms and the book of Isaiah by the rector, and the music composed by F. Arthur Henkel, choirmaster and organist of the parish for over twenty years. The afternoon was featured by an informal reception in the parish house, and the evening by a dinner at which the Bishop Coadjutor of the Diocese, formerly rector of the parish, was toastmaster, and addresses were made by two other former rectors, Bishop Reese of Georgia, who spoke on "The Church in the South", and Bishop Mikell of Atlanta, whose topic was "The Old Church in the New Day". Bishop Gailor spoke informally in a reminiscent vein, and pronounced the benediction. Telegrams of felicitation and regret that physicians' orders forbade their attendance were received from the other two former rectors, now Bishops, the Bishop of New York and the Bishop of Arkansas.

The diocesan celebration on the twenty-third consisted of two services in the church, a choral eucharist at 10:30 and an evening service, with the combined choirs of the three parishes in the city, and a goodly number of the clergy from all parts of the diocese in the procession. At the morning service was read a historical address prepared by the Rev. Arthur Howard Noll, LL. D., historiographer of the diocese for over thirty years, setting forth the events leading up to the organization of the diocese in 1829, and its significance in the expansion of the Church's work in the Southern Trans-Allegheny region. Bishop Gailor was the celebrant, assisted by Bishops Maxon and Reese. At the evening service Bishop Mikell was the officiant, and the addresses were by Bishop Maxon and Bishop Gailor, each speaking of various phases in the past history of the diocese and of the work to be done in the future.

VIRGINIA.

Rt. Rev. H. St. George Tucker, Bishop.

First English Communion in America to be Commemorated.

The eighth annual Jamestown-Williamsburg Pilgrimage for Episcopal Churchmen will be held June 15-16, 1929.

The pilgrimage is conducted under the auspices of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew for the purpose of celebrating the Holy Communion at the Robert Hunt Shrine in Jamestown, Virginia, commemorating the first communion held on American soil. It is open to all Churchmen, whether or not members of the Brotherhood.

The Very Rev. H. Dobson Peacock, Dean of Christ Church, Norfolk, Virginia, will conduct the services this year, in conjunction with the Rev. W. A. R. Goodwin, D. D., rector of Bruton Parish Church, Williamsburg, Virginia.

The trip will be made in automobiles furnished by the pilgrims.

The cost will be $3.75, which includes lodging and meals at the College and the incidental expenses of the pilgrimage, which fee should be paid to Mr. Everead Meade, Jr., treasurer, Saturday afternoon before leavng Richmond.

Three Richmond churches are conducting a Sunday-school picnic at Buckroe Beach on Saturday. For the benefit of persons desiring to attend both the picnic and the pilgrimage special arrangements have been made with the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad to stop the Sunday-school excursion train from Buckroe Beach at Williamsburg Saturday, 6:15 P. M., to let off those desiring to attend the pilgrimage.

The Pilgrimage program follows:

Saturday, June 15.

3:00 P. M.—Leave Mayo Memorial House, Richmond, Virginia, in automo-

(Continued on page 22.)

Family Department

JUNE.

1. Saturday.
9. Second Sunday after Trinity.
11 Tuesday. S. Barnabas.
16. Third Sunday after Trinity.
23 Fourth Sunday after Trinity.
24. Monday. Nativity of S. John Baptist.
29. Saturday. S. Peter.
30. Fifth Sunday after Trinity.

COLLECT FOR THIRD SUNDAY AFTER TRINITY.

O Lord, we beseech Thee mercifully to hear us and grant that we, to whom Thou hast given a hearty desire to pray, may by Thy mighty aid be defended and comforted in all dangers and adversities; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

For The Southern Churchman.

THROUGH THE DARK.

Kate Randle Menefee.

Last night I thought
In all the world
  Were none so lone as I,
Until the moonlight drenched a rose
  Crimsoned beneath the sky.

On stem devoid
Of leaf or bud,
  It lifted its bright face
Up to the wind and perfume sprayed
  The garden's dreary space.

And drops of it
Dripped in my heart
  When lo! each sombre thought
Was tinged with summer radiance
  A lonely rose had brought.

Truth.

It is plain that no finite mind can embrace the whole Truth as it is known to Him Who is the Truth. It is true also, as I think, that, so long as our spirits work through our limited brain and reasoning powers we shall never view truth from the same standpoint. If we take a truth upon which all Christians will agree, for example, that "God is Love", we should find if we could look into the minds of those who faithfully and sincerely agree that He is Love, a very large variety of opinions. We should find that both the image of God and the image of Love in each mind were exceedingly different. This being so, controversy upon matters on which we are not agreed, appears to me to be fruitless.

We accept much that we believe on Authority; in my opinion we are right to do so. We accept doctrines on the authority of Scriptures; and on the authority of creeds handed down by the primitive church; the traditions of men who lived near to the Apostolic age. There is a great deal which we accept on authority. I believe that the earth whirls on its axis; that it circles the sun, that the whole system is rushing at a prodigious rate of speed through space. This is entirely against the evidence of my senses; and I have no power to verify what I believe; but I accept it on authority. Authority is a stable centre; and we do well to accept it.

But there is another aspect which is the main point. We cannot grasp the whole truth of any mystery if it be received as doctrine. We cannot be sure that what our neighbor believes is precisely the same aspect of truth as that which is comfort and support to us.

But when we cease from men and cease from formulated truth, there remains one transcendent Fact. We can know a Person; and that Person claimed to be Truth; and to give Freedom.

Not one isolated individual, but thousands and thousands of believers have proved to their own satisfaction that that Person can be known; that He can satisfy their doubt, give rest to their souls, fill their hearts and guide their steps. Moreover that Truth, as a Person, can give freedom from self, freedom from the House of Death, entrance into the House of Life.

This is peculiarly the privilege of the sick and suffering that they can prove it to a doubting world.

Let the world see that what they seek and argue about you have found. The Truth Who is a Person. It may take learning and intellect to grasp a philosophical truth. But any one can know the Truth Who is a Friend.—Healing Church.

Her Works Praise Her.

Minna McEuen Meyer.

Persons who desire distinctive linens for tea-tables or for their rooms, or who desire gifts for their friends—something that is different—have frequently found these in the shops in New York or Boston or Washington that handle the Near East Industries.

If one such lady makes a trip to Mediterranean ports and stops at Athens or Constantinople or Beirut, she is sure to go at once to the shop that sells the work of the women who live in the refugee camps of these cities. While admiring the beautiful embroidery work done sometimes in brilliant red or in green or gold, or perhaps in shades that suggest a pastel painting, does she, I wonder, ever think of the history of the women whose work she admires? Here is the story of one of the workers, Madam Kevikoglou.

She is a big, fine looking peasant woman, and in her home on the shores of the Black Sea, where she lived before she became an exile, she helped her husband in the fields and in the garden. But the terrible war, the deportations and the life in the refugee camp, have left her today the sole support of a husband who is paralyzed, and three children who must be fed and clothed. She cannot leave home to go out to work, and embroidery was her only means of earning money. At first it seemed to the American relief worker almost cruel to force her fingers to do fine embroidery work, but there was no other way for her to earn a living, and patiently, week after week, Madam Kevikoglou's work was examined, corrected and it was explained to her how it should be done. At first, it had to be sold in the shop at a bargain, for not only were the fingers clumsy, but in doing the work there were the many interruptions when she must give attention to her husband or feed her children and then turn back to her work for a few stitches, always stopping to wash her hands carefully because the shop could not accept pieces of linen that were soiled. Then a few more stitches and then the work must be put aside to do the cooking for the family. But she has been so grateful for the work and has tried so hard and worked so patiently that the last articles that she brought in did not have to go to the bargain tables. They were good enough to pass even the critical eyes of the one who selects goods for export, and now they are bringing in enough money to make it possible for her to support her family.

Another lady whose work you will admire is Mrs. Theophilides, who with her two sisters, her mother and her own frail daughter, landed in Athens from Smyrna, destitute, as were all the others. They were ladies, born and reared, spoke and wrote French and were used to the real niceties of life. They were women of the old school, trained to do fine needle-work. They were put into a one-room refugee house, and showing the real stuff in them they started in life again, doing the only thing that was possible for them to do to earn their food. At the door of the American Near East Industries Shop, they sat in line with all the other old women, but no word of complaint ever escaped them. Because of the sad experiences through which they had passed, the old mother soon died, then the older sister and last of all the delicate young daughter fell ill of tuberculosis and lived but a few months. Poor Mrs. Theophilides almost lost her courage, but still she and her sister kept up their embroidery and gradually she has found relief in a beautiful effort to help others. She said that in the refugee camp she knew twenty women who were too old and decrepit now to come to the shops regularly for their work, but if the work were taken to them they would be able to earn something. She pleaded for a chance to take the work to them herself, suggesting that it would help keep her mind off her own troubles. Of course, she and her sister lived from what they, too, made by needlework and the time taken to distribute work to the elderly women was taken from her own earnings. Of the twenty whom Mrs. Theophilides helps, some are crippled with rheumatism, some are old and feeble, but they love the work and they look eagerly for the coming of their friend whose coming means really life itself and some measure of peace for twenty old souls.

More than three hundred women, with dependents numbering approximately twelve hundred are employed by the Near East Industries in Athens. And the American girl, daughter of a former United States Minister to Greece, who gives her time to the supervision of the work, is a charming young woman who might spend her time in ease at home if she had not discovered this means of bringing happiness to the lives of many people by giving them an opportunity for work by which they earn their daily bread.

For The Southern Churchman.

A Novel Radio Party.

The Rev. Alan Pressley Wilson.

Here is a true recital of the way a radio receiving set reconciled petty differences between two matrons, living side by side, and enabled one of them to go on with an announced party, even though her little girl was taken seriously sick the very day set and her house was quarantined. (The two women had been lifelong friends until a misunderstanding caused a break in their friendship.)

The invitations for the party had been sent out and accepted, all arrangements had been perfected and delicious refreshments had been prepared. It was to be a "Radio Party" and the big set had been tuned up in readiness for the occasion. Every connection was gone over and the man-of-the-house announced gleefully the distant stations he expected to bring in.

Little Ruth had been ailing for a day or two and then, suddenly, collapsed and ran a high fever. When the doctor came late that afternoon he pronounced the disease contagious and ordered the house quarantined. What to do the mother and prospective hostess of the Radio Party did not know. "If only Arabella (the next-door neighbor with whom she had had a foolish quarrel) would help her out!"

In the meantime, the heart of Arabellla ached for the quandom friendship of Elizabeth whom she had allowed to go out of her life because of this little difference. Watching the doctor leave the house and then seeing the agent of the Board of Health come with the ominous blue sign for the front door, Arabella hastened to the telephone and assured Elizabeth that the party might be held anyway and offered her spacious home for the occasion.

Past differences speedily were wiped out and the two sets of telephone wires literally burned with messages sent here and there. Each invited guest was acquainted with the change of place for holding the party, the refreshments were handed out from back kitchen door to that of the next house and, wonder of wonders, the big radio set was transplanted from its erstwhile home into that of the next-door neighbor.

Two side yards separated the houses and it was but a matter of a short time until the man-of-the-house had changed the lead-in wiring from the aerial on his house to enter the window of his neighbor's house.

The transplanted party was pronounced a success, the only sad note being the regret that the original hostess could not be present. However, a vote of thanks was extended to the hostess pro tem, and, listening in over her telephone, the original hostess heard the vote of thanks extended to her next-door neighbor as "emergency hostess", while over the telephone Elizabeth gave her affirmative vote.

The bond of sterling friendship thus was cemented and the radio played the important part.

Keeping Peace, Giving Peace.

"Acquaint now thyself with Him, and be at peace." More than ever before in the world's history, men are valuing the peacemaker. That is because the awful events of the World War taught us so clearly the fundamental need of peace, if the world is not to revert to chaos. Our Lord's teachings about peace were revolutionary. The world of His day could not comprehend them, much less rise to the height of them. Even today, after nearly two thousand years, we have hardly begun the practical application of them.

Christ was the great Peacemaker. He is our Peace. He came to earth to end the long war that man was waging against the loving Heavenly Father. And no man can be a peacemaker, in the private or the world sphere, until he gains for himself the spirit of the world's one Peacemaker.

That is the secret of success in peacemaking. Until we get peace in our own hearts, love peace, and exemplify it, we cannot establish the peace on earth of which the angels sang. Peace is a blessed contagion. Peace like a river flows from one soul to another. The nations will be at peace when the will to peace animates all peoples.—Christian Herald.

LIKE MEN OF OLD.

Lord, who of old by Galilee
Didst share the lot of men like me,
Who knowest, as none other may,
The weary burden of the day—
Stretch forth Thy hand
Over the weakness of my clay.

Like men of old worn weary spent
I come to Thee for nourishment
For strength to meet my many fears
For guidance through uneasy years:—
Stretch forth Thy hand;
I need the knowledge of Thy tears.

Toil-roughened like the palm of one
Who labors till the day be done,
Scarred as no other hand may be
By prints of nails on Calvary,
Thine outstretched hand
Dost Thou, O Lord, reach down to me?

Ah, Lord, my God, I look and know
The hand that's marred and twisted so,
Each healing touch a scar, a sign;—
And as I lift this hand of mine
To Thy strong hand,
Mine's healed, but lo! my scar on thine!

—Selected.

Cooperating With Mother.

Looking through a magazine the other day, I became interested in a letter written by one of its readers. It was from a woman past fifty, the mother of several children. She was discouraged and worn out, mentally and physically, with her years of responsibility and work.

"We are all to blame for many of our troubles," the letter read. "We ask nothing in return for our labors but the pleasure of our dear ones; it is a great mistake.

"We teach them from babyhood to take our services as a matter of course, and by the time we realize what we have done, we are too tired and worn out to care; and it does not pay."

This is only part of the soul-revealing letter, but in it there is food for thought and study, and a warning to young mothers—a warning to begin with the just-around-the-corner-from-babyhood days to give the children small duties and small responsibilities, so that the burden which usually falls to the mother's lot may be lessened. When boys and girls discover how much actual labor there is connected with a house they realize the great help they may be to mother.

So many mothers will continue taking the entire responsibility for running a house smoothly and efficiently year in and year out. The only sign of protest they ever make is a weary little "I'm a bit tired" at night, without ever a heart-to-heart talk with the family asking for cooperation.

The piping-hot breakfasts, the dainty, wholesome lunches and delicious dinners, the cozy, cheery, neat home, are taken as a matter of course. Children who have had no experience in doing household tasks do not realize the effort, time and hard work back of it all. It all looks so easy, so simple!

And who is to make them realize and appreciate, if not the parents? It is not fair to the "dear ones" to allow them to take all this for granted.

"If we allow ourselves to be left behind, if we work so hard we are too tired to take part in the daily lives of our children and husbands," the letter continued, "they simply learn to do without us."

Isn't there a lot of truth tucked away in those words? Shouldn't they make all mothers who have tiny children think?

I remember a certain Thanksgiving that shames and grieves me. We did not have a maid, so mother cooked and served a delicious Thanksgiving dinner for two guests and our own family. After dinner the guests, my father and I hurried downtown for an afternoon's merry-making, leaving mother, who was not strong, to clear off the table and do the stacks of dishes. Mother was the one who deserved and should have had the happy afternoon. And, now that I have come to a realization of the many sacrifices she made and have learned how much help I could have been to lighten her burdens, it is too late.

That is what the writer of the letter suggested:

"And by the time they marry and have children of their own, and learn from experience what life means, and what children mean in a mother's life, perhaps it is too late; you may have passed on, and if not, it is still rather difficult 'to teach old dogs new tricks'!"

So the wives and mothers must remedy this. They should commence with the husbands at marriage, and with the children in their very early years. It is really very easy to teach the children to hang up their wraps, to run errands, to keep their rooms tidy, and to do the hundred and one other little things which inculcate in them the habit of service and the sense of responsibility.

A mother, like a child, needs understanding, love and play. She should share these and also her household cares with her family. This would make happier ,sweeter-tempered, younger and more charming mothers the country over, and better and happier boys and girls.—Helen Gregg Green.

For The Southern Churchman.

HOKKU SEQUENCE.

William Allen Ward.

Fools count their dollars,
Believing gold and silver
Will make them happy.

Wise men count the stars
And see the rainbows that come
After the wind storms.

They hoard the sunsets
And gather the purple sky
For their treasure box.

Unafraid.

To one who believes in our eternal and Almighty God, there is no reason for dismay, whatever may be the terror of the storms that burst upon him or the shame of the failures that wither him. He knows that the way of progress is very long and the days of effort are unnumbered. His eye is not on the thorns that pierce his feet, but upon the goal of his hopes, the summit of his aims. He knows that many a weary traveler has passed his way, and none have fainted who kept faith with the Lord, that only those break down who doubt or rebel. The eternal years belong to him, for he sees the invisible and will make no surrender to difficulty. He has learned that selfishness and vanity are the most troublesome springs of unhappiness, and that sacrificia llove has always enough to engage a zealous heart.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

For the Young Folks

For The Southern Churchman.

PRAYER FOR SMALL CHILDREN.

Mrs. H. W. Gillingham.

Thank you, God, for all your care,
For things to eat, and things to wear:
My father and mother good and kind,
Help me to always try to mind;
And grow a better child each day,
Like Jesus, in Whose name I pray.

For The Southern Churchman.

QUEEN VICTORIA SENDS A PRESENT

George Morgan Knight, Jr.

Chapter II.

The Rescue.

Captain Robertson continued as he took slow puffs from his pipe: "'An English ship in distress, Sir,' I told the Captain, handing back the glass. 'She was treated far worse than we, it looks from here. Most of her masts are down. They have a distress flag up, sir'."

Here Captain Robertson looked up for a moment and listened to the wind and then went on: "'We must rescue them. As it is a dangerous task, I must have volunteers!' The Captain then glanced away at the ship again and ordered the ship to change her course, that she might come up with the other ship. It was not an easy matter to turn around and chase after a ship with the sea so choppy and raw after a storm. The waves still had not lost their swells. We could not turn abruptly and sail for the ship. We had to make a wide curve. But finally we had done so and were in sight of the ship again. The wind carried us faster and soon we were overtaking her. All this time a crew was being picked to set out and rescue the folks on the other ship. Four other members and myself had volunteered for the job. We had selected a boat and had it ready to lower when we got within a good distance of the ship. At last the rowboat was lowered, slowly, as it was no easy matter. When we had finally cut loose from our own vessel the waves tossed us about like a tiny egg shell. We could see the fire in our own boilers. There are three seas and in the third one after the two proceeding, there comes a lull. We all had to work in this one. I was in command and rowed with all the strength I could with the others. The riggings and masts were trailing behind the wrecked vessel, and this caused us to have to row around it.

"Each moment, it seemed, was to be our last. The high pitching sea threw us around and it seemed an eternity reaching the English ship. But God was with us and we did. The wind had blown so hard that small covering was left on the few passengers and crew. The sailors with great difficulty tied a rope to themselves and throwing the other end to us jumped overboard. We then pulled them in the boat.

When most of them were in our boat the Captain's wife refused to jump overboard. She had all her clothes blown off and also her hair. We had no time to argue with her. Time was precious. We could any moment be dashed against the ship's sides and be drowned. Tying a rope around her the sailors threw her in. When she had come up and been pulled aboard, she clutched a small wet shawl around her and a little Bible in her hand." Here the Captain smiled before finishing.

"'Do you ever read the B-B-Bible?' she asked me, holding it up and spluttering water. 'This is no time to read it, Madame,' I replied, and I saw that she was all right. All the hands had been rescued. And another serious problem faced us. The boat was over-crowded and could capsize easily. It was up to us to prevent this. We had seen that the load was evenly distributed. The sea had grown a little smoother and we must get back to the ship. Darkness was fast bearing down upon us and we must make the ship before night fall. Or we never would be picked up. Then I gave the orders to row like forty. I was very scared, for the sea seemed to realize our position at once. The waves took on new vigor and crashed against the frail boat's sides. The sky grew darker and our ship lit lights for us to be guided by. When the sun finally sunk beneath the waves, we had just reached our ship. Safe at last on our own ship, our muscles relaxed and the other passengers took care of the rescued.

"It is useless to say the great praise every one got for their bravery. Each man was a hero in the passengers' eyes. We learned on the next day that the ship was a freighter bound for England. She had encountered the storm on her way from Australia and her losses had been heavy. The Captain's wife had lost her piano, and five hundred dollars in gold. She was very nice to us, and I hardly knew her when she approached me the next day. She was dressed in some passenger's clothes and her little red shawl and Bible were not seen. She thanked me graciously for saving them. But always I see her as I did the first time with her shawl and Bible.

"It was the day of your grandmother's wedding, when a large package came for me. Many months had elapsed since the rescue and a man ready to marry forgets things like this. The English stamps recalled the incident, and when we both opened package we found those mother of pearl marine glasses on the mantle over there. On them were: 'To First Mate R. O. Robertson, who risked his life for my subjects, with sincere thanks, Queen Victoria, England'."

The old man looked down and Thomas was fast asleep. The storm had abated and only a soft rain fell now. The embers were dying down. It was very late. Thomas did not know, when he was put to bed by his mother. But he was not disturbed by the storm that night again.

Although the good queen was dead, her kindness was not forgotten, and, as the years would roll by Thomas would value those marine glasses very much. For some day he was to be a Captain and sail the seas with his grandfather's same ambition.

(The End.)

Two Little Girls and a Doll.

One little girl was the daughter of an Apache Indian chief. The other little girl was the daughter of a United States Army officer. The doll had rosy cheeks, blue eyes, and had traveled in a box all the way from "back East".

It all happened years ago, when the United States Government was trying to allot certain lands to the Indians. Some of the Apaches were not satisfied with their share, so they made ready for war and gathered from every direction to fight the white man.

"The Apaches are gathering for war," was the message sent to the Government. Immediately large numbers of soldiers were ordered to the nearest fort to keep constant watch on the Indians.

The first Apache captured by the soldiers was very small. She was a little girl, who strayed too far from her wigwam and could not find her way back. The Government soldiers found her, tired and frightened, and took her on to their own fort. They tried to show her that they wanted to be friends, but their strange white faces terrified her, and she cried and cried. One soldier after another tried to comfort her, but the more they tried the louder she wailed. The commanding officer did not know what to do next. He shook his head in despair. Then he said to his men, "Wait a minute; I have an idea."

He called his little daughter. "Here's a little girl who has come to visit you." he said, as he led the little lost Apache toward her. She walked shyly up to the little Indian girl, hugging in her arms her new doll, which had come in the box from friends in the East. As soon as the little Indian saw the doll she forgot to cry any more, and held out both her arms for it.

At first it seemed there would be another war. The little girls were like their fathers. Both wanted the same doll, as their fathers wanted the same land.

"Won't you let your little friend play with your doll awhile?" asked the officer coaxingly.

Then he waited until his daughter politely handed her doll to the daughter of the Apache chief. After that they were friends. They sat down together, they ate together, and then went to sleep together. When the little Apache awoke, some of the soldiers took her back to her father's wigwam, marching under a flag of truce. She was delighted to be back home and ran around showing all her friends the doll which the little "paleface" had given her.

At the fort the soldiers waited for the attack of the Indians. Everything was very still, and soon the message came that the various bands of Apaches were breaking up and going in peace to the land which the Government had set apart for them. The soldiers could not understand.

"Seems like the red men aren't going to fight us after all. What do you suppose has happened?"

"Do you suppose it could be the doll that has charmed 'em?"

The soldiers laughed, but this was xactly what had happened. The Apache chief was so pleased with the doll and the kindness of the white man to his little daughter, that he declared the war off.—Mrs. E. C. Cronk.

For The Southern Churchman.

EVIDENCE.

William Allen Ward.

There's a sermon in the swallow's throat;
Religion in the flower—
There's a hymnal in the robin's note;
Salvation in the shower.

Treed.

The cowbells tinkled in a drowsy and delightful way. The green stretch of meadow where they grazed was splashed with blue-and-white larkspur and the yellow gold of antichokes. David climbed over the bars and made his way toward the branch that ran along the far edge of the pasture. He was going to get some crawfish to use for bait the next day. He kept close to the fence so that in case Mrs. Spitfire saw him he could climb over and get out of her reach. Mrs. Spitfire was one of those long-horned, wild-eyed cows that like nothing better than to catch a little boy out in the pasture alone and toss him up in the air on her sharp horns. She had chased David more than once, and the only reason she had not been sold and cut up into soup bones and beefstakes long ago was that she gave so much milk and so much fine yellow butter.

Mrs. Spitfier, though, on that particular afternoon, kept on grazing without raising her head, and didn't see David at all as he went toward the branch. The branch was in a great hurry, as usual, and it kept murmuring something to itself over and over. David fished around with his hands until he got his little baking powder can filled with crawfish. Then he started home. He looked for Mrs. Spitfire, but she was nowhere to be seen. "She's under the hill yonder, where the grass grows so deep, I reckon," said David. "I b'lieve I'll go by that patch and get mother some larkspur. Old Spitfire'll never know it!" He made his way toward the center of the pasture where the wild flowers grew.

David picked very carefully. He soon forgot all about the unfriendly cow, all red and white. But after a bit he heard a short, angry bellow. He looked up and close at hand stood old Mrs. Spitfire. David grabbed his bait and his flowers and went, like a little brown streak, across the field toward the fence. Behind him came the broad red streak that was Mrs. Spitfire. I tell you it was a lively race, with the red streak gaining on the little brown streak every minute. David saw that he'd never get to the fence in time, so he turned and ran toward the hackberry tree that stood halfway to the branch. Here came Mrs. Spitfire, madder than ever. But David scooted along, just ahead of the sharp horns, and when he got to the friendly tree he dropped bait and flowers and scrambled up the trunk like a badly scared squirrel. And in the very nick of time! Mrs. Spitfire got there a second later and pawed the earth and bellowed in the most hair-raising manner. But David only laughed, though he was still rather pale, and swung his bare legs above her head. But the worst thing was that she wouldn't leave! No indeed, she stayed right there!

"She's got me treed, all right," said David, wishing he were as big as Goliath. He squinted at the sun. It was about an hour until milking time. Then if she didn't go home, Mary would come to drive her up. The time lagged. He was so hungry he felt that he could not live until supper time.

The sun was setting when he heard Mary's rich Irish voice calling, "Soo cow! Soo-oo cow!" She came in sight. How tall and strong she was! And brave! There never was a cow that could make Mary run. David called loudly. She came over to where he was. "For the land's sake, Davy! Is this where you was? Your mamma's uneasy about you," she said, laughing. She took a stout stick and gave Mrs. Spitfire a sharp whack. The defeated cow ambled homeward. The little boy climbed down. He looked up at Mary's kind face gratefully. He slipped his moist little hand into her big warm one. They started home, and David said warmly: "Mary, I b'lieve I'll marry you when I'm a man, if you'll just please wait for me!"—Christian Observer.

Are You a Yes-er?

"I think Mary Drew is a very foolish girl. She says yes, to everything; doesn't know how to say no, I guess," said Ruth, as she came home from the business meeting where she had spent the evening.

"Is it as bad as that, Ruth?" asked her grandmother. "I don't think of Mary as a weakling."

"No," answered Ruth, "she's not that; but she does let them impose upon her most awfully."

"What has she done now, dear?" asked grandmother.

"Oh, nothing, but just be an easy mark. Tonight she let them elect her president of our league."

"That's quite an honor, isn't it, Ruth?" asked grandmother. "I should say that it speaks well for her ability."

"Yes, I know it does," responded Ruth. "But it's not an honor, it's a lot of hard work. The whole thing almost falls on the president."

"How do you account for her being chosen?" asked grandmother.

"Mostly because she always says yes to everything and it saves them from looking farther," Ruth answered shrewdly.

"But she has ability, hasn't she?" persisted grandmother.

"Yes, but she does more than any of them. I wouldn't work so hard," said Ruth, with spirit.

"How long have you known Mary, dear?" thoughtfully asked her grandmother.

"Oh, for a long time."

"When you first knew her," persisted grandmother, "could she have been president of your league?"

"I should say not," said Ruth. "When I first knew her," she reflected, "she was a very shy and timid girl and never had anything to say, not even an idea most of the time."

"Doesn't it seem very strange to you, then, Ruth, that this shy girl should now lead your society? How did it come about? What was the first work that you remember that she did?" persisted grandmother.

"First, as I remember it," said Ruth, "she helped one of the older girls at a social, and I remember, afterward, that they were surprised to find she was so much help. She seemed to give her whole thought and self to making it go."

"Then what followed?" asked grandmother.

"Then," continued Ruth, "she was asked to be recording secretary, a job everybody hates."

"And what did Mary say to this?"

"Why, of course, she said yes. That's what she always says."

"And was she a good secretary?" prodded grandmother.

"I should say," generously acceded Ruth. "At first she used to read her minutes very timidly, sounded sometimes as though her breath wouldn't hold out until she got through. But when she finished, you knew just what happened at the last meeting. You could almost see it. She put meat on the dry bones of the pros and cons of the business, all right."

"Was she secretary very long?"

"Oh, a couple of years, I guess. Anyway, until they needed a chairman for the prayer meeting committee, another job no one wants."

"And again she said yes?" queried grandmother.

"Of course," assented Ruth affirmatively.

"And again she was the best chairman they ever had, I suppose," said grandmother.

"Why, yes," said Ruth, surprised, as she recalled it. "Yes, she was. Seemed to know just what to do to make the work a success."

"First, a helper at a social, then secretary, then chairman of an important committee, then president," grandmother enumerated. "It was her yesses that did it, dear," she finally said.

"What do you mean, grandmother, dearie?" Ruth finally asked.

"Just this, girlie," said grandmother. "When any one will undertake a responsibility and give it thought and make it a success, she gets more out of it than any one else. It is an education that fits her for the next job higher. When you think of those young people who refused to be secretary before Mary took it, could they be president now, do you think?"

"No," said Ruth, "none of them. They have never tried to do anything."

"They are just where they were years ago, then," grandmother commented.

"Yes," said Ruth thoughtfully.

"Why did you say that, grandmother, dearier?" Ruth finally asked.

"Just this, dear, to show you that while Mary may have seemed to you to be the butt of their imposition, she has grown, through her years of service, from a timid, colorless girl to a capable leader of an organization. The lesson is plain, Ruth. You learn by trying. The yes-ers always grow."—Girls' World.

BIRD TRADES.

The swallow is a mason,
And underneath the eaves
He builds a nest and plasters it
With mud and hay and leaves.

Of all the weavers that I know
The oriole is the best,
High on the branches of the tree
She hangs her crozy nest.

The woodpecker is hard at work—
A carpenter is he—
And you may hear him hammering
His nest high up a tree.

Some little birds are miners;
Some build upon the ground;
And busy little tailors, too,
Among the birds are found.

—Our Dumb Animals.

The Tale of the Tiger.

Once upon a time there was a boy who had a yellow-striped toy tiger with green glass eyes given him for his birthday. It could growl loudly if the boy pulled its head down.

The morning of his birthday the boy built a large, strong cage of blocks for his toy tiger, and then he went out in his yard to play. His friend came up the street just then and stopped at the boy's gate. The boy leaned over the yard gate and, looking back in a make-believe scared way towards his front door, said in a whisper: "I have a tiger in my house. A tiger could eat you up."

"Dear me!" said the friend, "I have to go right home." And with that his friend hurried away.

"Ha, ha!" the boy chuckled to himself, "that was a good joke." Then he forgot all about it.

But the tale of the tiger went on. The boy's friend ran in to tell the cook as soon as he got home. "A boy up the street has a tiger that could eat us up!"

"Dear me!" said the cook, almost dropping her pan of gingerbread. Then she ran to the back door and told the iceman: "There's a tiger up the street, and it will eat us up if something isn't don'e to stop it."

"Dear me!" said the iceman, and he rattled his tongs to call a policeman. "Here's work for you. Up the street there are tigers in the yard, and they are likely to eat up the whole town." ing toward the station house. "That's a great danger to this town. Those tigers must have got loose on their way to the zoo, but we haven't any ropes or cages in the police department."

So he telephoned the fire chief: "Up the street there are tigers in a yard, and they will soon be eating up the whole town."

"Dear me!" the fire chief answered. "I'll start right away with the hose and hook and ladder, and plenty of rope. You had better come too."

Near dinner time the boy took a handful of grass in to feed the toy tiger in his cage. Then he made the tiger growl loudly. The windows were open, so the sound, the tiger's growl went away down the street.

"That's the tiger! This way! Hurry!" the crowd shouted. Up the street galloped the fire department. On came the policemen with clubs. Back of them came the cook with the rolling pin and the boy's friend. When they found that there was no real tiger eating people up, but only a toy tiger, they were very much put out about this unnecessary trouble. The boy was so ashamed that he stayed in the house the rest of the day, and the tiger looked at him with his green glass eyes. They had a wise look as if the tiger was telling the boy that any tale, even when true, may change as it travels.—Exchange.

Buying Cherries.

"You think a lot of yourself," said Ethel sourly. "But that little Lena Carson is always ahead of you in class, I notice."

That was the way Ethel talked. It was her brother this time. But whoever she talked to she was sure to say something bitter and uncomfortable before she got through.

Ethel had had headaches. They made her cross. She ate too much candy, and she knew it. But she had never roused up her will to stop. Ethel had a strong will, but she gave it very little use.

Jack, Ethel's brother, seldom talked back. But this time he did.

"Lena Carson is a good scout," he said meaningly. "She isn't sour and fussy. When a girl gets sour, she's a dead loss!"

Ethel flushed. It is one thing to say sharp things to other people, and quite another to hear them about oneself. As she went off to school Jack's remarks rankled.

What made it worse was that she saw a flaring sign at the fruit stand on the corner.

"Sour cherries—two pounds for twenty cents.

"Sweet cherries—forty cents a pound."

Sourness evidently was a dead loss in the fruit trade. Ethel suddenly saw herself as becoming valueless and undesirable. She had never thought about that side of it. Now she remembered, with a pang, that she had not been elected to any of the class committees lately. She had said bitterly afterward that the class did not do anything worth doing, and had felt that she made things even by saying so. But suppose the other girls thought she was not worth having? In that case she could not feel superior any more. She would feel inferior instead.

All day long Ethel fought the resemblance of that cherry sign. But she could not get away from it. As she went home from school she passed the candy store where she usually bought a box of candy for home consumption. She did not stop there. She looked the other way. Her will was beginning to rouse itself.

Next day she dressed herself with a definite resolve in her mind: "I will be pleasant in what I say and do." The result was that she did not do or say much. She kept back the sour remarks, however, that she felt like making. That was a step taken.

In about a week things were slowly different. Jack whistled to himself as he noticed it. He really did love his sister, so he did not tease her about the new departure. "She's a good kid," he said to himself. "She can be as nice as anybody when she tries."

Trying—that was it. Ethel never had tried so hard. A bad habit is always stronger than the owner dreams. Ethel has gone on finding that out ever since. But she has gone on conquering it, too. She has left the sour cherry class behind, and her personality is gaining in value fast. She will be at the top price yet. Ethel is that kind of a girl.—Girls' World.

Say It With Flowers.

Mary Elizabeth went to town one day. She looked in the shop windows as she passed and saw a great many pretty things. At last she came to the prettiest window of all, a florist's window. It was full of baskets of flowers, beautiful roses and lilies and carnations.

There was a big card in the window. Mary Elizabeth read it slowly. It said: "On Mothers' Day, when you can't tell her in words how much you love her, say it with flowers!"

Mary Elizabeth got out her little purse. She counted the money in it carefully. There was the quarter daddy had given her for raking leaves in the back yard. There was the new dime mother gave her for finding her scissors, and there were the three pennies she'd had so long. "And that makes thirty-eight cents," said Mary Elizabeth. "I believe I'll buy that basket of roses for mother. She loves yellow roses." Timidly Mary Elizabeth went inside.

A nice young man came up, smiling. "Is there something for you today?" he asked.

"I'd like that biggest basket of roses in the window," she said. "How much does it cost?"

"Twenty-five dollars," said the young man.

"Oh!" said Mary Elizabeth softly. She hurried out without looking back. Twenty-five dollars! Mary Elizabeth went home sadly.

Sunday would be Mothers' Day, and she had the very dearest mother in the world and only thirty-eight cents with which to tell her how much she loved her! But besides the thirty-eight cents Mary Elizabeth had an active little mind and ten clever little fingers. So on Saturday she got to work.

First, she went down town and got some raffia, exactly thirty-eight cents worth. Then she went home and wove a cunning basket, like the ones Aunt Jane had taught her to make last summer. After dinner she took it with her down to the wood lot back of the house. She hunted and hunted until she found some soft green moss, you know the kind. She took it up gently and lined the basket with it. It showed through the open places and looked lovely. She went on then till she came to a little brook. The little brook gurgled as it ran over the white pebbles. It seemed to say: "Follow me, Mary Elizabeth; I'll show you something pretty!"

So Mary Elizabeth followed the brook. And after a while she came to a bank of ferns, the laciest ones you ever saw. She dug up a few of them by the roots and set them inside the basket on the moss. She started back toward home then, and close to the big gate she came upon a patch of daisies in full bloom. She picked a big bunch of them and put them in the center of the circle of ferns. They lifted their bright little heads and peeped through the green leaves and over the edge of the basket.

"You sweet things!" whispered Mary Elizabeth. "I think you're prettier than those yellow roses were!" She hurried home and up to her little room. She set the basket down into a big bowl of water, so moss, ferns, and daisies stayed fresh all night.

Early next morning when she went down to breakfast Mary Elizabeth carried her basket. Daddy came into the breakfast room. He wore a white flower in his buttonhole, for his mother, Mary Elizabeth's dear grandmother, who lived in Heaven. As mother came to the table he put a box of candy by her plate and said, smiling: "Sweets to the sweet, my dear!" Mother's eyes were very bright with pleasure. And Mary Elizabeth, her heart all a-flutter, set her pretty basket down by the candy and said shyly, "Mother dear, I love you, too, and want to say it with flowers!"—Christian Observer.

The Two Apple Trees.

"I have been looking at these two trees, boys," said Mr. Moore one bright Saturday morning, "and, as there seems to be about the same amount of apples on each one, I have decided that if you want to gather and market them for yourselves, you may do so."

"And have the money for ourselves?" they asked eagerly, and in unison.

"Yes, and you may also take old Billy and the light wagon to draw them to town."

Before he had ceased speaking John, the elder boy, had begun to climb one of the trees, and Mr. Moore, without further comment, walked away.

The other boy also walked away, but in a different direction.

John meanwhile secured a good foothold in the center of the tree, and was giving it a vigorous shaking, which sent the apples to the ground in showers.

Presently the brother returned, carrying a ladder and a basket.

"Oh, ho," cried John, "you don't mean to say that you intend to pick those apples off the tree? This is the way to do it," and he gave his tree another energetic shaking, "Why, don't you know," he went on, "if you stop to pick those apples off it will take you all day long?"

"Can't help it," was the answer; "that is the way they are coming off, and the only way."

"But you'll not be ready to go with them to town this afternoon."

"Then I'll go some other afternoon."

"But you can't stay out of school."

"I can be examined Monday at noon. Don't worry, I'll find some way to get my apples to market, and they'll bring me a good price when they do get there."

John continued his protestation, but his brother persisted in doing his work in his own way. Therefore, it was nearly sundown, and John had been gone several hours, when the brother took the last apple from the tree.

When John returned from town soon after, he jingled his coins in his hands merrily, and asked with a laugh: "Don't you wish you had some?"

"How much did you get a bushel?" asked his brother.

A few minutes later, when they entered the barn together, where the brother's apples were carefully stowed in baskets, John exclaimed:

"What in the world did you do to those apples? They look as if they had been polished."

"Oh, just a cloth and a little rubbing did the job," was the answer.

"Who would believe that the trees which bore these apples and John's were exactly alike?" said Mr. Moore, coming into the barn at this moment.

John looked grave.

"But what's the use of all that trouble? They'll not bring you any more." he said scornfully.

"Wait and see," said the brother.

On Monday evening, when the younger brother returned from the village, he counted out his money, and he had received just double the amount that John had been paid for his apples.

"I did not know," said John, "that taking a little trouble would make so great a difference about the very same thing."—Herald of Gospel Liberty.

"Keep but God's model safe,
New men will rise to take its mold."
—Browning.

(1) A biologist
(2) A financial editor
(3) A chief magistrate
(4) A clergyman

unite in commending to you

THE WORLD'S MIRACLE

And Other Observations

by KARL REILAND, rector of St. George's Church, New York City

(1) "As sane as science and as inspiring as religion. Dr. Reiland keeps both feet on the ground of fact, but his head is ever in the clear air of spiritual values." Professor E. G. Conklin, Princeton.

(2) "It ought to be kept where it will always be accessible to the busy man or woman." Theodore H. Price, editor, COMMERCE AND FINANCE

(3) "It presents life at so many unlooked-for angles that it must incite thought in an age certainly not too thoughtful." Chief Magistrate William McAdoo, New York City.

(4) "The distillation of a great preacher's heart." Dr. Robert Norwood, in the INTRODUCTION.

Keen observations of life, in the form of short essays, or sermonettes, or "prose-sonnets", by this poet, philosopher, social diagnostician, prophet — this complete preacher, Karl Reiland.

Just published $1.75

HENRY HOLT & COMPANY
Incorporated
ONE PARK AVENUE NEW YORK

JOHN TYLER

THE GREAT STATESMAN

AND

ABRAHAM LINCOLN

THE CREATURE OF ACCIDENT AND VIOLATOR OF OUR CONSTITUTION.

WHO WAS THE DWARF?

A REPLY TO A CHALLENGE.

By Lyon Gardiner Tyler.

In this neat little book of forty-four pages, with three illustrations, Dr. Lyon G. Tyler draws a parallel between two Presidents of the United States. It is brim full of facts and interest. Price, $1.00 a copy, postage prepaid. Address

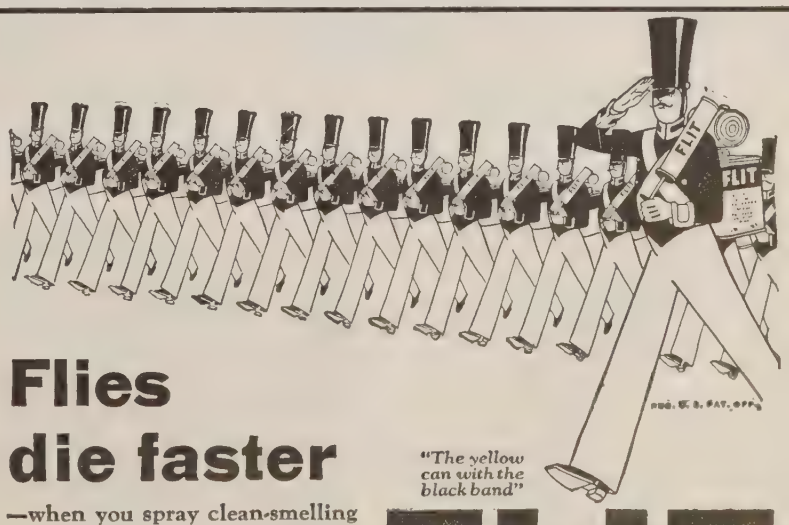
MEISTER & SMETHIE, Bookbinders,
107 Governor Street, Richmond, Va.

WHILE IN RICHMOND LET US KNOW IF YOU LIKE OUR FOOD

Mrs. Cook's Cafeteria

Near St. Paul's Parish House
Richmond, Va.

INCORPORATED 1882



Virginia Fire and Marine Insurance Company

Of Richmond, Va.

Assets - - - $3,640,152.88

Fred'k E. Nolting, President.

B. C. Lewis, Jr., Secretary — J. C. Watson, Treasurer
J. M. Leake, General Agent — Wm. P. Hill, Asst. Secretary

Flies die faster

—when you spray clean-smelling Flit with the handy Flit sprayer! Mosquitoes drop just as fast. More people use Flit because it contains a greater amount of insect-killing ingredients. Harmless to humans, and its vapor does not stain.

"The yellow can with the black band"

FLIT

REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

© 1929 Stanco Inc.

Classified Advertising and Notices

All notices and advertisements, excepting positions wanted, will be inserted in this department at a rate of 20 cents per agate line, each insertion. Special rates to contracts of any length. A rate of 15 cents per line is made to persons seeking positions. No advertisement accepted for less than 50 cents.

Copy for this department must be received not later than Tuesday of the week in which it is intended that the first insertion shall appear.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

ANTIQUES.

WE PAY THE HIGHEST CASH PRICES for old-time furniture and antiques of all kinds. H. C. Valentine, 209 East Franklin Street, Richmond, Va.

SUMMER BOARD.

SPEND YOUR VACATION IN THE BLUE RIDGE MOUNTAINS. care of Mrs. H. Cramer, Front Royal, Virginia.

RELIGIOUS TRACTS.

GOOD RELIGIOUS TRACTS MAY BE had by writing to LEVI C. SULLIVAN, blind tract minister, P. O. Box 43, Roanoke, Va. Some excellent tracts for prison work.

SOLD BY A SHUT-IN.

MEDIUM SIZE ORANGE COLOR SELF-Filling Fountain Pens, with gold bands and solid 14K gold pen points, $1.00 each. Jumbo Pens, color black, $1.25. Edward P. Broxton, Keysville, Ga.

BOARDING.

WANTED, TO BOARD TWO SMALL GIRLS, or boy and girl, for June and July, or six weeks, in private home in the country, at the foot of Blue Ridge Mountains. Modern Bungalow, good water and country board. References given. Address Mrs. M. C. O.'Sullivan,(Ivy Depot, Virginia.

SUMMER BOARD.

IN SHENANDOAH VALLEY—LIMITED NUMBER of people desired. Large house and grounds, conveniently located. M. I. $12 and $15 per week. MISS D. L. BRISCOE, Charles Town, Jefferson County, W. Va.

SUMMER BOARD.

RIVERCREST FARM, AN IDEAL PLACE to spend your vacation. Beautifully located on New River in heart of Southwest Virginia. One and one-half miles from Railroad and Lee Highway. Fine for fishing and swimming. Always cool. Good food and beds. Rates reasonable. Apply to Mrs. W. C. Jennings, Draper, Virginia.

SITUATION WANTED.

CHURCHWOMAN, COLLEGE GRADUate and Teacher of high school, with several years' experience, wishes to teach pupils in a private home, or do individual coaching in some nearby place during summer months. Address "C. G.", 132 Fillmore Street, Petersburg, Va.

ORGANIST AND CHOIRMASTER, ENGlish trained, desires change of climate, account of wife's health. Very successful boys' voices, recitalist, director of choral societies, teacher pipe organ, vocal, piano. Excellent references. Address "Organist", care of Southern Churchman.

VIRGINIA GENTLEWOMAN, EPISCOPALian, desires position as Companion, Secretary, Housekeeper, or Entertainer. Address "Experienced," care of Southern Churchman.

KINDERGARTEN.

REFINED, YOUNG SOUTHERN WOMAN, graduate in Kindergarten, desires position. Address, "M. H.", care of Southern Churchman.

SITUATION WANTED, SEPTEMBER, AS Housemother, or Nurse in school or institution boys or girls. Graduate nurse with best references. Address "Deaconess", 211 East Eeighth St. Newton, Kan.

HELP WANTED.

WANTED: TRAINED SOCIAL WORKER, Episcopal. Address "A. B. C.," care of Southern Churchman.

Deaths

MRS. EUGENIA TAYLOR SLAUGHTER.

MRS. EUGENIA TAYLOR SLAUGHTER died at the home of her son Alfred E. Slaughter, Tuesday morning, May 7, 1929, in the eighty-seventh year of her age. She was a native of King William County, Virginia, but removed in her girlhood to Orange County. Was married to Dr. Alfred E. Slaughter in November, 1869. He was a surgeon in the Confederate Army. The funeral was held from St. Thomas' Episcopal Church, Orange County, Va., the Rev. Douglas Neff officiating. Interment in the family plat in Graham Cemetery. She leaves four children, nine grandchildren, and two great-grandchildren, to mourn her. Hers was a most unselfish and beautiful life, always charitable, only seeing the good in human nature, so lovely was she in character.

MRS. ELIZABETH TRAVERS GREEN HAYES.

MRS. ELIZABETH TRAVERS GREEN HAYES, widow of James Hayes, entered into eternal life on Saturday, May 18, at the ripe age of ninety years. She was the daughter of William Green, the distinguished lawyer, so eminent at the Virginia bar in the years before and after the Civil War, and Columbia Elizabeth Slaughter. She was a member of St Paul's Episcopal Church, Richmond, Va.

Mrs. Hayes is survived by six daughters and two sons, and in the care, the devotion and bringing up of her children, she manifested the finest traits of her character. Her children all look back to their early years with the happiest recollections, as they recall the numberless acts of self-sacrifice so willingly borne, the patience under the most trying conditions, and the cheerful spirit which could smile in spite of tears.

Few people reach so good an old age as did Mrs. Hayes, and fewer still reach it without its attendant infirmities. Mrs. Hayes had her share of these, but instead of embittering her, they only made her inherent graces and virtues shine the more brilliantly. Her children who were her constant companions and attendants cannot remember any word of complaint under pain or expression of worry under weariness. Thus she left for them a wonderful picture of the calmness, the gentleness, the beauty, and the Triumph of Age.

Christian patience and Christian resignation did their work because of the belief that she was in God's hands and that "all things work together for good to them that love God."

So when death came it really was not what men understand by death, but rather what the Apostle calls "falling on sleep"—sleep which knows nothing but rest and peace, and then a glorious awakening in the Paradise of God.

D—.

IN MEMORY OF MRS. ANNE WISE CRAFT.

MRS. ANNE WISE CRAFT, daughter of Major John Cropper Wise and Anne Finney Wise, and widow of Mr. Burr S. Craft, died on Saturday, May 25, at the home of her cousin, Mrs. Margaret Shield, in Onancock, Virginia.

The burial was at Norfolk, her former home, on Monday, May 27, in Elmwood Cemetery, the Rev. H. N. Laws, of Holy Trinity Church, Onancock, conducting the services.

While Mrs. Craft had been ill for several weeks, the immediate cause of her death was a sudden, brief attack of pneumonia.

She was the last of a family well known in Norfolk and on the Eastern Shore and of a line prominent in the history of Virginia from Colonial days.

John Wise, of England, came to America early in the seventeenth century and settled in Accomac County, Virginia. He married Hannah, daughter of Captain Edmund Scarborough. His descendants have contributed many noted names to the state annals. Mrs. Craft was a niece of the late Governor Henry A. Wise, and sister of Captain Henry A. Wise and Commodore John C. Wise, both deceased.

She was born at "Wesley," near Onancock, Accomac County, in 1846. The family removed in 1850 to "Rolleston," Princess Anne County, and from there to "Bolton" on Broad Creek, Norfolk County. Later Mrs. Craft became a resident of Norfolk, but in 1918 returned to the Eastern Shore to make her home with her cousins, the late Mrs. Elizabeth Custis and her daughter, Mrs. Margaret Shield, at Onancock. There, she was not only with those she loved, but in a neighborhood where intermarriage of the Wise, Scarborough, and Custis families for generations made all dear to her.

Grief for her death falls not merely upon the devoted and stricken Mrs. Shield and the family relatives, but upon a wide circle of friends.

Mrs. Craft was known as so fine a type of Christian womanhood that words of special appreciation are not needed here. And yet memory dwells very lovingly upon her brave life of devotion, her tenderness and loyalty. Much suffering came to her, but could not embitter her noble siprit or turn thoughts upon herself to forgetfulness of those about her. Indeed, what now comes most to the minds of all of us who knew her is the beautiful way in which she lived for others.

GRAYSON LOMAX THORNTON.

"In Christ shall all be made alive."

GRAYSON LOMAX THORNTON entered the larger life beyond on Sunday night, April 14, 1929, in Washington, D. C. He was the youngest son of the late Champe Brockenbrough Thornton, Jr., and Laura Stettinius Thornton, formerly of Port Royal, Virginia. There in a lovely pre-Revolutionary home, on the banks of the Rappahannock River, Mr. Thornton had been carefully reared, in that atmosphere of culture and beautiful traditions, passed down from generations, of his beloved Church, home and state.

Mr. Thornton was a man of gentle Christian courtesy, a devoted son and brother; a loyal friend. These marked his life as a worthy representative of a long and honored lineage. Interwoven in his character were high principles and firm convictions; radiating to all his beautiful and broad spirit of Christian charity. He was confirmed at an early age, under his uncle and god-father, the late Rev. John B. Gray. He possessed that rare gift, an accurate and retentive memory; enriched by choice reading. Mr. Thornton graduated from Washington and Lee University in the class of 1898, receiving the degree of LL. B.

He leaves a brother, Mr. Heber L. Thornton, and an only sister Mrs. Leland Stanford Conness of Washington, D. C.

Quietly, and courageously, he met life as with his genial, courtly kindness, he won friends, who, in their grief, express that love and esteem, which is a challenging proof of the true worth of trying to live by the teaching of Christ. Peacefully came the "awakening" into his Saviour's presence as He gathered about him the robe of immortality.

"Where loyal hearts and true,
Stand ever in the light,
All rapture through and through,
In God's most holy sight."

R. T. C.

CHURCH INTELLIGENCE.

(Continued from page 16.)

biles.

4:30 P. M.—Arrive Williamsburg.

6:30 P. M.—Supper in College Dining Hall.

8:00 P. M.—Preparation for Holy Communion, Bruton Parish Church.

Sunday, June 16.

7:00 A. M.—Leave for Jamestown.

7:30 A. M.—Celebration of Holy Communion at Robert Hunt Memorial Shrine.

9:00 A. M.—Breakfast in College Dining Hall.

11:00 A. M.—Services at Bruton Parish Church.

1:00 P. M.—Dinner in College Dining Hall.

The Pilgrimage this year is followed immediately by the annual celebration, under the auspices of the Order of Jamestown, of the first Holy Communion in the first permanent English Settlement in America, the Third Sunday after Trinity, 1607.

At the special services at the Robert Hunt Shrine, Jamestown Island, June 16, 3:30 P. M., Bishop Tucker, of Norfolk, will be celebrant; the Rev. Churchill J. Gibson, D. D., of St. James' Church, Richmond, will be speaker, and the music will be provided by the choirs of St. Paul's, Richmond, and Bruton Parish Church, Williamsburg.

One Hundred Sixth Commencement.

The one hundred and sixth annual commencement of the Virginia Theological Seminary was held on June 5-6. The annual sermon before the Missionary Society was preached on Wednesday evening in the Seminary Chapel by the Rev. John Gass, rector of St. John's Church, Charleston, West Virginia.

At the graduation exercises on the morning of the sixth the address to the graduating class was made by the Rev. Edmund P. Dandridge, rector of Christ Church, Nashville, Tennessee. Seventeen were declared graduates of the Seminary.

Sixteen received the degree of Bachelor of Divinity.

The degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred on the Rev. Robert Rogers, rector of the Church of the Good Shepherd, Brooklyn, New York; the Rev. Edmund J. Lee, M. A., B. D., Principal of Chatham Hall, Chatham, Virginia; the Rt. Rev. Norman Spencer Binsted, Bishop of Tohoku; the Rev. F. D. Goodwin, M. A., B. D., rector of Lunenburg, North Farnham and Cople Parishes, Warsaw, Virginia, and the Rt. Rev. Philip Lendel Tsen, Bishop of Honan.

After the graduation exercises the alumni dinner was held with a larger attendance of alumni than for several recent years. Addresses were made at the dinner by the Rev. Berryman Green, D. D., Dean of the Seminary; the Rev. Robert Rogers, D. D., the Rt. Rev. Jas. E. Freeman, D. D., Bishop of Washington, and Rev. Charles W. Sheerin, rector of St. Paul's Church, Waco, Texas.

SOUTHWESTERN VIRGINIA.

Rt. Rev. Robert C. Jett. D. D., Bishop

Layman "Carries On" at High Top.

An interesting mission in the diocese is Emmanuel Chapel at Merrimac Mines; more familiarly known as "High Top". It is located about three miles from Blacksburg and the work is conducted by the congregation of Christ Church, Blacksburg. The rectors of Christ Church in recent years have placed especial emphasis on this feature of their parish activities; conducting Church School and service at High Top every Sunday afternoon.

Since the Rev. J. Manly Cobb resigned the charge of Christ Church, March 15, last, to go to Takoma Park, D. C., the work at High Top has been continued by Mr. Edmund C. Magill, a vestryman of Christ Church. In this Mr. Magill has been assisted by Misses Jean Hudson and Carrie Gudheim and by Mr. Reymond Smith, one of the cadets of Virginia Polytechnic Institute at Blacksburg.

Activity at St. John's, Wytheville.

Larger attendance indicates increased interest in the Church School at St. John's since the inauguration, on Easter Day, of the "Cross and Crown" system of pins.

The Rev. Devall L. Gwathmey, rector of St. John's, recently gave a lecture to the local congregation of the African Methodist Episcopal Church, describing his visit to the Holy Land in 1928.

Two handsome alms plates have been presented to St. John's, and were dedicated in memory of the late Mrs. Anna Lofland Gibboney, a member of the congregation.

At its meeting on Rogation Sunday, the Young People's Service League of St. John's had a lively debate on the question: "Resolved, That the Country Church is more important than the Country School." The negative side won. We are now expecting to hear that the young Wythevillains have worked up a similar debate between the parson and a local school teacher.

T. A. S.

UPPER SOUTH CAROLINA.

Rt. Rev. K. G. Finlay, D. D. Bishop.

The Bishop and the Washerwoman.

The following, taken from the editorial columns of the Keowee Courier, published at Walhalla, S. C., will be recognized as a true picture of the beloved Bishop of Upper South Carolina:

"Those in our section of South Carolina who are personally acquainted with Bishop Finlay, of the Episcopal Diocese of Upper South Carolina, will at once recognize a very familiar ring in the following story, taken from the Columbia State of Sunday, March 24.

" 'The Rt. Rev. Kirkman G. Finlay, Bishop of Upper South Carolina, was proceeding alone in his automobile northward from Columbia. Not far behind him was a party of Columbians. The Bishop drove along leisurely, as usual, his thoughts doubtless busy, as always, with the affairs of his diocese. But he was not too absent-minded to note an old Negro woman trudging along beside the road, her week's washing in a great bundle on her head. The bishop pulled up beside her, reached back and opened the door of his car and motioned to her to climb in. "Come on, Aunty, let me give you a lift on your way," he said, or words to that effect. Which is but one among many such little kindnesses that Bishop Finlay takes thought and pains to do as he goes his quietly useful way. Not every Churchman of his rank would have paused to help along that old washerwoman.'

"Nor is this characteristic of the bishop's a trait of recent acquiring. Many of us recall the now bishop when he was a comparatively obscure minister, serving small churches at Clemson College, Walhalla and Seneca.

" 'Now we'll tell one': It was during his rectorship at Clemson. Passing along a byway to his home, he espied a bedraggled human being lying in the ditch by the side of the road. He examined 'it' minutely for only a second. Then hurriedly he took his way home. He returned shortly with a wheelbarrow, into which he loaded the limp bundle of misguided humanity. He trudged along on his way to the home of the unfortunately situated man. A passerby inquired, 'What have you got there?' 'A human soul in eclipse, my friend,' was the ready reply.

"Without further comment, busy with his thoughts ('as usual', as the State has well suggested), the minister continued on his way, delivered his human freight, returned to his domicile, and, so far as we know, it was a 'closed incident'. And yet we doubt it, for the now bishop even then had a wonderful capacity for 'follow-up' work. But so far as 'further conversation' about the incident is concerned, it was a closed incident."

"Wear your learning, like your watch, in a private pocket, and don't pull it out to show that you have one, but if you are asked what o'clock it is, tell it."

Vital Teachings of God's Word

SET FORTH IN BIBLE STUDIES
By JAMES H. TODD

Secretary, Australian Council of the China Inland Mission

A little book for careful, continued study, with a prayerful heart, a clear head, some "fenced off" time, and a bold-type Bible in constant use for every reference.

The man or woman who cannot take even an evening course at a Bible school, or make use of a correspondence course, may very profitably use this little book as a guide in grasping the cardinal doctrines of God's revelation to men, in daily half-hours.—From Introduction by the Rev. F. A. Steven.

CONTENTS

Sin and the Sinner	Sanctification
Redemption	Reconciliation
Justification	Love to God
Regeneration	Love to Christ
Repentance	Love to Man
Adoption	Prayer
Faith	Worship
Eternal Life	Thanksgiving
"Things That Differ"	The Future Destiny of Believers

Simple in plan and in detail, but highly condensed, and is wonderfully useful for reference by preachers, as well as students.

Adapted for class use, as well as individual study.
80 pages, only 20 cents
THE SUNDAY SCHOOL TIMES COMPANY
1031 Walnut Street Philadelphia, Pa.

NOLDE BROS. BAKERY

QUALITY BAKERS OF BETTER BREAD
AMERICAN MAID BUTTER-NUT
Champions of Children
AT YOUR DEALER.

Morehouse Publishing Co.

1801-1811 Fond du Lac Avenue
MILWAUKEE, WIS.

ABOUT THE NEW PRAYERBOOK

We are overwhelmed with inquiries as to when the new Prayer Book will be ready, and definite dates for delivery promised by other houses are quoted to us.

Our own edition of the Prayer Book will be ready as soon as any edition can be. Beyond that we cannot say; but our best judgment is that publication of any edition cannot be effected before October or November. Please do not be misled by promises of earlier delivery.

We recommend:

That orders for the book for the pews be placed at once, because there will be priority observed in filling orders for these.

That orders for individual books, especially in leather bindings, do not be placed until nearer the time of publication. We shall carry in stock not only the books of our own manufacture, but the best selections from other houses as well, and our customers will therefore have the advantage of our careful selections if they wait.

WE ANTICIPATE CHANGES in styles and prices of leather-bound books, and suggest that as nothing can be gained from placing early orders for these, it will be advantageous to WAIT for fuller information that is not available yet, but will be in time.

Our lists of individual books will be issued not later than September, in ample time before the new book can be ready. But if anything unforeseen happens to expedite publication, we shall be ready to make the earliest deliveries possible.

MOREHOUSE PUBLISHING CO.

DESIGNED FOR THE PROMOTION OF PRACTICAL PIETY, THE DIFFUSION OF RELIGIOUS AND GENERAL INTELLIGENCE, AND THE MAINTENANCE OF THE PRINCIPLES OF THE PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL CHURCH

Southern Churchman

1835 DOMINUS FRUSTRA NISI

Vol. 94. RICHMOND, VA., JUNE 22, 1929. No. 25.

"He that confesseth Me before men, him will I also confess before My Father which is in heaven."

My dear Friend:

The Bishop will soon visit this parish, and will administer the RITE OF CONFIRMATION to all those "ready and desirous" to enter fully into Christ's service, and fellowship with his people. While it is my privilege, at any time, as your pastor, to speak to you of this, it is now also my duty to do so.

Are you, or are you not a follower of Jesus? If you are in heart one, the confession before men and outward Christian life becomes your duty. If you are not, THE WORK of your life is yet before you, undone; your obligation to God and baptismal vows, or, if unbaptised, your obligation to your Creator and Saviour—unfulfilled. Your Church asks but the fulfillment of holy vows ALREADY resting upon you, and taken IN GOOD FAITH for your by kind sponsors. Or whether baptised or not, your Creator asks but the recognition of his right in you; your Saviour asks but the acceptance of the offer of life through His dying love. Does he require an unreasonable thing in asking your heart and service? The REPENTANCE he asks is only a forsaking of all sin, a sorrow for the past, a sincere resolution for the future. The FAITH He asks is only the exercise toward God in Christ of the loving confidence of a child toward its father. Neglecting this you neglect your eternal welfare; deprive yourself of a blessing here; hinder some perhaps who, influenced by your example in holding back, also neglect. All the interests of your soul now and hereafter demand this. WHAT SATISFACTORY REASON have you for delaying, hesitating, and not NOW coming to a decision in this matter?

Do you believe Christ "came into the world to save sinners" because "God so loved the world that He sent Him?"

Do you recognize that this Salvation is for you personally?

Do you "repent you truly of your former sins," and desire "to lead a new life, following the commandments of God," and "be in charity with all men"? If not, you are in danger.

Do you not know there is the Holy Spirit and means of grace to aid you in this desire, as you have it?

Will God, who has already done so much, fail to do ALL He has promised?

Then—

WHAT HINDERS YOU FROM BEGINNING NOW? WHY SHOULD YOU NOT BE CONFIRMED NOW?

"If thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness: and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation."

I would earnestly urge upon you that decision, and that you use this opportunity to enter openly God's service and a life of faith in Jesus. This message comes to you through one of God's own appointed ways of seeking you. His ministry. Receive it as such. Do not act against your convictions, but allow me to lead you to proper convictions, which may result in wise action. Think over this. Pray over it. May God be with you, direct you, and help you to a conscientious answer in His sight.

I will be glad to hear from you by letter or visit, or call and converse with you upon the subject if you prefer. Do answer this letter.

Faithfully your friend and pastor,

SOME OBJECTIONS ANSWERED

"I am not good enough."—Seek GRACE now offered to change you.
"I cannot be consistent."—Trust GOD; not yourself.
"I am not prepared."—NOW is the accepted time.
"I'll wait till next time."—Will ANOTHER opportunity ever come?
"Church members are not consistent."—Follow CHRIST; not man.
"I do not see the necessity."—The APOSTLES DID; the CHURCH does.
"I do not care."—If we deny Him, He also will deny us."

EDUCATIONAL

The Gundry Home and Training School For The Feeble Minded

Falls Church, Fairfax County, Va.

Established 1892.

For terms and information address

MISS M. GUNDRY.

The General Theological Seminary

CHELSEA SQUARE, NEW YORK.

The next Academic year egins on the last Wednesday in September.

Special students admitted and Graduate Courses for graduates of othre Theological Seminaries.

The requirements for admission and other particulars can be had from THE DEAN, 1 Chelsea Square, New York, N. Y.

The Bishop Payne Divinity School

The accredited Seminary of the Church for training colored men for the ministry. The curriculum covers the full course for Deacon's and Priest's Orders. The degree of B. D. is awarded.

For catalogue and information apply to Rev. F. G. Ribble, M. A., D. D., Dean, Petersburg, Va.

The Protestant Episcopal Theological Seminary Virginia

The One Hundred and Sixth Session Opened Wednesday, Sept. 19, 1928.

For catalogue and other information address The Dean, Rev. Berryman Green, D. D., Theological Seminary, Alexandria, Va.

Schermerhorn Home School

Located six miles north of Richmond on the Washington Highway. A Home School for Children who need Special care and Training.

SUE I. SCHERMERHORN, Box 57, West End Sta, Richmond, Va.

STUART HALL

STAUNTON, VA.

Episcopal school for girls, maintaining best Virginia traditions of refinement and culture.

Thorough College Preparation. Varied General Course. Outdoor Life.

EIGHTY-SIXTH YEAR BEGINS SEPTEMBER 18, 1929

For catalogue, address MRS. H. N. HILLS, Principal

Episcopal Theological School

Cambridge, Massachusetts.

Affiliated with Harvard University.

For catalog address The Dean.

Chatham Hall

A Church School for girls in Southern Virginia. Thorough college preparation. General and graduate courses. Art, music, expression, home economics, secretarial course. Superb location; 175 acre estate, gardens, dairy; modern, well equipped buildings. Riding, swimming, golf. Address Rev. Edmund J. Lee, M. A., D. D., Box S, Chatham, Va.

Southern Churchman

SOUTHERN CHURCHMAN COMPANY,
628 E. Main Street - - - Richmond, Va.

LANGBOURNE MEADE WILLIAMS
President
ALFRED B. WILLIAMS..Associate Editor
THE REV. FRANK COX
Associate Editor
THE REV. JAMES W. MORRIS, D. D.
Associate Editor
MRS. CONRAD H. GOODWIN,
Associate Editor
MISS SUSANNE WILLIAMS..News Editor
JOHN H. COOKE..Secretary and Manager

Entered at the Post Office in Richmond, Va., as second-class mail matter.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE.

$3.00 a year in advance. To the Clergy, $2.00. Six months, $1.50. Trial subscriptions, 3 months, 50 cents; 10 cents a copy. Foreign postage, 50 cents additional.

For the convenience of subscribers, subscriptions are continued at expiration unless otherwise ordered. Notice of renewal, discontinuance or change of address should be sent two weeks before the date they go into effect.

RECEIPT OF PAYMENT is shown in about two weeks by change of date on address label. If date is not properly extended after each payment, notify us promptly. No receipt for payment will be sent.

Notice post office address. The exact post office address to which we are directing the paper at the time of writing MUST ALWAYS BE GIVEN. Our mailing list is arranged by post offices and not alphabetically.

Make all checks and money orders payable to the Southern Churchman, and not to an individual.

ADVERTISEMENTS—Rates quoted on request. For classified see head of that department.

Representatives wanted in each Parish; liberal commissions.

News concerning the Church at large always welcome.

CONTENTS

	Page.
Thoughts for the Thoughtful.....	4
Editorial	5
The One Way to the Father—Rev. Edwin H. Rian.....	6
We Believe That Thou Shalt Come—Kenneth MacKenzie	8
Favorite Scripture Verses.....	8
"A Bill of Particulars Required"—Bishop W. A. Chandler.....	9
The Surrendered Life in Christ—Rev. Frank Cox.....10
Christ Wants You—Rev. C. B. McAfee, D. D.....10
Letters to the Editor.....11
Book Reviews 12
Church Intelligence 13
Family Department 17
Children's Department 19
Personal Notes 23

ST. JOHN BAPTIST SCHOOL for Girls

In the Country near Morristown. Under the care of the Sisters of St. John Baptist (Episcopal).

College Preparatory and General Courses. Music and Art.

Modern Fireproof Building open September, 1929. Ample Grounds. Outdoor Life. Moderate Rates.

For Catalog address

THE SISTER SUPERIOR, St. John Baptist School, Mendham, New Jersey.

MARY BALDWIN COLLEGE

For women. Courses lead to B. A. and B. S. degrees. Music, art, spoken English, physical education. Gymnasium and field athletics. Modern equipment. In beautiful Shenandoah Valley. Founded 1842. Catalog. Staunton, Va.

Five Virginia CHURCH SCHOOLS

FOR BOYS: St. Christopher's School, Richmond; Christchurch School, Christchurch, Middlesex County.

FOR GIRLS: St. Catherine's School, Richmond; St. Anne's School, Charlottesville; St. Margaret's School, Tappahannock.

(For Catalogs, address Principals.)

LEGAL TITLE for wills: Church Schools in the Diocese of Virginia (Inc.).

(About gifts or bequests, address Central Office, 110 West Franklin Street, Richmond, Va.)

HOBART COLLEGE Geneva N. Y.

A Church College for men, founded 1828. Four year liberal arts course, leading to the degrees A. B. and B. S. High standards; faculty of thirty. For catalogue and information, address

REV. MURRAY BARTLETT, D. D., Pres.

St. Margaret's School

Tappahannock, Virginia.

A Church School for girls with modern equipment and moderate cost. Intermediate and College Preparatory. Accredited.

Country life and simplicity without isotion. Beautiful grounds on Rappahannock River. Three dormitories for different ages. Supervised Athletics.

EDITH LATANE, Headmistree.

The Emergency Hospital

School for Nurses.

Washington, D. C.,

offers a three years course to High School Graduates. Credit given for college work. Classes admitted January and September. Accredited School. Hospital 200 beds. $10.00 Monthly allowance. Affiliations provided. School announcement on request Superintendent of Nurses, 1711 New York Avenue.

St. Albans The National Cathedral School for Boys

Thorough Preparation for Leading Universities, splendid equipment, unexcelled location on Mt. St. Alban overlooking Washington.

Eight years' course. Athletics for every boy.

Address:

WILLIAM H. CHURCH, Head Master, Washington, D. C.

HAMPDEN-SYDNEY COLLEGE

Invites your careful consideration of its Faculty, Courses of Study, Wholesome Christian Atmosphere, and Physical Equipment.

For catalogue write,

REGISTRAR
Hampden-Sydney, Virginia

"How often shall my brother offend against me and I forgive him? Shall I be generous and forgive him seven times?" But that is not being generous. That is not giving evidence of possessing the attitude of forgiveness. Love that forgives, never keeps count of offences, never adds up injuries. Love goes on loving. And in that attitude there is no room for anger.

CHURCH EQUIPMENT SERVICE

J. & R. Lamb
23-25-27 SIXTH AVENUE NEW YORK
MEMORIALS IN STAINED GLASS
MOSAIC · MARBLE · STONE · GRANITE
CARVED WOOD · METAL · ETC.

R. GEISSLER, INC.
56 W. 8th STREET, NEW YORK, N.Y.
Church Furnishings
IN CARVED WOOD AND MARBLE · BRASS · SILVER FABRICS + WINDOWS

CHURCH FURNISHINGS
Gold, Silver and Brass
Church and Chancel Furniture
Write for Catalogue for Episcopal Churches.
W. & E. SCHMIDT CO
808 THIRD ST. MILWAUKEE, WIS

EMBROIDERED ALTAR LINENS, SILK ALTAR HANGINGS.

Burses, Veils, Stoles, Markers, Chasubles, Damasks, Fringes, Altar Laces, Embroidery Supplies. Materials stamped for embroidering. MISS M. C. ANDOLIN (formerly with Cox Sons & Vining), 45 West 39th Street, New York. Hours 9 to 1.

Church Furniture
Pews, Pulpits, Chancel Furniture
Sunday School Seating
American Seating Company
1029 Lytton Bldg., Chicago

The Comfort
The Counsel
The Challenge

Of the Sacred Scriptures, together with all the marvelous messages from the Book of Books, are being constantly broadcast through efforts of the American Bible Society.

Last year over eleven million issues of Bibles, Testaments, and Portions were published and distributed throughout the world in one hundred and sixty-six different languages. You will want to know more about this missionary agency. Write for booklet "The What, Where and Why of the American Bible Society"

AMERICAN BIBLE SOCIETY
Bible House, Astor Place, N.Y.

HIS UNLUCKY DAY.

Wunst I got mad at ma,
I don't remember why;
But I 'ist walked right off to school
'Thout tellin' her good-by.

A big ol' lump came in my throat
An' purt' near made me cry,
For me an' ma is awful pals
An' allus kiss good-by.

An' might' near ever'thing I did
Went wrong, looked like to me;
I stubbed my toe an' tore my waist
An' fell an' skinned my knee.

I missed in 'rithmetic an' lost
A chanst to git up head,
An' in the spellin' class I left
A letter out of "dead".

An' that ol' lump growed an' I says:
"S'pose if ma should die
Right now an' me a-leavin' her
'Thout kissin' her good-by."

My! that's the longes' mornin'
'At ever I spent, I know.
It seemed like more'n fifty years
'Fore it was time to go.

An' never mind what happened
When I seen my ma, but
'Ist guess I won't go 'way no more
'Thout kissin' her good-by.

For The Southern Churchman.

QUAGMIRE.

William Allen Ward.

Bigotry
Is a qaugmire
In which ignorance,
Loaded with fagots of intolerance
Is bogged.

The man who claims that he has no sympathy with missions proclaims his meagre estimate of the Lord Jesus Christ. Somehow he has failed to realize the greatness of Him who is the Saviour of the world.—W. G. Fullerton.

Study at BLUE RIDGE
this Summer
Vacation place supreme

WORKERS with boys and girls will welcome new courses this summer. 1. Camp craft. Includes study of all details of organizing and running camps. 2. Methods in Boys' Work. Special course for those who do not plan to specialize in boys' work. 3. Physical Education. Six sections covering play leadership for boys and girls, folk dancing, indoor games, practice teaching, tennis, camp activities. Ask for booklet.

Every church of any denomination would be helped by sending two or three young men or women.

Blue Ridge attracts thousands every summer. Conferences of many sorts.

BLUE RIDGE ASSOCIATION
Blue Ridge, N. C.

For The Southern Churchman.

WHEN MARTHA SINGS.

Eugenie du Maurier Meredith.

When from some solitude,
Some cloistered forest green,
Soft through the silence
Comes the pine tree's voice serene,

That satisfies all longings,
Makes the heart rejoice,
So sweet and clear is the song
Dwelling in Martha's voice.

BLYMYER CHURCH BELLS.
UNLIKE OTHER BELLS SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE. OUR FREE CATALOG TELLS WHY.
John B. Morris Foundry Co. Dept. 70 Cincinnati, O.

BEVERLEY HEATING
The Best for Homes, Churches, Stores and Buildings for all uses.
R. C. BEVERLEY HEATING CO., INC.,
308 E. Main St., Richmond, Va.
QUALITY—SERVICE.

LINEN for the CHURCH
PURE IRISH LINEN FOR ALL CHURCH USES, yard or piece lengths, at lowest import prices. New Special Number for Cottas, eighty-two and one-half cents. Samples on request.
MARY FAWCETT CO.,
350 Broadway, New York.

CHURCH VESTMENTS
Cassocks, Surplices, Stole.
EMBROIDERIES
Silks, Cloths, Fringes.
CLERICAL SUITS
Rabats, Collars, Shirts.
COX SONS & VINING,
131-133 E. 23d St., New York.

Church and Sunday School Furniture
THE SOUTHERN DESK COMPANY,
Hickory, N. C.
Send for Special Catalogue.

When in need of
MONUMENTS and TOMBSTONES
and want honest treatment see
BURNS & CAMPBELL,
Granite and Marble Works
PETERSBURG, VA.
Designs furnished on application and all orders receive prompt attention.

CHURCH FURNITURE
Pews, Pulpit and Sunday School Furniture. Catalog on request.
T. W. ALEXANDER & SON,
Box 147. Waynesboro, Va.

Washington Cathedral

A Witness for Christ in the Capital of the Nation

♦ ♦ ♦

THE CHAPTER appeals to Churchmen throughout the country for gifts, large and small, to continue the work of building now proceeding, and to maintain its work, Missionary, Education, Charitable, for the benefit of the whole Church.

Chartered under Act of Congress.

Administered by a representative Board of Trustees of leading business men, Clergymen and Bishops.

Full information will be given by the Bishop of Washington, or the Dean, Cathedral Offices, Mount St. Alban, Washington, D. C., who will receive and acknowledge all contributions.

♦ ♦ ♦

Legal Title for Use in Making Wills:
The Protestant Episcopal Cathedral Foundation of the District of Columbia

VIRGINIA TRUST CO.

Richmond, Va.

THE SAFE EXECUTOR,

Was organized in 1892 to act as Executor-Guardian and Trustee.

Many prudent men and women in every section of the State have named this Company Executor and trustee in their wills.

Inquiries cordially invited—no cost and confidential.

Capital Stock .....$ 1,000,000.00
Surplus earned .....$ 1,500,000.00
Held in trust.....$45,000,000.00

Woody's Art Glass Shop

Art Stained and Leaded Glass.

Church Windows a Specialty.

513 East Main Street, Richmond, Va.

XANTHINE

Will hereafter be sold in the new style bottle and package. Always best for the hair. Not a dye, but restores the color, promotes growth and prevents dandruff.

Price $1.00 at druggists, or sent prepaid by us.

XANTHINE CO., Richmond, Va.

CHRISTIAN PARENTS! YOUR BOYS

should go to Dr. Howard Guinness' Boys' Camp at Doe Lake, Northern Ontario, Canada, this summer. Its purpose is to lead them to know the Lord Jesus Christ as Saviour and Friend and strengthen them in the Christian Faith. Its situation and variety of activities are such that any boy would be more than happy there. Dr. Guinness is highly recommended by Dr. Dyson Hague, of Toronto.

Further information from:

Hon. Sec., Pioneer Camp for Boys

366 Bay St., Toronto 2, Ontario.

Thoughts For the Thoughtful

In a crossroads store in Pennsylvania, I saw this motto: "Man is made of dust; dust settles. Be a man."

Old heads do not grow on young shoulders. Saints are not made in a day. Character is a slow growth.

"The greatest trouble is easier to bear than the burden of one known sin."

"The sin we hide in ourselves is the one we strike at the hardest in others."

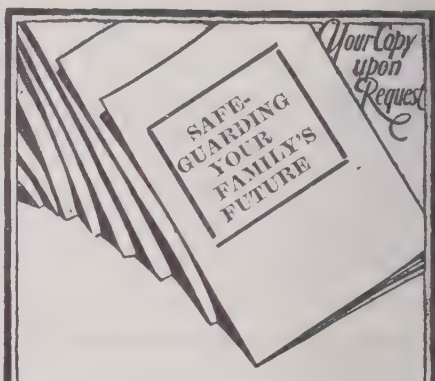
"The man who talks much with God will not find it to talk about Him."

"Thousands of people fail because they are afraid to make a beginning.

"We weary watching wave on wave, and yet the tide heaves onward;
We build, like corals, grave on grave, but have a pathway sunward.
We're beaten back in many a fray, and yet fresh strength we borrow;
And where the vanguard rests today, the rear may camp tomorrow."

It does not become believers in God to give way to despairing weeping and outcries of woe that betray a lack of Christian faith and self-control. Mourn we must when God takes away the desire of our eyes, but our very eyes should shine with a strange radiance that would seem to be born of confident hope and to be gleams from the gates of the eternal city.

St. John's Gospel tells of certain Greeks who came asking to see Jesus. Suddenly, we are told, there came a voice from heaven glorifying Jesus as the Son of God. Of those who heard it, some said it thundered; others said an angel spake unto Him. It was one and the same voice from the clouds, but to some it was the noise of thunder, to others it was the voice of an angel. And so it is throughout life. God speaks. He speaks in the selfsame voice to all the children of men. To some it is only the noise of thunder; to others it is the voice of God.



"Every soldier in God's Army ought to be willing to be a private."

"You can always be happy if you are willing to reciprocate with others.

Life climbing seeketh Love:
Love climbs more high:
Life follows self-forgot;
Love clasps it, and 'tis not;
Life lost in love is life beyond the sky.
—W. Woollam.

We have no light promised us to show us our road a hundred miles away, but we have a light for the next footstep, and if we take that, we shall have a light for the one which is to follow.—"Mark Rutherford."

If we are conscious of dusty corners in our hearts, where unforgiveness is cherished or grievances rankle, do let us ask God to give us cleansed and forgiving hearts, whence only love shall flow out to others.

The American has just printed a booklet which gives authoritative information on the important subject of wills and modern methods of "Safeguarding Your Family's Future" (this is its title).

It will gladly mail you a copy, with no obligation on your part, upon request, as long as the supply lasts.

Kindly mention this paper.

AMERICAN
BANK AND TRUST COMPANY
Richmond, Virginia

CARPETS for CHURCHES

We carry a large stock of Church Carpets, embracing a wide assortment of designs, colorings and qualities and at prices to meet every requirement. Write and our representative will call with a selection of patterns and give an estimate, or we will send samples, at our expense, for your consideration.

Sydnor & Hundley

700 E. Grace Street, Richmond, Va.

BIG PROFITS
For Your Church Organization
GOTTSCHALK'S METAL SPONGE
REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.
"The Modern Dish Cloth"
—WRITE FOR FULL INFORMATION—
METAL SPONGE SALES CORPORATION
DEPT. G LEHIGH AND MASCHER STREETS PHILA.

LITTLE TEA ROOM

SANDWICHES

Special Prices to Clubs, Lodges and Paties

211 N. Jefferson Ran 3958
Richmond, Va.

SOUTHERN CHURCHMAN

Catholic for every truth of God; Protestant against every error of man.

EDITORIALS

Vol. 94. RICHMOND, VA., JUNE 22, 1929. No. 25.

AMBITIOUS

Dictionaries tell us "ambition" comes from a Latin root meaning what our American slang describes as "doing about", stirring around. With usage and passing time it was applied especially to busy and active seeking of public power, for political, social, general advancement of the individual. So it has come to its present significance of aspiring to or desiring place or prominence. This month more than four hundred colleges and universities in the United States send out nearly half a million young men and women, the great majority of them with ambitions, hopes, purposes, of one kind or another, embryonic and vague or clearly defined. A large proportion of the ambitions will be changed, within a year or two, or five or ten. Many of them will be defeated, baffled, blighted, abandoned. Very few of those now formulated will be fulfilled. People who live long enough will see from this new crop of graduates the same tragedies, comedies, astonishments and disappointments that have come in every generation; apparent brilliance and high promise wasted to insignificance, apparent dullness and failure developing achievement and what the world calls success. None but those who seek diligently for real wisdom and absorb it earnestly will know an approach to happiness.

The one thing we know surely of our own future is that presently we must go to what we call death. All nature tells us there is no death, no final extinction or destruction; but it is certain that all our bodies must decay and become dust and ashes. In that certainty is no cause for gloom or fear. There is abundant incentive and stimulation to ambition, to striving for achievement here, to hope for what is to be hereafter. "Death to life is crown or shame," says Milton. There can be no higher or cleaner ambition to so live and do that at the inevitable exit we may know that we have helped make the world and its people a little better; are leaving, by services faithfully performed, living and growing evidence that we have accomplished some good; and so go to sleep peacefully and content.

"The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom," says Solomon. That is old stuff. Yet it is to be remembered that Solomon has survived long as a writer and a leader of thought and that, despite some pitiable weaknesses, he has retained his reputation as a great and wise king and ruler. He agreed with his father who wrote twice, "The fool hath said in his heart there is no God." Those of us who consider Solomon at all must concede that he studied human nature closely and knew it intimately. That nature has improved gradually—the improvement observable, we may note, nowhere but in the counties where the fear of the Lord and faith in the Christ prevail—but it has not changed radically and we may accept the proverb as being true now as it was three thousand years ago. The more closely we analyze and test it by human experiences of the remote and recent past and the present, the more clearly its truth is demonstrated.

Unavoidably along with the beginning of wisdom must come the expanding wisdom brought by observation and thought. One of the first lessons of this—drilled into us from the learning of the alphabet to the valedictory address and the remarks of the distinguished commencement orator—is that we may not hope to do anything in life without labor and care and fears and repulses and buffets. Next, perhaps, is that very likely we will miss the end for which we long, despite our most earnest efforts. Then comes the melancholy, obvious, fact that the goal most ardently sought often is found, when reached, to be illusive, not worth having; the lovely apples of Sodom bitter, the throne a glistering grief, the crown a gilded sorrow. Realizing that troubles and disasters are inevitable, that the fortunes and conditions of life are uncertain and beyond our ordering or control, we are brought to determine what we shall do with ourselves, what we shall be regardless of whether time and events shall bring to us weal or woe, wealth or poverty, high station or lowly. It is within the power of each of us to determine, not what we shall be, but how we shall be—gentlemen and gentlewomen, or the wretched opposites; good and useful citizens, or drones, derelicts, destroyers, doers of evil and harm. In school closing verses Thackeray told his young readers:

"Who loses or who wins the prize—
To win or lose it as you can;
But if you fail, or if you rise,
Be each, pray God, a gentleman."

Twenty-five centuries before Thackeray, the Hebrew prophet Micah epitomized the character and conduct of a gentleman and a good and useful citizen—"To do justly, to love mercy, to walk humbly with thy God."

Analyze that. Take it word by word. Gather the meaning of it. Say, most cynical and conceited and self-satisfied, gloomiest, most morbid and pessimistic, most feather-headed and frivolous, of you just emerging to the realities—all these variant attitudes and characteristics appertaining to your age and present part on the huge stage and in the long-drawn drama and sometimes succeeding each other swiftly—say whether you find anywhere purer or higher wisdom, wiser guidance. It preceded seven centuries the Golden Rule and the injunction to love they neighbor as thyself and attuned with them in beautiful harmony. "God makes gentlefolk" is an old English saying; but the truth is, all of us can be the very noblest and most splendid of gentlefolk by seeking and following the guidance of God, obeying the precepts given from and by Him.

"'Tis Man's bold task the generous strife to try,
But in the hands of God is victory," sang old Homer, ages ago. He was thinking of victories with swords, spears, armour, arrows. We can no more make sure of victory over foes, competitors or circumstance than could Hector or Priam. We can, with God's gracious help and staunch manhood and womanhood courage, ceaseless endeavor, fight off the innumerable, invisible devils that beset us continually—devils of gloom and despair, of vanity and passion, selfishness, greed, cowardice, indolence, resentments and rebellions against the Almighty, debasing indulgences. Each of us can enter the battle firmly resolved to do our work as is given us to do, to be faithful to duty and try always to be useful; to make the very best possible of each of the days to come to us, meeting sorrows with resignation, adversities with smiles and renewing energy, prosperity with humility and gratitude.

We may not know while here what we have done, what we are creating for the future. The builder cannot foresee how the house he builds will be used and occupied, nor how long it will stand. Artist, painter, musician, may leave work which will delight and inspire oncoming millions or be forgotten. Nobody especially noticed Will Shakespeare in the crowd following and applauding the brilliant, dominant, Earl of Essex, riding jovially to oblivion. Perhaps Shakespeare had little thought of immortality for himself and deathless benefaction to humanity. Nobody remembers, or cares, who was king or prime minister of Great Britain, when the Wesleys led the great revival of religion; but the Methodist Church is here and has purified countless lives, gladdened and beautified innumerable death beds, alleviated and sanctified the sorrows of successive multitudes. It is said that Charles Wesley wrote "Jesus, Lover of My Soul" in a day. Through nearly two centuries now the hymn has brought comfort and hope to sinners and sufferers everywhere, most of whom did not know who wrote it, and it will lead souls upward until the end of the world.

Few of us will stand out in history or be very long remembered. All of us may live until the history of our race is closed by our acts and words from day to day. The quiet, unpretentious, undistinguished, men and women are the controlling and directing power. Those who do justly, love mercy and walk humbly attain the highest purpose of life. They maintain civilization and governments, crush down the enemies of religion, order and decency, sustain and stimulate real reforms and progress. There can be no finer ambition, none more worthy in the sight of the Almighty Creator of All, than to be one of these—to be useful, true to duty, to seek and resolutely realize and enjoy all the wholesome pleasures opportunity may offer; to be able to look back along our pathways feeling that we have striven faithfully to give the best in us and so to look forward with serene confidence.

"When rantin' round in pleasure's ring
Religion may be blinded;
And tho' she give a random sting
It little may be minded.
But when on life you're tempest tost,
A conscience but a canker,
A correspondence fixt wi' Heaven
Is sure a noble anchor."

Robert Burns, farm hand, who recked not his own rede.

"A king may make a belted knight,
A marquis, duke, an' a' that—
But an honest man's aboon his power—"

—Burns.

"The honest man, tho' e'er sae poor,
Is king o' men, for a' that."

—Burns.

"My duty towards God is to believe in Him, to fear and to love Him with all my heart, with all my mind, with all my soul and with all my strength; To worship Him, to give Him thanks . . . . to honor His holy Name."—Episcopal Church Catechism.

"My duty towards my neighbor is to love him as myself and to do to all men as I would they should do unto me . . . . and to learn and labor truly to get mine own living, And to do my duty in that state of life unto which it shall please God to call me."—Episcopal Church Catechism.

"If you can talk with crowds and keep your virtue,
Or walk with kings—nor lose the common touch,
If neither foes nor loving friends can hurt you,
If all men count with you, but none too much;
If you can fill the unforgiving minute
With sixty seconds' worth of distance run,
Your's is the earth and everything that's in it,
And—which is more—you'll be a man, my son!"

—Kipling.

Alfred B. Williams.

THE ONE WAY TO THE FATHER

TEXT: JOHN 4:16—

By the Reverend Edwin H. Rian

TO even the religiously indifferent reader it must be evident that the modern shibboleth of Christianity is the cry of "Back to Jesus". Many uninformed have re-echoed this cry, not with the same words nor with a like phrase, but what is worse by a repudiation of Christianity. They have been so hoodwinked by the popularization of nineteenth century natural philosophy that, to them, present Christianity is but a heap of ecclesiastical dogmas. They find in present Christianity only a method of hampering progress and of enslaving the mind. "We have lost the spirit of Jesus," they say. And with that they acquiesce thinking it "too hard to kick against the goods".

Still others, who make the same cry, but more solicitous of rediscovering Jesus, as they put it, find their ideas expressed in a book by Bruce Barton, "The Man Nobody Knows". As if to announce to the world that the Christian Church has buried Christ in such an encrustated mass of doctrine and interpretation that the twentieth century does not know what He did, said, or how He lived.

Four years ago on a Sunday afternoon I sat in the college chapel at Harvard. It was a religious meeting held by the Y. M. C. A. The young student chairman introduced the speaker by saying, "Today we shall hear from Dean Sperry, of Harvard Theological School, on the subject, 'Jesus'." He went on to say, "Dr. Sperry has brushed aside all the theological rubbish about Jesus, so we shall hear what He really taught." That attitude is typical. Some believe that the Jesus of the first century is unknown.

Away From Jesus.

But to any one who has made a conscientious study of Jesus in an objective and an historical way that modern shibboleth takes on a different form and, instead of "Back to Jesus", it reads, "Away from Jesus".

The text, "I am the way, the truth, and the life, no man cometh unto the Father but by me", is an acid test of the sincerity of the "Back to Jesus" proclaimers. As long as one pictures Jesus as an ideal man who went about doing good, every one agress, but when one quotes a hard dogmatic saying which excludes unless one assents to it then the "Back to Jesus" followers go into entrenchment. This verse is the most excluding and daringly dogmatic which He ever uttered. "No man cometh unto the Father but by me."

But those who wish to avoid the narrowness of these words claim that John wrote his gospel so long after the death of Jesus that many false ideas were incorporated in that book. They say, that in fifty years much superstition was added to give an untrue picture of the Founder of Christianity. This is impossible to prove from historical facts, but even if we do allow this intention, Matthew and Luke record the same idea. Listen to Matthew 11:27: "All things are delivered unto me of my Father, and no man knoweth the Son, but the Father, and neither knoweth any man the Father but the Son and he to whomsoever the Son will reveal him." Luke 10:22 reiterates it. And there isn't a single Bible critic of any prominence in Europe or this country who would dare to say that Matthew, Mark and Luke are not the oldest written tradition recording the words of Jesus. Every bit of historical probability contends that Jesus spoke the words of the text.

"No Man Cometh Unto the Father But By Me."

As I repeat those words, "no man cometh unto the Father but by me", I tremble, because of their importance. It would be much easier and more pleasant for me to believe that all men know the Father in some degree, whether rationalist, naturalist, Mohammedan, Hindu, or Grecian philosopher. There was Socrates, the philosopher of Athens, who always seemed to obey that inner urge, and even when he stood before his accusers, his faith in God didn't fail him. Boldly he ended his defense before he drank the hemlock: "But now it is time for us to go, I to death and you to life; and which one of us goes to the better state is known to none but God." The least we can say is that he was conscious of an overpowering presence of a superior being. But did he know the Father?

Faithful Mohammedans.

During the month of Hamadan or March of last year, which is celebrated in commemoration of the writing of the Koran, the holy book of the Mohammedans, I visited the impressive mosque on the citadel at Cairo. There, faithful Mohammedans were seated upon carpets reading the Koran aloud and praying upon beads as they paced toward the East or Mecca. Eight thousand lights enhance that pictureless and statueless mosque, for by so making their places of worship they hope to avoid idolatry. So sacred is the mosque that one must remove his shoes and put on sandals before entering. I became reverent when I saw those men and women fervently and sincerely praying and reading the Koran.

Standing on the desert looking at the mighty sphinx in the light of the moon instilled one with an awe, and I couldn't help but feel that man is religious and feels that there is a God.

Neither Ate, Drank, Nor Smoked Until Sundown.

All day long our party jogged along upon camels across the desert near Cairo, led by our Mohammedan guide. It was hot, dry and dusty, but our guide, faithful to his religion during the sacred month, did not eat, drink, or smoke until sundown.

These Egyptians impressed me. They commanded my respect, they were struggling to find God. But do they know the Father?

In all parts of the world we find men worshipping God, some in an ignorant fashion idols of stone and wood; others as lovers of nature see God as part of the whole; and still others understand by the word God an unknown force. But to Jesus Christ God was none of these, to Him God was and is the Father. He was intimate, loving, interested, He was the Father. And Jesus said, "No man cometh unto the Father but by me." If His statement is to be taken in its context, in its historical and grammatical meaning, it rules out every one from knowing the Father except those who come through Him. It excludes all except those who claim Christ as Lord. It divides families and separates loved ones, it makes one a member or not a member of the Kingdom of God. Has this always been the belief of the Christian Church?

Peter, Before the Sanhedrin.

Jesus had left this earth but a few weeks when Peter made a startling address before the Sanhedrin. In that speech he made the central plea of his message: "Neither is there salvation in any other, for there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved."

John, the Beloved Disciple.

John, another man who was closely associated with the Lord, wrote his book containing the words and works of Christ. He wrote: "These were written that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ the Son of God and that believing ye might have life through His name" (John 20:31).

Paul, the Fiery Evangelist.

Paul, although he did not know Christ in the flesh, at least talked with His disciples. And it is almost strange to find even a single epistle where Paul doesn't write or imply that Jesus is the only way to God. In fact, it was the driving power which made of him the most fiery evangelist in all Christendom. He not only believed it, but he lived it. It was the all-absorbing force which made him happy to live or die for Christ. He traveled over the Mediterranean world to herald that "no man cometh unto the Father but by me." He died glorying in that belief.

In the written records of early Christianity about one hundred and fifty years later, we find the same note. Ignatius, Clement, and Justin Martyr wrote explicitly of their belief in this truth. And they reflect the opinion of the early Church immediately after the time of the apostles.

Early Christians In Rome.

To the early believers Jesus was the only way to God. Visit the remains of the catacombs just outside of the city of Rome and see the early Christians' faith. There, many feet under the ground a labyrinth of passages lead to various small chapels, where the heroes worshipped. Condemned by the Roman government, hunted, wrongly accused and persecuted, these men and women took refuge in those underground passages which they themselves had dug and where they worshipped the true God. They were fired with an enthusiasm by their faith. They believed that only Jesus could give them eternal life and they were willing to die for that faith.

Later in the fourth century we read of the many false ideas which gripped the Christian Church. But there was one who tenaciously and intelligently clung to the belief that Jesus was the only way to God. That was Athanasius. Excommunicated, but later reinstated, he withstood the attack of most all the Church celebrities and upheld the faith in Christ. Alone he stood, but how firmly!

Luther Finds the Bible.

Slip some centuries and consider Luther. He dug down underneath the heap of idolatry and superstition to find the Bible. He heralded the truth that only faith in Christ would bring life as opposed to the works of man. And by this evangel the reformation was born. Calvin, Knox, and Zwingli reiterated the same belief. The reformation idea bore fruit because it is the truth, and we have the Protestant Churches of Christendom.

Think of the eighteenth and nineteenth century revivals. What truth was it that added thousands to the Church of God? Only the truth that Christ is the way to the Father.

What sent a man like Livingstone to Africa or a man like Taylor to China, if it wasn't the blessed gospel of good news that Jesus alone gives life?

What else made the success of D. T. Moody? A school in Chicago and one in Northfield stand as monuments to what the grace of God can do in a man who believes the message, that He came to bring men to the Father.

The overwhelming mass of Christendom from its founder to this present century have firmly believed that "no man cometh unto the Father but by me." This is more than a belief with the Church. It is the dynamic which produces purity in lives and progress in the knowledge of God. It is the truth which makes men bear up under persecution and happy to become martyrs. It is a tremendous, hard, discriminating truth, but it is the heart of the Gospel. And by it, through it and in it the Christian Church is what it is.

But What Of Today!

A great world Christian missionary conference was held on the Mount of Olives overlooking Jerusalem in 1928. This mammoth gathering, although reaffirming faith in Christ, indirectly left the impression that Christ's way may be the best, the shortest, and the surest way to God, yet not the only way. But Jesus didn't say that His way is the best, the quickest or the surest. He said "No man cometh to the Father but by me."

In the May, 1928, issue of Harper's Magazine there appeared an article by Hanford Henderson on, "A Modern Christian Speaks". In that essay he writes, among other enlightening ideas, that he worshipped in a Mohammedan mosque, a Buddhist temple and the Russian Greek church in Paris, emphasizing the fact that a modern Christian is first of all a world religionist. All men are struggling toward God, he writes. True, but he ends his paragraph, "This (the Christian way) represents for me the chosen path, but it is not the only path. All paths lead unto me." There we find the statement of the Back to Jesus followers, "All paths lead unto me." But Jesus said, "No man cometh unto the Father but by me." Back to Jesus we are, but the moderns do not square with that message. That modern cry is becoming louder, but it does not agree with the teaching of Jesus, it is directly opposed to it.

He is the Way.

Jesus tells us His way to the Father. "I came not to be ministered unto, but to minister and to give my life a ransom for many." Go with Him to Gethsemane, see Him when His humanity was greatest. "O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me; nevertheless not as I will, but as thou wilt." Look at Jesus on the cross, rejected, socrned, broken-hearted, even forsaken by God and we will understand His way to the Father. He didn't come to be the Way Shower, nor only our example. He is the way. The drops of His blood were sacrificed as a ransom for sin, and when we accept and trust in that sacrifice we come to the Father. Then, and then only do we become children of the kingdom of heaven and know God as Father. It is faith in the fact that Jesus Christ died in our place to bring us back into fellowship with Him that gives eternal life. Such faith saves one from spiritual death to spiritual life, from a life of bondage to one of freedom. It enables one to know God and to call Him Abba Father. Hard is this saying, but it portrays the greatest love because it shows us how to know the Father. He doesn't speak this truth bitterly or harshly, but lovingly. "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest." Hear the plea of Jesus, for it is His message to us. It is a truth, which, when believed, will change one's idea of God from an unknown force to the Father. "I am the way, the truth, and the life, no man cometh unto the Father but by me."

WE BELIEVE THAT THOU SHALT COME

By Kenneth Mackenzie

XIV.

CONNECTING our past studies with the evident plan of God for the further accomplishment of His benignant purpose, we now turn our attention to what may have occurred on the earth while the saints of the Lord are at the bema of Jesus Christ, receiving their rewards for service and appointments in the coming kingdom.

And by way of introduction, it were well to say that these studies will be valueless to those who assume that the Church is exclusively the kingdom of heaven on earth. Almost uniformly, the term kingdom of God is employed to mean the influence of the Church in the world; and to that we may all give common assent. But "the kingdom of heaven", so constantly mentioned by our Lord is the heavenly rule on earth of principles and laws of which He is the source and supply, the center and circumference. Whatever may be charatceristic of the operations of the kingdom in the present dispensation cannot exhaust the reservoir of universal supply which resides in the mind of Deity. And the kingdom of heaven cannot be completely manifested until the King comes back.

We have previously indicated that the Church has never been able to establish a kingdom on earth; its growth has not kept pace with the increase of population; it has been scorned by those who have been the recipients of its spiritual life; it has been repudiated as the solver of social problems (this function having been emphasized by officials of the Church in latter times) and it has lived to see itself characterized as an incumbrance to the social fabric. Furthermore, the doctrines of Christianity are now relegated to the sphere of an effete mediaevalism; the Cross is valueless as a means of salvation; only a unique Man stands as representative of the Christian religion. To follow His percepts, to emulate His life, to admire His personality seem to be the evident result of the modern movement. A worldly-mindedness, the luke-warmness of the Laodiceans (Rev. 3:14-22), a shrinking of interest in missions, so that the Boards are crying out for succor, and in turn the lack of a definite missionary message, all involve the Church in a seeming contradiction of her triumphant battle cry, "The Whole, Wide World for Jesus."

And the consolatory character of this embarrassing situation to the Bible-loving Christian lies in the recognition of the fact that it has already been outlined. Think for a moment of a religion sweeping as it did, the whole of Jewry and the great Roman world (Col. 1:23) now bidden to take its place with the other religions in a comparative relation! Consider that with the long-drawn perspective of the coming ages, our Lord should lament, "When the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?" (Luke 18:8). How minutely did the New Testament decry that day in the prediction of apostacy, love of wealth, selfishness, the surrender of the faith to the seductions of alien doctrines (1 Tim. 4:1, 2; 2 Tim. 3:1-5; James 5:1-8; 2 Peter 2:1-3; 3:3, 4; 1 John 2:18, 19; Jude 18)! Much as we should love to see the Gospel win the race to our Lord Jesus, the outlook is not in the least indicative. The rather, the ripening of iniquity until the harvest seems the perspective.

What, therefore, may be the World Conditions

subsequent to the translation of the saints is not hard to conjecture. When we take into account that the entire human family is eager for release from war, that prayers and conferences are abounding to this end, that the Multilateral Treaty, the entrance of the United States into the World Court, that universal sickness of war everywhere prevails: and yet that even in our own land where the principle of peace is most eagerly held, we are paying eighty-seven per cent of our national taxes for past and future wars, that France now has a standing army calculated to exceed that of Germany in 1914, that Italy has the ideal of triumph through arms, and that everywhere in Europe suspicion prevails, there is little ground for expecting that the Church or the Gospel will any more than in the last great conflict operate to control the war-lust of mankind. And the increasing power of organized labor will play an important part in determining world policies. The pent-up streams of Bolshevism will breakforth, the growing supremacy of Turkey as a power in the East, uniting in all probability with Russia and possibly linked with Germany, these and other factors may find expression in a world conflict which may conclude in the last great conflict predicted by Zechariah in Ch. 14.

Jerusalem, Trodden Down of the Gentiles, will emerge in this vast confusion to become the center of a great renaissance. Our Lord anticipated this (Luke 21:24). Doubtless this will be the prophesied "until". We know that Jerusalem will be encompassed with armies (Zech. 14:2; Luke 21:20). To lightly regard these signal indications is to put a libel upon the pledged word of God. Our Lord declared that there would come a time when this proud city which rejected Him would behold Him (Matt. 23:37-39) and He doubtless had in mind that significant promise in Zech. 12:10, "I will pour upon the house of David and the inhabitants of Jerusalem the spirit of grace and supplication; and they shall look upon me whom they have pierced." Can we not see that the rapid spread of Zionism in our day is a fit preparation for this event? Why this sudden longing to occupy the land after centuries of indifference? Who can account for the determined spirit, in the face of almost unsurmountable obstacles, which knows no defeat in this twentieth century movement? Only God's plan can explain it.

Dictatorship

will become the passion of governments. Confessedly, the democratic form is the ideal; but that it justifies all that is hoped for, is now an interrogation. The growing tendency is to put trust in the master-mind of some governmental genius, who by strategy, diplomacy and administrative skill can steer the ship of state. And the creation of a United States of Europe may be more than an idle dream. Concentration of power, as now of manufacturing and finance will dominate the world. This will all prepare the way for

"That Man of Sin"

who will be the Anti-Christ (2 Thess. 2:3-10) intimated by our Lord as coming in His own name (John 5:43), whom the Jews will receive, for he will combine in his vast domain the realms of business, the social order and the universally accepted religious brotherhood of man. Let no one charge us with pessimism as we record these possibilities. We stand with the most hopeful as to the amelioration of the world's suffering by any means within our power. But when the problem calls for definite solution, we shall not be considered if we reach that period of the heading up of iniquity (Matt. 24:12); nor, if we have been removed, will the faith we espouse be an item of consequence. The "enthusiasm of humanity" will be the world-cry. And they will not "have this Man (our Lord Jesus) to reign" over them (Luke 19:14). And as the Jews made a covenant with Mohamet, which he broke, so preserved Judaism will in ignorance of the mechanism of this world-system, unite for political reasons with the overpowering master of men, in whose hands the fate of humanity will willingly lie. The question of the nationality of this "man of sin" is an enticing one; the hypothesis that he will be an Ishmaelite is not without Scriptural inference. But the discussion is too involved to admit of inclusion here. The entire period will be as our Lord predicted a such as never was nor ever shall be (Matt. 24:21; Rev. 7:14). And when it shall reach its ripened maturity, the next great act in the divine drama will be ushered in.

Time of Tribulation,

A BILL OF PARTICULARS REQUIRED

By Bishop Warren A. Candler

THE rationalists, in their assaults on historic Christianity, have quite a favorite method of charging many things in general and nothing in particular against "the faith once for all delivered to the saints."

They are fond of making demands for what they call "a new conception of God"; but they fail to say wherein the conception of God that is common to all intelligent Christians, is defective or erroneous; and they neglect to define clearly the conception of God which they would have substituted for it.

One of these liberalists said recently, "Religion needs a new God made in the image of science". What sort of religion might that be, which would worship a "made" God, he does not define very lucidly; and what he means exactly by "a God made in the image of science" is still more uncertain. Perhaps, he would have no God at all; for further along in his discourse he affirms that "no great philosopher has taken theism seriously," a statement amazingly untrue.

It is in order for this gentleman to say just what conception of God he proposes as a substitute for the Christian conception. Let him inform us what ingredients, or attributes, he would include in his God, compounded scientifically "in the image of science". Before such a radical proposal can be seriously considered, we must have more particular information by the proponent of such a revolutionary proposition.

Such talk puts the talker in a position too ridiculous for respectful notice.

Another of the same class, exclaims dramatically, "Let the pagan elements be eliminated from the Apostles' Creed!"

Well, if there are pagan elements in the Apostles' Creed, no objection to their elimination can be reasonably raised. But let the pagan elements in it first be pointed out with precision and particularity. A general allegation against the creed, declaring that it contains pagan elements, is unworthy of consideration unless accompanied by "a bill of particulars".

In connection with the discussion of such an issue all parties should, at the outset, bear in mind a historic fact of great significance, namely, that all pagan philosophies and heathen cults were opposed most violently to the Christian religion during the first centuries of its history; their adherents did not propose to amend it, but to destroy it. In one of the undisputed Epistles of St. Paul, this fact is set forth most correctly and clearly, as follows: "For after that in the wisdom of God the world by wisdom knew not God, it pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe. For the Jews require a sign, and the Greeks seek after wisdom; but we preach Christ crucified, unto the Jews a stumbling block, and unto the Greeks foolishness" (1 Cor. 1:21-23). Under such conditions of irreconcilable conflict how could pagan elements have crept into the faith of the Church: Did the leaders of any Jewish sect, or philosophical school, claim that any one of the Apostles and martyrs was an exponent of their principles, or an apostate from their tenets? Was not the gravamen of the alleged offense, for which every martyr suffered, that he taught things which made him worthy of death? Would the paganism, by which the first representatives of Christianity were persecuted and executed, have so fiercely attacked them, if its pagan faith had been incorporated in the Christian creed?

As a matter of fact nearly, or quite, all of the tenets embodied in the Apostles' Creed were framed for the avowed purpose of preserving the purity of Christian doctrine from the intrusion of any pagan elements into it. Thus, the tenets of the early Gnostics, and the heretical teachings of such men as Marcion, who was excommunicated by his own father, were condemned and excluded.

But apart from these general considerations, which render improbable the existence of any pagan elements in the Creed, let him who would eliminate such elements from it, point out with clearness and particularity what he wishes to have eliminated. Let him hush his raucous cries of indefinite generalities, and come squarely to grips with the historic faith in specific allegations of error.

The first article of the Creed is, "I believe in God the Father Almighty, Maker of heaven and earth." Is it desired to change that? Is it paganish to believe that there is one Almighty God, who made heaven and earth, and whose character is that of a Father? What pagan religion ever held that sublime view of God?

The next items in the Creed concern the divine Sonship of Jesus Christ; His Incarnation by a supernatural conception and birth; His crucifixion, death, resurrection, ascension, and enthronement at God's right hand; and His second coming to judge the quick and the dead.

Were any one of these transcendent facts derived from any pagan source? Or, were each and all derided by paganism with scorn and contempt?

The very heart of the Creed is the Person of Christ; and it was against the acceptance of the great facts about His Person that are asserted by the Creed that paganism directed its assaults and the early sceptics delivered their attacks against Christianity during the first three centuries of its history. Peace might have been purchased by the Church, if faith in these facts had been renounced, and he tenets and negations of pagan philosophers had been incorporated in the Creed of the Christians.

And the Church of today could have peace with the critics of its creed at the same price, if it were ready to surrender with similar faithlessness.

What the men, who cry for the elimination of pagan elements from the Creed, really desire is the injection into it of the pagan elements which the early Church excluded from it. Without exception every one of the things for which these men clamor can be traced to some of the Gnostics, or to Celsus, or to Marcion, or to some other heretic of the first three or four centuries, who sought to destroy or to corrupt the Christian faith. Perhaps the disposition of the present-day critics of the Creed to deal in generalities, rather than with specific points, in criticizing the historic symbol arises from the fear that the pagan source of their principles might be exposed by more candid methods.

After the parts of the Creed which touch the Person of Jesus Christ, there follow those which declare belief in the Holy Ghost, in the Church, in the communion of saints, in the forgiveness of sin, in the resurrection of the body, and in the life everlasting. Certainly no sane man of average intelligence would dare to affirm that the Christian belief concerning any of these high and holy matters contains even so much as a trace of paganism.

Where then can be found in the Creed any "elements of paganism" whatsoever?

Let us hear then no more general allegations that there are "elements of paganism" in the Creed, which ought to be eliminated. Let those who persist in so alleging give us "a bill of particulars", or withdraw their groundless and false pleading in condemnation of the essential truths of historic Christianity.

When such "a bill of particulars" is produced, it will be seen probably that it is the Biblical elements in the Creed which its liberalistic critics desire to have eliminated from it. They do not object so much to pagan speculations as they do to Biblical doctrines. In truth, they believe easily most anything, provided it is not revealed in the Bible.

FAVORITE SCRIPTURE VERSES

(In this space each week will appear a favorite passage of Scripture as sent in by a different reader. Every one is, therefore, invited to send us their favorite verse. It is suggested that all who can, join with the rest of us in committing to memory the verse which so appears here each week, including its location in the Holy Book: and in due time your memory chest will be laden with choice eternal treasures, indeed—"Thy word have I hid in my heart, that I might not sin against thee," Ps. 119:11.)

This week the following verse was submitted by Mrs. Ganzert, Richmond, Virginia:

> "For we know that, if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens" (2 Cor. 5:2).

Who will send one from the far-away places as well as very near us?

THE SURRENDERED LIFE---IN CHRIST

Conducted by Rev. Frank Cox

People in the church are very apt to go about the work of Evangelism as though it were like the ordinary routine of undertakings. There comes a rather general conviction that we need Evangelism, the reaction is to appoint a commission, get some literature about the subject, and expect the commission to do the work. If the parish life is low, then the commission ought to be able to provide a cut and dried formula by which the revival of the parish will take place.

Evangelism does not come that way. It is a thing of the Spirit and comes through personal contact. The rector who thinks that his parish can be evangelized by some system or method sent down from headquarters is due for a rude awakening. Usually the place where Evangelism must begin is in himself. Evangelism is a thing of prayer and consecration, not of formula and organization.

There is a new attitude of mind springing up throughout our church. A new humility is apparent. If any one had dared to suggest a few years ago that any of the ministry needed to be converted he would have been drowned by a chorus of denials. There is a good deal of cant and humbug in an attitude like that. When any group of men think that they have gotten past criticism they are due for a rude awakening. As a matter of fact without saying much people were quietly leaving the church, and the newer generation were growing up without much training in religion at all. Then one day the clergy, or the best of them awoke to the fact that they were not fooling any one by their dignified attitude and lordly bearing and the atmosphere became many degrees more natural.

Today it is no strange thing to hear a minister willing to confess that he needs more power than he possesses, and as a result more of them are finding that power. The surface is just beginning to be scratched. Many people were fooled by the recent campaign for Evangelism into believing that the church as a whole was now awake to the need of power and would remedy the situation. But Evangelism demands more than lip service. Some have surrendered and are witnessing to a new found power, but many more are still in the old rut, joined still to the old idols; willing to join in the cry when Evangelism enjoys a moment of popularity but unwilling to pay the price of a permanent experience with God.

One looks with amazement at times at a typical diocesan convention and wonders how the Apostlic Gatherings in the early Church ever gave birth to such offspring. Evidently while men slept some enemy sowed tares among the wheat. One listens to the tiresome and seemingly endless discussion of finances and organization, and waits in vain for the word of inspiration that shall show some real burden for the need of the hurrying, restless, godless world without. Is there no one with courage enough to challenge our rank indifference and to bring us once more to a conviction of our need? Have we no man "sent from God" careless of self and reputation, ready to face scorn and discouragement if necessary but heedful of the Divine Call above all else?

One wonders whether God Himself does not become impatient with our fussiness and smallness, while He waits for us to ask of Him for the power that He waits to give for the moving of the world. We have been giving Him machinery. He waits for a man.

CHRIST WANTS YOU

By the Reverend Cleland B. McAfee, D. D.

Third Prize Tract in Wood Prize Contest.

(Copyright, by American Tract Society.)

A YOUNG man in India once said to me: "Of course you must realize that only certain kinds of men can understand the essence of Hinduism." Jesus would never have said that about Christianity. It does not take any special kind of a man to be a Christian. Anybody can be a Christian if he really wants to be one. No one is so simple that he cannot begin to be a Christian, and no one is ever so profound that he is past being a Christian. The religion of Jesus is so great that children and sages, ignorant and learned, rich and poor, civilized and savage, can accept it and live by it.

Jesus showed His desire for all kinds of men by the group He picked out for His first disciples. There are twelve in the list, but they were chosen from a much larger company of followers and they doubtless represented fairly the people He had won to Himself. They represent the whole body of men of our own day.

1. Do you think you are good enough already without becoming a Christian? Well, there are some very likely men in that first group—fine, sensitive, high-grade men, the kind of men of whom anybody would say that it was quite natural they would follow Christ. When Jesus saw Nathanael, whom most students identify with Bartholomew, He spoke very warmly of him as a guileless man who was trying to do his duty. Yet Nathanael became one of Jesus' followers, because really good men like to be with good men. Philip was another who seems to have been a cultured, trained man who attracted the attention of visitors, either because of his personal attraction or else because of his Greek training. But is it not natural for fine men to associate with fine men? Would not such a man like to be known as a follower of such a Leader as Jesus? Andrew is another of that first group about whom we know only a little but all of it very good. He was a fisherman, an honorable trade, and he stood well in the community and especially with his own family, so that his brother was attracted by his description of Jesus. Once in a while a man thinks he is good enough without being a Christian, when he cannot get along with his own family or community. Andrew was better than that, yet he followed Christ. If you are a good man, fine, honorable, sound in principle and life, ought you not for that very reason to feel the attraction of Jesus? He was just such a Man Himself and drew such men to Himself during His earthly life. Many such men are following Him now, and if you accepted His call and became a Christian you would find yourself in the company of many men whom you ought to like. You will find also that these men see something in Jesus which makes them less proud of being good because He sets a standard for them which is beyond any they have used before. Perhaps you would find that Jesus is so much better and finer than you are that He will help to make your own life better. But really good men ought to want to be known as His followers.

2. Do you think you are not good enough to be a Christian, an unlikely type for a religious life? It will encourage you to know that Jesus chose several such men in His first group of followers. There were some who were a liability rather than an asset for His cause. That was probably true of the foremost of the group, Simon Peter. A man once said that he did not want to become a Christian because he did not want to be "meek" as Christians have to be. Of course there is a sense in which any Christian is meek in spirit because he knows the greatness of God but surely no one would ever think of Peter as being overly meek in any weak sense. He was not the kind of man we would pick out to represent the humbler virtues or the ordinary religious spirit. He could bluster, lose his temper, speak unworthily, try to dominate the situation, and almost anything else in that line. Yet Jesus chose Him as a follower.

And even James and John were not meek and gentle, though they took such high place in Christian history. Jesus gave them a name, Boanerges, "Sons of Thunder," and they were so unchristian as to want fire called down from heaven on a village which did not welcome them. They were so ambitious for personal advantages that they wanted to preempt the best places in Christ's kingdom. They were not likely religious types. Yet Jesus called them.

Simon the Zealot was a revolutionary, a member of the party which was for violence in overthrowing the Roman power and for violent treatment of any who opposed the thorough handling of the political and religious situation. Matthew was a "publican" or tax-gatherer and therefore on a low social level, the kind of man who would not have been admitted into the homes of the best people of the land. His wealth made him repugnant to many others because it had been gained in what they considered evil ways. He was of the most unlikely types, and no one could possibly have approved Jesus' choice of such a man for a follower. If you feel like saying that no church would want you in it, remember Simon and Matthew, Jesus wanted them.

And Judas Iscariot! Here was surely a great venture because something was wrong with his spirit. Probably some people looking on would have said that he was a very good kind of man to have in the group—a natural business man who became treasurer of their small funds. We do not know why Jesus chose him, but we do see that his presence brings out the strength of the movement because his failure did not defeat it. When people speak of the hypocrites and other unworthy elements in the church, they are paying it a compliment, for they are noting that the church is strong enough to carry a load of failures. In spite of Judas, in spite of hypocrites, in spite of unworthy members, the cause of Christ goes on. It would be a poor cause that could not carry some unworthy adherents along with it. If you are afraid that you might be a failure at last and disgrace the church, and if you really want to follow Christ, do not hesitate to take your start. Maybe you will not be a disgrace after all, and even if you should be, the church will not be ruined by it. Jesus chose Judas to be a follower.

3. Do you think you are too unimportant or too insignificant to become a Christian? Well, there were several such men in that first group, men about whom we are told nothing at all and who apparently do nothing but complete the number. We know only a little about Thomas, except that he was an inquiring man who was not easily satisfied about difficult points. He did not believe easily and he found Jesus entirely ready to accept him on those terms. James, the son of Alpheus, and Thaddeus are mere names to us; we know nothing whatever about the men. Yet they were as much within the choice and desire of Jesus as any others. What a strange religion it would be that did not have place in it for the rank and file of us who just go along every day doing our duty and making no stir or splash in the sea of life! The unimportant people are always important in the sight of God. That is the meaning of Lincoln's word that God must like ordinary men, since he made so many of them. Generals are helpless without privates and plenty of them. Leaders are helpless without followers and many of them. All that can be asked of unimportant men is that they will be as faithful and loyal in their places as they expect leaders to be. The cause of Christ needs many such men, each one adding weight to the whole force. Jesus completed his first group with several such men. Every group of His followers needs them still. If you really think you are such a man, Christ wants you.

The beauty of it is that Jesus wants all men on the same basis—simple loyalty to Him and His cause. Some men come to Him with a dreadful sense of sin, but some men begin to follow Him without such a sense. Some men want His help in serious problems of life, but some men are not conscious of those problems when they first come to Him. Some men follow Him because they find He has the solution of the world problems of today; some men find that out later. If you want a great Saviour, Jesus will prove what you want. If you want a great Master, Jesus is the one who will supply your need. If you want to take part in a great enterprise for the good of men, the enterprise of Jesus will meet your desires. If you feel the need of a friend, Jesus is the great friend. And from His side everything is clear: He wants you. All that remains is for you to want Him.

Letters to the Editor

In this Department the Editor will at all times welcome communications expressing opinions on the various topics which are engaging the attention of the Church. But the Editor will not hold himself responsible for such opinions.

No "Letters to the Editor" will appear in our columns except those coming to us signed by writer.

PAST SIX MONTHS THE BEST.

Mr. Editor:

I am enclosing my subscription for another year for your valued paper. I must say it seems to me your issues for the past six months have been the very best since I have taken your paper, which has been for so many years. I can't remember when I first subscribed for it. How thankful I am to note with each issue there is that absolute faith in the blessed Bible, as the inspired Word of God. How can any one doubt it?

And your stand as to the teachings of the Protestant Episcopal Church, the faith once delivered to the saints, is a constant source of comfort to me. And may God bless and guide the Editors, and contributors to your paper, that all may be written in the spirit of Jesus Christ, that through the medium of the Southern Churchman Christ's Kingdom may be spread far and near, throughout the world. It is so gratifying to read such fine articles from the pens of men from other communions, such godly men, which helps create a fellowship of love and understanding between the Churches, for which we all should work and pray. Again, I say may God bless the Southern Churchman, for it has a work to do that, at present, no other publication of our Church is doing (as carefully).

Your earnest well-wisher,

Mrs. Joel B. Churchill.

Belle Alliance Plantation, Assumption Parish, Louisiana.

MISSION FOR PIUTE INDIANS.

Mr. Editor:

I wish to tell of the excellent work Deaconess Lucy Carter of Virginia is doing at Epiphany mission for the Piute Indians upon the Moapa Valley Reservation in Southern Nevada.

In the late fifties and early sixties the Moapa Valley was settled by Mormons from Utah, the Mormons did not get on very well with the Indians, and I do not believe there ever has been a Mormon Indian upon the Moapa Reservation. Not until a few years ago had anything ever been done for the spiritual welfare of these Indians and their moral condition was deplorable. The late Bishop Hunting sent a very capable missionary, the Rev. Mr. Smith, to visit them regularly, and Epiphany mission was established, and Deaconess Lucy Carter has had charge of it for more than two years and under her guiding hand the Indians are improving wonderfully. The Rev. Mr. Parker, of Las Vegas, Nevada, comes often and holds services in Moapa, and at the mission there is a good attendance of whites and Indians. This valley is not very long, not much over nineteen miles and in some places it is not over a mile and a half wide; but it is exceedingly fertile. The Indians are successful farmers. They raise five crops of alfalfa a year. Their water supply for irrigation purposes comes from the Muddy River, which flows through the valley. The river rises about eight miles above the reservation in warm springs. Palms grow wild around these springs.

The climate is wonderful in the Moapa Valley in winter in summer it is a little too warm to be comfortable. About any fruit that can be grown in California can be successfully raised here.

There are about one hundred Indians upon the reservation. The death rate among the babies is high. The mission practically clothes the babies, young children and old people. A squaw told me a few weeks ago that if it were not for the Church she would not be able to clothe her children and she has five at home with her. Her man is dead.

Mrs. Annie K. Borbridge.

Moapa, Nevada.

SPIRITUAL AND EDUCATIONAL MATERIAL CAN ALWAYS BE FOUND IN SOUTHERN CHURCHMAN.

Mr. Editor:

Your paper seems to gather between its covers material so helpful spiritually and also of such literary value, that one finds in but few papers. May I just call your attention to the last issue of June8, "Real Causes of Secession", by General J. A. Early. What a notable paper, how deep and powerful, and convincing from the opening word to the final period. Let's have more of them, I have rejoiced each week since I have been receiving your paper in having a spiritual and educational tonic, for it does the human mind, soul, body and heart good.

Subscriber.

Friends Not Forgeigners

By the Rev. Thomas Burgess, D. D., Secretary, Foreign Born Americans Division of the National Council.

The people of forty-four different races other than old American stock are being ministered to by our Church in a normal, ordinary way. About one-half of our parishes throughout the country are doing this. The policy of the National Council, adopted nine years ago, has through the Foreign-Born Americans Division been spread quietly and persistently. Our Church has solved the immigrant problem simply by abolishing it. Our own Church people are fast being converted to the practice of Christian love. They have become friends to their neighbors on the level.

"We try to treat them exactly as those of American birth," so writes the rector of St. Paul's, Burlington, Vermont, and goes on to say: "This parish contains Greeks, Armenians, a few Chinese, and a few Syrians. We have a number of foreign-born children in our church school."

Christ Church, Nashville, Tennessee, reports: "They are simply members of the congregation like anybody else—a few persons of Armenian, Italian, English and Canadian birth in this parish."

And the Vicar of St. Luke's Chapel, New York City, says: "Everything is done to forget that anybody is anything but just a child of God," and he is writing of an ordinary city parish made up largely of Germans, Irish, British, Swedish, Jews, Italians, Japanese, Alsatians, French, Austrians, Spanish and Russians.

In the past year we have received reports like these from about two thousand parishes, showing what the ordinary parish is doing in the ordinary way. Let us quote others.

From Chicago, the Church of the Redeemer, we have this: "We have in our communicant membership Swiss, Irish, German, Chinese, Japanese, several Swedish, Belgian, Austrian. We welcomed the Greek Orthodox bishop and clergy to a special service when the bishop preached."

The Advent, San Francisco, writes: "I would say that almost all of the principal European nations are represented on our parish roll."

In St. John's, Cambridge, Southern Ohio, "There are six families of Syrians, two Greeks, two Roumanian and one Slav. They come to the services. The men are members of the Men's Club and they like it.

"The women are members of the Guild. They are treated the same as the American stock; are canvassed, and pay what they subscribe."

At Fresno, California, the Armenian Church School pays an annual visit to our Cathedral school, and there are regular conferences with the Armenian Church in regard to the religious education of their youth.

At St. John's, Wichita, Kansas, the Syrians, largely men, averaged twenty-five in attendance during Lent, and their children are sent to our week-day School of Religious Education.

Calvary Church, Roslyn, in the Diocese of Spokane, reports twenty-four nationalities. "Many of the children are in our Sunday School. They are reached through visits to the hospital. This being a coal-mining town there are many accidents. We also minister to them in their bereavements and baptize some of their children."

St. Mark's, Anaconda, Montana: "They attend church, put their children in the Church School, and their wives work in the Guilds and other church organizations. They receive ordinary pastoral care, are on my list, visited in sickness, etc. In my congregation are to be found English, Germans, French, Croats, Serbians, Bulgarians, Slovaks, Bohemians, Rumanians, Austrians and Poles—and, sometimes, though not often, a native American."

The Mission in Hartville, Wyoming, is made up largely of people of Greek and Italian parentage and some Mexicans. Christ Church, Lead, South Dakota, reaches seventeen nationalities, and St. Simon's, San Fernando, near Los Angeles, has fifteen nationalities; and so it goes in every diocese.

Beside this typical ordinary work of the ordinary parish, let us mention in rapid succession some of the extraordinary work. The new lease of life of the Scandinavian work, especially in Chicago, Marquette and Duluth; the appointment of Archdeacon Junker (formerly Presbyterian Moderator over one hundred and forty-nine churches in South Dakota), to reach the unchurched Germans and others; the remarkable growth of the Japanese missions in Olympia, Los Angeles and Western Nebraska; the start of work for Mexicans on the border with a beautiful and complete new building in El Paso; the help given to the persecuted Russian Church in America, especially making over for them a new cathedral by Trinity Parish, New York, at a cost of $30,000; the welcome and help to the Russian exiles of the upper classes in New York and Los Angeles; the new type of missions across the Atlantic, which were the result of winning the confidence of Eastern Churchmen here, viz., the Educational Chaplaincies in Jerusalem and on the banks of the Tigris, supported by the Good Friday Offering; and the bi-lingual "Daily Prayers and Prayers for the Sick," in twelve different languages; those are the familiar prayers of each race, with the English translation, and they are used by our clergy in all the New York City institutions and hospitals, at the Mayo brothers' clinic in Minnesota, in San Quentin Prison in California, and elsewhere, in all parts of the country.

Book Reviews

NEW LIVES FOR OLD: By Amelia S. Reynolds. Fleming H. Revell Company. Price, $1.

Our readers will take a peculiar interest in this book, for it grew out of a series of articles on Calvary Church, written for this paper. Additional material has been added to link the stories together, and to provide explanation and introductory material. Those who have read the articles as they appear from time to time will need no introduction to the book. At Calvary Parish they are doing in the way of personal evangelism what a lot of us talked about in the Crusade for Evangelism. Too much of the Crusade ended in talk, but they are still at it in Calvary.

Those who are counting on an entrance into heaven by virtue of their grandfather's faithfulness, or those who wear themselves out on the externals of religion had better not read this book, it will disturb their piece of mind. Those who believe that Jesus Christ is the same today as yesterday will rejoice at this added evidence of His power.

It is of interest to know that the writer has herself been reached by the movement at Calvary, and though a woman of many interests is giving her time freely every day as a member of the staff. This in itself provides an answer to the question how to get laymen and laywomen interested in religious work, namely, get them converted.

Frank Cox.

THE MIDDLE WAY: By the Rev. Latta Griswold, M. A. Cloth. Pp. 115. Published by the Morehouse Publishing Company, Milwaukee, Wis. Price, $1.50.

"Decently and in order," should be the key to the conduct of the services of the Church. No doubt they can be so carelessly and irreverently rendered as to excite disgust. There may be on the other hand, such a slavish, mechanical devotion to every little twist and turn that one is equally disturbed by an offensive, artificial particularity. The author believes he has found a "via media". And he takes to his task with due consideration of the prejudices of the people and the need of patient waiting for their cooperation.

Those of us who came into the ministry of the Church, ere ceremonialism was born, quite well recall that the quiet dignity and evident reverence with which the services were conducted did not demand any manual of deportment. Instinctively, the men of God knew they were in His House, and the people did also. So the manner of procedure was begotten of this mutual state of mind. Now, we seem to be in need of being told what to do and how to do it. This would be acceptable if we were sure that the advice we get is from constituted authority, rather than from the individualistic sources from which so much of this kindly counsel proceeds. The author admits that he has taken liberties along the line of personal opinions; but believes he will not be opposed by other liturgists. The motive, of course, is to restore to the Church of our time what the Church of the Reformation repudiated.

We learn herein that the Sunday Eucharist (at the later service) must in time become the regular order and be called by its proper name "The Mass". The Holy Table is the "altar", and the use of eucharistic vestments may be gradually introduced by the appropriation of the white ere the obtrusion of the more elaborate cope, etc. Methods of approach to the Holy Table, what to do with one's hands then and during the service of the Holy Communion, proper preparations for the same and the disposition of vessels, various coverings pertaining thereto, lights and ablutions are all brought into proper perspective.

There are two points on which we might express curiosity. Why should the (so-called) priest's wafer be broken while that to the people be delivered whole? Did not our Lord break each piece? Then, if the hands of the officiant are to be laved, why not do it ere he touches the elements at the time of placing them on the table, rather than later?

There is something of comfort in the author's protest that the title "Father" so constantly arrogated by parish priests, should be confined as formerly, to members of monastic orders. And his reference to the turning to "the east" in every gloria as a "fussy, pointless little bit of ceremony," quite accords with the opinion of many of us. And we stand with him in the contention that to have the Gloria in Excelsis at the close of the service, following the concluding prayer, sometimes sung to an elaborate setting, is a trial to the people who have already spent themselves, physically and mentally. It should be said, if at all; or as some future revision will advise, be placed where it may be more appreciatingly located. And we commend his ideal that the Epistle and Gospel should be read by the minister facing the people. As to the frequent "making the sign of the cross", just where and when, there will always be difference of opinion. Most of us do not know how to make it any way. And those who do must find some uniformity.

Mr. Griswold deals with the other offices and imparts much useful information. The book is a comprehensive manual; and a commendable analysis of the Collects for use in different prayer needs is a fine appendix.

Kenneth Mackenzie.

TYLER AND LINCOLN: Published by Meister and Smethie, Richmond, Va. Price, $1.00.

Answering the challenge of "Time," a New York magazine which compared President Tyler and Abraham Lincoln, somewhat to Tyler's discredit, Tyler's son, Mr. Lyon G. Tyler, has published a Book, "John Tyler and Abraham Lincoln", which is an important contribution to history. Mr. Tyler, the most eminent historian in the South, condenses his facts and makes no statement without giving indisputable authority. He shows Mr. Lincoln as immeasurably inferior to the Virginia President who in 1842 averted war by diplomacy, who settled the Canadian boundary dispute, who vetoed at the cost of his popularity two measures which might have almost ruined the country, and who chose great men for his cabinet, each of whom held him in the highest esteem. President Tyler is shown to have been one of our best Presidents, who ran the government at one-fourth less cost than his predecessor, with high efficiency and lasting results.

But Mr. Lyon G. Tyler finds no great good in Mr. Lincoln, and he uses, to establish his opinions, mainly the written words of Lincoln's friends. He shows him by his cabinet members' and his friends' words as the one man who, elected by a decided minority of the people and never having the people's confidence, was almost solely responsible for the Civil War, as entirely responsible for the uncivilized banning of medicines from the South, as the person who refused the pitiful plea of his own soldiers for exchange from Southern prisons when Mr. Davis and General Lee were begging for such exchange, and as one who trimmed his sail to every wind.

Mr. Tyler's estimate of the two men may be epitomized by two quotations which he used in his book. One is from Charles Dickens, who met President Tyler in America and said of him:

> "He is mild and pleasant in appearance. His remarkable unaffected, gentlemanly and agreeable manner . . . his whole character and demeanor . . . becomes his station singularly well."

The other quotation is the written opinion of Colonel Theodore Lyman, of Massachusetts, a Union officer and a member of the staff of General Meade, said about Lincoln:

> "There was an expression of plebian vulgarity on his face. You recognized the recountier of vulgar stories."

And yet, Mr. Tyler's picture of Lincoln is very mild compared with the vision which former Senator Alfred J. Beveridge, of Indiana, author of the Life of John Marshall, caught of him in his unfinished Life of Lincoln. Beveridge sees him as "a machine politician, more ambitious than conscientious, an asiduous writer of anonymous letters."

According to Major Rupert Hughes, Beveridge says that "Lincoln's own family would not vote for him, he was slipshod and slovenly to such an appalling degree that some of his debts are still unpaid, and there was so much dirt in one corner of his law office that weeds grew up in it. He had a passion for smutty stories and his reason for putting off his wedding was the intensely unromantic, however dramatic discovery that he was in need of medical treatment, and his later melancholia was due to this mishap. Beveridge presents Mr. Lincoln as a half mad savage and a miser."

It is not the purpose of this editorial to traduce Mr. Lincoln and what is said here is by way of quotation only. But such men as Mr. Tyler, and Senator Beveridge and Major Hughes are entitled to a hearing. There is a mass of literature by Lincoln's own friends, his cabinet members, and others who show that he was never the deified, glorified, marvellous being he has been made out to be. He selected poor men for his cabinet and he picked the worst of generals of his armies, satisfied best with the terrorists, Sherman and Sheridan, and the cruel and somewhat uncouth Grant.

Mr. Lincoln has been raised almost to godlike proportions by admiring biographers. These have been heard. It is good now that men like Beveridge and Tyler are to be heard. The thing which is wanted for history is the truth, the real picture of Lincoln as he actually was, bad or good. History is beginning to demand verity instead of mere laudation for great men.

John T. Goolrick, Jr.

Church Intelligence

Archbishop of York Opposes Amusements to Get Worshippers Into the Churches.

Declaring, "Religion could do itself no greater injury than to compete with popular amusements and to endeavor to attract worshippers by entertaining them," the Most Rev. Dr. Temple, Archbishop of York, speaking at the York Diocesan Conference recently, continued:

"The primary necessity of religious practice is some degree of concentration of mind.

"If we try to tickle the minds of people who come to church as they would be tickled at the Cinema, only with a different feather," he added, "church going will lose its religious value. It is far better to have small congregations and true worship than large congregations that are being religiously entertained."

The archbishop was loudly cheered.

Dr. Temple, formerly Bishop of Manchester, was elected Archbishop of York on December 10, 1928. He has continuously opposed the employment of what he termed "stunts". In a speech in 1925, referring to the methods of publicity sometimes employed here, he said:

"In the United States one could see advertisements inviting people to go inside churches and hear church music by masser choirs. Personally, I would run away from such an allurement. Religion is not going to be worked by stunts."

Doctor Elliott Returns to America to Aid Campaign Work.

On March 2, Dr. Mabel E. Elliott, one of the two American doctors at St. Luke's International Hospital, arrived in this country from Japan to aid the work in raising the fund to rebuild the Hospital.

Dr. Elliott is touring the country filling various speaking engagements. She has been in Japan since 1925.

It would be difficult to find a woman who has had a life more crowded with rich experience than Dr. Elliott. She has devoted the better part of her life to humanitarian work in various parts of the world. It would not be an exaggeration to say that no woman has a record in the field of medicine which is superior to hers.

For four years Dr. Elliott was perhaps the most notable woman connected with the American Woman's Hospitals in the Near East. "She has had," quoting Grace N. Kimball, President of the Medical Woman's National Association, "four very distinct experiences, with a crescendo of tragedy, in their continuity. First, Marash, in Central Anatolia, her hospital and general medical relief work for the population when the French troops were in occupation; the long siege by Turkish troops, with fear, hunger and disease to combat; and the final evacuation in midwinter when she went out with army and populace."

During the evacuation Dr. Elliott suffered from the severe hardships which caused men to drop from exhaustion. For three days it was necessary for the group to march through deep snow without food.

Her next hospital work came at Ismid, south of Constantinople. It took some time to get this base established and functioning properly. At last a hospital, a general medical relief station and a nurses' training school were in operation when war broke out again. The Greek occupation yielded to the Turks. Under heavy artillery fire, Dr. Elliott continued her work, at the same time sending her Christian nurses to the rear. Soon she was serving the Moslems. With this piece of work finished, Dr. Elliott was transferred to the Trans-Caucasus, where she had the terrific task of organizing and directing hospitals for Armenian refugee children. There were thousands of homeless children for her to oversee, most of whom were suffering from disease of one sort or another. Dr. Elliott rose to the occasion and did an exceptional piece of work which involved executive as well as scientific ability.

After this task was completed, Dr. Elliott was enjoying a long needed rest when the tragedy of Smyrna horrified the world. A few weeks saw her back in uniform again doing her work of mercy.

Dr. Elliott's work in Japan with Dr. Teusler needs no detailed delineation.

It will suffice to say that for four years she has been Dr. Teusler's only American medical associate and as such has developed intimate knowledge of the whole problem and opportunity facing St. Luke's. The Committees in this country engaged in promoting the building fund are fortunate in having her made available at this time for speaking engagements.

Census.

There were seventy-four religious bodies or denominations in Tennessee in 1926, the Department of Commerce announced recently. The organizations of churches totaled 8,554. This compares with seventy-one religious bodies, 8,524 organizations or churches in 1916.

In Georgia there were sixty-six religious bodies in 1926 against fifty-six in 1916; organizations or churches numbered 10,898, with 1,350,184 members against 10,712 organizations and 234,132 members in 1916.

In South Carolina in 1916 there were forty-four groups, 5,748 organizations and a membership of 872,806, as compared with thirty-nine denominations, 5,671 organizations, and a membership of 794,126 in 1916.

American Tract Society Combats Russian Atheism.

The first meeting of the Executive Committee of the American Tract Society held after the election of two members, Dr. J. Stanley Durkee, pastor of the Plymouth Congregational Church, Brooklyn, and Dr. Henry W. Tiffany, pastor of the Baptist Church of the Redeemer, Brooklyn, was held in the directors' room of the Irving Trust Company, Tuesday afternoon, May 7.

At this meeting the acceptances of President Hoover and Bishop James E. Freeman of the Episcopal Cathedral, Washington, D. C., as Honorary Vice-Presidents was reported.

According to the "New York Times" the Society is planning an aggressive war on Atheism. The "New York Times" says that the Society announces that it expects to disseminate "nearly five million tracts in 1929 to reach a year's total greater than printed by the Society in any of the past fifty years."

According to the annual report of Dr. William H. Matthews, General Secretary of the Society, the Atheistic Associations are "working hand in hand with those who handle the vast amounts of Russian propaganda which is sent to our shores, in which God and Christ are ridiculed and cartooned in blaspehmous fashion."

"The Tract Society asks for money with which to publish "Pilgrim's Progress" and similar books in foreign languages. William Phillips Hall is President."

School of Three Denominations.

Methodists, Episcopalians and Presbyterians of Bethesda, Md., have united in establishing a school for instruction during vacation of the children of the community from five to twelve years old. Mrs. A. L. Schafer, Mrs. A. B. Foster and Mrs. A. F. Israel are the instructors and Orman Munger will supervise manual work.

Clergymen Needed.

A serious and constant handicap in the work of the whole Philippine Mission is the lack of priests. There are barely enough to go round at best, and with furloughs necessary, the work suffers. A prayer that more priests may be scured is constantly used throughout the district.

Dr. E. Stanley Jones Warns Church Members.

Sailing recently on the first lap of his return journey to India, Dr. E. Stanley Jones, noted missionary whose book, "Christ of the Indian Road", sold into the hundreds of thousands, warned American Church members that they are living in a "motion picture age where the emotions are aroused but the will unmoved".

In a farewell message to the American people, which Dr. Jones asked the Christian Herald to make public, the missionary who has visited every section of the United States during the past few months, declared that "The religious life of America is being infected with a sentimentality that feels, but will not act. Soul hardening may—is setting in."

Dr. Jones' statement follows: "As I leave America after a year's sojourn here I am asked by my friends to give some brief message to the American people and to leave some word about impressions of the religious life of America.

"The first is not easy to give. I once asked Ghandi to give me a message to the western world about living the Christ-life. He pondered a moment and said: "Such a message cannot be given by word of lips; it must be lived out. I can only try to live it out." In giving a message to America I think I can do no better than adopt Ghandi's message as my own. Along the roads of India I shall try to live out the message I should like to give to America.

"As to impressions of the religious life I find myself caught between contradictory impressions: one of the beauty of the fellowship, the unutterable generosity of the American people toward me and the winsome yearning of the great crowds after something—Someone. The other is that along with this is an increasing facility and ease with which we turn life and situations toward ourselves. The world's pain and need get us for a moment and then the old life reasserts itself and we sink into its sway. We can spend on ourselves in a way that is appalling. One faithful church member remarked that he felt that he was fortunate if his personal expenses did not go over two hundred thousand a year. Two hundred thousand on one's self in a world of this kind with its hunger and sin and need!

"We are willing to take any amount of Christian truth, provided it leaves the essential self alone. And all the time a cross stands at the center of our gospel.

"We get rid of that cross by putting it on our sky lines and on our watch chains—anywhere except face to face with that essential self.

"I find three great classes of people: the selfish, the sentimental and the sacrificial. Very often we move into the second to cover an underlying selfishness. Because we can feel over things we take it for granted that it is necessarily operative in our lives. We live in a motion picture age where we are supposed to look at the most moving dramas and perhaps weep over them and go off and do nothing about it. The emotions are stirred, but the will is unmoved. If one subjects himself to that from childhood to middle age he finds himself capable of looking at the most tragic things, but turning away with a remark that it is interesting. The religious life of America is liable to be, yes, more than liable to be, it is being infected with a sentimentality that feels, but will not act. Soul-hardening may—is—setting in.

"If these vast material resources which have fallen into our hands can have back of them a Christian passion they can be lifted from the sordid to the sacred, but if Christianity (the only thing that I see holding back this vast upheaving selfishness) grows weak and partakes of Main Street mentality and outlook then we are doomed and the monument that Carlyle suggested might be put up to his age might be reared to ours with this inscription upon it, 'Soul dead, stomach well—alive.'

"But I must not leave the impression that this is the only alternative. I have seen too much of real Christianity, of taking the way of Christ seriously, of launching out upon His mind on the part of so many that I believe that the future may be different as we get over this first flush of material advance and turn it no longer to merely personal gratification, but to world redemption. In that lies the only hope of the world and of ourselves. For it is still true of individuals and social groups and nations that he hath saveth his life in selfishness shall lose it, but he that loseth it shall find it."

Information For Americans Visiting Paris.

In Paris there are sixty thousand Russian refugees, among whom there has developed an intellectual and spiritual movement which has become a vital force for the Orthodox Church. There are three places of particular interest which you are invited to visit when in Paris:

The Russian Cathedral (Rue Daru) with its excellent choir. Services: Saturday evening, 6:00-7:15. Sunday morning, 10:30-12:15.

The Russian Theological Academy (93 Rue de Crimee) with its quaint church, decorated in Russian XVI Century style. A splendid student choir. The only seminary of its kind in existence today—established four years ago. Church services are at the same hours as at the Cathedral.

The Russian Student Christian Movement (10 Boulevard Montparnasse). A purely Russian center of Christian activities. A Church School of ninety-six children meets on Thursdays and Sundays; boys' and girls' clubs, young people's society, student groups and gatherings. It is a vital youth movement.

Mr. Edgar MacNaughton, 10 Boulevard (telephone Segur 31-68), will be glad to put visitors in touch with these centers.

Churchmen's Pilgrimage Jamestown-Williamsburg to Become National Affair.

This year's Pilgrimage, which took place June 15-16, was a splendid success, being most impressive and inspirational, as well as delightful in all other respects, due to the gracious hospitality of our hosts, Dr. D. A. R. Goodwin, of Bruton Parish Church, and Dr. J. A. C. Chandler, President of William and Mary College, where we were afforded elegant meals, served in the college dining-hall and lodging in the Phi Betta Kappa and Monroe Halls on the campus.

The program was carried out in all details, according to schedule, there having been between one and two hundred men and boys present, representing Richmond, Norfolk, Charlottesville and other points in Virginia and seventeen from Washington, D. C.

This affair having been originated eight years ago by a small group of Norfolk Churchmen, under the auspices of Brotherhood of St. Andrew, was extended four years ago, to include Richmond. The next year it was made statewide, and last year Washington, D. C., and Baltimore, Md., were included. At this year's pilgrimage it was decided to make it national, so far as practicable, and Mr. H. Lawrence Choate, President of the National Brotherhood of St. Andrew, of Washington, D. C., was made President of the Jamestown-Williamsburg Pilgrimage. It is expected and hoped upon the occasion of next year's pilgrimage. June, 1930, the visiting minister, who will conduct the devotional services in conjunction with Dr. W. A. R. Goodwin, services will be W. A. R. Goodwin will be the Rt. Rev. Bshop J. G. Murray, Presiding Bishop of the Episcopal Church in the United States.

VIRGINIA.

Rt. Rev. H. St. George Tucker, Bishop.

Gibson Memorial Chapel.

The need for a Chapel at the Blue Ridge Industrial School, is imperative. There is no church near enough to the School for the pupils to attend, and the auditorium in which services are now held is not an appropriate place for a reverent service. A place set apart exclusively for the worship of God, is essential in the life of the students and workers.

The plan of the Chapel has been drawn by Mr. Ralph Cram, of Boston, and presented to the school. It will be built of native stone, with seating capacity of about 325, and choir space for 35. It will provide for the growing needs of the school for many years to come. The cost will probably be $20,000.00. As most of the building materials will be supplied from the school farm, and construction done by day labor, much of it by the pupils and employees of the school, the cost will be kept down to the lowest figure possible. Five thousand five hundred dollars ($5,500.00) is now in hand, and construction will begin this summer. As the work proceeds we hope the balance of the money will be contributed, so that the Chapel can be completed as rapidly as possible.

The Chapel will be a memorial to the Rt. Rev. Robt. A. Gibson, Bishop of Virginia, from 1897 to 1919. He was deeply interested in the mountain work, and gave it every help and encouragement possible. He made regular visitations to the field, staying as long as a week at a time, and frequently walking to some little-out-of-the-way mission to preach and administer confirmation. He took keen interest in the establishment of B. R. I. S., and was a staunch friend and supporter to the day of his death.

Such a memorial would be a fitting tribute to his life and work.

It is hoped that the following furnishings will be given as memorials:

Altar, pulpit, two prayer desks and stalls, Bishop's stall, organ, credence table, altar cross, altar book and rest, Communion service, lectern and Bible, window over altar.

A Memorial Pew will cost $250.

Contributions or requests for further information should be sent to Rev. Geo. P. Mayo, Bris, Greene Co., Va.

Blue Ridge Industrial School is located in Bacon Hollow, Greene County, Va., near the entrance to Powell's Gap, on the Eastern Slope of Blue Ridge Mountains, about 25 miles northwest of Charlottesville.

Opened January 1910, with twelve boarding and twenty day pupils, four employees, and one building, Neve Hall. Today (1929) there are 125 boarding and thirty day pupils, nineteen employees, 600 acres of land, nineteen buildings. Value of property $110,000, and no debts.

The course of instruction: Primary through High School is accredited under Virginia State Board of Education.

Admission is restricted to country children of limited means, preferably from isolated mountainous sections.

1928, aged 60.

Rev. Addison Atkins Lamb, Class of 1898; died September 16, 1928, aged 46.

Rev. Mercer Patton Logan, D. D., Class of 1880; died December 1, 1928, aged 72.

Rev. John Thomas Foster, Class of 1889; Died January 5, 1929, aged 64.

Rev. John Alexander O'Meara, Class of 1894; Died February 7, 1929, aged 60.

Kensey John Hammon,
Wm. J. Morton,
Committee.

Necrological Report of the Theological Seminary of Virginia.

From March 1928 to June 1929.

Rt. Rev. George Herbert Kinsolving, D. D., Class of 1894, died October 23, 1928, aged 79.

Rt. Rev. John Dominique LaMothe, D. D., Class of 1894; died October 25, St. Mark's Parish, Culpeper.

The Parochial Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary of St. Mark's Parish, Culper, invited the members of neighboring branches, and a group meeting was held in Peterkin Memorial Hall on Monday, June 10. Ridley, Slaughter and Bromfield Parishes were represented, members coming from Rapidan, Mitchells, Brandy, Madison, Woodville, and All Saints.

After a brief service of missionary prayers and hymns, Miss Nancy Tackett, Auxiliary Secretary of the Piedmont Convocation, spoke on the plan for rebuilding St. Luke's (Tokyo) Hospital, and its wonderful work in the past. She also asked the wider use of the "Blue Boxes", and told the benefit of their use. The Summer Schools were described, and attendance on them urged —specially the nearest one in Tappahannock, Va.

Miss Louisa Davis then addressed the group of members on "How Can the Woman's Auxiliary best help the Parish and the Church?" She emphasized the spiritual development of the branches and members through the use of Holy Scripture and prayer; and the value of information about missions through reading the Spirit of Missions, Church at Work, and books like "The Desire of All Nations," and "Christ in the Common Ways of Life." Practical suggestions were interwoven in her talk.

Ere the meeting adjourned, a social half hour was enjoyed with sandwiches and tea. St. Stephen's Church and the Hall were inspected with their various improvements. Members of the Junior Auxiliary were also present and assisted in serving the refreshments.

Summer services in the Colonial Church of Little Fork, Oak Shade, began June 16, and the annual service day will be the Fifth Sunday after Trinity. The Rev. Charles Bratton DuBell, rector of St. Simeon's Church, Philadelphia, will preach.

K. J. H.

SOUTHERN VIRGINIA.

Rt. Rev. B. D. Tucker, D. D., Bishop.
Rt. Rev. A. C Thomson, D. D., Coadjutor.

The use of the county paper for preaching has been adopted by the Rev. W. G. Christian, of South Hill, Virginia. Though his church is one of the smallest in the county, he gets the largest "hearing". He writes a weekly "Cleric's Column". He also has a Men's Bible Class which meets in the hotel, made up largely of men who have not heretofore been active in Church affairs. This is his first year out of the Seminary.

Port of Norfolk.

Single-handed, with no help in office work or otherwise, the Rev. W. E. Callender carries on his work as chaplain at the port of Norfolk, Va. He is chaplain of the U. S. Marine Hospital and the Norfolk Municipal Hospital, as well as chaplain of the port. An average of seventy men a month are now cared for in the Marine Hospital. The total since 1921 is about 18,650 ex-service men.

Mr. Callender writes: "One of the most important needs of the hospital is a good library. The chaplain has over 800 books. That, however, is not half enough, and he would appreciate any donations of books, science, fiction, turbine and electrical engineering, etc., also books in Spanish, Portuguese, French, German, or practically any language, as we have all nationalities in the hospital."

WASHINGTON.

Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman, D. D., Bishop.

Dr. Augustus T. Murray, Special Preacher at the Cathedral.

Dr. Augustus T. Murray, pastor of the Irving Street Friends Meeting, where President and Mrs. Hoover worship, was the special preacher at the people's evensong service at Washington Cathedral on Sunday, June 9. Dr. Murray and Dr. Wm. L. Devries, Canon and Chancellor of Washington Cathedral, knew each other as fellow students at Johns Hopkins University. Bishop Freeman, who usually preaches at the Sunday afternoon Cathedral services, was away from the city, having accepted an invitation to preach the baccalaureate sermon to the graduating class of the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, N. C.

Potomac Assembly, Brotherhood of St. Andrew.

The first meeting of the Potomac Assembly of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew was held on the evening of June 6 in the Church of St. Stephen and the Incarnation. Mr. J. Harris Franklin, President of the Potomac Assembly, presided and seventy-five young men and boys were present, representing several chapters of the Brotherhood in the Diocese of Washington and the neighboring dioceses of Virginia and Maryland.

Mr. H. Lawrence Choate, National President of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, was the principal speaker of the occasion. He suggested among other lines of activity for personal work in summer the holding of services in camps, vacation resorts, sunset and open air services, to supplement the usual Sunday morning service, and cooperation with lay readers in supplying services when the rectors are on vacation.

Colonel John H. Finney, of St. Paul's Parish and Curator of Washington Cathedral, told of plans for the annual pilgrimage to Jamestown on June 16, to commemorate the first celebration of the Holy Communion, in what is now the United States. Rev. George Fiske Dudley, D. D., conducted a devotional service and delivered an address on the twofold vows of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew.

Announcement was made of several new chapters in process of organization. This is in line with the objectives of the Potomac Assembly, which has set for its special work, extension. Mr. Franklin, the president, is a member of St. Thomas' Church.

Epiphany Church Undergoing Repairs

Extensive repairs and redecorating have been started in Epiphany Church and all services through the summer will be held in the parish hall, which has been fitted up as a chapel.

The rector, Dr. Z. B. Phillips, who, with his family is abroad for an extended vacation, is reported to be much improved from the illness which he suffered earlier in the spring.

M. M. W.

MARYLAND.

Rt. Rev. J. G. Murray, D. D., Bishop
Rt. Rev. E. T. Helfenstein, D. D., Coadjutor

Commencement Exercises of St. Paul's School for Boys, Mt. Washington, Md., were held at the school on June 11. There were five graduates and the Rev. Dr. Romilly F. Humphries, Archdeacon of Baltimore, delivered the commencement address.

St. Paul's School is under St. Paul's Parish, Baltimore, the Rev. Dr. Arthur B. Kinsolving, rector.

St. James' School, Washington County, Maryland's Diocesan School for Boys, held their commencement exercises on Wednesday, June 12. Bishops Murry and Helfenstein attended and presented the diplomas and awards. There were fifteen graduates. Mr. Adrian H. Onderdonk is Headmaster and has been at the school for twenty-five years.

The Bishop and Mrs. Helfenstein had as their guests on Monday, June 10, the Maryland Clericus.

They had their business meeting at twelve o'clock, after which luncheon was served on the porch.

Immediately after luncheon, the Rev. Samuel M. Shoemaker, rector of Calvary Church, New York, addressed the Clericus, telling them of his work in Personal Evangelism in Calvary Church.

On Wednesday, June 5, the Convocation of Annapolis, Md., met in Grace Church, Elkridge, the Rev. C. C. Durkee, rector. The Rev. Charles E. McAllister, rector of St. Michael and All Angels' Church, Baltimore, preached the sermon at the opening service.

N. E. P.

NEW YORK.

Rt. Rev. William T. Manning, D. D.,
Rt. Rev. A. S. Lloyd, D. D., Suffragan.
Rt. Rev. Herbert Shipman, Suffragan.

School of Art, Greenwich Village.

If you know your Greenwich Village, as so many people do who are not New Yorkers, you will probably be able to find "No. 16, Jones Street", without going more than two blocks out of your way. When the elusive little street is found, No. 16 is conspicuous as its best-looking building. It was completed last year, to contain the workshops developed and maintained by Greenwich House, and is more interesting to visit than many tourist centers.

Here, under the old apprentice system, boys with artistic talents come to study modeling, wood carving, drawing and allied crafts. Iron work is to be added and pottery is made in Greenwich House. The public schools offer nothing equivalent to this. School boys eight or ten years old, come in after school, to learn the rudiments, and when they have progressed sufficiently are allowed to work on orders. Older boys come in for all day. Some of the names enrolled "ring like a chime of bells," as Dr. Cram said long ago in another connection—Vincent Ferrarra, Patsy Galata, Ettore Salvatore, Raymond Tesi, Salvatore Tocci, Alex Merli.

Tables and benches, candlesticks, mirror frames, statutes, glazed jars, and wood carvings stand about the rooms. One of the orders completed this spring was a simple but beautiful carved oak door for a church in Missouri. All the things, being hand-wrought, have that touch of life about them which machines just miss. The director of the workshop is the well known sculptor, Victor Salvatore.

Mrs. Simkhovitch was the founder of Greenwich House and has been its head since 1902. She is a member of the New York Diocesan Social Service Commission, and of the National Social Service Department.

ALABAMA.

Rt. Rev. W. G. McDowell, D. D., Bishop.

Glen Addie Mission.

A little mission started a year and a half ago at Anniston, Alabama, by the Rev. James M. Stoney, rector of Grace Church, and some workers, is located in the industrial district known as Glen Addie. There is no chapel at all; just an old rickety tenement house which has been loaned. This mission was started to take care of the "overflow" from another mission which Mr. Stoney has, just outside the city limits, known as the Chapel of the Resurrection. A bus takes the children out there, but could not take all who wanted to go, so the second place was opened, in an old three-room house with a few benches, an organ, a lectern and an altar and Bible. Sometimes there are sixty-five in this place on Sunday afternoons. The children bring wood ferns and wild flowers for the altar.

Miss Harriet P. Tabb, Superintendent at the Mission, writes: "At first many thought we were surely Roman Catholics as they associated a cross with the Roman Church only. Many are attracted by the Holy Rollers and other sects, but usually come back to us after a time. Some still cling to the idea that immersion is the only mode of real baptism. Many first thought Good Friday was 'the best day to plant beans'. With all our handicaps we have accomplished something for the Master. We have five confirmed members, and have baptized eighteen."

BETHLEHEM.

Rt. Rev. F. W. Sterrett, D. D., Bishop.

A new rectory was bought for St. Paul's Mission, Troy, and the old one which was far out of the way and uncomfortable sold. St. George's, Nanticoke, also bought a house for which they paid $12,000 for a rectory. It is practically paid for already.

St. Luke's, Reading, though a mission itself is sponsoring another mission—one to the colored folks in the neighborhood. It is prospering. Eight persons were confirmed lately.

H. P. W.

LONG ISLAND.

Rt. Rev. E. M. Stires, D. D., Bishop.

Anniversary Day.

Yesterday was Brooklyn's "Anniversary Day". It received more than usual attention, because it was the one hundredth anniversary of the Brooklyn Sunday School Union. The time-honored and peculiarly Brooklyn custom of a parade of Sunday-school members was the feature of the day, as always. Many of our schools participated, some did not. St. Ann's School, which was one of the four constituent members of the Union in 1829—with the Sands Street Methodist, the First Reformed and the First Presbyterian—paraded with a beautiful new banner, lately presented by Mrs. Caroline L. Ford in memory of her daughter, Edith Victoria Ford, indicating in the dates "1828-1928" the centenary of their own school. Newspaper reports say that 100,000 children, representing 319 congregations, paraded in twenty-six territorial divisions.

Membership Without Obligation.

At a dinner of the Men's Club of the Church of the Epiphany, Brooklyn, the rector, the Rev. Lauriston Castleman, is reported by the Brooklyn Daily Eagle to have said: "If the public had to put up with the same kind of education in the public schools that their children get in our so-called Sunday Schools they wouldn't stand for it for a minute." "How much do you learn in a Sunday school? Very little. I'll wager that I could give you an examination of elemental questions on religion that very few of you could pass. I am not at all satisfied with the kind of religious education that we are giving. What we need, in our church, is a parish house with regular classrooms and regular teachers trained to teach religion."

Bishop Larned, at the same dinner,

(Continued on page 23.)

Family Department

JUNE.

1. Saturday.
9. Second Sunday after Trinity.
11. Tuesday. S. Barnabas.
16. Third Sunday after Trinity.
23. Fourth Sunday after Trinity.
24. Monday. Nativity of S. John Baptist.
29. Saturday. S. Peter.
30. Fifth Sunday after Trinity.

COLLECT FOR FOURTH SUNDAY AFTER TRINITY.

O God, the Protector of all that trust in Thee, without Whom nothing is strong, nothing is holy; Increase and multiply upon us Thy mercy; that, Thou being Our Ruler and Guide, we may so pass through things temporal, that we finally lose not the things eternal. Grant this, O Heavenly Father, for Jesus Christ's sake, Our Lord. Amen.

COLLECT FOR ST. JOHN BAPTIST'S DAY.

Almighty God, by Whose providence Thy servant, John Baptist, was wonderfully born, and sent to prepare the way of Thy Son, Our Saviour, by preaching repentance; make us so to follow his doctrine and holy life that we may truly repent according to his preaching; and after his example constantly speak the truth, boldly rebuke vice, and patiently suffer for the truths' sake; through Jesus Christ Our Lord. Amen.

COLLECT FOR ST. PETER'S DAY.

O Almighty God, Who by Thy Son Jesus Christ, didst give to Thy Apostle St. Peter many excellent gifts, and commandest him earnestly to feed Thy flock; make, we beseech Thee, all bishops and pastors diligently to preach Thy holy word and the people obediently to follow the same, that they may receive the crown of evelasting glory; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

For The Southern Churchman.

EVENING DREAMING.

Kate Randle Menefee.

Out of the evening's dream
A ship sailed in to me;
With white sails softly gleam
It crossed the twilight sea.

Into a harbor under
The stars it found a shore;
I watched it mute with wonder:
A cross and crown it bore.

I turned the ship was passing,
But on the moonlit quay,
The Captain's name was flashing—
"The Man of Galilee."

I need not question whether
The cross was mine—the crown?
We'll talk of that together
Some night when winds lie down.

"I TAKE ON ME THE ADVENTURES OF HOLY THINGS.

A Memory of Woodbine Willie.

Sunday in London—an evening in early summer—down in the deserted silent streets of the city—that little church with its ugly Georgian design, which was the goal of my pilgrimage—crowded a full half hour before the time announced for evensong—an expectant, reverent congregation, waiting—a figure kneeling before the Holy Table, wrapped in prayer, lost in contemplation. It was Studdert Kennedy talking with God before the time of speaking to men; it was his church, St. Edmund's, Lombard Street, and it was full of flowers, for it was Whitsunday: "My Beloved Is Among the Lillies." Then the little choir broke forth from the little vestry and poured into the little chancel, singing the Psalm of approach, "I Was Glad When They Said Unto Me," and the service began with the voice of joy. An ugly, unimpressive little church, possessing very little of the quality that gives atmosphere, yet full of atmosphere from this one personality and from the incense of prayer and praise.

Then, prayers over, in the deepening twilight he spoke, very quietly, with utter conviction—of the artificial light which makes us incapable of realizing darkness; of the physical darkness in wartime that could be felt; of the sense of being lost in the dark; lost in the darkness of doubt. The darkness that covers the mind comes from the heart, so the collect bids us pray to Him who teacheth the hearts, for the mind without the heart may make them clever, but cannot make them wise; it is through the Spirit speaking in the heart that we learn to know the Beautiful Person who is behind everything; in the secret places of the heart the Spirit makes us one with Christ and He delivers us from fear.

And now he has left, this priest who was also prophet, preacher and poet; he has left those he tried to teach and longed to help; left those who heard him gladly and tried to follow. He who longed so intensely to solve life's mysteries and to see God, has gone into the fuller light and the more abundant life; heart-broken perhaps by the sorrows of life and by this terrible winter of poverty and unemployment. He had spent life looking into the face of pain and wrestling with its problems—pain in the crowded districts of cities and in their mean streets; pain in the battlefields and hospitals; pain in the unemployed areas; pain in the tortured hearts of men and women struggling in the toils of their personal tragedies.

Every one knows Studdert Kennedy; the beloved padre; Woodbine Willie as he was lovingly called by the soldiers he served; leader of the Industrial Christian Fellowship; prophet of the divine law of justice and order in a disordered world. He has poured out his heart for us to read and with all his pain and passion, how wise and unconventional he is; how candid and vigorous, how humorous and tender. Hurled into the war the "interesting facts" of history came to life there; roared, and dripped with blood; mocked, blasphemed and cried for mercy. He learned that every one asks the chaplain, in a thousand different ways, the one question, "What is God like?" and the chaplain's success or failure depends on his answer to that momentous question. What could a man make of it all? the calm loveliness of silver dawn, the grey mists, the first flush of sunrise, the leaping flame, the maddening din, torture, murder . . . mothers, children . . . God the Father. There is the problem which in the artificial light of modern civilization, we can hardly see. He tries to think it out—Nature herself drives a man to believe in something, in some one, for the world is a vast starlit temple where every bush and flower flames with God and the strange world-story is of a ceaseless war, with perfection of personality as its end in view. It is all the fruit not only of God's power but of God's pain, and triumphing in Nature's glory, God calls us to join Him in the tasks of conquering the evils which arise from the necessities of creation. History emphasizes this lesson that everything good springs not only from the power but from the pain of God; that God in Christ did not will strife, but suffered agony and death because of it and pleads with men to conquer evil and live in peace. The Bible proclaims the same truth, for it is not merely the history of God's self-revelation to man, but the history of the making of man capable of receiving that revelation—everywhere the same patient, persistent, suffering spirit of love and beauty at war with awful incomprehensible necessities and slowly conquering them. So it is always the Cross in the end; always Christ upon the Cross that comforts; the Cross is the real throne.

Or the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper; why don't men come to it? Why do those who come seem to be the ones who need it least? Is it because we don't connect It with life? The man in the street knows that the Sacrament is made for man, yet does not see that It perpetually presents the Cross, not past, but present, and is the means of making Christ's Presence real to ourselves. It is the means by which we become filled with the spirit of suffering and creative love, so the Bread is the ration of a fighting army against wrong; the Wine the stirrup cup of a band of knights who ride out on an endless war against evil. See how the pulpit stands aside with a splendid gesture of humility and points to the Holy Table; how the Bread there broken represents in itself all our daily bread and the means by which men earn it; so all arts and crafts, all work, is there offered to God that He may take it and make it the means of expressing His own infinite love for men.

Then Peter—St. Peter—Private Peter—the average man whom Christ called the rock, because the foundation of the Church is laid in the heart of the average man; type of Peter the private soldier who died for the cause of Christ without knowing it; who died for Christ yet never recognized Him, because the interpretation of Him had been so distorted that it obscured His Glorious rebellion against evil and His fierce lifelong war which culminated in the Cross. How he pours out his heart as he fashions a rough wooden cross to set over the grave of Private Peter, and prays for a fuller measure of Christ's eternal spirit of strong love, that for the sake of all the other Peters the Church may sanctify herself afresh and lift Christ up so that they can see and recognize Him as Captain of their salvation. Or think with him of the lies with which we deceive ourselves and each other, and their counter truths. The old see visions; the young dream dreams; the people in the years between face facts; and thus was able to face facts—very hideous ones—because he not only faced facts but saw visions and knew that God's golden age was yet to come. In the novel, "I Pronounce Them", he speaks, "as a fool trying to help his fellow fools". Every problem in personal relationships, especially in the searching intimacies of marriage, ceases to be a mere case and embodies itself in a man and a woman. There is the fine hard game of Christian marriage, with its strict rules and grand relentless loyalties; there is the soft old game of human love, in which everything is counted fair as it is in war. This book is a passionate statement in terms of courage and love and pity; he cannot solve the problem, but he makes us see the man and the woman going their separate ways, up the hard road of the Cross, and "there is the figure of Jesus of Nazareth standing, but His back is turned, and I cannot see His face."

Few men have so shared and felt and understood war, and he knows it is not the working of God's will, but His crucifixion. "The goodness and badness, the courage and futility of men, seen there in vivid colors, remind us that the energies which the war released are still ready to serve God—or the devil." We have just been through another hell, he writes in 1919, and here we are again dreaming dreams; seeing visions—a new world, a lasting peace. But only one power can make peace—the power of God at work in the hearts and minds of the great mass of the human race. We must love God with a living, reckless love of heart and mind and soul. This is the only Way of Peace. There is no other.

And at last he sees conflict as the essence of life, but it is creative conflict. This is the key to the problem of all personal and group relationships. When one person or group endeavors to dominate or destroy another and to find peace by conquest, the conflict is destructive. But when neither desires to dominate destroy the other, but both are eager give and take, the conflict becomes a vital vivifying tension which gives savor and worth and meaning to life . . and out of it there arises a growing but never finally completed unity.

This man tasted the agony of the world and knew the power of God. He served the Church with all the impatience of a parson, yet he realized that Christ uses her and speaks through her in spite of her short-comings. "Christ is too great for our small hearts," but Christ can enlarge our small hearts to receive His Word and take His yoke upon us and dedicate ourselves wholeheartedly to His work and His cause; but the grace for this is found only in prayer. Why don't men pray? Prayer is the only real weapon, the only sure refuge. . . . . Like the knights of the Round Table, he took upon him the adventures of holy things; life to him was the worship The Holy, the service of the One who is love; having poured out himself in sacrifice that he might help men and women to see God in the face of Jesus Christ, he has gone to that perfect Love, and as was said of another eager heart, "Who can measure the influence of that burning, tender, deep-seeing and indignant spirit?"—Jesmond Dene, in Canadian Churchman.

Education Has Its Place.

A well dressed young man stopped at a humble dwelling in the Kentucky hills. "Good morning," he said to the native who answered his knock. "Would you be so kind as to tell me the way to Millersburg?"

"Sartainly, sah, with pleasure. "Do you see that bunch of sugar trees in the hill yander?"

"Yes," replied the young man, "but you ought not to say 'yander'. 'Yonder' is the proper word. I know because I was educated in the high schools of Augusta, Maine; and I speak words correctly."

"Wall, in that case, young man, you jist go up yander to Augusta, Maine, and ax them thar fellows in the high school to tell you the way to Millersburg."

With that the Kentuckian closed the door.—The Pathfinder.

For The Southern Churchman

DRIFTWOOD.

Anna Horner Thomas.

Drifting! Drifting! Striving to see;
Buffeted by the pounding tide,
Drifting! Drifting where?
Frail the chain that anchored me.
Hope and then resistance died,
No one seemed to care.

Drifting! Drifting! Lack of power!
Wrong environment clogged my soul,
Some may call it fate.
In temptation's ruthless hour,
Fiercest billows o'er me roll,
While I yield I hate

Drifting! Drifting! Helplessly,
Caught in life's unceasing swirl,
Wildly, fiercely tossed.
Drifting to eternity!
Desolate, forgotten by the world;
Oh, the fearful cost.

Some one your assistance needs,
Drifting, ruderless, souls strippel bare,
Efforts all so weak.
Driftwood, held by tangled weeds,
Faint and weary . . .. then despair!
Help them refuge seek.

Driftwood! Driftwood! God help me,
Safely anchor my soul to Thee!

From The Puritans.

Having once made Christ my foundation, I shall take a leaf out of the book of the Puritans of Massachusetts. I have heard that in their early days their counselors agreed "that the State of Massachusetts should be governed by God till they had time to find a better ruler". So I will rest on Christ alone till I can find a better resting place. When we find that God has laid another foundation, we will look at it. When we discover a foundation more suitable for sinners than the sinner's Saviour, we will consider it; but not till then.—Selected.

Pride.

Pride is a virtue—let not the moralist be scandalized; pride is also a vice. Pride, like ambition, is sometimes virtuous and sometimes vicious, according to the character in which it is found, and the object to which it is directed. As a principle, it is the parent of almost every virtue, and every vice—everything that pleases and displeases in mankind; and as the effects are so very different, nothing is more easy than to discover, even to ourselves, whether the pride that produces them is virtuous or vicious; for the first object of virtouous pride is rectitude and the next independence.—Greville.

In vain do we read the Bible if we do not live it. We may study its language and history and customs and memorize and master its teachings and be orthodox in our beliefs and yet be all the worse if we disobey it and thus sin against its light. "The demons also believe, and shudder." "To him therefore that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin." Increasing light only increases our guilt if we do not transmute our light into life as the tree by its subtle chemistry transmutes the golden sunlight into fruit. There is a great plenty of truth as it is printed and published and preached, but there is a lamentable shortage of truth as it is lived, the living gospel that is known of all men and passes at par value in the home and office and mill and all the relations if life.

For The Southern Churchman.

SPRING BACK AGAIN.

William Olney.

Ye buds and ye blossoms expressions of life!
With praise of your Maker, your beauty is rife.
Our eyes are made glad with the splendours of Spring.
And with new thanksgiving it makes our hearts sing.

No longer does Winter's cold tell us of death,
And the Frost-King numb Nature with his icy breath.
God has sent the warm rays to end Winter's long reign,

Thus, thus, may it be in our Church-life as well,
May all chilliness flee before Love's miracle:
May Christ's own be enthused with the Spirit's blest power,
And New Life from God all their message endower.

The world wants men who are saved from secret faults. The world can put on an outside goodness and go very far in uprightness and morality, and it expects that a Christian shall go beyond it, and be free from secret faults. A little crack will spoil the ring of the coin. The world expects, and rightly, that the Christian should be more patient, and gentle, and generous, than he who does not profess to be a disciple of the Lord Jesus. For the sake of those who take their idea of religion from our lives we need to put up this prayer earnestly, "Cleanse Thou me from secret faults."

For The Southern Churchman.

DIVINE LOVE.

May Kidder Chase.

Love, dost Thou come in a gracious loveliness?
And call my name and to me make address?
I scarce may breathe or even lift mine eyes;
But bow my head in hushed and sweet surprise!

Full pure and white this Love, serene and calm,
Falls o'er my soul like Gilead's healing balm!
I hear Thy Voice, "what wilt Thou have me to do"?
Return to Thee the Source, Thy Love renew?

O take my will and make me fine and strong!
To know One Will within life's hurried throng!
O take me Master, make me one with Thee.
There are not two, but one, Thy Unity!

It may be that if Christ is to make all things new in your life, and in my life, then many things which hinder His work in us will have to be abandoned. The narrow views of life must be broadened out; the crooked parts of our life must be straightened, and our life must be made fit for the Son of God to enter into.

For the Young Folks

The Postern Gate.

"In the castle of my soul there is a little postern gate
Where, when I enter, I am in the presence of God.
In a moment, in the turning of a thought,
I am where God is.
When I meet God there, all life gains a new meaning,
Small things become great, and great things small,
Lowly and despised things are shot through with glory,
My troubles seem but pebbles on the road,
My joys seem like the everlasting hills,
All my fever is gone in the great peace of God,
And I pass through the door from Time into Eternity."

—Walter Rauschenbush.

A Letter From Japan.

(This letter was written by Miss Margaret W. Hester to Mrs. John Ridout, Jr.'s little daughter, from her new home in Japan, where she is doing kindergarten work as a United Thank Offering Missionary.)

March 18, 1929.

Dear Little Isabel and Faith and Nancy:

Last week I went to a party at the Kindergarten. Would you like to hear about it? The boys and girls invited all the mothers to come and see their Zoo. You know a Zoo is where lots of animals live.

First of all, they sang a song about the Zoo and the animals who live there and the things they say.

Then the teachers put some screens in each corner, and the children hid behind the screens. What do you suppose they did while they were behind the screens? They fastened big paper pictures of animals around their heads to make them look like rabbits and bears and elephants, and pigeons, and mice, one was a big cat.

When they were all ready they sang a song about the elephants. Then some of the children who had elephant pictures on their heads, came walking out just like real elephants. They picked up some animal crackers which the other children threw on the floor, and did it with one hand just like the elephants do with their trunks. Wasn't that funny?

After that some bears came out, and some rabbits hopped along. Then the pigeons flew around and around the room, and the little mice came creeping, creeping, creeping along the floor until the big cat came along and scared them all away. Then they ran, ran, ran as fast as they could back into their cage. Don't you wish you could have seen them?

All the children stood up and sang, and can you guess what one song was? It was about a little kitty and a little doggie. "The little kitty says, 'Meow', the little doggie says, 'Bow-wow-wow'. If they should both together sing, wouldn't that be a funny thing? 'Meow', 'Bow-wow-wow', what a funny, funny thing. 'Meow, Bow-wow-wow', such a funny, funny thing." Maybe Mother remembers that song and will sing it for you. I think she used to know it when she was a little girl and went to Kindergarten with Aunt Monnie.

Well, these Japanese children sang the Kitty and Doggie Song in English, just as you do, and then they sang it in Japanese, which is another way of talking. When I come home, I'll teach it to you in Japanese. Won't that be fun?

Next, the mothers and the children played some games together. Then they all sat down at some little tables and had tea and cakes, and the cakes were animal crackers, and cookies. The cookies were cut out like animals, too; rabbits, and chickens, and pussycats. Aunt Monnie and one of the teachers made the cookies and the boys and girls liked them so well they decided to take them home to show to their Daddies.

Then it was time to go home. The mothers and the boys and the girls bowed way over and said, "Good-bye, we had a nice time", and the teachers bowed way over the very same way, and said, "Good-bye, we are so glad you came to the party".

Then the mothers and the boys and girls put on their shoes, which were waiting outside the door for them. Did you know that Japanese boys and girls, and mothers and daddies always take off their shoes when they go inside the house? Well, after they put their shoes on, they said good-bye again, and then went home.

Don't you think that was a nice party? and wouldn't you have liked to be there?

Last week I had some letters from the Kindergarten boys and girls I knew last year. And I had some more letters from a little boy and girl I know, who live in Norfolk, Va. The little boy and girl who live in Norfolk, are big enough to write letters themselves, but the others told their teacher what to say.

Maybe you could tell Mother what to say and she could write a letter to Aunt Monnie from Isabel, and Faith and Nancy? Wouldn't that be a nice surprise for Aunt Monnie to have a letter from Isabel and Faith and Nancy? The postman would put it in a little box, which is fastened to the gate, and the three little bells at the top of the gate would ting-a-ling, ting-a-ling, and Aunt Monnie would look out of the window and see the letter in the box. Then she would run, run, run, as fast as she could and take the letter out of the box, and she would say, "Why, who sent me this letter?" Then she would open it to see, and it would be from Isabel, and Faith and Nancy.

When you get to be big girls and go to school you can write letters yourselves.

Here's a big hug and kiss for each one, and love for Mother and Daddy, too.

From,
Aunt Monnie.

In the Land of Sunshine.

Elaine's mother had not been well, so the doctor had said that a winter in the beautiful island of Haiti would be the best thing for her; and that is how it happened that she and father and Elaine sailed away in a great ocean steamer, through the warm Southern waters, to the beautiful land of sunshine where there is no winter, and where there are trees and flowers and birds all the year through.

Long, long ago Christopher Columbus landed on one of these same islands and he thought it one of the most beautiful places he ever had seen. "It seems to me that I could never leave so enchanting a spot," he wrote. Oranges, bananas, pineapples and many other fruits grow there, as well as sugar cane from which sugar is made.

Elaine decided the very first day that she never wanted to go away from such a beautiful land. By and by she began to miss her home friends, and most of all she missed her Sunday School. Why didn't she go to a Sunday School there? There was none to go to. And the hundreds of bright-faced boys and girls that Elaine and her father and mother saw every day in the streets of the city and in the fields and little towns of the country, never had heard of Jesus. Long ago, black people had been carried as slaves to the beautiful island, and that is why the boys and girls there are like the boys and girls of Africa.

You may be sure that when Elaine's Sunday-school teacher at home heard how sorry Elaine was for those little black children, she was sorry, too, and she told the Primary Department about it the next Sunday. She found out that in the island of Cuba, not so very far away from this other island of Haiti, the people who had had missionaries from America to teach them of Jesus were so sorry for their neighbors that they were planning to send missionaries of their own, black boys and girls, who had been taught by the misisonaries and were now grown up, to open mission schools in Haiti.

But Elaine and the Primary children wanted to help right away; so from all the homes they gathered bright pictures that told Bible stories. These they sent to Elaine, and her mother helped her to give them out to the island children. That was like sowing seed, but seed that will grow in the soul gardens, and will help the children of that land of sunshine to know about the heavenly garden above.—The Sunbeam.

To Kill.

It is written: Thou shalt not kill.

We all know, it is true, that it is often necessary to kill, but in spite of this there is, perhaps, some truth in the old word. Notwithstanding the layer of dust, in which the unceasing warfare of life has shrouded my conscience, it still happens that I shudder when I recall some of the murders I have committed. I do not remember them all. Some were inevitable, and I do not repent of those.

But among those I have killed out of wickedness or thoughtlessness, I remember first and foremost a little bird, a spider, and a fox.

Nearly all children are naughty. When I was a child I associated for some time with a boy who was more so than I. He taught me to shoot with a sling. When summer vacation came we went to the woods every day with our slings. And we could not bear to see a little bird, twittering on a branch, without putting stones in our slings and shooting at him. But we hardly ever struck one. Birds, like all other animals, have learned to be on their guard against human beings, and we hardly had time to take aim before the bird would disappear, looking like a dot against the blue. These constant failures made us so angry that we came to feel it a matter of honor for us to kill a little bird, no matter how it was done.

Then one day it happened—and it was not in the woods, but in a corner of the garden belonging to our country home—that we discovered a little fledgling in a bush. He had not yet learned to fly, but was only able to hop from twig to twig. Without a moment's hesitation we stole as near as possible and fired our slingshots. The fledgling fell to the ground, but he was not quite dead. He lay in the grass with wide open bill, and his little tongue kept moving. The eyes, also, were alive. We stood undecided, our faces red with shame, and looked at each other. What were we to do? Had we better kill him? And after that, what were we to do with a little dead bird?

"He will soon die of himself," said my companion.

"Yes," I replied "he cannot live long."

We felt that neither of us would dare to touch him. We stole away without looking at each other, and we never played in that corner of the garden again.

Why did I kill the spider? It was not wickedness, it was an impulse, because he frightened me.

It happened in Hamburg. I was sitting alone in a hotel room, reading a book. The electric light fell, white and cold, over the white pages of my book. I had turned on all the lights in the room. It was very quiet, the only sound being the ticking of the clock on the fireplace, and the rustling of the leaves I turned. It was a foggy autumn evening. All the unwholesome fumes of the city penetrated to my room and poisoned my temper.

All at once I felt something touch my hand. It was a gigantic spider, hairy and fat, crawling over my hand down into the book I was reading. When he saw me watch him he began to run. I sprang from the chair and threw the book far away, pale with horror. But the spider had already made his way down one of my legs to the floor. He rolled, like a ball of thread, across the floor, as fast as if he had been pursued by fire. I felt that I must kill him in self-defense. I took the book from the floor, hurled it at the spider, and crushed him.

Is there not an old superstition that forbids killing a spider? I dared not touch the book. I have never read it since.

I must see some human being. I went to the door and rang for the waiter. When he came I looked at him in astonishment, until I collected my thoughts enough to improvise, "Get me something to drink".

The fox I had killed because I had a gun in my hands when I met him. It seemed self-evident that I ought to kill a fox, if I met him in the woods and had a gun in my hands.

It was winter. Snow fell everyday, and every day I walked in the woods with a worthless old gun and a black poodle, named "Gustav". I did not hunt. Sometimes I took aim at a pine cone for my own amusement, and to please Gustav, who jumped and barked with joy at every report. He was not afraid, for he had not yet learned that a gun is a murderous weapon.

One day, at dusk, I met a little fox. He had been down in the village on business, and was on the way home, with a speckled hen in his mouth. I stood concealed behind a juniper bush, and he ran close by without seeing me. I took aim and fired. Why? It is the custom.

The fox ran a few steps farther, as if nothing had happened. Then he stopped suddenly, as if astonished, and dropped the hen. And with a faint, dismal moan, he stretched out on the snow and died. Gustav, the black poodle, who was still almost a puppy, rushed forward in wild joy and with his merriest bark, and snapped playfully at one of the fox's ears. But the next moment he realized that the strange animal was dead. An indescribable expression of shyness and confusion crept into his bright black eyes. At last he crept close to me, with drooping tail, and whined softly.

I let the fox lay and went home, for I felt cold. The next day I walked the same path, which was my favorite route. I went along, whistling softly, and no longer thought of what had happened the day before. All at once I started and stood still. On the ground, at my feet, lay a dead fox. The crows had pecked at the upturned eye.

I stood looking a moment at the fox,

FP 3-11-29 Newspapers PO 1359 Ad 253A Rev.

DAUGHTERS —help old parents to be comfortable

Devoted daughter tells what she did

YOU find it in almost every family. An elderly mother or father living with the young folks. The children doing all they can to make their parents' last years comfortable.

The Robinson home at 2330 Coral Street, Philadelphia, proved no exception when the reporter called there. Mrs. Robinson had a special health problem to solve.

"My mother, who is 80 years old," she explained, "had a partial stroke of paralysis." It was vitally important to keep her system functioning regularly and easily. They tried various measures. But they all upset her in her weakened condition.

Finally, Mrs. Robinson said, "after reading the advertisement of Nujol, we tried that. We find it gives satisfactory results. My mother can take it easily—a tablespoonful at night—because it's tasteless."

That's the wonderful thing about Nujol. It won't upset or disagree with anybody. You can give it to invalids, very old folks and tiny babies with perfect safety. For Nujol contains absolutely no medicine or drugs. It was perfected by the Nujol

Laboratories, 2 Park Avenue, New York City.

Nujol accomplishes quite as much good as the more drastic methods. But does its work in a normal, natural way. It not only prevents an excess of body poisons from forming (we all have them), but aids in their removal. Get a bottle today.

You'll find Nujol at all good drug stores. In sealed packages.

Vital Teachings of God's Word

SET FORTH IN BIBLE STUDIES
By JAMES H. TODD

Secretary, Australian Council of the China Inland Mission

A little book for careful, continued study, with a prayerful heart, a clear head, some "fenced off" time, and a bold-type Bible in constant use for every reference.

The man or woman who cannot take even an evening course at a Bible school, or make use of a correspondence course, may very profitably use this little book as a guide in grasping the cardinal doctrines of God's revelation to men, in daily half-hours.—From Introduction by the Rev. F. A. Steven.

CONTENTS

Sin and the Sinner	Sanctification
Redemption	Reconciliation
Justification	Love to God
Regeneration	Love to Christ
Repentance	Love to Man
Adoption	Prayer
Faith	Worship
Eternal Life	Thanksgiving
"Things That Differ"	The Future Destiny of Believers

Simple in plan and in detail, but highly condensed, and is wonderfully useful for reference by preachers, as well as students.

Adapted for class use, as well as individual study.
80 pages, only 20 cents
THE SUNDAY SCHOOL TIMES COMPANY
1031 Walnut Street Philadelphia, Pa.

and listening to the sound of two branches being rubbed against each one," I said to myself.

"A live fox is prettier than a dead other by the wind.

And after that I sought other paths.
—Translated from the Swedish.

LITTLE WHEEL AND BIG WHEEL.

Says the big wagon wheel
To the little wagon wheel,
"What a difference between us I see!
As our course we pursue,
Can a small thing like you
Keep up with a great thing like me?"

Says the little wagon wheel
To the big wagon wheel,
"You are larger, I own, my good friend;
But my quickness supplies
What is wanting in my size,
So I keep in the front to the end!"
—Selected.

Flowers That Quarrel.

Flowers, like human beings, seem to have special dislikes in the way of associates, writes S. Leonard Bastin, in St. Nicholas. Just why this is so it is not easy to explain, but many people must have had the experience of arranging freshly cut flowers in vases, only to find after a few hours that they have drooped badly for no apparently reason. A floral expert has recently stated that, in nearly all such cases, the trouble is due to the fact that the blossoms do not agree. If they were human beings, we should say they quarreled.

Here are a few floral dislikes that have been noticed: Hardly any kind of blooms are happy in the same vase with mignonette. Many flowers will droop in an hour if they are brought into contact with the sweet-smelling plant. All kinds of poppies cause trouble if they are mixed with other flowers. Not only so, but the poppies generally end up by drooping badly themselves, as if they were exhausted by the quarrel. Sweet-peas are such aristocrats that they do not like being associated with any other kind of blossoms. Lilies-of-the-valley will fade quickly when placed with almost any other flowers. One could think that roses of all kinds would associate well, but this is not the case. The writer has two tea-roses in his garden, one yellow and the other pink. Cut blooms from these can never be put together in a vase without causing the yellow flowers to fade quickly. Yet the yellow rose keeps well if alone in a vase, showing that the wilting is due to the presence ranged in the house fade quickly, it of the pink rose.

When flowers that have been ar- is most probable that two kinds which never agree have been mixed together. If these are separated and placed in distant vases, the quarrels are at an end and the blossoms soon recover.—Exchange.

For The Southern Churchman.

THE WORLD.

Mary Esten Cooke, age 9.

I love the sunrise in morning;
I love the sunset at night;
I love the world and its wonders,
I love the stars so bright.

I love the snow in the winter,
I love the leaves in the fall;
And roses on table at dinner,
Yes, I love them all.

JOHN TYLER

THE GREAT STATESMAN

AND

ABRAHAM LINCOLN

THE CREATURE OF ACCIDENT AND VIOLATOR OF OUR CONSTITUTION.

WHO WAS THE DWARF?

A REPLY TO A CHALLENGE.

By Lyon Gardiner Tyler.

In this neat little book of forty-four pages, with three illustrations, Dr. Lyon G. Tyler draws a parallel between two Presidents of the United States. It is brim full of facts and interest. Price, $1.00 a copy, postage prepaid. Address

MEISTER & SMETHIE, Bookbinders,
107 Governor Street, Richmond, Va.

WHILE IN RICHMOND LET US KNOW IF YOU LIKE OUR FOOD

Mrs. Cook's Cafeteria
Near St. Paul's Parish House
Richmond, Va.

INCORPORATED 1882

Virginia Fire and Marine Insurance Company

Of Richmond, Va.

Assets - - - $3,640,152.88

Fred'k E. Nolting, President.
B. C. Lewis, Jr., Secretary — J. C. Watson, Treasurer
J. M. Leake, General Agent — Wm. P. Hill, Asst. Secretary

Banish Mosquitoes Easier! Quicker!

Flit is the new, easier, quicker way to rid your rooms of mosquitoes—for comfort and health. The handy Flit sprayer floats a vapor that does not fall in drops, from which no mosquitoes escape! All die—or money back. More for your money in the quart size.

"The yellow can with the black band"

FLIT

© 1929 Stanco Inc.

Classified Advertising and Notices

All notices and advertisements, excepting positions wanted, will be inserted in this department at a rate of 20 cents per agate line, each insertion. Special rates to contracts of any length. A rate of 15 cents per line is made to persons seeking positions. No advertisement accepted for less than 50 cents.

Copy for this department must be received not later than Tuesday of the week in which it is intended that the first insertion shall appear.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

CHURCH LITERATURE.

ANY or all of the following items will be sent out post free without charge to any applicant as long as the supply on hand lasts. Address the Rev. Frank T. Hallett, 2 Bingley Terrace, Thornton, R. I.

The Lord's Plan for the Service of the Lord's Day, Lucius Waterman; Jews and Christians, ed. B. A. M. Schapiro; Why I, a Jew, Am a Chjristian, B. A. M. Schapiro; Joseph Kershaw, A Yorkshire Mill Worker and Missioner, Henry E. Kemp; The Case for Confession, Stated by a Layman; The Anglican Church and Henry VIII, S. C. Hughson; Baptism and the Early Church, Clement F. Rogers; The Song of the Excellent Way, A Study of 1. Corinthians, XIII, G. R. H. Shafto; Our Daily Bread, Albert C. Larned; The Words of Jesus; Counsels for Church People, Creighton; What Is Christianity, Gore.

ANTIQUES.

WE PAY THE HIGHEST CASH PRICES for old-time furniture and antiques of all kinds. H. C. Valentine, 209 East Franklin Street, Richmond, Va.

RELIGIOUS TRACTS.

GOOD RELIGIOUS TRACTS MAY BE had by writing to LEVI C. SULLIVAN, blind tract minister, P. O. Box 43, Roanoke, Va. Some excellent tracts for prison work.

SOLD BY A SHUT-IN.

MEDIUM SIZE ORANGE COLOR SELF-Filling Fountain Pens, with gold bands and solid 14K gold pen points, $1.00 each. Jumbo Pens, color black, $1.25. Edward P. Broxton, Keysville, Ga.

BOARDING.

WANTED, TO BOARD TWO SMALL GIRLS, or boy and girl, for June and July, or six weeks, in private home in the country, at the foot of Blue Ridge Mountains. Modern Bungalow, good water and country board. References given. Address Mrs. M. C. O.'Sullivan, Ivy Depot, Virginia.

SUMMER BOARD.

IN SHENANDOAH VALLEY—LIMITED NUMBER of people desired. Large house and grounds, conveniently located. M. I. $12 and $15 per week. MISS D. L. BRISCOE, Charles Town, Jefferson County, W. Va.

SUMMER BOARD.

RIVERCREST FARM, AN IDEAL PLACE to spend your vacation. Beautifully located on New River in heart of Southwest Virginia. One and one-half miles from Railroad and Lee Highway. Fine for fishing and swimming. Always cool. Good food and beds. Rates reasonable. Apply to Mrs. W. C. Jennings, Draper, Virginia.

—CATHEDRAL STUDIOS—
Washington London

Church Embroideries and Vestments, Silks, Fringes, Gold Thread, Stoles with crosses from $7.60, Burse and Veil from $15. Surplices and exquisite Altar Linens, Church Vestments imported for the Churches free of duty.

MISS L. V. MACKRILLE,
11 W. Kirke St., Chevy Chase, Washington, D. C. D. C. Telephone Cleveland 52.

SITUATION WANTED.

CHURCHWOMAN, COLLEGE GRADUate and Teacher of high school, with several years' experience, wishes to teach pupils in a private home, or do individual coaching in some nearby place during summer months. Address "C. G.", 132 Fillmore Street, Petersburg, Va.

ORGANIST AND CHOIRMASTER, ENGlish trained, desires change of climate, account of wife's health. Very successful boys' voices, recitalist, director of choral societies, teacher pipe organ, vocal, piano. Excellent references. Address "Organist", care of Southern Churchman.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORKER, AND PARish Secretary, desires position. Address, Young Peoples' Worker, Christ Church Parish House, Savannah, Ga.

CLERICAL.

YOUNG CLERGYMAN, B. D., UNMARRIED, ACTIVE IN community, welfare and young people's work; has built church; highest recommendation as earnest pastor, priest and capable rector; would consider any call to Southern parish. Address "Rector", care of Southern Churchman.

SITUATION WANTED, SEPTEMBER, AS Housemother, or Nurse in school or institution boys or girls. Graduate nurse with best references. Address "Deaconess", 211 East Eighth St., Newton, Kan.

HELP WANTED.

WANTED: TRAINED SOCIAL WORKER, Episcopal. Address "A. B. C.," care of Southern Churchman.

Deaths

REV. EDWARD MANSFIELD McGUFFEY.

Resolutions.

Resolution adopted at a special meeting of the Bishops and Clergy of the Diocese of Long Island, held in the Parish Hall of St. James Church, Elmhurst, Long Island, on Friday, May 31st, A. D. 1929, the Right Rev. Ernest Milmore Stires, D. D., Bishop of Long Island, presiding:

Whereas, The Rev. Edward Mansfield McGuffey, M. A., the Senior Active Presbyter in this Diocese, entered upon eternal life on Tuesday, the 28th day of May, A. D. 1929, and his body has this day been peacefully committed to rest in sure and certain hope of the Resurrection in Christ Jesus.

Therefore be it Resolved, That we, the Bishops and Clergy of Long Island hereby record our gratitude to God for the life and character and service of our beloved brother, Edward Mansfield McGuffey.

And be it further Resolved, That we inform the Church at large of our affection and admiration for our intimate friend and companion of many years, whose fine integrity and courage will abide with us as an inspiring memory. Full of years and rich in honors, as well as in the affection of multitudes of friends, his death comes not as a defeat but rather as a crown.

A devout believer and a brave Christian soldier, he has entered triumphantly into the joy of his Lord. As his fellow believers, among whom he lived and bravely served for many eventful years, we mourn; and yet we are grateful that in his death, as through a window, we glimpse the glory of the other side.

And be it further Resolved, That we express to the family of our revered friend, our deepest sympathy in what must be to them a heavy bereavement, and assure them that we share with them the faith and hope in which their beloved and honored father lived and died, and we rejoice with them in the noble and distinguished service he has rendered to Christ and His Church.

CHARLES A. BROWN,
JOHN I. B. LARNED,
ST. CLAIR HESTER,
FREDERICK S. GRIFFIN,
JAMES CLARENCE JONES,
Committee.

IN MEMORIAM.

Mrs. Mary Newton Stanard.

Died June 5, 1929.

In the death of this distinguished woman and faithful servant of God, the Woman's Auxiliary of Monumental Episcopal Church of Richmond, Virginia, has lost a most devoted and valuable member, one ever ready to give herself, who counted no sacrifice too great, if the interests of her beloved Church could be served.

Therefore be it

Resolved, That while the Woman's Auxiliary laments its loss, we bless God for this servant of His who has departed this life in His faith and fear, beseeching Him to give us grace so as to follow her good example that with her we may be partakers of His Heavenly Kingdom;

That we express to the bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy;

That these resolutions be recorded in the minutes of the Auxiliary, printed in the Southern Churchman and a copy sent to the family.

SUSIE MORRIS JONES,
KATE F. MEADE,
MARY G. WALLACE,
Committee.

MRS. ELISE MEADE SKELTON BASKERVILLE.

"And behold a door was opened in Heaven and I heard a voice saying, Come up hither."

Entered into her eternal home, on Sunday morning, June 15, 1929, from her residence in Richmond, Va., MRS. ELISE MEADE SKELTON BASKERVILLE, the fourth daughter of the late Dr. John Gifford Skelton, and his wife Marianne Meade.

Mrs. Baskerville was born at "Paxton", Powhatan County, Virginia, in April, 1852, and came to Richmond with her parents in 1867, where she has since resided. In 1877 she married the late Mr. P. Hamilton Baskerville, of this city and was blessed with two sons: John Skelton Baskerville, who went to Heaven at age four, and Hamilton Meade Baskerville, of this city, who now survives his mother, along with her sisters, Mrs. John L. Williams and Mrs. Alfred W. Gibbs, and her brother, Julian Finney Skelton.

Mrs. Baskerville was a woman of rare beauty of heart and soul and body and belonged to the Church Militant, therefore she is now a member of the Church Triumphant. She was an active member of Grace and Holy Trinity Church, of which her husband, the late Mr. P. H. Baskerville, was Junior Warden until he passed on to his eternal reward two years ago.

Mrs. Baskerville was a woman of the strongest Christian faith and clearest intelligence and constantly and cheerfully given to good works.

She passed out of this world in the confidence of a certain faith in the comfort of a reasonable religious and holy hope and perfect charity with the world, hence we know that she has heard her Saviour's glad acclaim:

"Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

Born of noble parents, she lived a noble life, and all who remember her esteemed father, the late Dr. John G. Skelton, the beloved physician, recall him as one of God's noblemen with "high erected thought seated in a heart of courtesy". He practised his profession here for the love of aiding his fellow man, rather than for the purpose of amassing an earthly fortune and therefore he received his crown of righteousness and the welcome words of his Saviour:

"Well done, good and faithful servant," when he left us in 1889.

"And when the soul begotten shall render up once more
The kingdom to the Father, whose own it was before.
Then glory yet unheard of shall shed abroad its rays,
Resolving all enigmas in endless Sabbath days.

L. M. W.

WILLIAM TRAVERS LEWIS.

Resolution.

At a meeting of the Vestry of Grace Protestant Episcopal Church, Clarke Parish, Berryville, Va., held May 31, 1929, it was resolved as follows:

I. That in the death of WILLIAM TRAVERS LEWIS, our Junior Warden and fellow Vestryman, this Parish and Vestry have suffered a heavy and almost irreparable loss.

II. That this community, as a whole, has been deprived of one of its most prominent and useful members; one who through a lifelong association had endeared himself to all by his many kindnesses of thought, word and deed.

As Chairman of the Finance and Building Committees our Parish owes much to Mr. Lewis, as evidenced by the renewal and beauty of our old-new Grace Church, and, as Junior Warden, for his faithfulness and vigilance in guarding the trust committed to his wardenship.

A man's daily walk in life is the highest testimonial to his worth.

As a lawyer, William Travers Lewis stood high at the Virginia Bar; as a citizen, he measured up to the standard set by a long line of distinguished ancestry; as a Christian, his example is remarkable for its consistent steadfastness and simple faith in a Great God Triune.

Our friend has passed on; but his example will remain to guide us in the paths he trod so patiently and bravely and to inspire us so to live that, like him, our departure will leave sweet memories.

GOODWIN H. WILLIAMS,
Register.

CHURCH INTELLIGENCE.

(Continued from page 16.)

made some pithy remarks on cheapening religion, and on effective organization, saying, according to the Eagle, "I wonder that many people can be interested in religion when they pay 10, 20 and 25 cents a week for it, which is really the price of a good cigar or the tip that you generously give to the waitress for a luncheon. The churches, moreover, need to compile a sort of 'Who's Who' of their communities. I am sure that the Democratic and Republican organizations know just who every one is, how every one votes, and makes sure that person does vote. The churches ought to keep the same record of their members. I consider the greatest failure of the Church today is membership without obligation."

The Rev. Benjamin Mottram, for the past twenty-one years vicar of St. Paul's Chapel, College Point, while it was under the care of the mother church, St. George's, Flushing, is to be instituted as rector of the newly organized parish on Sunday, June 16. St. Paul's is one of the two new parishes just admitted to convention. Archdeacon Duffield, who himself was vicar of St. Paul's Chapel, 1904-06, will act as institutor by Bishop Stires' appointment.

The Rev. B. H. Goodwin, formerly of St. Philip's Church, Easthampton, in the Diocese of Western Massachusetts, has become rector of St. Mary's Church, Amityville.

TEXAS.

Rt. Rev. C. S. Quinn, D. D., Bishop.

Juvenile Texans Conduct Service.

An unusual, in some respects remarkable and in all respects creditable and encouraging, service of the church was conducted the evening of Sunday, May 5, in Grace Church, Cuero, Texas. The Southern Churchman is indebted for a clear and very interesting account of it to Mrs. Lelia Seeligson.

The service was entrusted to the children of the congregation and Sunday School, not one of the participants being over sixteen years old. It began with entrance, through a side door, of the surpliced choir, led by Fritzie Koehler, bearing aloft the Cross, all singing "Children of the Heavenly King". After the procession had marched to the chancel and divided, with military precision, to respective places, Paul Dornbluth led the service of Evening Prayer. William Reifert read the Psalter, the children foremost in the responses. Ralph Reifert read the Lessons. The instrumental music was from the large pipe organ, played by Billy Ferguson.

Then came the sermon—a good one, well thought out and delivered, without notes or manuscript—by George Comas, from the text, "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." Pete Comas took the offertory and, as it was taken, Jeannette Blackwell sang a solo, the choir joining in chorus.

The one adult participant, the Rev. Everett H. Jones, justly beloved and tireless rector, pronounced the benediction, the choir marching out through the nave and emerging at the front door. The entire service was impressive and beautiful and admirably conducted. It attracted and was thoroughly enjoyed by the adults of the community, many of whom usually do not attend evening services. Unlimited praise and the thanks of not only the Episcopalians, but of all the people of the town and vicinity are due and cordially accorded the participants in the service and those who suggested and assisted in arranging it.

QUINCY.

Rt. Rev. Edward Fawcett, D. D., Bishop.

Grace Church, Galesburg.

The Woman's Auxiliary observed the Feast of the Annunciation with a Corporate Communion of the women and also presented the U. T. O., which was the largest in the history of the Auxiliary. A buffet luncheon was served and some reports were made on the offering and the study class for Lent. There were seventeen to enroll, seven sessions with an average attendance of ten. The class had a Corporate Communion and made an offering for the O. H. C. work in Liberia. Mrs. T. R. Stokes, St. John's, Kewanee, spoke to the women after the luncheon on the "Joy of Keeping Blue Box". A campaign is going on to ask every woman to keep a Blue Box and to say the prayer daily.

Personal Notes

The Rev. Dr. Edward Henry Eckel, rector of St. Andrew's, Fort Worth, Texas, accompanied by wife and daughter, is taking a month's vacation in Mexico City, and neighborhood. Address till July 10, Hotel Geneve.

. .The address of the Rt. Rev. Lewis W. Burton, D. D., is now 644 North Broadway, Lexington, Kentucky.

ORDINATIONS.

Rev. Hugh Fulton Merrill was advanced to the Priesthood on Wednesday, June 5, 1929, in the Church of the Holy Comforter, Columbia, Tenn., by the Rt. Rev. James M. Maxon, D. D., Bishop-Coadjutor of Tennessee. The candidate, who had been in charge of this mission since 1925, was preesnted by the Rev. Arthur Myron Cochran, vicar of the Church of the Holy Trinity, Nashville, who also said the Litany. The sermon was by the Rev. George A. Stams, principal of Hoffman-St. Mary's School. The Rev. James R. Sharp, secretary of the diocese, served as chaplain to the Bishop and read the Epistle, and the Rev. Thomas N. Carruthers, rector of St. Peter's Parish, Columbia, read the Gospel.

The Rev. Hugh F. Merrill, who is the second native Tennessean of the Negro race to be ordained in the diocese, continues his work in charge of the mission of the Holy Comforter.

Mr. C. Harold Douglas and Mr. Louis C. Webster were ordained by the Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman, D. D., Bishop of Washington at Epiphany Church on Trinity Sunday at eleven A. M.

Mr. Douglas was presented by the Rev. James W. Morris, D. D., and Mr. Webster was presented by the Rev. Earl G. Sier. The sermon on the occasion was preached by Canon Anson Phelps Stokes.

The Rev. John A. Wilson, Jr., was advanced to the Priesthood on Friday, May 31, in Grace Church, Radford, Va., by the Rt. Rev. Robert Carter Jett, D. D., Bishop of Southwestern Virginia. The Rev. Alfred R. Berkeley, rector of St. John's, Roanoke, preached the sermon. The Rev. Herbert H. Young, of Bluefield, said the Litany. The Rev. Edward W. Hughes, of Pearisburg, read the Epistle. The Rev. John S. Wellford, of Abingdon, had the Gospel. The Rev. Alfred C. Bussingham, of St. Peter's, Roanoke, said the Creed. Parts in the service were also taken by the Rev. James A. Figg, rector of Grace Church.

A native of Radford, Mr. Wilson spent about eighteen years as a lay teacher in China; a part of this time being a member of the faculty of Boone College, Wuchang. Returning to America in 1925, he began serving as missionary at Richlands in Tazewell County, this diocese, under the Rev. Herbert H. Young, Dean of Associate Missions. Mr. Wilson was ordained to the diaconate November 19, 1927. He will continue with his work at Richlands.

At an ordination held in the Chapel of the Virginia Theological Seminary on June 7, 1929, Messrs. Lawrence D. Asbury of the Diocese of Southern Virginia; Henry Oliver Liller, of the Diocese of West Virginia; Henry Heaton and J. Walter Reynolds, of the Diocese of Virginia, were ordained to the diaconate. The Rev. Percy Foster Hall, rector of St. Paul's Church, Alexandria, preached the ordination sermon and the candidates were ordained by the Bishops of their respective dioceses.

Messrs. Lawrence D. Ashbury, of the Diocese of Southern Virginia; Henry Oliver Liller, of the Diocese of West Virginia; Henry Heaton and J. Walter Reynolds, of the Diocese of Virginia, were ordained to the diaconate, at an ordination held in the Chapel of the Virginia Theological Seminary, on June 7, 1929. The Rev. Percy Foster Hall, rector of St. Paul's Church, Alexandria, preached the ordination sermon and the candidates were ordained by the Bishops of their respective dioceses.

G. M. B.

The Rev. Thomas Earl Dudney, B. D., of this year's graduating class of the Sewanee Theological School, was advanced to the Priesthood, on June 12, the Rt. Rev. James M. Maxon, D. D., Bishop Coadjutor of Tennessee, officiating. The ordination took place in St. Luke's Memorial Chapel at the school. The candidate was presented by the Ven. James G. Glass, D. O., of South Florida. The sermon was by the Rev. Charles Noyes Tyndell, S. T. D., rector of St. Luke's Church, Memphis, from which parish Mr. Dudney became a postulant. Other priests present and assisting in the Imposition of Hands were the Rev. Charles L. Wells, Ph. D., who read the Epistle; the Rev. W. H. DuBose, D. D., who read the Gospel; the Rev. Lyle G. Kilvington, who read the iLtany; the Rev. James R. Sharp, Bishop's Chaplain; the Rev. R. MacD. Kirkland, and the Rev. Alexander C. Pilleffer.

LEAVES OF HEALING

Rev. 22:2. "The leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations."

Pilgrim's Progress: "Then came to him a hand with some leaves of the tree of life, the which Christian took and applied to the wounds he had received in the battle and was healed immediately."

The Bible and "Pilgrim's Progress" are forever linked together. The Celestial City, as John Bunyan saw it, is the Celestial City that had been already pictured by the Apostle John. From beginning to end of "Pilgrim's Progress", Bunyan borrows the pictures, the personalities, the prophecies, and the very language of the Bible. He takes the beautiful picture of the Tree of Life with leaves for the healing of the nations and makes it actually accomplish that for which John created it, by plucking a handful of its leaves and applying them to the wounded side of Christian after his life and death struggle with Apollyon. The result was immediate healing.

Long ago Christian people recognized that this reference of the Apostle John to the leaves for the healing of the nations had a real application to Christian literature, especially in the tract and pamphlet form. Therefore printed pages of the American Tract Society have, from the beginning of their distributon, been known as "leaves of healing". Probably John himself had this application of the leaves of the Tree of Life in mind, for John is the Apostle of the Pen, while Peter is the Apostle of Preaching. John's vision, as seen from the last verse of his gospel, is a world full of books, tracts and pamphlets. He heard a voice from Heaven, saying, "Write"; and he saw in the hands of Him who sat upon the throne a book. John heard a voice from Heaven, telling him to write a book and send it to the churches and ministers.

For over a century the American Tract Society has been trying to carry out John's ideal of a world full of life-giving books, pamphlets and tracts. This year the Society is seeking, in a special way to furnish "leaves of healing" to those who, like Christian in "Pilgrim's Progress", have been wounded by the evil forces that are seeking to discourage and utterly destroy the faith of those to whom the future life is a reality.

ATHEISTS ACTIVE

Just as Atheist, in "Pilgrim's Progress", met Christian on his journey to the Celestial City and scornfully laughed at him for his faith, so the representatives of the Atheistic Associations meet Christian workers, who are giving the gospel to the wayfarers on the streets of New York, and seek, through their poisonous pages, to persuade pilgrims that they are foolish in listening to the voices of those who tell them that Christ is ready to welcome every weary sinner who fearlessly turns his face and his footsteps toward Him. Like Bunyan's Atheist, the Anti-Bible Society and the American Association for the Advancement of Atheism are wilfully distorting gospel truth in order to discourage all who are journeying to Mt. Zion.

These enemies of the Church, the individual Christian, and our country have sorely wounded the faith of our youth by organizing societies in our educational institutions, selecting such names as "God's Black Sheep", "The Damned Souls", "The Circle of the Godless", "The Legion of the Damned", "His Satanic Majesty", etc. Students in schools and colleges need such "leaves of healing" as "Roosevelt's Nine Reasons for Going to Church" and our recently published tract by Prof. Pupin, of Columbia University, who points out the shallowness of some of the thinking of the students.

Gospel workers on the streets of New York are calling upon us to furnish such "leaves of healing" as are to be found in the series of Scripture tracts, which the Society has been enabled to publish in twenty languages through the generosity of Mrs. Finley J. Shepard.

COLPORTER WORK INCREASED

Two additional colporters have been added during the past year to meet the present need in New England. Churches of various denominations have been closed in the New England States owing to the change in the character of the population and large groups are in need of the Gospel. Reports from our new colporters have shown a real interest in religion and a hunger for higher things. Every week statements from our workers have shown sales of Bunyan's masterpiece, "Pilgrim's Progress".

The Society is continuing its colporter work in localities other than New England but is careful not to duplicate the fine work done by the various denominations. It is co-operating with large groups of colporters in furnishing them with the needed foreign literature. It has aided all of these by the gift, made possible through the genersoity of Mrs. Finley J. Shepard, of large quantities of tracts in twenty languages. The history of the Society's colporter work has been an inspiration to all denominations. The records for one hundred and three years have been carefully kept, and they show that colporters of the Society have visited over 25,000,000, families, distributed over 18,000,000 volumes and held over 650,000 religious meetings.

Two and three-quarter million dollars' worth of literature has been given away by the Society and a total of five and a half billion pages of tracts distributed gratuitously. Let us all get a glorious vision of the vast possibilities in the distribution of Christian literature and then let us pray until God opens out the windows of heaven and calls all Christians to aid in such a distribution of "the leaves of healing" as will make the enthusiasm of Wall Street, with its showers of tape, tame and meaningless compared with the mission of colporters going throughout the world, proclaiming through the printed page, the message "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?"

GOOD NEWS IN STORY AND SONG

As useful as has been the work of the Society in the printing and distribution of tracts, this has not been the chief service rendered by it. The Society has done far more through its publication of hymnals, books, pamphlets, periodicals, booklets, and Bibles with Notes, than through tract distribution. Hymnals in twelve languages have been printed by the Society, and it is constantly increasing this number, as well as revising old foreign hymnals.

At the present moment a Hymnal in the Slovak language, ranking alongside of the best English hymnals, is on the press. A new Spanish Hymnal, of equal merit, is now being prepared for the printer. Music and Word Editions will be published. The publication of this Hymnal fulfills the life dream of a veteran missionary. He spent years upon it; and now that his hopes are realized, he says that he is willing to depart in peace, to sing the songs of Moses and the Lamb about the throne of God. A wonderful service was rendered the Hungarians of this country when the Society took over 25,000 hymnals with music, printed in Hungary, at a price that enabled it to sell these cloth-bound hymnals, with 616 pages, at about twenty-five cents a copy.

Several Italian Hymnals have been published by the Society and still another is under consideration. The Society is seeking to furnish all needed literature for this important group as experience has demonstrated that, when given attention, they are very receptive to Protestant principles and make the best citizens.

Good News in Story and Song is the title of a helpful English Hymnal, published by the Society, which has passed into many editions and has been distributed by hundreds of thousands.

CADETS STUDY SCRIPTURES

One of the most satisfactory lines of effort in which the Society has been engaged is the gift of Bibles to the Graduating Classes at West Point. For fifty-five years the American Tract Society has made this annual distribution of Bibles. For the past four years, the money for the Bibles has been furnished by Miss Annie Miller, of this city, in memory of her parents. When a request came to the Society for Bibles for the Freshman Class, to be used as text books, the matter was presented to Miss Miller, and she took great pleasure in sending her check to provide for this presentation.

It is gratifying to know that these gifts of the Society helped to open the way for the teaching of the Bible at West Point. Chaplain Wheat's acceptance of a professorship in the English Department offers full assurance to our friends that the Bible will receive a prominent place in the English Department.

The Tercentenary of John Bunyan calls to mind the fact that Bunyan, an ignorant tinker, became a great master of the English Language through the study of just one book, the King James' Version of the Bible.

DESIGNED FOR THE PROMOTION OF PRACTICAL PIETY, THE DIFFUSION OF RELIGIOUS AND GENERAL INTELLIGENCE, AND THE MAINTENANCE OF THE PRINCIPLES OF THE PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL CHURCH

Southern Churchman

DOMINUS ☩ FORTITUDO MEA ☩ 1835

Vol. 94. RICHMOND, VA., JUNE 29, 1929. No. 26.

GETTING READY TO START ON A JOURNEY

Almost every person likes to go away from home once in awhile. When a long journey is contemplated, a good deal of preparation is necessary.

We are all going on a certain journey, and a long one at that. Just when we will start, no one can tell in advance. We are only certain of one thing, and that is that we must go. There are two countries, and only two, to one of which each must go.

But what about getting ready to go? Is any preparation necessary? If so, what? Do men and women, as a rule, manifest as much interest and forethought in getting ready to go on this long journey as they do in getting ready to go to some foreign country on this little globe? They have but little to say about it, as if they did not care to which country they went. No preparation is necessary to go to one of these countries. People can do as they please and get there, and no mistake. One thing ought to concern us very deeply. No matter which country we go to, we shall remain there for ever and ever.

Those who would go to that better country should not overlook the fact that a special preparation is absolutely necessary. First of all, a pure heart. Those who would go to that better country must absolutely have this preparation. Everything in that country is pure, and nothing unholy can ever enter. As no one can tell just when he must start on this journey, the Bible says, be ready—always ready.

Just how long it will take to make the journey no one can tell. When once the river is crossed the journey will soon be made. Here to-day; there to-morrow. The one thing that should concern us most is to know that we are ready.

What may be seen on the journey no one can tell. Worlds and systems of worlds will be passed, but no stop will be made. On, and still on, until one or the other of the countries is reached. If it be that better country, what scenes of beauty and delight will greet the eye, and what joy will thrill the heart! Home at last; home forever! But if it be that other country, horror of horrors! Alas! alas! Forever and ever.—Bishop F. Weaver, D. D.

EDUCATIONAL

The Gundry Home and Training School For The Feeble Minded

Falls Church, Fairfax County, Va.

Established 1892.

For terms and information address

MISS M. GUNDRY.

The General Theological Seminary

CHELSEA SQUARE, NEW YORK.

The next Academic year egins on the last Wednesday in September.

Special students admitted and Graduate Courses for graduates of othre Theological Seminaries.

The requirements for admission and other particulars can be had from THE DEAN, 1 Chelsea Square, New York, N. Y.

The Bishop Payne Divinity School

The accredited Seminary of the Church for training colored men for the ministry. The curriculum covers the full course for Deacon's and Priest's Orders. The degree of B. D. is awarded.

For catalogue and information apply to Rev. F. G. Ribble, M. A., D. D., Dean, Petersburg, Va.

The Protestant Episcopal Theological Seminary Virginia

The One Hundred and Sixth Session Opened Wednesday, Sept. 19, 1928.

For catalogue and other information address The Dean, Rev. Berryman Green, D. D., Theological Seminary, Alexandria, Va.

Schermerhorn Home School

Located six miles north of Richmond on the Washington Highway. A Home School for Children who need Special care and Training.

SUE I. SCHERMERHORN,
Box 57, West End Sta,
Richmond, Va.

STUART HALL

STAUNTON, VA.

Episcopal school for girls, maintaining best Virginia traditions of refinement and culture.

Thorough College Preparation. Varied General Course. Outdoor Life.

EIGHTY-SIXTH YEAR BEGINS SEPTEMBER 18, 1929

For catalogue, address
MRS. H. N. HILLS, Principal

Episcopal Theological School

Cambridge, Massachusetts.
Affiliated with Harvard University.
For catalog address
The Dean.

Chatham Hall

A Church School for girls in Southern Virginia. Thorough college preparation. General and graduate courses. Art, music, expression, home economics, secretarial course. Superb location; 175 acre estate, gardens, dairy; modern, well equipped buildings. Riding, swimming, golf. Address Rev. Edmund J. Lee, M. A., D. D., Box S, Chatham, Va.

Southern Churchman

SOUTHERN CHURCHMAN COMPANY,
628 E. Main Street - - - Richmond, Va.

LANGBOURNE MEADE WILLIAMS
President
ALFRED B. WILLIAMS..Associate Editor
THE REV. FRANK COX
Associate Editor
THE REV. JAMES W. MORRIS, D. D.
Associate Editor
MRS. CONRAD H. GOODWIN,
Associate Editor
MISS SUSANNE WILLIAMS..News Editor
JOHN H. COOKE..Secretary and Manager

Entered at the Post Office in Richmond, Va., as second-class mail matter.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE.

$3.00 a year in advance. To the Clergy, $2.00. Six months, $1.50. Trial subscriptions, 3 months, 50 cents; 10 cents a copy. Foreign postage, 50 cents additional.

For the convenience of subscribers, subscriptions are continued at expiration unless otherwise ordered. Notice of renewal, discontinuance or change of address should be sent two weeks before the date they go into effect.

RECEIPT OF PAYMENT is shown in about two weeks by change of date on address label. If date is not properly extended after each payment, notify us promptly. No receipt for payment will be sent.

Notice post office address. The exact post office address to which we are directing the paper at the time of writing MUST ALWAYS BE GIVEN. Our mailing list is arranged by post offices and not alphabetically.

Make all checks and money orders payable to the Southern Churchman, and not to an individual.

ADVERTISEMENTS—Rates quoted on request. For classified see head of that department.

Representatives wanted in each Parish; liberal commissions.

News concerning the Church at large always welcome.

CONTENTS

	Page.
Thoughts for the Thoughtful	4
Editorial	5
Our Lord's Return—Selected	6
Spiritual Healing—Ven. F. W. Neve, D. D.	7
Earliest of Church Assemblages in America—Alfred B. Williams	9
Some Reflections—J. W. Ware	10
Letters to the Editor	10
Favorite Scripture Verses	8
Church Intelligence	11
Family Department	17
Children's Department	19
Personal Notes	23

ST. JOHN BAPTIST SCHOOL for Girls

In the Country near Morristown. Under the care of the Sisters of St. John Baptist (Episcopal).

College Preparatory and General Courses. Music and Art.

Modern Fireproof Building open September, 1929. Ample Grounds. Outdoor Life. Moderate Rates.

For Catalog address
THE SISTER SUPERIOR,
St. John Baptist School,
Mendham, New Jersey.

MARY BALDWIN COLLEGE

For women. Courses lead to B. A. and B. S. degrees. Music, art, spoken English, physical education. Gymnasium and field athletics. Modern equipment. In beautiful Shenandoah Valley. Founded 1842. Catalog. Staunton, Va.

Five Virginia CHURCH SCHOOLS

FOR BOYS: St. Christopher's School, Richmond; Christchurch School, Christchurch, Middlesex County.

FOR GIRLS: St. Catherine's School, Richmond; St. Anne's School, Charlottesville; St. Margaret's School, Tappahannock.

(For Catalogs, address Principals.)

LEGAL TITLE for wills: Church Schools in the Diocese of Virginia (Inc.).

(About gifts or bequests, address Central Office, 110 West Franklin Street, Richmond, Va.)

HOBART COLLEGE Geneva N. Y.

A Church College for men, founded 1828. Four year liberal arts course, leading to the degrees A. B. and B. S. High standards; faculty of thirty. For catalogue and information, address

REV. MURRAY BARTLETT, D. D., Pres.

St. Margaret's School

Tappahannock, Virginia.

A Church School for girls with modern equipment and moderate cost. Intermediate and College Preparatory. Accredited.

Country life and simplicity without isolation. Beautiful grounds on Rappahannock River. Three dormitories for different ages. Supervised Athletics.

EDITH LATANE, Headmistree.

The Emergency Hospital

School for Nurses.
Washington, D. C.,

offers a three years course to High School Graduates. Credit given for college work. Classes admitted January and September. Accredited School. Hospital 200 beds. $10.00 Monthly allowance. Affiliations provided. School announcement on request Superintendent of Nurses, 1711 New York Avenue.

St. Albans The National Cathedral School for Boys

Thorough Preparation for Leading Universities, splendid equipment, unexcelled location on Mt. St. Alban overlooking Washington.

Eight years' course. Athletics for every boy.

Address:
WILLIAM H. CHURCH, Head Master,
Washington, D. C.

HAMPDEN-SYDNEY COLLEGE

Invites your careful consideration of its Faculty, Courses of Study, Wholesome Christian Atmosphere, and Physical Equipment.

For catalogue write,

REGISTRAR
Hampden-Sydney, Virginia

DIVINITY SCHOOL

of the Protestant Episcopal Church in Philadelphia
42nd and Locust Streets.

Graduate Courses in Theology, Privileges at the University of Pennsylvania.

Address: The Rev. G. G. Bartlett, D. D., Dean.

CHURCH EQUIPMENT SERVICE

J. & R. Lamb
23-25-27 SIXTH AVENUE NEW YORK
MEMORIALS IN STAINED GLASS
MOSAIC · MARBLE · STONE · GRANITE
CARVED WOOD · METAL · ETC.

R. GEISSLER, INC.
56 W. 8th STREET, NEW YORK, N.Y.
Church Furnishings
IN CARVED WOOD AND MARBLE · BRASS · SILVER
FABRICS + WINDOWS
EST. 1877

MOLLER PIPE ORGAN

Endorsed by the most eminent organists. Built in the world's largest factory. Every organ a special creation for a particular use and fully guaranteed. Moller Organs lead all quest.

Booklets and specifications on re other makes for church, school and auditorium use. The Moller "Artiste" Reproducing Organ for residence use is without equal.

M. P. MOLLER
Hagerstown. Maryland.

SAINT MARY'S SCHOOL AND JUNIOR COLLEGE
Raleigh, North Carolina.

Rev. Warren W. Way, A. M., Rector.
An Episcopal School for Girls. Have your daughter receive her education in a Church School.
Saint Mary's offers four years' High School and two years' College work all fully accredited by the Southern Association. Also Courses in Music, Art, Expression, Home Economics and Business. 20-acre campus. Gym and Field Sports. Tennis, Indoor Tiled Swimming Pool. Horseback Riding.
For Catalogue and View Book address
A. W. TUCKER, Business Manager.

FISHBURNE MILITARY SCHOOL
Aim—"Not the largest, but the best"
IN EVERY class each boy recites every day. Contacts with schoolmates from all over the country. Graduates enter all colleges. Certificate privileges. Mild year 'round climate. Easily reached. Full athletic program supervised by experienced men. Modern equipment. Swimming pool. Col. M. H. Hudgins, Box , Waynesboro, Virginia.
Member Ass'n of Military Colleges and Schools of U. S.

HOLY PLACES.

Wherever souls of men have worshipped, there
Is God: where old cathedrals climb the sky,
Or shining hillsides lift their heads on high,
Or silent woodland spaces challenge prayer,
Or inner chambers shut the heart from care;
Where broken temples of old faiths now lie
Forgotten in the sun, or swallows cry
At dusk about some crossroads chapel bare,
Alike of bells and beauty; where saints walked
Of old with speaking presences unseen,
Or dreaming boys with quiet voices talked
In pairs last night on some still college green;
Where Moses' Sinai flamed, or Jesus trod
The upward way apart: there, here, is God!

—Herbert Gallaudet, in The Christian Century.

Did This Happen in Your Church?

Two strangers happened to attend the same church a number of Sundays and no one spoke to either of them. One said to himself: "I'll give that church one more chance. If no one speaks to me next Sunday, I'll never go again!" The other resolved: "I don't like this sort of thing. If no one speaks to me next Sunday, I'll speak to some one." As it happened, the usher placed the first man in a seat in front of the second. No one greeted either of them; but as the first man was about to stalk out of church forever, the second put out his hand and said: "Good morning. I'm glad to see you. Fine sermon, wasn't it?" And so both kept on coming.—Epworth (Norfolk) Bulletin.

The Christ who died and who lives today is alive for evermore. This is why the future holds no fears for the Christian, for our Lord is in the future, and we know that whatever may come in between in the meantime, the final stage for us is nothing less than personal reunion with Himself. This is the hope that lights the darkest day, and smoothes the roughest road.—Selected.

Cuticura Toilet Preparations
Delightfully fragrant, highly developed toilet accessories—a most reliable method of cleansing and beautifying the skin and hair.
25c. each everywhere—Samples free of "Cuticura," Dept. D, Malden, Mass.

CASSOCKS
Surplices, Stoles, Eucharistic Vestments, Choir Cassocks, Cottas, Ties and Collars, Altar Linens, Materials, Tailoring.
J. M. HALL, Inc.
174 Madison Ave.
(Bet. 33d & 34th Sts.)
New York.

BEVERLEY HEATING
The Best for Homes, Churches, Stores and Buildings for all uses.
R. C. BEVERLEY HEATING CO., INC.,
308 E. Main St., Richmond, Va.
QUALITY—SERVICE.

LINEN for the CHURCH
PURE IRISH LINEN FOR ALL CHURCH USES, yard or piece lengths, at lowest import prices. New Special Number for Cottas, eighty-two and one-half cents. Samples on request.
MARY FAWCETT CO.,
350 Broadway, New York.

CHURCH VESTMENTS
Cassocks, Surplices, Stole.
EMBROIDERIES
Silks, Cloths, Fringes.
CLERICAL SUITS
Rabats, Collars, Shirts.
COX SONS & VINING,
131-133 E. 23d St., New York.

Church and Sunday School Furniture
THE SOUTHERN DESK COMPANY,
Hickory, N. C.
Send for Special Catalogue.

When in need of
MONUMENTS and TOMBSTONES
and want honest treatment see
BURNS & CAMPBELL,
Granite and Marble Works
PETERSBURG, VA.
Designs furnished on application and all orders receive prompt attention.

The Baylor School

A BOY'S OPPORTUNITY
Sound Scholarship and a Happy School Life
on the most beautiful campus in the South.
An accredited preparatory school for manly boys. Christian Influence. High Scholastic Standards. Unusual Equipment. Golf, Tennis, Swimming, Boating, Gymnasium, three Athletic Fields, etc. For Catalogue, Address
ALEXANDER GUERRY, Headmaster
THE BAYLOR SCHOOL, Cherokee Trail,
CHATTANOOGA, TENNESSEE
ALUMNI CHAPEL
ONE OF 7 BRICK BUILDINGS ON 105 ACRE CAMPUS.

BOATING TRACK FOOTBALL TENNIS

CHURCH FURNITURE
Pews, Pulpit and Sunday School Furniture. Catalog on request.
T. W. ALEXANDER & SON,
Box 147. Waynesboro, Va.

PIPE ORGANS
Highest quality. Superb tone. Modern accessories. Durable construction. All sizes.
Write for catalog of Pipe Organs, Reed Organs, or Electric Blowing Outfits.
HINNERS ORGAN CO.
PEKIN, ILLINOIS

Washington Cathedral

Witness for Christ in the Capital of the Nation

♦ ♦ ♦

THE CHAPTER appeals to Churchmen throughout the country for gifts, large and small, to continue the work of building now proceeding, and to maintain its work, Missionary, Education, Charitable, for the benefit of the whole Church.

Chartered under Act of Congress.

Administered by a representative Board of Trustees of leading business men, Clergymen and Bishops.

Full information will be given by the Bishop of Washington, or the Dean, Cathedral Offices, Mount St. Alban, Washington, D. C., who will receive and acknowledge all contributions.

♦ ♦ ♦

Legal Title for Use in Making Wills:
The Protestant Episcopal Cathedral Foundation of the District of Columbia

VIRGINIA TRUST CO.

Richmond, Va.

THE SAFE EXECUTOR,

Was organized in 1892 to act as Executor-Guardian and Trustee.

Many prudent men and women in every section of the State have named this Company Executor and trustee in their wills.

Inquiries cordially invited—no cost and confidential.

Capital Stock .....$ 1,000,000.00
Surplus earned .....$ 1,500,000.00
Held in trust.....$45,000,000.00

Woody's Art Glass Shop

Art Stained and Leaded Glass.

Church Windows a Specialty.

513 East Main Street, Richmond, Va.

XANTHINE

Will hereafter be sold in the new style bottle and package. Always best for the hair. Not a dye, but restores the color, promotes growth and prevents dandruff.

Price $1.00 at druggists, or sent prepaid by us.

XANTHINE CO., Richmond, Va.

CHRISTIAN PARENTS! YOUR BOYS

should go to Dr. Howard Guinness' Boys' Camp at Doe Lake, Northern Ontario, Canada, this summer. Its purpose is to lead them to know the Lord Jesus Christ as Saviour and Friend and strengthen them in the Christian Faith. Its situation and variety of activities are such that any boy would be more than happy there. Dr. Guinness is highly recommended by Dr. Dyson Hague, of Toronto.

Further information from:

Hon. Sec., Pioneer Camp for Boys

366 Bay St., Toronto 2, Ontario.

Thoughts For the Thoughtful

"He cannot serve the King who seeks only his own crown."

No one man can ever really succeed who has not had the courage to fail.—Dr. Wm. Porkess.

Whatsoever we beg of God, let us also work for it.—Jeremy Taylor.

"The world would lack many of its pictures of Paradise but for its Patmos prisoners."

"Be a faithful follower of Christ yourself, and you will make it easier for somebody else to be one."

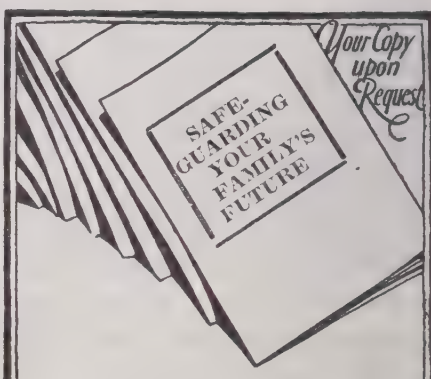
Not doing wrong, in the sense of merely not breaking the Commandments, no more makes a man a Christian than not breaking the piano makes him a musician.—Dr. Barry.

"People who live alone never get very well acquainted with themselves."

"A flower will have something sweet to tell you, no matter where you put it."

"Kindness is a recognition that we are all members one of another—the same kind of pottery in different stages of firing."

"There is no coinage in any Kingdom that comes out so distinctly marked, or rings so clear, as that human currency which bears the mint-mark of a Christian home."



"One may be sure one has somehow got on the wrong side when he ceases to feel indignation and hatred against the activities of sin."

"Whenever faith prays, it holds out both hands to receive the answer."

Christ of the Andes, Christ of everywhere.
Great lover of the hills, and the open air.
The patient lover of impatient men
Who blindly strive, and sin, and strive again.
Thou Living Word, larger than any creed.
Thou Love Divine, uttered in human deed.
O teach the world, warring and wandering still,
The way of peace, the footpath of good will.

—Van Dyke.

One of the old writers once said: "Two things a master commits to his servants, namely, the child and the child's clothes. It will be a poor excuse for the servant to say when the master returns, 'Sir, here are all the child's clothes neat and clean—but the child is lost'." And I would like to say to any teacher or professor or student that at the end of life's day it will be a poor excuse to give God if any one is compelled to say: "Lord, here are the soul's clothes; here is its wealth, its culture, and its fine linen—but the soul is lost."—Dr. Kerr, in Presbyterian Banner.

The American has just printed a booklet which gives authoritative information on the important subject of wills and modern methods of "Safeguarding Your Family's Future" (this is its title).

It will gladly mail you a copy, with no obligation on your part, upon request, as long as the supply lasts.

Kindly mention this paper.

AMERICAN
BANK AND TRUST COMPANY
Richmond, Virginia

CARPETS for CHURCHES

We carry a large stock of Church Carpets, embracing a wide assortment of designs, colorings and qualities and at prices to meet every requirement. Write and our representative will call with a selection of patterns and give an estimate, or we will send samples, at our expense, for your consideration.

Sydnor & Hundley

700 E. Grace Street, Richmond, Va.

Kill All Flies!

THEY SPREAD DISEASE

Placed anywhere, DAISY FLY KILLER attracts and kills all flies. Neat, clean, ornamental, convenient and cheap. Lasts all season. Made of metal, can't spill or tip over; will not soil or injure anything. Guaranteed.

Insist upon DAISY FLY KILLER from your dealer.

HAROLD SOMERS, Brooklyn N. Y.

LITTLE TEA ROOM

SANDWICHES

Special Prices to Clubs, Lodges and Parties

211 N. Jefferson Ran 3958
Richmond, Va.

SOUTHERN CHURCHMAN

Catholic for every truth of God; Protestant against every error of man.

EDITORIALS

Vol. 94. RICHMOND, VA., JUNE 29, 1929. No. 26.

"ADVANCED"

Encouraging promise of returning conservatism and sanity in our educational institutions everywhere is in the fact that of more than four hundred colleges and universities in the United States not more than half a dozen have been made so ridiculous or indecent at commencement time as to be advertised by the press associations and made objects of the adulations, photographic attentions and special writer pyrotechnics of yellow newspapers. Even Smith Female College, Northampton, Massachusetts, hitherto obtruding its un-American, anarchistic, irreligious, influences so persistently and offensively, seems to have been discouraged by indications of public weariness and disgust. It has attained the front pages of its yellow admirers but once recently and then but casually. Two of its loyal and representative students paraded the streets of the college town in one-piece bathing suits, exposing their persons to public observation to the extreme limit of the law. Presumably, and judging from past history, these enterprising young women were seeking and triumphantly obtained the cordial approval of their faculty and demonstration of the liberal and advanced view that modesty for their sex is an obsolete and absurd superstition. Probably much to their disappointment, they were not arrested by the police and so lost the supreme bliss and glory of having their names and pictures spread abroad.

Few of the other institutions favored us with the cheap circus and sideshow exhibitions so frequent in years recently past. The professional professors were not much in evidence. The blatant, ballyhoo brawler of blasphemies who hitherto has called so insistently for inspection of his freak theories and manufactured monsters of deduction has hardly been heard. The rhetorical acrobats, profane clowns, grotesque tumblers, posturers, high flying trapeze artists, dingily bespangled riders of tired old bareback heresies and frauds in the hastily made intellectual arenas, have been restrained, neglected, denied engagements, suppressed. The lady breathers and devourers of fire and "hot stuff", the strong women, showing how easily they could handle the most massive problems and juggle the most stupendous piles of fallacies, the fat ladies, presenting enormous accumulations of unassimilated information, the bearded ladies, shrieking for exact sex equality while privately cultivating whiskers of masculine privilege, habit and method, have been unseen and unheard, or held in unaccustomed and uncomfortable seclusion.

The scarcity of freaks, lunacies, attempted insult to Deity, ballyhoo and sensationalism, has been sore deprivation to the yellow editors and eager purveyors of stale filth and moral and mental poison. Living in atmosphere of evil-odors and low and mean association, they gasp and suffer in cleanliness and amid prevalence of clean common sense like so many obscene insects brought into pure and sanitary surroundings. The mass of the population, however, may find in the general quietude, good order and respect for the proprieties that have marked this month of beginning vacations and graduating classes assurance that the good taste, sound principles, decency, orthodoxy, stalwart faith and clean and clear thinking and instinct of the country have made themselves to be understood, felt and obeyed.

One institution made formal announcement that the honor system was abandoned. The enlightened student body was too far advanced in free thought to regard such fetter on ambition as a mere matter of honor—which, after all, is a thing of instinct and inheritance rather than of free thinking and untramelled reasoning. At another hive of mental industry and acquisition the yellow editor was given delicious wallowing and gloating by publication in the college magazine of stuff so vilely dirty as to attract the admiration and enlist the defence, against indignant police and legal authorities, of the Civil Liberties Union. At yet another there was an uplifting, modernist, free thought Episode of advanced and highly and modernly cultivated students expressing protest with showers of decayed eggs directed at an offending faculty, thereby illustrating gloriously, emancipation from the thraldom of respect for law and the amenities of civilization. These incidents were exceptional. It seems that, say, three hundred and ninety of the four hundred institutions of "higher learning" and all the minor schools gave examples of well trained, well behaved young Americans and of teachers realizing the dignity of their work and their serious responsibilities to the near and distant future.

One ballyhoo professor drew quite an audience, attained flaming head lines, of assorted colors, and through ten blissful, glorious, days was in print almost daily. This was Professor Robert E. Rogers, of, let us earnestly hope, somewhere in Massachusetts. In an address before the graduating class of the School of Technology of that much afflicted State he advised his youthful hearers to be snobs, to marry daughters of employers whenever possible, and so on. This was rather too yellow even for the yellowest of the yellows. So far as observed, every newspaper that has commented on the utterance has condemned and resented it. The professor, with the burning desire for the limelight characteristic of his kind, rushes into discussion with communications supposed to be in defense of his views, cloudy and confused as the usual expositions of "advanced" and "liberal" opinions and positions, but in exact harmony with them. He sees vast hope, he says, in the blend of the ideal and the practical in the thought, tendencies and character of typical young America. In the modernist, materialistic show there is no place for idealism. The life, death, words and teachings of the Saviour are the most magnificent idealism and they are sternly rejected and flippantly dismissed in the arena of the advanced.

At the entrance to that we are asked to pay all faith in Power beyond what we see and can handle and examine here, all hope and aspiration for nobler, sweeter life than we know here. For this price we are to be ushered into the acrid, loathsome scent of the cheap, coarse, soiled, to the companionship of poor tawdry creatures grinning and capering, like our Massachusetts professor; not earning honest wages, like the circus folk of real life, by strength and agility and courage and endurance, but laboriously serving their own vanity by doing all they can to destroy happiness, darken and embitter death, add stings to grief and snatch from it all rays of comfort and light.

The professor's philosophy is that of which we have had intermittent outpourings from Europe the last two centuries and broken, usually cautious, doses presented from imported talent or decadent natives. This is the philosophy beginning and ending in nothing and nowhere, considering us human beings as creatures accidentally spawned on this planet, originated without directing intelligence, destined to extinction. To the reasoning that limits our lives and hopes and purposes to the thirty, sixty, eighty, years we are to be parts of this world, advice to be a snob, cheat, liar, is exactly logical and appropriate. Honor, truth, love, patriotism, courage, are intangible, frequently unprofitable if measured by present and direct results. If there be nothing in us nor for us but our senses, appetites, passions, mental, emotional, physical, desires, it is foolish waste to concern ourselves with anything but gratification of them. Therefore, from this philosophy—and it is strictly modernist and materialistic philosophy—we should be snobs enthusiastically and consistently. We should gather what small portions we can find and contain from the illimitable stores of knowledge and proceed to strut and posture and parade the acquisitions. Also, money, if by any means it can be acquired, and ancestry and family connections, if any exist or can be claimed. With nothing beyond the near or distant funeral and grave, satisfaction of vanity, the luxurious inflation of publicity, are controlling motives, naturally. Therefore do the freaks, the mentally and morally defective, deformed, perverted, push forward with feverish anxiety to exhibit their own deformities, disfigurements, abnormalities, obtruding them clamorously and ostentatiously. For them there can be nothing higher than prominence, good or bad, temporary or lasting, before their fellow men, nothing to be sought beyond the frivolities, coarseness, ease and comfort of the body that may give some pleasure sometimes.

For those of us believing there is more meaning for life than the material, more for the mind than coveting or calculating or gathering gauds or ponderous equipment for display, nothing is more sacred, holier, more beautiful, than the love for each other of an honest, manly man and an honest, womanly woman, the mutually generous partnership, exchange of surrenders, self-sacrifice, of husband and wife, father and mother and faithful children. All that, the gifted and progressive Professor Rogers tells us and the young men looking to him for instruction and elevation is bosh—superstition, obsolete folly and discarded weakness, to be classed and thrown aside along with such relics of barbarism as belief in a Supreme Being and life after the life here. The wise, fine, manlike, chivalric policy of the young gentlemen graduated from this school of technology is to marry the daughter of the boss, if possible. They are to suppress natural, manly affection—for the fine and attractive young woman stenographer, several newspapers suggest—lie to and cheat some woman to obtain advancement and money from her family, make marriage a sordid trade, a temporary mating, like that of some inferior animals—companionate marriage, of which we heard so much from some of the cheap circus and sideshow institutions a year or so ago. It is the Russian Bolshevik conception of the holy estate of matrimony, slightly refined to accommodate our old-fashioned fundamentalist laws. It is the upas tree of modernism, materialism, "liberal thought", brought to its logical, inevitable, natural, horrible, deadly fruition.

Alfred B. Williams.

OUR LORD'S RETURN

2 Timothy 3-16

SOME people tell us when we take up prophecy, there is no use trying to understand it. But Paul says: "All Scripture is . . . profitable for doctrine, etc." If God doesn't mean to have us study the prophecies, He wouldn't have put them into the Bible. Some are fulfilled, and He is at work fulfilling the rest.

We are told how He is going to come. When those disciples stood looking up into heaven at the time of His ascension, there appeared two angels, who said unto them (Acts 1:11), "Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven."

Some have tried to tell the very day He would come. Perhaps that is one of the reasons why people do not believe this doctrine. He is coming, we know that, but just when He is coming we do not know. Matthew 24:36 settles that. Christ tells us to watch. "Therefore be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not, the Son of Man cometh."

Some people say that this means death; but the Word of God does not say this means death. John 21:23 seems to settle the matter.

There is another mistake, as you will find if you read your Bible carefully. Some people think that at the coming of Christ everything is to be done up in a few minutes; but I do not so understand it. The first thing He is to do is to take His Church out of the world. He calls the Church His Bride, and He says He is going to prepare a place for Her.

In the closing verses of the fourth chapter of 1 Thessalonians, Paul says: "If we believe that Christ died and rose again, even so also them which sleep in Jesus will God bring with Him. . . . We which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not precede them which are asleep. For the Lord Himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first. Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with these words." That is the comfort of the Church. Dean Alford says that he must insist that this coming of Christ to take His Church to Himself in the clouds is not the same event as His coming to judge the world at the last day. The deliverance of the Church is one thing, judgment is another. The trump of God may be sounded, for anything we know, before I finish this sermon —at any rate, we are told that He will come as a thief in the night, and at an hour when many look not for Him.

In the first chapter of 1 Thessalonians, Paul says: "Ye turned to God from idols to serve the living and true God, and to wait for His Son from heaven, whom He raised from the dead, even Jesus, which delivered us from the wrath to come." To wait for His Son; that is the true attitude of every child of God. Then over in the next chapter (1 Thess. 2:19) he says: "For what is our hope, or joy, or crown of rejoicing? Are not even ye in the presence of our Lord Jesus Christ at His coming?" And again, in the third chapter, at the thirteenth verse: "To the end that He may establish your hearts unblamable in holiness before God, even the Father, at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ with all His saints." Still again, in the fifth chapter: "For yourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night." He has something to say about this same thing in every chapter. Indeed, I have thought that this epistle to the Thessalonians might be called the Gospel of Christ's coming again.

There are three great facts foretold in the Word of God. First, that Christ should come; that has been fulfilled. Second, that the Holy Ghost should come; that was fulfilled at Pentecost. Third, the return of our Lord from heaven—for this we are told to watch and wait till He come.

Take the account of the words of Christ at the communion table. It seems to me that the devil has covered up the most precious thing about it, "For as often as ye eat this bread and drink this cup ye do show forth the Lord's death till he come."

Some people say: "I believe Christ will come on the other side of the millennium." Where do you get it? I cannot find it. I do not find any place where the Lord says the world is to grow better and better. I find that the earth is to grow worse and worse, and at length there is going to be a separation. "Two women grinding at a mill—one taken and the other left; two men in one bed—one taken and the other left." The Church is to be translated out of the world, and we have two examples already, in Christ's kingdom, of what is to be done for all true believers. Enoch is the representative of the first dispensation, Elijah of the second, and as a representative of the third dispensation, we have the Saviour Himself, who became the first fruits of them that slept.

Now some of you think this is a new and strange doctrine, and that they who preach it are speckled birds. But let me tell you that most of the spiritual men in the pulpits of Great Britain are firm in this faith. I have heard Newman Hall say that he knew no reason why Christ might not come before he got through with his sermon. But in certain wealthy and fashionable churches, where they have the form of godliness, but deny the power thereof—this doctrine is not preached or believed. We live in the day of shams in religion. The Church is cold and formal; may God wake us up! And I know of no better way to do it than to get the Church to looking for the return of our Lord. I have felt like working three times as hard ever since I came to understand that my Lord is coming again. I look upon this world as a wrecked vessel. God has given me a lifeboat, and said to me, "Moody, save all you can." God will come in judgment and burn up this world, but the children of God do not belong to this world; they are in it, but not of it. This world is getting darker and darker; its ruin is coming nearer and nearer. If you have any friends on this wreck unsaved, you had better lose no time in getting them off. But some one will say, "Do you, then, make the grace of God a failure?" No; grace is not a failure, but man is. Man has been a failure everywhere, when he has had his own way and been left to himself. Christ will save His Church, but He will save them finally by taking them out of the world.

"Behold, I come quickly," said Christ to John and the last prayer in the Bible is, "Even so, Lord Jesus, come quickly." Were the early Christians disappointed then? No; no man is disappointed who obeys God. The world waited for the first coming of the Lord four thousand years and then He came. He was here only thirty-three years and then He went away; but He left us a promise that He would come again; and as the world watched and waited for His first coming and did not watch in vain so now to them WHO WAIT for His appearing shall He appear a second time unto salvation.—Selected.

SPIRITUAL HEALING

Venerable F. W. Neve, D. D,, Archdeacon

SO MUCH has been written on the subject of healing that it would take a great deal of time to read all the literature on the subject.

I will, therefore, take up a special line of thought and carry it through without attempting to review the different theories on the subject.

We are all made up of bodies, minds and souls and health consists not merely in the normal condition of the body alone, but of the three parts of our nature working harmoniously together.

For instance, the mind is so closely related to the body that any acute distress of the mind, such as fear or anxiety, may seriously affect our bodily health. An extreme example of this is the case of a mother whose distress or anxiety of mind so affected the milk with which she nourished her baby that it fatally poisoned the child. There is the fable, too, of the man meeting the Plague as he entered a city. He asked the spirit how many people it had killed and the reply was, "Not very many, most of them were killed by fear."

This is, of course, a mere fable, but it represents a truth. We have all of us experienced, in a mild form, this truth by suffering from headache caused by worry. It is possible that a great deal of the sickness and disease from which mankind is suffering is due to mental causes. According to the Book of Proverbs ancient wisdom taught that, "A merry heart doeth good like a medicine, but a broken spirit drieth the bones," which corresponds very closely to the new learning.

Leaving the mind we may go still further into the life within and say that the soul or spirit also affects both mind and body. Sin is not only a disturbing element in our nature, but may directly affect the health in various ways, which is generally recognized. For instance, hatred or ill will may poison the mind and through the mind affect the body, which shows how closely related and interdependent body, mind and soul are.

But it is not necessary to go further into this part of the subject as I suppose what I have said will be generally admitted. If, however, what I have said is true, it proves that an ordinary physician, dealing merely with bodily symptoms, may not reach the real cause of the disease, and, therefore, his remedies may be of no avail, or only partially successful. The medical profession has come to recognize this and psychotherapy or healing of the mind, is recognized as an important department of medicine. This is something, however, which the ordinary practitioner is not likely to be proficient in.

Here, it seems to me, lies open a field of great usefulness for the Church and its failure in time past to enter this field has resulted in the loss of many of its members who have been drawn away by Christian Science and similar movements which have made a specialty of mental and spiritual healing. It is true that some work along these lines is now being done by the Church under the authority and approval of the General Convention. But it is only here and there that this is the case, although I should not wonder if literature on the subject is not reaching some of our people and creating a good deal of interest.

It seems to me that the regular services of the Church do not meet this particular need and that it would be well if meetings for the consideration of health matters could be held regularly as one of the normal activities of the Church. Such meetings might, in the first instance, be announced as intended to promote the mental and spiritual well being of the people with special reference to the affects and influence of such well being upon the general health of those who attended.

It may, of course, be said that this merely suggests The Emmanuel Movement started in Boston by Dr. Elwood Worcester some years ago. This is true, but I think the work done at Emmanuel Church in Boston came to an end not because it was not a success, so far as attaining results was concerned, but because they were overrun with people from all parts of the country. The Nazarene Society is, however, carrying on a similar work, and is gradually extending its influence throughout the Church.

It seems to me, however, that the need can be met as I have suggested above, by every Church having its own department of health work as a regular and normal branch of the parish activities which can, if it chooses, be linked up with the Society of the Nazarene, or some similar movement, or work along its own lines under the leadership, however, of the rector of the parish.

It would, of course, be clearly understood that this part of the Church's work would not seek to supersede or interfere in any way with the work of the physician, but should be regarded as merely supplementary and it might very well be carried on with sympathetic understanding and cooperation with him. This, in fact, is the attitude of the Church on the subject.

This health work should be based upon the truth that the ideal to be arrived at should be not merely a sound mind in a sound body but that above and beyond this the soul must be in a healthy condition as well and that the physical, mental and spiritual well being of the individual depends upon the relations of these various parts of our nature being kept in harmony and their equilibrium maintained. This would rule out a very prevalent idea that such a clinic or meeting was simply intended to heal people's bodily diseases.

To avoid this misconception the interdependence of the soul, mind and body should be fully emphasized and held clearly and distinctly before the minds of the people at every meeting or service.

The great advantage of gathering the people together in this way instead of dealing with people individually is that you have the Church acting as a unit with the combined influence of its various members acting as the Body of Christ and with the consciousness of Christ's assured presence with His people. Intercession would, of course, figure largely in such a service and requests for prayer would be given or sent in and time allowed for the concentration of the minds of those present upon each particular case by a short interval of silence after each name or case was read out.

II.

It may be well here to turn to certain aspects of the question which seem to show that Nature herself is on the side of health and that her cooperation can be counted on in various ways. For instance the human body possesses a recuperative power which is manifest not merely in the body as a whole, but in its most minute parts. A cut or bruise will commence healing at once and it is probable that this healing process is at work somewhere in the body all the time.

The physician recognizes the fact that his mission is merely to assist Nature and that any cure which takes place is due to Nature herself, his part merely consisting in helping her to do her work. The period of convalescence after an acute illness is the time when the body is busily employed in bringing its condition back to normal; in fact, it is probable that many cases of sickness would be cured without the intervention of a doctor, though recovery might be delayed through the absence of the help which he could give. This has been proved by observation of out of the way districts, where medical help was not available. At any rate, the human body is endowed with recuperative powers which would certainly prove that Nature is on the side of health.

A very remarkable fact has also been discovered which reinforces the above argument, and that is that there is a wonderful power connected with the suggestion to the subconscious mind of thoughts of health and improvement.

This was first discovered, I think, in connection with hypnotism, when the ordinary consciousness is put to sleep. It was afterwards found, however, that this placing of the patient in a hypnotic condition was not necessary. All that he had to do was to keep quiet and yield himself up to the will of the person practicing on him. A still further discovery was made—that it was quite possible for the patient himself to make the suggestion with equally good results. This Method, which is called autosuggestion is associated in our minds with the well-known works of Dr. Coue, of Nancy, France, who has lectured on the subject in this country.

The power of suggestion has been proved without a question, by a large mass of proved facts which cannot be gainsaid. It is important to note, however, that this power of suggestion is the real basis upon which the numerous cults of healing rest. Christian Science and various other methods of mental healing, all use suggestion and without it they would fail to accomplish the results which they put forward as proofs of their various theories and systems of thought and philosophy.

It is, therefore, not necessary to accept the teachings of Christian Science in order to get the benefits of mental healing, nor to give up one's belief in the existence of disease and pain, or in the existence of matter. All this intellectual paraphernalia is a kind of excess baggage, which it is not necessary to pay for, because the simple suggestion to the sub-conscious mind, can bring about the same results. It should be said, however, that Christian Science has rendered good service in directing the attention of people generally, to the importance of keeping the mind free from morbid thoughts and ideas, and concentrating their attention more and more upon thoughts which suggest health for the body and peace and freedom from anxiety and fear, for the mind and the soul.

Criticism of that part of their system which seems to us mistaken and unreasonable, should not hinder us from recognizing the truth which is contained in it. It may, however, be said, that the truths referred to can be held and practiced just as well by a member of the Episcopal Church as by a Christian Scientist.

The above statements with regard to suggestion, do not imply that its application is always successful nor should it take the place of regular medical treatment. Some persons are far more susceptible to suggestion than others and there are some diseases which are much more easily cured by suggestion than others.

I can remember in my own experience, curing a man who had gotten into such a nervous condition that he thought he was going to die at any moment and was afraid to leave his house. By persistently suggesting to him that there was nothing seriously the matter with him, I gradually restored his self-confidence and got him, first of all, into his garden—then out into the road and, day by day, a little further from his house, until in about two weeks' time I had coaxed him a mile away from home and by that time he was cured.

Another case was that of a lady whose son had been accidentally drowned a few days before. I found her in an hysterical condition, crying out and saying that she could see her son's body in the water. Her husband was scolding her and trying to bring her to her senses in that way. I remembered that her hobby was homeopathy, so I asked her advice about an ailment I had and which especial remedy would suit my case. Instantly every symptom of hysteria disappeared and she was in a perfectly normal condition, giving me her advice about the proper treatment; her attention had simply been diverted from one subject to another by suggestion.

It may be said here, that it works negatively as well for I have in mind a case of an old man who had been suffering from influenza. The disease had spent itself and the doctor said there was no reason at all why he shouldn't get entirely well. He did not, however, wish to live and his mind was set not on getting well, but on dying. This autosuggestion had a depressing effect upon the vital energies which were working for his recovery, and, after some time, he passed the point where, as a doctor said, there was no longer a chance of his coming back.

III.

We will now return to a further discussion of the help which the Church might give to individuals and the community in the matter of health, by which I mean the health of our whole nature, body, mind and soul. We have seen that nature is evidently on the side of health. We know, too, that Christ spent a good deal of His time in healing the sick and in this way revealed not only His divine power, but the love and sympathy of God towards suffering humanity.

We know also that He commissioned His apostles and disciples not only to preach the Gospel, but to heal the sick and that The Acts of the Apostles reveals the fact that His followers carried on the work of healing after His departure. His Church, as His Body, was intended by Him as the principal instrument through which He could continue to bless humanity. The Church has often been referred to as the extension of The Incarnation and St. Paul refers to it as, "The fulness of Him that filleth all in all", which would seem to imply that being filled with His Spirit it is linked up with resources capable of enabling it to meet the needs of humanity.

By gathering together His people for the express purpose of their placing themselves at His disposal for the carrying out of His will and purpose, they may well believe and feel confident that His Spirit will so use them as to make them channels of His power and blessings, so that healing of soul and mind and body may be manifested and that they themselves will necessarily share in the blessing. We cannot, of course, dictate to Him just what results we expect His power to bring about. There may be hidden causes at work which we know nothing about and which may hinder the working of His power. We know this from the fact that it was said of Him in the Gospels that, "He could do no mighty works there because of their unbelief." We remember also that He said to two blind men, "According to your faith be it unto you." There are other similar causes which may well act as hindrances to the exercise of His power.

Enough, however, has been said to show that the Church is capable of meeting a great need which can only partially be met in other ways. The soul of man may be said to be the fountain head of his personal life and that neither mind or body can really be in a perfectly healthy condition unless the soul is in union with Christ and is sustained and strengthened by sharing in His divine life. It is in communion with Christ and through trust in Him and surrender to His will that the mind can be really at peace and feel the blessedness of a life hidden in Him. Such a life is bound to affect the body in a number of different ways, which will influence its health and well being; in fact, we could hardly realize any condition which would be more conducive to the general health and well being of our whole nature than the kind of life we have just described.

Now, the Church is the only means that one can think of which can bring about such a life experience and, therefore, it seems to me that a responsibility rests upon her to carry on the kind of health work described in the first part of this essay, either in the way sugegsted or some other way which may seem better adapted to the needs of each community, and it should not be forgotten that such a regular health service might well form a center from which would radiate out, in all directions and to the whole community, higher ideals of life and service than are repre-

FAVORITE SCRIPTURE VERSES

(In this space each week will appear a favorite passage of Scripture as sent in by a different reader. Every one is, therefore, invited to send us their favorite verse. It is suggested that all who can, join with the rest of us in committing to memory the verse which so appears here each week, including its location in the Holy Book; and in due time your memory chest will be laden with choice eternal treasures, indeed. "Thy word have I hid in my heart, that I might not sin against thee"Ps. 119:11.)

This week the following verse was submitted by Mrs. E. A. V. Herritage, Edenton, N. C.:

> "Fear thou not; for I am with thee; be not dismayed; for I am thy God; I will strengthen thee; yea, I will help thee; yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness" (Isaiah 41:10.

Who will send one from the far-away places as well very near us?

EARLIEST OF CHURCH ASSEMBLAGES IN AMERICA

Alfred B. Williams

MET AMID A STORM—1856.

Probably the members of the Convention of 1856 realized promptly that a mistake had been made in placing the session at Philadelphia, October 1-21. A fiercely contested presidential election, of which Philadelphia was one of the crucial points, was but a month away and Philadelphia and Pennsylvania conducted, while the Convention sat, bitter political fights. Riots in Baltimore, Philadelphia and elsewhere were reported almost daily. James Buchanan, democratic nominee for President, elected just a month later, was a member of the Convention. Against him were Fremont and Fillmore. Fremont, nominee of the new-born Republican, or anti-slavery, party, was being denounced daily by opposing newspapers and speakers, as a Roman Catholic in disguise and accused of being a native of Canada. Fillmore, old Whig and Know Nothing, corresponded closely to the present-day Ku Klux. It is easy to understand that amid such a swirl of external fury there could be little hope for constructive and deliberative work by this Convention. The Church histories give it but scant notice. The Philadelphia and other newspapers sandwiched mention of it between vindictive denunciations of political opponents; election forecasts and accounts of crimes and notices of attractions at local theatres.

Sessions were held in St. Luke's Church. Discussions were on a proposition from New York for enlargement of the membership of the General Convention and suggestions for regulation of church music. Speaking on the latter question, one clergyman said he had recently attended a service at the end of which the organ performed a tune so lively that as he walked out he felt incited to a jig. Debate on the manner of trial of delinquent or unworthy bishops continued through three days and there was further exchange of opinions and claims regarding the bequest of Mr. Kohn, of South Carolina or Pennsylvania, to the General Theological Seminary, carrying with it influential representation in the board of trustees for the diocese of which he might be adjudged to have been a member. This seems to have been settled by evidence that the matter of citizenship was before the civil courts and would be determined by their decision. In the contemporary newspapers the Convention disappears in a cloud of election figures and jubilations on one side and protests on the other and the Church histories practically ignore it.

CALHOUN'S HOPE IN CHURCH POWER.

In 1859 the Triennial Convention met for the first time in a Southern city, at Richmond, in St. Paul's Church, October 5-22. The Richmond Enquirer greeted the body with a leading editorial congratulating the Church on its conservatism on the slavery question. It quoted John C. Calhoun, dead nine years before, as saying that one of the strongest hopes for the preservation of the Union was the spiritual and ecclesiastical ties binding the people of the different sections together. The Enquirer bemoaned the snapping of these ties by the divisions of the Baptist and Methodist denominations and expressed its fervent hope that the Episcopalians would hold together. It gave notice that most of its news space, in the next two weeks, would be given to the Convention and it fulfilled that promise with more than forty columns, in small type and set solid, of reports of the proceedings, giving many of the speeches in full.

The opening sermon was by Bishop Otey, of Tennessee, Bishops Chase of New Hampshire and Upfold of Indiana, reading the service. In this convention, for the first time, so far as records show, editors of Church papers and newspaper reporters were admitted to the floor, "if room could be made for them". Probably the most significant and important feature of the meeting was the wonderful absolute absence of the slightest suggestion of sectional or political animosity. The John Brown raid on Harper's Ferry occurred while the Convention was in session, and the Civil War actually began less than eighteen months after the Convention's adjournment; but the body went on quietly with its work, planning for the future and with the usual courtesies and amenities and no allusion at all to the fearful storm cloud gathered over the country.

Most of the time was consumed with persistent attempts of lay delegates to secure limitations on the power of the bishops; to require the bishops to furnish reasons, promptly, for vetoes of acts of the lower house; to provide for a court of appeals for cases of clergymen disciplined by bishops or bishops punished by their fellow bishops.

October 13 four bishops were consecrated—Wm. H. Odenheimer, New Jersey, and G. Thurston Bedell, assistant bishop of Ohio, in St. Paul's Church; Henry B. Whipple, Minnesota, in St. James; Alexander Gregg, Texas, in the Monumental. The preliminary papers for the organization of the Diocese of Kansas were presented and accepted. The House of Bishops had planned to conduct the consecration in the Capitol Square, weather permitting, but the Lower House opposed. Bishop Kemper, missionary bishop of the Northwest, resigned after twenty-four years of faithful service, and the Convention adopted very eulogistic resolutions in his honor.

Chicago made a strong and earnest appeal for the next session of the Convention and the speeches boomed that city and the West generally as vigorously as any citizen of city and section could do it today. Incidentally, it was said that Chicago had three hotels as good as the Exchange Hotel at Richmond, and that St. John's Church was offered for the use of the Convention, because it was the one in the city large enough for the purpose. San Francisco and Buffalo also were applicants, but both were rejected. The Lower House voted for Chicago, but the action was vetoed by the bishops. A test vote showed one hundred and thirty-two clerical and lay delegates. The secretary of the Society for the Increase of the Ministry reported that it had obtained $10,000 in six months, most of it from Connecticut, and already had thirty-seven beneficiaries studying for the ministry.

One of the longest debates was on a proposition to permit shortening of the probation period for deacons when circumstances made such action advisable; but no decision was reached.

CALM CONFIDENCE AMID HORROR.

Historians apparently have not considered nor analyzed the General Convention that sat in St. John's Chapel, New York City, from October 1-17, 1862, at a crucial and bloody time of the Civil War, while details of the great battle of Antietam, or Sharpsburg, fought September 17, with ghastly descriptions of the long rows of dead soldiers, were filling the newspapers. Perhaps there is not another instance in human history of a body of men assembled in such tumult of fury and horror governed by such kindly discretion, loyalty to the ideal of Christian and Church unity and calm common sense. It is intensely impressive to turn, in the old files, from first pages crowded with carnage and the fearful incidents of war, to inner pages showing the Convention placidly engaged in its business. Bishop Hopkins, Vermont, presided in the House of Bishops in place of Bishop Potter, Pennsylvania, detained by illness. Bishop McCoskry, Michigan, preached the opening sermon, rebuking the prevalent tendencies to irreverence and the introduction of politics in pulpits and Church. The Rev. Dr. Creek was chosen chairman and the Rev. Dr. Rusdell secretary of the House of Deputies. The names of eleven dioceses in the Southern Confederacy were called in order and those dioceses were reported simply as absent. In brief debate absolute confidence that the Church would reunite, whatever the result of the war might be, was expressed. The report of the Sunday showed that about twenty-five per cent of its sales of books had been to the Southern dioceses. The statistical report of the Church showed decline of 15,000 communicants from 1859. From 1853 to 1859 there had been increase from 105,000 to 139,000, the largest proportionate gain in the history of the Church to that date.

Nearly a day was consumed in discussion of a change in the Prayer Book, proposed by the Rev. Alexander Vinton, stoutly opposed by Judge Hoffman, of New York, and the Rev. Dr. Hawks, who declared the Book to be sacred and inviolable next to the Holy Scriptures, but who withdrew opposition on learning that the change was merely to correct a typographical error. Speeches by Horatio Seymour, afterward Governor of New York and Democratic nominee for President, in 1868, and others, regarding the proper attitude toward the Southern dioceses were furnished the newspapers and printed in full. All were conciliatory, so far as Church relations went. A demand that the Southern dioceses be excluded from fellowship and membership because in them the Prayer Book had been changed to make prayers for the Confederate States and President, was shelved, apparently by general consent.

October 8 was set aside and observed as a day of fasting, humiliation and prayer. After that the Convention quietly turned attention to such matters as revision of the metrical psalms, permitting bishops to shorten the probation periods for candidates for holy orders, at their discretion, and consideration of the work of the Church missionary in Paris. The last day was employed with a visit to the charitable institutions in and near New York. The pastoral address, while declaring positively the fidelity of the Northern Churchmen to the Union, was charitable in its allusions to the Southern members of the Church and optimistic in prediction of complete reunion and restoration.

Some Reflections

J. W. Ware.

To one viewing and considering prayerfully the situation existing in the effort to extend and strengthen the reign of the Christ on the Earth, the question presents itself—What does the King think? not—What would He think.

1. In regard to the attitude between the conservatives and the liberals, defining the former as those who insist on retaining the revealed truths and doctrines as taught by our (Episcopal) Church; the latter those who insist on breaking away from the same, without withdrawing from the Church's ministry as authorized teachers. Is the attitude kindly? When one party accuses the other of being unenlightened, ignorant? The other charges (neither in kindly terms) the opposing class as being wilful enemies of the King. Such attitude estranges. Shall we say hopelessly?

Does the King approve?

2. The second question is—which view exalts the Son of God more highly? To my mind there is not a shadow of doubt. And the devoted Christian is more intensely concerned with this aspect of the controversy. Judged by the natural, inevitable fruits of each aspect, the conservatives should influence the Christian, jealous of His Saviour's honor. Which view the more exalts the King; that which believes that He was miraculously conceived, and born of a virgin, or that His conception and birth were according to the order of nature? If the latter view be accepted, what follows? Then John the Baptist has a stronger claim on our reverence, since he was born in wedlock, and he, too, died for the truth. Which view exalts Him as one worthy of our worship? Is it not that which accepts the Scriptural statement that angelic choirs sang His praises when He become incarnate; that at His baptism a voice from heaven declared, "This is my beloved Son," that which affirms He is God—as He Himself declared; that He performed miracles, even rising from the dead, and ascending on high in the presence of many witnesses?

If these beliefs can be sustained by an appeal to the Scriptures; if a belief in these claims is sustained by the testimony of men contemporary with these events, who suffered and died for the facts of which they had personal knowledge, shall we not with St. Thomas, worship Him as "My Lord and my God?"

Which view does Christ approve?

If the conservatives find the joy in service for Him which gives them peace; love for Him because He redeemed us on His cross, and in this faith can endure all things, and can go rejoicing to meet Him, why seek to impoverish them?

At any rate, if we must differ, let it be with sympathy and when we "speak the truth", let it be in love.

Let us seek to think the Christ's thought, speak His words, and emulate His life.

Letters to the Editor

In this Department the Editor will at all times welcome communications expressing opinions on the various topics which are engaging the attention of the Church. But the Editor will not hold himself responsible for such opinions.

No "Letters to the Editor" will appear in our columns except those coming to us signed by writer.

Mr. Editor:

I am glad that you reviewed the book, "The Master". It had not before been properly reviewed, so far as I have seen. It has been commended as charming; and yet it would be poison to put into the hands of one whose faith was not well-established. Its very charmingness makes it the more dangerous. So thanks to you!

Perhaps the "falling short of the quota" is due as much to THAT kind of preaching and teaching, far more than to the teachings complained of by Mr. Marsilliot, which are credited to the other extremists.

If there is nothing more gripping and vital to PREACH than this diluted stuff, who would care to make sacrifice to propagate that.

Again, this "Pact of Reconciliation" that has been much written about. Since Virginia accepts that, WHAT remains of any value in the Church over and above and beyond what the two hundred denominations have that have come into existence in modern times? Since the Church is NOT a Divine Organism, NOT the Body of Christ, since there are REALLY no sacraments authorized, and no authorized ministry; and since a ministry instituted, say, by our minister, Mr. Wesley, is in all matters equal, and since the bishops created by him (via superintendents) are entirely approved—why should the Church continue? It would be more economical to disband?

Well, in this town we all work together quite happily; and any one of the divisions are as friendly with the Church (and sometimes more so), as with one another.

Randolph R. Claiborne.

Camden, Ark.

FRESH AIR FOR FRAIL CITY CHILDREN.

Mr. Editor:

At the beginning of this summer season, when one's thought turns instinctively to escape from the city's heat, and when so-called Fresh Air programs for the children of the poor are occupying the attention of generous and constructively-thinking people, may I bring to the attention of your readers something of the summer work of the Episcopal City Mission Society, now entering upon its thirty-second Fresh Air season?

Year after year, this Society, since the beginning of its Fresh Air work in 1897, has been gradually developing its vacation facilities with one actuating ideal. That ideal will this summer, we believe, be realized more fully than we once dared to hope.

Briefly stated, the golden text of our Fresh Air work for frail city children and their mothers, is this: To make these holidays in the country not only times for pleasuring and relief from the city's heat and congestion, but opportunity for building up health reserves and for developing character.

To attain this idea, it has been necessary, gradually, to extend our work to accommodate various age-groups and to adapt the vacation program to their various needs. As this coming season opens, we will be able to take care of a total of 1,676 girls and boys and their mothers, or an increase of four hundred over our capacity of last year.

This Society now has nine Fresh Air units, each developed for the specific needs of a definite group. Several of these units are unique in that they offer certain facilities not usually found in Fresh Air centers.

Tired mothers can come to Schermerhorn House at Milford, Connecticut, on Long Island Sound, and bring their families with them. Their children are placed each in his or her respective group. The mother is free to rest and know that they are safe and near her. Little pale, growing girls in their teens may come each summer to frolic in the Cottage at Milford and get a new grasp on normal health. Skinney little boys who haunt the city's hot curbs and sticky hall-ways, learn at Camp Wepawaug at Milford, and at Camp Wanasquetta at Bear Mountain, the joy of swimming and hiking and singing around the camp fires in the cool stillness of summer woods.

In other words, our Fresh Air centers are designed to accommodate and to serve the needs of every age-group. Help us to make the joy of a real country vacation available to as many mothers and children as we have places for, with our increased capacity. Is there a more gracious gift which we can make to these wistful children than to give them a glimpse of the world as God made it?

L. Ernest Sunderland, Superintendent,
The New York Protestant Episcopal City Mission Society.

Church Intelligence

University of the South Holds Commencement.

The sixty-first commencement of the University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn., which occurred on June 5-11, closed (in the words of Vice-Chancellor Finney), "The most successful year in the history of the University."

In his annual report to the Board of Trustees on June 6, Dr. Finney said: "The year has been marked by four outstanding events: first, the largest enrollment; second, the largest graduating class; third, the winding up of the debt fund, including the cancellation of our bonds; and fourth, the completion of the Million Dollar Endowment Fund."

Commencement Sunday, June 9, opened with a celebration of the Holy Communion in All Saints' Chapel. At eleven o'clock the commencement sermon was preached by the Rt. Rev. H. P. Almon Abbott, D. D., Bishop of Lexington. It was a masterly sermon in keeping with the known ability of Bishop Abbott, and made a profound impression on students, faculty, trustees and residents alike. His text was, "As many as received Him, to them gave He power to become." At the conclusion, in his charge to the senior class, Bishop Abbott said:

"My dear friends, members of the graduating class: I have been speaking this morning upon the Power that there is in Christ to Become. The application to yourselves is obvious. Here you stand, upon the very threshold of your careerful life. You are about to begin your work in the world and you have only one life to live. I am anxious that you should make not only the most of it, but the best of it. It is possible to make the most of life without any religious creed whatsoever save adherence to an abjective moral code which you adopt to live up to on your own strength. You can make the most of life in that respect in making a great deal of money, or in making a name for yourself. But to make the best of life, is not only to get out of life what life has to give, but to make your personal contribution to life. To do that to the uttermost you must be a follower of Jesus Christ. You will then have a power within you that will enable you to achieve the highest cultural climaxes of existence. Religion is not only a life, religion is the life of God within the soul, enabling us to make the best of life. St. John said of Christ, 'As many as received Him to them gave He power to become'; but He also said, 'As many as received Him, to them gave He power to become Sons of God'. To become, through Christ, a son of God, is to make the best of life, inclusive of the most of life, if needs be, and to make the world a better place for your passing through it."

Tuesday, June 11, was commencement day, attended with all the colorful ceremony which marks that day at Sewanee. The long procession consisted of the choir, the senior class, the faculties of the university, the trustees, a great company of vested clergy, and eight bishops. An unusual feature in the procession was the faculty of the University of Chattanooga, who attended in a body in honor of their new president, Alexander Guerry, an alumnus of the University of the South and who was honored with the degree of D. C. L. by his Alma Mater.

The University Oration was delivered by Dr. Archibald Henderson, of the University of North Carolina. Degrees in course were awarded by Vice-Chancellor Finney to fifty-one men—forty-three from the college and eight from the theological school. Eighteen states were represented in the class—including Connecticut, Washington, Wisconsin and Arizona.

The Chancellor, Bishop Gailor, conferred the honorary degrees of D. D. upon: the Rt. Rev. A. S. Thomas, Bishop of South Carolina; the Rt. Rev. H. P. Almon Abbott, D. D., Bishop of Lexington; the Rev. Warren Wade Way, of St. Mary's School, Raleigh, N. C. (whose son was a member of the graduating class); and the degree of D. C. L. upon Alexander Guerry and Frank Hoyt Gailor.

It was an affecting scene when these two latter—young men who grew up together almost from infancy in Sewanee and received their education there—one the son of the late Bishop Guerry, former Chaplain of the University who began the building of the Chapel in which his son was honored, the other the son of Bishop Gailor, a Rhodes Scholar, and now prominent in the law—presented themselves before the Chancellor who, in conferring these degrees of D. C. L., had the distinction of bestowing the honor on his own son.

AID ASKED FOR YEOCOMICO CHURCH.

The Sum of Fourteen Hundred Dollars Needed to Complete the Repair Work.

Yeocomico Church, an original Colonial building, erected in 1666 in Westmoreland County, Virginia, the Church attended by the parents of General George Washington, and where George Washington was christened in 1732, is in need of aid to complete the repairs which have been undertaken to preserve its venerable and historic walls.

A detailed report shows that the outer walls have been repaired and the whole strengthened by a reinforced concrete plate hidden from view, and a good coat of plaster put on the interior. A new floor has been put in under the pews, under which concrete was laid to prevent the entrance of rodents. A new roof of Oregon fir, securely bolted to the concrete plate and trussed to sustain the weight and force of storms, and covered with creosoted cedar shingles stained a moss green, has been put on. The unsightly flues that marred the appearance of the building have been removed and a chimney in harmony with the original structure has been erected in the east angle of the wall. This has been built to accommodate a furnace should one be desired in the future. old ceiling, which was partly built of drawn oak clap boards had to be removed, and it is the wish of the Association to restore this ceiling as it appeared in the original structure. It is estimated that this will entail an additional expenditure of about fourteen hundred dollars. But the funds are exhausted and the Association's credit strained to the limit.

In 1914 a wall of three feet of concrete was placed under the brick foundation, and it is the opinion of experts that the old building will stand for centuries to come, but the interior will never present its original charm until this ceiling is restored.

In 1906, Bishop John Poyntz Tyler, who was then Archdeacon of Virginia, started a movement to raise an endowment fund for the maintenance of the church. In giving his indorsement to this movement Bishop Gibson, of blessed memory, wrote: "It gives me great pleasure to commend the work of endowing Yeocomico Church. Our Colonial churches are historic landmarks of the highest interest. Yeocomico has a romantic story and one which is in many of its aspects pathetic. I trust that the care of the old building may be ensured. We of this generation can do our part in one way, and in one way only: that is by collecting money for the preservation of the church, and providing for the wisest possible expenditure of the fund thus secured."

Pursuant to this, the Association for the Preservation of Yeocomico Church was organized to collect money for its preservation; and the services of Mr. Glen Brown, President of the American Institute of Architects, and his son, Mr. Bedford Brown, were engaged to secure the wisest possible expenditure of the fund thus secured, and not a cent has been expended but under their direction.

The building committee, of which Mr. Wat Tyler Mayo, Hague, Va., is chairman, reports the sum of $5,873.34 expended upon the repair work begun in May, 1928, which leaves a deficit of $40.

Twenty-five hundred dollars of the amount expended was borrowed from the local bank by the Executive Committee, and the residue came from voluntary contributions.

With this call from the past; with this assurance for the future, the Association for the Preservation of Yeocomico Church makes one more appeal for aid. Fourteen hundred dollars, only, is needed to restore the ceiling in the old church.

Workmen Make Discovery.

An interesting discovery was made when the workmen took down the ancient roof and removed the decayed plates on which it rested that verified the tradition that an earlier structure occupied the site of the present building. The plate of the front rectangle were found to be mortised to receive the studding of a frame building, and portions of the corner posts were found imbedded in the brick walls, showing conclusively that the brick walls were built up to the eves and the studding removed.

It was very apparent that the rafters and ceiling were parts of this frame structure, while the spaces over the windows and the main door indicated that the originals were retained in the brick structure.

None of the parish records have come down to us, but a recent search of the court records of Northumberland and Westmoreland Counties have revealed some interesting data, and Mr. Mayo has in course of preparation a History of Yeocomico Church and its People, which it is thought will be of interest and value.

Outstanding Leaders at the G. F. S. Younger Members' Conference.

The outstanding group of men and women secured by the Girls' Friendly Society as leaders for its national younger members' conference at Delaware, N. J., June 28-July 5, illustrates the widespread interest being taken in this new venture. The Rev. Dennis Whittle, of Emmanuel Church, Covington, Va., well-known for his interest in personal religion and his missions in the mountains of Virginia, is to lead the discussion on personal religion. Dr. Adele E. Stresseman, Medical Director, Medical Service Club for Young Women, New York City, Medical Consultant of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, New York City, and Examining Physician, Brooklyn Y. W. C. A., is to give the course on human relationships and the interrelation of mental, spiritual, and physical health. This course will be called "The Art of Living". Miss Julia Williamson, a Churchwoman and well-known as a national officer of the Girl Scouts, will describe and illustrate the art of story telling. The Rev. Albion C. Ockendeu, of St. John's Church, Northampton, Mass., prominent in young people's work, will act as chaplain of the conference. The faculty will also include the following leaders of the G. F. S.: Miss Florence L. Newbold, Executive Secretary; Miss Esther Fifield, Field Secretary, Province III; and Miss Francess Arnold, Diocesan President, Maine.

As this issue goes to press, registrations have been received from sixty-eight girls. There will be seven counselors in addition to the faculty.

Progress in Race Relations.

Dr. R. R. Moton, principal of Tuskegee Institute, and recognized leader of the colored race in America, said in in a recent address on race relations:

"We hear a great deal of interracial friction. Wide observation convinces me, however, that there is a great deal more trouble within each race than there is between them. For the most part the two races in the South are living side by side in harmony and friendship, and the Negro is making rapid progress in education and the attainment of opportunity and justice. We may congratulate ourselves on the great gains that are being made in interracial good will and cooperation. The best people of the South are determined that the Negro shall be dealt with fairly. Ten years ago I had no expectation of such improvement. In God's providence we have a great chance here in the South to demonstrate to the world that different races can live alongside in mutual friendship and helpfulness."

New Courses at Moody Bible Institute.

The new catalogue of the Moody Bible Institute announces two important extensions to courses offered. Music has from the first been granted a large place in the curriculum, but is now advanced to the distinction of a special course. To Bible-Music studies as heretofore offered, subjects are added for a three-year course from which the student may graduate with the diploma of the Institute and be superbly equipped for all aspects of Church, Evangelistic and Missionary Musical activities. The course calls for intensive work in voice, piano, organ, choir directing and advanced composition.

The Advanced Christian Education Course is announced as an extension of the former work in Christian education, requiring an added year of study. The additional work is intended to equip the graduate not only for effective service as director of religious education, but fits him to be director of music in church and Sunday school as well. The course holds great value for pastors' assistants and Sunday-school workers.

The Churches of Europe Meet to Re-Survey the Religious Situation.

It was one of the few compensations of the World War that as a result of its stupendous devastation and untold distress that it wrought among the peoples of Europe, there should have grown up among the European Churches and those of America a fellowship of mutual aid, bridging the gap torn by hatred and prejudice, and administering the healing balm of Christian compassion at a time when political leaders had not yet begun to think of substituting conferences for threats. As early as 1922, the year of the greatest economic distress in Europe, when the currency debacle was at its worst and it seemed that all the continental nations, neutral as well as warring, must be plunged into bankruptcy, the Swiss Protestant Federation, at the instigation of the American Churches represented in the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, called together representatives of all the Evangelical Churches of Europe for a conference to determine just what the losses of Protestantism had been and what could be done to save, to alleviate, and to reconstruct. As a part of his preparations for this conference, Dr. Keller, the Secretary of the Federation, asked for detailed reports from all the European Churches, both neutral and war-stricken, so that full information might be available. He himself traveled extensively, getting data at first-hand.

The meeting was convened at the Bethesda House in Copenhagen, in August, 1922, and was attended by seventy-five representatives of thirty-seven religious bodies and twenty-one different countries. It was not only the first approachment of the Churches of the warring countries, but the first international and interdenominational gathering of the Protestant Churches of the world, the fore-runner of the great congresses of Stockholm and Lausanne. In the booklet, "Zur Lage des Europaischen Protestantismus" (on the Condition of European Protestantism), it produced the first comprehensive survey of the religious situation of Europe following the war, and in the establishment of the Central Bureau for Relief of the Evangelical Churches of Europe it laid the foundation of international and interdenominational Christian relief on behalf of the stricken Protestant Churches.

This was the state of affairs which faced the newly organized relief agency: they were—

Five: "Helping" countries, with a population of about 22,00,000 (Great Britain had not then joined) and there were—

Seventeen needy countries, with a population of more than 200,000,000.

The discrepancy between resources and requirements was obvious. An urgent appeal was sent to America. As a result, the Federal Council called a meeting of American Church representatives in New York, November, 1922, and this conference, in an all-day session voted to endorse the Central Bureau for Relief as an agency of the American Churches in bringing relief to their Sister Churches of Europe in an interdenominational way, and authorized the establishment of the American Office of the Central Bureau with headquarters in New York and Dr. Chauncey W. Goodrich as its head. In 1925, the Rev. Kenneth D. Miller succeeded Dr. Goodrich. Since it was set up in 1923, this American Office has raised to date something over $625,000—a good round sum, but not a great deal when compared with $80,000,000 losses of European Protestantism.

It is difficult, in retrospect, to realize how completely disorganized, as well as impoverished the European Churches were, but a rather trivial incident that occurred at the Bethesda Conference is illuminating. After the meeting, when the delegates started to go home, some of them had to be furnished with the necessary funds by the members from the "helping countries", as their own currencies had taken so sudden a drop that their money no longer sufficed to take them back to their native countries!

This summer, on the seventh anniversary of the "Bethesda Conference", Dr. Keller, the European Executive Secretary of the Central Bureau for Relief, is again summoning the European Churches (now augmented by the inclusion of the Eastern Churches), to resurvey the field and determine how far the rehabilitation of the Church life of Europe has progressed and what still remains to be done. One of the great problems before the gatherings is the working out of some plan for mutual sustentation in the future, so that another crisis will not find the Churches unprepared, with no central organization to act promptly and in a comprehensive way.

The second "Bethesda Conference" will meet at Basle, August 23-24, and it is expected that it will bring together an even more representative as well as a numerically larger attendance than the original one. As was the case in 1922, the American Churches, both individually and through the Federal Council, will be asked to send representatives to meet with the European leaders. The American Office of the Central Bureau will be represented by Rev. Kenneth D. Miller.

Hudson Stuck Memorial Hospital.

Since his return to the Hudson Stuck Memorial Hospital in Fort Yukon, Alaska, last December, Dr. Grafton Burke and all his staff have been overloaded with work and facing many difficulties.

The hospital has been so full that it has been necessary to put two patients in the room assigned to one of the white nurses who herself for a time has been on the sick list.

"It is a most whirling kind of existence," Dr. Burke says. "Acute emergency cases have required exhausting care. One was a little girl three years old who was all but torn to pieces by three dogs. The town thought she was dead, and she was four hours in the operating room, but the doctor writes he is confident that with God's help she will recover. With one nurse ill, the other nurse had not only this child but twenty other patients to care for. A school teacher has been coming in after school to help for two hours. The hospital is short of fuel, with an additional bill of $500 uncared for.

The Sunday schools, both white and Indian, have been flourishing, and there has been a good attendance at services. The Indian people sent $100 for St. Luke's, Tokyo, as thanksgiving for their own hospital."

Dr. and Mrs. Burke are eagerly looking for the arrival of the Rev. Merritt Williams, of the Diocese of Iowa, who graduated this spring from the General Theological Seminary, was ordained deacon by Bishop Manning on Trinity Sunday and has been appointed to take charge of the congregation at Fort Yukon and who sails from Seattle about the middle of July.

SOUTHERN VIRGINIA.

Rt. Rev. B. D. Tucker, D. D., Bishop.
Rt. Rev. A. C Thomson, D. D., Coadjutor.

One Hundred and Ninety-Seventh Anniversary of Grub Hill Church Celebrated.

The one hundred and ninety-seventh anniversary of Grub Hill Church, one of sixteen or seventeen Colonial Episcopal Churches now remaining in the Diocese of Southern Virginia, was celebrated in Amelia County recently.

In the chancel were Rev. Thos. G. Faulkner, of Blackstone; Rev. S. O Southall, of Amelia, and Rev. J. R. McAllister, the present rector, and the Rt. Rev. A. C. Thomson, Bishop Coadjutor, who prached the morning service.

The Bishop's sermon was appropriate and impressive. Referring to Grub Hill he said: "The influence of this old church is quiet and yet far-reaching, touched to living music, with an echo which has brought you here today. For nearly two hundred years it has been a witness to God. Currents of public opinion have swirled around it. It has known wars, but through all has quietly stood a witness to the truth of the Gospel."

With every seat taken, chairs placed in the aisles, and many standing, people came not only from many parts of Virginia, but from Washington, D. C., North Carolina, New York and California.

Members of the choirs of several denominations with Mrs. George Keith Taylor at the organ, united to make the music a success.

A handsome altar cloth, which came from England, recently repaired through the generosity of the daughter of an old communicant, who is now living abroad, was greatly admired.

At the close of the morning service a bountiful luncheon was served by the ladies of the parish, after which Rev. S. O. Southall made an interesting historical address. He said that when the first Church was built on this spot, George II was King of England and the Bishop of London was also Bishop of Virginia.

Grub Hill was built in 1732 by William and Joseph Eggleston, Thomas Tabb, Colonel Archer and Edward Booker. Its first minister was the Rev. John Brumskill, an Englishman, who, loyal to England, and seeing in the congregation Colonel Archer and others in regimentals, expressed indignation at such indication of rebellion. Whereupon nearly every one retired from the church. He was warned not to repeat the offense and never preached again, though he lived on quietly at "The Glebe" to the end of his years.

The Rev. Mr. McCreery, his successor, was followed by the Rev. Wm. F. Lee, whose short ministry here, he going to St. John's Church, Richmond, was followed by the Rev. Parke Farley Berkeley, who continued as rector of the parish for fifty years.

In closing, Mr. Southall said: "We love and reverence Grub Hill for what it has been in years that are gone and for what we hope it will be in the years to come."

An offering was taken for much needed repairs on the church, which is the only one within a radius of five miles, in which reside representatives of seventeen different Christian denominations.

Mrs. Gordon Harvie,
Mattoax, Virginia.

Commencement Exercises of the Bishop Payne Divinity School.

The baccalaureate sermon was preached in Emmanuel Chapel, Sunday afternoon, May 26, by the Rev. John Wesley Johnson, Bfl D., of New York, an alumnus of the school and a former professor and warden.

The public meeting of the Alumni Association was held in Emmanuel Chapel, Tuesday evening. The alumni address was delivered by the Rev. Henry Edwards, B. D., of Charlotte, N. C., and the faculty address by the Rev. Samuel W. Grice, B. D., warden of the school. Archdeacon Baskervill, of South Carolina, president of the Association, and the Rev. F. G. Ribble, D. D., Dean of the School, made short addresses.

The commencement exercises were held Wednesday. The speaker of the evening was the Rev. Henry Teller Cocke, of Chevy Chase, Maryland. Diplomas were awarded to Mr. James E. Stratton, of the Diocese of West Virginia, and the Rev. Samuel J. Martin, of the Diocese of Chicago. The degree of Bachelor in Divinity was conferred upon the Rev. Josiah Elliott, rector of St. James' Church, Charleston, W. Va. The Rt. Rev. B. D. Tucker, D. D., made a short address and closed the exercises with prayer and the benediction.

WASHINGTON.

Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman, D. D., Bishop

Founding of St. Alban's Parish, Celebrated.

The seventy-fifth anniversary of the founding of St. Alban's Parish was celebrated by a series of services and meetings, beginning June 16, by a Corporate Communion of the Parish at 7:45 A. M. At the eleven o'clock service the same day, the Very Rev. G. C. F. Bratenahl, D. D., former rector of St. Alban's Parish, and now dean of Washington Cathedral, preached the sermon, showing some of the historic background of the parish.

On Monday, a fellowship evening was held in Satterlee Memorial Hall, the new parish hall recently completed, when music was featured and historic addresses and letters were heard. Addresses were made by Bishop Freeman, Bishop Rhinelander (for a short time priest-in-charge of St. Alban's), and Caspar Wistar Haines, a descendant of the founder of the parish.

On Tuesday afternoon, June 18, Admiral and Mrs. Cary Grayson, entertained members of the parish in their beautiful home, which is situated near the church and in which St. Alban's Church was founded.

St. Alban's Parish was originally founded by Miss Phoebe Nourse, granddaughter of Joseph Nourse, first registrar of the United States Treasury.

The work of encasing the old building in stone was completed a few years ago, when the church building was brought to a completion originally planned by the architects. Satterlee Memorial Hall and a new Skinner organ are also recent additions to the parish. St. Alban's Church occupies a strategic position in a growing community with no other Episcopal parish church in close proximity and is making rapid progress in its many fields of endeavor. The Rev. Charles T. Warner is rector of the church.

College of Preachers.

The fifth annual summer conference of the College of Preachers of Washington Cathedral, closed June 15. The conference had been in session from Monday to Saturday, beginning with a fellowship gathering in the Cathedral Library and ending with a service of prayer and benediction in Bethlehem Chapel. Each day was begun by a series of morning prayer and Holy Communion at 7 A. M. and ended at 10 P. M., so that the conference consisted of a total of seventy hours of service, meeting and discussions. About sixty clergymen attended the conference, representing seventeen different States.

The principal lecturers were: the Rev. John Rathbone Oliver, M. D., Ph. D., of Johns Hopkins University, who spoke on "What a Priest Needs to Know of Mental Disorders"; the Rev. Leonard Hodgson, M. A., of the General Theological Seminary, New York City, whose subject was, "Preaching Our Sacramental Faith," and Dr. John Fort Newton, of Overbrook, Pa., who had "Sermon Patterns" for his theme.

The Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, welcomed the visitors and lectured on the importance of pastoral work in the life of a preacher. The Rt. Rev. Philip M. Rhinelander, former bishop of Pennsylvania, and now warden of the college, presided.

The Rev. Wm. H. Pettus was the preacher at St. Mark's Church, his former parish, on Sunday morning, June 16. Mr. Pettus is now rector of Grace Church, Everett, Mass., and has been in Washington in connection with the conference of the College of Preachers.

M. M. W.

Open-Air Service.

The Rev. Ralph B. Pomeroy, rector of the Church of the Holy Innocents, was the special preacher at the people's open-air services around the Peace Cross, Washington Cathedral, on Sunday afternoon, June 23. The preacher at the evening service of the same day was Dr. Edward S. Dunlap, canon of the Cathedral.

St. Paul's Activities.

The Rev. F. J. Bohanan, D. D., rector of St. Paul's Church, Rock Creek, has been out of the city recently, having visited Jamestown, Va., where he went on a special mission for the Cathedral. St. Paul's Church is maintaining a good deal of activity, in spite of the very trying continued hot weather.

The St. Paul's Brotherhood of St. Andrew will have a Corporate Communion this month at an early service and follow it with a fellowship breakfast in the parish house. Ten Sunday-school teachers left June 23 for Ocean City, Maryland, where they will attend the Summer School, having scholarships for the course. Twenty-one members of the Girls' Friendly Candidates also left on the same day for a week's vacation trip to the Girls' Friendly Holiday House, near Mount Vernon. The Sunday-school picnic, which will be held at Glen Echo, will take place, Saturday, June 29.

Silver Spring Mission.

The Silver Spring Episcopal Mission, being a charge of the Diocese of Washington, was formally started on Sunday, June 23, with a service in a temporary building, which is expected to serve for a while until a permanent building is erected. The Rev. Alfred Cheatham, D. D., has been appointed vicar of the mission by the Diocese of Washington.

The mission was formerly part of the parish located at Woodside, Md., but is now a separate district under the Board of Missions of the Diocese of Washington.

Dr. Cheatham, the new vicar, was born in England, and is a theological associate of King's College, London University. He was confirmed by Dr. Cosmo Gordon Lang, now Archbishop of Canterbury, and was ordained a priest in Salisbury Cathedral, England. He assisted at St. Thomas' Episcopal Church for a short time and then became rector of St. Mary's Church, where he remained until appointed to take charge of the Silver Spring Mission.

M. M. W.

SOUTHWESTERN VIRGINIA.

Rt. Rev. Robert C. Jett. D. D., Bishop

Reorganization of the Executive Board.

Under the system of rotation adopted some years ago, the terms of two clergymen and two laymen as members of the Diocesan Executive Board expire at each annual Council, and new members are elected in their places to serve for three years. In this way at the Council of Southwestern Virginia, held on May 21-22, the Rev. Messrs. G. Otis Mead and F. Ernest Warren and Messrs. C. M. Hunter and E. Walton Opie automatically went out of office and were succeeded by the Rev. Messrs. Devall L. Gwathmey, of Wytheville, and Roland Moncure, of Salem, and Messrs. John D. Logan, of Salem, and Robert L. Peirce, of Wytheville.

At the meeting of the Diocesan Executive Board on June 13, being the first meeting following the Council, Bishop Jett announced his appointment of the members of the several departments of the Board for the coming conciliar year. Also the newly-appointed chairmen of certain of these departments nominated to the Bishop, the Bishop approved, and the Board elected associate member of these departments from outside the membership of the Executive Board itself.

NECROLOGICAL REPORT OF THE THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY OF VIRGINIA, FROM MARCH, 1928, TO JUNE, 1929.

Name.	Class of.	Died.	Aged.
Rt. Rev. Geo. Herbert Kinsolving, D. D.	1874.	October 23, 1928.	79
Rt. Rev. Jno. Dominique LaMother, D.D.	1894.	October 25, 1928.	60
Rev. Addison Atkins Lamb	1898.	September 16, 1928.	46
Rev. Mercer Patton Logan, D. D.	1880.	December 1, 1928.	72
Rev. John Thomas Foster.	1889.	January 5, 1929.	64
Rev. John Alexander O'Meara.	1894.	February 7, 1929.	60

Kensey John Hammond,
Wm. J. Morton,
Committee

Annual Meeting of the Daughters of the King.

The seventh annual Assembly of the Daughters of the King, was held on May 30, in Trinity Church, Staunton, of which the Rev. John J. Gravatt, Jr., is rector. The morning session was opened with a celebration of the Holy Communion by the Rt. Rev. Robert Carter Jett, D. D., Bishop of the Diocese. Mr. Gravatt welcomed the visitors to Trinity, and Mrs. Lewis Langhorne, of Salem, Va., responded on behalf of the organization. Personal service being the principal work of the Daughters of the King, an especially interesting feature of the session was the hearing of reports of visits made by members of the organization to patients in the various hospitals and institutions in the diocese.

The chief speaker of the day was Miss Lillian Soper, of Washington, D. C., who conducted a conference and open forum and brought to the members many helpful ideas and suggestions. Miss Soper emphasized the fact that the Chapter meetings of the Daughters of the King should always be devotional and should always include the reading of Holy Scripture.

Special work to be undertaken during the coming year is the formation of a "Bishop's Chapter". The idea in this is to get in touch with all Daughters of the King scattered throughout the diocese who are not active in any organized Chapter.

Rev. J. C. Wagner Conducts Mission in Roanoke.

From June 3 to 12, the Rev. J. C. Wagner, rector of Grace Church, Petersburg, and professor in the Bishop Payne Divinity School at Petersburg, conducted a series of mission services in St. Peter's Church, Roanoke, of which the Rev. Alfred C. Bussingham is rector. Mr. Wagner's sermons were thoughtful, stimulating and inspiring. Some of his subjects were: "What Is It to Be a Christian?" "The Meaning of Prayer," "The Conversion of a Soul," "An Epistle of Christ," "The Legacy of Peace," "The Living Sacrifice," "The Gospel of the Flowers," "The Bible," "The Empty Soul," "Why Am I An Episcopalian." Immediately after most of the services, Mr. Wagner gave brief periods of instruction on the Prayer Book.

Mr. Wagner is widely known and very popular in the Diocese of Southwestern Virginia, where on various occasions he has taught in training institutes and has temporarily supplied at several churches, and has conducted a number of missions. Also he is well known as one of the strongest members of the faculty of the Virginia Summer School of Religious Education, held each summer at Sweet Briar College.

The services at St. Peter's were well attended, and at some of these assistance in the music was rendered by members of the choirs of St. John's Church and Christ Church and others. Mr. Wagner's mission will be long remembered with pleasure and profit by the members of St. Peter's Church and the visitors from other churches in Roanoke and Salem.

Colored Parish Day School Closes.

The Rev. Charles L. Somers, of Lynchburg, is rector of the two colored churches in the diocese; these being the Chapel of the Good Shepherd at Lynchburg, and St. Philip's Church at Bedford. One of the interesting features in connection with the Lynchburg Church is a Parish Day School conducted by Mrs. Edna R. Evans, one of the members of the congregation. The session just ended closed on June 7. There were thirty students on the roll; twenty-seven of these being under twelve years of age, and the pupils coming from twenty-six families. In the school the kindergarten and second, third and fourth grades have been taught.

It is felt that in addition to the benefit to the children themselves this school is one of the most effective ways of keeping their families in touch with the general work of the Church.

T. A. S.

The Rev. C. F. Smith Goes to Kentucky.

The Rev. Claudius F. Smith has resigned the rectorship of Christ Church at Big Stone Gap and Grace Mission, Appalachia, to become rector of St. Mary's Church at Middlesboro, in the Diocese of Lexington, State of Kentucky. He plans to accept his new charge officially as of June 1, but to continue to reside in Big Stone Gap and hold services there until July 1, or longer, unless other arrangements are made sooner for the care of that parish.

On December 28, 1912, Mr. Smith became rector of Grace Memorial Church, at Lynchburg, coming there from Elizabeth City, N. C. He served at Grace Church from 1912 to 1920 and as General Missioner of the Diocese of Southwestern Virginia from 1920 to September, 1923, when he went to Big Stone Gay. He has many devoted friends in this diocese, who will greatly regret his departure.

T. A. S.

MICHIGAN.

Rt. Rev. Herman Page, D. D., Bishop.

Baptist Institution Confers Honor on Episcopal Rector.

The Rev. R. W. Woodroofe, rector of St. John's Church, Detroit, was the recipient of an unusual honor, when Hillsdale College, a Baptist institution, conferred on him the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity, in recognition of his Christian leadership in Detroit.

In the citation for the degree it was pointed out that Dr. Woodroofe is the rector of one of the oldest and most distinguished Episcopal Churches in Detroit; that he has served as president of the Detroit Pastors' Union; that he was three years president of the Detroit Council of Religious Education, and that he was the original sponsor of the 1929 Crusade for Christ, a city-wide campaign of visitation evangelism during Lent, which was fostered by the Detroit Council of Churches.

Dr. Woodroofe received his bachelor's degree at Toronto University in 1902, and his master's degree at King's College, Montreal, two years later. From 1905 through 1907 he was a graduate students at Columbia University.

Twelfth Annual Conference at Hillsdale College.

Courses in every field of church activity were included in the curriculum of the twelfth annual summer conference of the Diocese of Michigan, held at Hillsdale College June 20-29.

Among the course subjects were the Future of Women's Work, Religion and Health, The World Mission of Christianity, The Revelation of God in the Bible, Problems of Personality Adaptation, How Personality Grows, The Theory of Religious Education, The Religion of the Child, The Use of Art in Religious Education. There were also courses in teaching, a demonstration school, a young people's forum, and classes in religious drama and personal religion.

Dr. R. W. Woodroofe, rector of St. John's Church, was executive chairman and chaplain of the conference. Other officers included Ernest E. Piper, diocesan director of religious education, who acted as dean; the Rev. W. H. Aulenbach, assistant minister of Christ Church, Cranbrook, dean of young men; Mrs. Ferdinand M. Broock, dean of young women; Charles O. Ford, executive secretary of the diocese, business manager.

A New Mission.

St. Mary's, Detroit, corner of Fordham and Clestine Avenues, a new mission of the Diocese of Michigan was formally opened and dedicated Sunday, June 2. Previous to the opening of the Mission a successful campaign for funds was conducted, an opening dinner being held on Tuesday, May 28. The speakers on this occasion were the Rt. Rev. Herman Page, Bishop of Michigan, and the Rev. C. L. Ramsay, former Archdeacon of the Diocese, now rector of St. Paul's Church, Jackson. The building occupied by St. Mark's was formerly the church home of St. Columba's Parish, Detroit, and was presented by this congregation to the new Mission. At the dedication on June 2 by the Ven. Leonard P. Hagger, Archdeacon of the Diocese, a sermon was preached by the Rev. Otey R. Berkley, rector of St. Columba's Church. The minister-in-charge is the Rev. W. S. Blyth, of St. Clair Chores.

On the same date, the new mission of St. Margaret's, Hazel Park, Detroit, was dedicated by the Archdeacon. This mission is under the care of the Rev. Charles Wesley.

Church School Institute.

The Daily Vacation Church School Institute was held Saturday, June 1, at St. Andrew's Community House, Detroit. The Rev. Gordon Matthews, rector of the parish, spoke on "The Value of Vacation Schools"; the Rev. M. S. Kanaga, rector of St. Alban's Church, Highland Park, presented the program and an address on "Some New Developments of Religious Education" was made by Mr. E. E. Piper, Superintendent of Religious Education for the Diocese. A pageant was presented by Miss Lily Oram, one of the field workers of the diocese; stories and story-telling was exemplified by Miss Elizabeth Thomas and members of the Story Telling League, and a demonstration of handwork was given by Miss Mary L. Cook.

SPRINGFIELD.

Rt. Rev. John C. White, Bishop.

Meeting Obligations in Every Way the National Church Expects.

One of the happy surprises of the Synodical meetings was the announcement to the company assembled at the dinner held at the Country Club at Champaign, by Bishop White, that the quota allotted to the Springfield Diocese for the Corporate Gift of the Woman's Auxiliary had been raised in full, nine months before the date set for its completion. He read telegrams of congratulation from Miss Grace Lindley, General Secretary, and Mrs. Edward Burkham, National Chairman, on our having done the work so well and promptly. This places Springfield among the first twenty-five in the National Campaign. Bishop White, rather apologizing to Bishop Francis for using the word "quota" said "we never know what we can do until we set a goal."

Mrs. Charles Woods, Diocesan Chairman of this Fund, said at the Woman's Auxiliary Meeting, when she made the report, that she wanted them all to share in the good feeling which comes at having our work all done ahead of time. It is like the pleasure of giving a dinner party when everything is ready and you can enjoy greeting the guests. She spoke of "The Purpose of the Corporate Gift, which is that every woman shall have a part in spreading the Kingdom on earth. Sometimes, when we give, our connection with the Kingdom of Heaven seems rather remote as with my young son of eight, whom I took to see the Passion Play this spring. Before we went, he said, 'Mother, did my grandfather and grandmother ever see Jesus?' and I said, 'Not in person.' Again he asked, 'Did their father and mother live when Jesus did, and again, did my great, great-grandfather and mother live in Jesus' time?' At this stage of the questioning we were interrupted. On our return from the play his simple question was, 'Will I see Jesus?' His point of view had been changed when he had gotten the vision of Christ on earth. As best I could I answered, 'You will see Him if you love Him and help other people to love Him, too.' It is just this which we are doing by our Corporate Gift. This is the subject about which the whole year's study in the woman's work is built, showing Jesus. Again our part sometimes seems remote, we are so small in the whole scheme of things. But when we consider that there are certain permanent principles, and that in so far as we build towards these we are 'working the work of Him that sent us', we see our place of service. The record of the ages has left the proof that man has ever sought to know God, and God in turn has revealed His truth to those who truly seek Him; and while we find Him out of doors in God's great realm of nature, yet within the quiet of His Sanctuary are we sure to hear His voice if we call upon Him. It is to aid this aspiration towards God, of a people who are already crowding their church dwelling to overflowing that we are giving our help at Santa Domingo and at Mt. Hope in the Canal Zone.

> "'Then a sense of law and order
> And a face turned from the sod
> Some call it evolution,
> Others call it God.'

"These lines of Hayden Caruth remind us of the struggle of our American Indians to adjust themselves to the onrush of immigration and modern civilization. We have put our hand to the fast of helping them learn cleanliness and order by giving the School at the Wind River Reservation, Wyoming, a water system.

The influence of the home must be permanent if civilization is to stand and there can be no more real means of assuring its permanency than of giving normal home environment to those who have not been fortunate enough to have it by birthright. This we are doing by building the boys' dormitory at Christ Church, Arden, N. C.

"Letters of appreciation from each recipient have been most sincere, and spoke of the great need which the money filled and of the care with which it would be expended. Fifty thousand dollars, in all, was raised for the Corporate Gift and Springfield's share was $225. After having worked in the raising of this sum I was greatly interested to learn from the Bishop's report that thirty thousand dollars had been voted by the National Council for the building of a Parish House in East St. Louis. This is three-fifths the sum raised by the whole Corporate Gift and is given to one project in our own diocese. I am sure all those who have worked for the Corporate Gift will the more appreciate this sum which comes to us, and will do all in their power to make it mean the most to the community where it is so much needed. Charity begins and ends at home."

The Rev. Frederick G. Deis, one of the General Secretaries of the National Council Field Department, whom many in the diocese know, had consented to make a talk of thanksgiving for the completion of the Corporate Gift. The service was held in Emmanuel Church, Champaign. He opened the meeting with a few words of prayer and then spoke on the four beneficiaries, "that we might know of whom we are beloved", because it is hard to do for people unless we love them, and hard to love them unless we know them and their needs. He most eloquently pictured the crowded conditions of the Canal Zone, and our duty as a sister America to take this step in the advancement of the Church; the generous gift of an Englishman of the building site and the zealous work of the native inhabitants and missionaries; and their need of a Christian house of worship.

Then he spoke of those less fortunate in the mountains of Carolina, who among the first settlers had been hampered by barriers of mountains and "just didn't get over the pass" when others pressed westward to greater opportunities; and of the dominant principal of Christ School to teach boys to do each task well and to make them self-reliant, useful citizens.

Last of all, he pictured the native heritage of the American Indian, of boundless sky and land and pure water running clear. All these the white man has taken or restricted until now we in giving them a school and water supply are giving back but a small part of what had been theirs. The only compensation possible is that in the exchange they may be able to use it for the greater glory of God.

He closed by telling the story of the Indian Chieftain, who, listening to the appeal of the missionary, came forward and gave his tomahawk, next his belt, then his saddle, then his horse to Jesus Christ. And last as the missionary still pleaded, he caught the message and bowing to the ground said, "Indian Chief give himself to Jesus Christ". It is this gift of self which we all must make if our giving is to count. In the hush that followed the story Dr. Deis said a prayer of consecration for all present that we may all "go and do likewise".

Mrs. C. W.

Lincoln, Ill.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

Rt. Rev. Albert S. Thomas, Bishop.

The Rev. John Adams Pinckney, student of theology at Sewanee, will have charge of Christ Church Parish, Charleston, S. C., through the summer and will conduct the daily vocational summer school at Porter Military Academy, Charleston. Mr. Pinckney received his preliminary training for Holy Orders at the DuBose School, Monteagle, Tenn. Christ Church has been without a pastor since the resignation of the Rev. G. F. Cameron to accept a call to Texas.

PANAMA CANAL ZONE.

Rt. Rev. J. C. Morris, D. D., Bishop.

From the annual report of Bishop Morris of the Panama Canal Zone, we have the following items:

The Bishop confirmed 222 in the Canal Zone last year. He received two postulants, who are studying while engaged in their work; both are "exceptional young men who are likely to serve the Church well".

The Rev. Edward J. Cooper has completed his twenty-second year at Christ Church, Colon.

St. Paul's Church, Panama, has 7,000 baptized members. Its rector, the Rev. Arthur F. Nightengale, is also priest-in-charge of two missions.

The Bishop mentions the good effect of the Christmas boxes, in the "increased good will so evident in the families of the fortunate youngsters who receive these tokens from a country, of which they hear too much that is unjust and untrue." The Bishop emphasizes the good cheer and faithfulness of the lepers in the Palo Seco Colony and says: "There are saints in Palo Seco."

The Bishop's house and the newly completed house for the Archdeacon at New Cristobal are so well adapted for living in the tropics that they have been selected by the quartermaster general of the army, for special study, that their best features may be adopted for army quarters.

The completion of St. George's Church, Gatun, was a welcome event. The congregation is composed of Panama Canal employees, who contributed to the church as they were able and made many of the furnishings.

The Children's Home in Bella Vista, completed and occupied last fall, is a dream come true. "The prospect seems sure for a long term of usefulness at this institution, founded at the request of the Red Cross. The people of the Isthmus are giving it their cordial interest and support."

Next is to come the chapel at Silver City, most of its cost being a part of the current Corporate Gift of the Woman's Auxiliary.

And next most needed is a church for the Americans on the Pacific side of the Isthmus. The Government has provided land and there is the beginning of a building fund.

FLORIDA.

Rt. Rev. F. A. Juhan, D. D., Bishop.

Notice of Deposition.

Notice is hereby given that at St. John's Church on Wednesday, May 22, 1929, acting in accordance with the provisions of Canon 36, Section 1, and with the consent of the Standing Committee, I pronounced sentence of deposition from the Ministry of this Church upon the Reverend

GEORGE JOHN STURGIS

In the presence of the Rev. Newton Middleton and the Rev. Charles A. Ashby, Presbyters of this Diocese; the said George John Sturgis having previously requested in writing that he be deposed from the ministry of this Church.

Frank A. Juhan,
Bishop of Florida.

ARKANSAS.

Rt. Rev. Jas. R. Winchester, D. D., Bishop.
Rt. Rev. E. W. Saphore, D. D., Suffragan.
Rt. Rev. E. T. Demby, D. D., Suffragan.

New Parish House Dedicated.

The new parish house of Christ Episcopal Church was crowded to overflowing when it was dedicated and opened officially for its many uses on June 12.

Services were held in the auditorium with Dr. W. P. Witsell, rector, delivering the dedication prayer and address. Dr. Witsell rededicated himself and the congregation in his address.

The parish house is three stories and contains rooms for the several Sunday-school departments, Bible classes, church offices, and auditorium. On the first floor is the parish house office, the rector's study and the Sunday-school rooms for the three juvenile departments. Each class room is equipped with blackboards for demonstrative study.

The second floor has several large rooms for the Bible classes. The gymnasium, which can be used as an auditorium, is on this floor, and is constructed so a moving-picture projecting machine can be installed and operated. A stage has been built at one end of the gymnasium and plans are made to organize two dramatic clubs from church members to produce plays.

The third floor has several school rooms and a balcony looking down upon basket-ball court and stage. Boys' and girls' locker rooms are on this floor. Each locker room has a shower room adjoining.

A well equipped kitchen, with ranges and electric refrigerators and electric water coolers is in the building.

Letter From Bishop.

A letter addressed to the rectors, wardens, vestrymen and congregation of Christ Church from Bishop James R. Winchester, was read during the dedication services. The letter, in part follows:

"Here, in repose to the sweet chimes of the church tower, friends will hold spiritual converse and help each other on their journay of Christian life. Conferences for the extension of God's kingdom will be held under the immediate guidance of the Holy Ghost. As the fast-flying years go on, these rooms will become dearer, where men, women and children will say it is good for us to be here, and those who labored to erect this architectural structure to the glory of God and the good of humanity will have a thrill of delight, I trust, in their blessed home, which our Lord has prepared for us, that the privilege was granted them to leave behind them such a place for spiritual refreshment. Without the guidance and continued leadership of Dr. Witsell, the beloved rector, we could not have the enjoyment of today. God be praised for the wonderful work he has done; and I feel that it will call forth the loyal support of every member of Christ Church as he presents the claims of the Master. You have a right, therefore, my dear brethren, to rejoice and be glad today."

A superintendent for the parish house will be selected later.

EAST CAROLINA.

Rt. Rev. Thos. C. Darst, D. D., Bishop.

On June 11 the Quakers of North Carolina unveiled a tablet marking the spot where the first religious service in North Carolina was held in what is now the town of Hertford. On the tablet is inscribed:

"Edmundson-Fox Memorial.

"Near this spot William Edmundson an English Friend held in May, 1672, the first religious service on record in Carolina.

"Six months later George Fox, founder of the religious Society of Friends, also visited this section and held meetings among the Colonists. Here were the beginnings of the religious life of a great State."

When the Rev. Robert Brent Drane, D. D., for fifty-three years rector of St. Paul's Church, Edenton, second oldest church in the State, two days later accepted a gift of early American books for the Edenton Library, he questioned whether the Quaker service at Hertford, thirteen miles from Edenton, was the first religious service in the State, calling attention to the fact that in 1857 Manteo, an Indian Chief and Virginia Dare, first white child born in America, were baptized on Roanoke Island by a clergyman of the Church of England.

S. G.

WEST MISSOURI.

Rt. Rev. S. C. Partridge, D. D., Bishop.

Episcopal Church House For Girls.

A house in Kansas City, Missouri, was presented to the Diocese of West Missouri some time ago, to be used for a missionary purpose. It has been rented to cover expenses until such time as an appropriate need for it arose. Re-

(Continued on page 22.)

Family Department

JUNE.

1. Saturday.
8. First Sunday after Trinity.
9. Second Sunday after Trinity.
11. Tuesday. S. Barnabas.
16. Third Sunday after Trinity.
23. Fourth Sunday after Trinity.
24. Monday. Nativity of S. John Baptist.
29. Saturday. S. Peter.
30. Fifth Sunday after Trinity.

COLLECT FOR FIFTH SUNDAY AFTER TRINITY.

Grant, O Lord, we beseech Thee, that the course of this world may be so peaceably ordered by Thy governance, that Thy Church may joyfully serve Thee in all godly quietness; through Jesus Christ Our Lord. Amen.

For The Southern Churchman.

THE MISTY HOUSE.

David W. Cade.

Come you with me along the road of bright shadows,
Down the street of weathered bricks and red stone.
To a house of quaint and deep sunken windows
Standing serenly and proudly there alone.

On city trees the leaves are breeze-shaken and gleaming,
As fairy gold is spun on a merry summer's day.
In cool forest aisles when green men cease their dreaming
And hear wood-nymphs sing and Pan-pipes play.

The house belongs to me; I am its sole owner;
I built it on ground I bargained for and bought.
Different thus than if an ancestor were the donor
And I voiced but the tales I had been taught.

Here is the stoop and good welcome, too, my brother,
Often I come here filled with thoughts so not alone.
It is my special treasure house secure and moreover Contains reminders of splendid days that are gone.

There are sounding bells of music falling like autumn rain,
(Pause a moment listening in this deeply cushioned hall).
Tiny chords of longing healing old scars of pain
Lullabys before earth-time; An age old madrigal.

Ah, fear not, my brother, there are ghosts I am admitting,
But ghosts, well mannered, who trouble never nor affright.
They are friendly folk; good people, and their perforce flitting
Scarce cast shadows on the shafts of glinting light.

Over near the garden wall a tree is robed in flowery white,
Shading soft and gaily a small plot of velvet-smooth lawn.
Where my girl Mother danced often; Archives of the Infinite
Hold forever safe the picture for a fairer Springtime dawn.

Lad that I was stands nearby his small hands clapping,
See, he has changed not at all in the weary count of years.
Watch we here Time's misty stream its tide eerie lapping
Bearing on its bosom more joy far than tears.

We will go, you and I, crossing silver drifts of noonday,
See the tree leaves sprayed with airy gold beneath the sun.
And the flags of high adventure billowing all the city's highway—
While the road grows ever longer the high quest is yet unwon.

What Is the Trinity?

The doctrine of the Trinity holds that God exists in a three-fold personality designated as the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit. These three are distinct and capable in some sense of holding mutual relations of fellowship, and yet they are not three but one God.

Very little implication and practically no teaching of this three-fold distinction is found in the Old Testament in which such problems had not yet arisen in religious experience. In the New Testament it arises in unmistakable terms. Jesus clearly distinguished between Himself as the Son and God the Father. He accepted divine worship and in many ways taught that He is coeternal with the Father. He further distinguished the Holy Spirit as a third person in the Godhead, speaking of Him in personal terms, ascribing to Him personal attributes and offices, and declaring that the Holy Spirit would come as His successor to carry on His work in the world. This teaching is carried through the Gospels and all the other books of the New Testament, notably in the letters of Paul. Father, Son and Spirit are associated on terms of equality in the great commission of Christ, in the baptismal ordinance, and in the benediction. The Scriptural evidence is abundant and consistent and conclusive, so that it is admitted by scholars, even by those who do not accept the doctrine itself.

The belief in this doctrine was not all revealed at once, but grew through a process of development. There were some faint glimpses of it in the Old Testament, but it was among the early Christians that the doctrine slowly took form and grew into finality. This was due to their experience of Christ and then of the Holy Spirit. They learned gradually to worship Christ during His earthly ministry with them, but some of them doubted His Divine Sonship and equality with God even after His resurrection. However, what He became to them in their Christian experience removed all doubts and in time they could affirm that Christ is "very God of very God". In the same way grew their experience of the Holy Spirit as a distinct aspect or person of the Godhead. They experienced the indwelling of God in their hearts in a way that could be explained only by the belief that this was a manifestation of the Godhead distinct from that of the Father and the Son. All these lines of teaching and experience grew into a formulated belief in trinitarian distinctions in the Godhead which can be called persons only in a modified sense of the word person. God is not simply a magnified human person, a view that would involve Him in all the limitations and imperfections of human personality and would dethrone Him as God. In time, also, each of these three persons came to have in Christian belief a distinct office or work, God the Father being the Foutain and Origin and Creator; God the Son being the Stream and Expression and Executive; and God the Holy Spirit being the indwelling God applying the work of the Son and bringing all things in completion back to God. All these expressions must be understood in a symbolic sense as representing to us in terms of our experience these distinctions in the Godhead which far transcend our power of thought and expression.

The doctrine of the Trinity also early emerged in Christian theology and was wrought out in the first creeds as essential to the Christian faith. At the time of the Nicene Council in 325 A. D. the deity of Christ was established in the faith of the Church, and later the Holy Spirit was recognized as of coequal rank and authority. The doctrine thus originated as the result of Scripture teaching, Christian experience and theological systematization, and so has it ever stood in all the historic branches of the Christian Church.

The doctrine of the trinity is not a mere human speculation born in an unreflective age, an old outworn theological dogma which has had its day and cannot survive in our day of philosophic thought. On the contrary it finds its analogy in our own constitution. We are not strictly unitarian beings but are trinitarian in nature. Our consciousness functions as thought, sensibility and will, three distinct modes of activity that cannot be resolved into psychological unity. A still closer analogy is the threefold distinction in our constitution of the conscious I, the conscious me or self, and the conscious unity of the two. We think, and we may think of ourself and we are conscious of the unity of these two activities. It is not fanciful to conceive that these three distinctions might be carried to such a degree of distinctness that they would result in three personalities or modes of being that would be capable of mutual relations of fellowship. As man is made in the image of God, his constitution must be patterned after that of God Himself, and therefore it ought to reflect some likeness to God in His three fold nature.

If God were a simple unitary consciousness, what kind of existence did He lead in eternity before He put forth His creative power in finite worlds and spirits? The question plunges us into profound difficulties and will lead us back into the abysm and darkness of pantheism. Philosophy has worked out a higher conception of the Infinite as a superpersonal being with a type of personality infinitely higher than our own. This would result in a complex consciousness in which there would be interrelations of social life and love, and the greatest philosophers have arrived at such a view which evidently falls into harmony with the Christian doctrine of the Trinity. Father, Son and Holy Spirit are the three persons in the Godhead who dwelt in reciprocal fellowship through all eternity. If then we Christian theologians and believers were to cast the doctrine of the trinity out of our faith, the philosophies would bring it back again. The doctrine is indeed one of the "high mysteries" of our faith, but it lies at the root of our theological and philosophical thought and enters vitally into our Christian experience.—Presbyterian Banner.

For The Southern Churchman.

TO A GREAT ARTIST.

Julia R. Meade.

My youth once made a fervent prayer,
Desirous of your virtues rare:
Artistry and well-won fame,
Perfect love and immortal name.

Now more than the skill through fabrics wrought,
I covet the faith your years have wrought.
If I, like you, were free from fear—
I, too, should weep no tear.

Reunion of Christendom.

When the Lambeth Conference meets next year the most important subject before it will be that of Reunion. It will come up before the Bishops in the form of specific proposals from churches in the mission-field, which have drawn up schemes of reunion, for which they desire general sanction. It is well to emphasie the importance of the fact that the demand for reunion, which is gaining ground everywhere, comes with most urgency from churches overseas. The significance of this fact is twofold. In the first place these young, but growing churches realize that their own life will be hindered in its development, if the ecclesiastical divisions, to which we at home have grown accustomed, are reproduced among themselves. Many of these divisions are due to historical causes in a past which has nothing whatever to do with these new Christian societies. St. Paul fought against imposing upon the Gentiles the restrictions of the Jewish Law. We surely ought to do our best to see that every chance is given to these Christian Churches to reach the true unity which they desire, and intend to have. In the second place, this call from the mission field is a grave reminder of the harm which divisions among Christians do to the cause of Christ's Kingdom. Divisions take on a different colour in areas where the prevailing tone of life is heathen, and where the cooperation of all Christian forces becomes an urgent necessity. In changed surroundings a change in our sense of active values often manifests itself. We learn to distinguish more clearly between essentials and non-essentials.—Healing Church.

Healthy Thought Habits.

Of course parents are generally desirous of having their children establish good habits. They look with apprehension on any tendency toward forming a bad one. If Billy seems careless with his clothes and extremely slow in learning that they should be hung up and not laid down, special means are taken to teach him this more commendable way of treating his property. If Mary is acquiring a habit of incorrectly handling her fork at table, at once Mother turns her attention to correcting this fault.

Now, any visible habit is much easier to detect, and correct even, than is the habit of unhealthy thinking. And yet such a habit in any of our children may lead to much more serious consequences than an undesirable visible habit.

"I was shocked when I finally realized that Lucille was unhappy because she was indulging in a daily habit of self-pity", said her mother as we talked together. "I traced it back to the mistake in her thinking when Jane, her playmate, was given a larger doll for Christmas than she received. She lost the pleasure of her own doll in her pity for herself because she could not have as lovely a doll as Jane's. This way of thinking grew upon her. Another playmate had curly hair. Hers was straight. She wondered why she couldn't have had curls and grieved over it. It went on until this hidden habit became very apparent in her attitude and actions. Our little daughter had to go through a really serious time learning to form entirely new thought habits for herself."

Some children form lazy thought habits and this tendency must be watched for and broken up by teaching them to form active, vigorous thought habits. Take a boy for instance who is most willing for you to tell him the why of this and the how of that instead of first thinking out the why and the how for himself as nearly as he can. If you give him a piece of work to do he seldom plans how he can do it in the quickest, best and simplest way but goes ahead haphazardly. He is not lacking in intelligence but is mentally lazy.

There are rebellious habits and fear habits that many, many children form. Where does the rebellious habit lead? The small child scorns a very simple home requirement, perhaps next, he balks at the school rules; later he shows dislike of the group decisions; and the habit grows until he resents the laws of his country.

"I can see now that had I begun very early with Marjorie to correct the fear habit I might have saved her much disquietude and nervous strain," confessed a mother the other day when her small daughter was being examined by a nerve specialist. "She has always seemed a of a fearful disposition and while I have often told her the things she feared—such as thunder claps, lightning and the barking of a strange dog—would not hurt her, firmly believe, now, that I did nothing definite to build up a strong resistance toward that habit."

If, then, we study children for hidden habits, the daily, constant habits of thought, by carefully watching their moods, actions and reactions we shall be able to help them to build up constructive thinking. We shall find, too, that healthy thought habits do away with the necessity for much of our concern with regard to the visible habits.—Margaret Rhoads, in National Kindergarten Association Review.

What Kind of Man Are You?

God knows, but do you know?

Your loved ones know partly, but not fully.

Your friends and associates have some, but less knowledge concerning you.

If God would take from your hand a well filled pen, how much could He write in your favor?

If loved ones, and friends, and associates were to describe all that they had seen in you—worth while, would the description be convincing?

Questions put to oneself by oneself are the questioning that, in value, towers high above inquiries about subjects and other people.

You want to "get there," do you?

Get where?

Are you clear what you are aiming for?

Have you ever thought out the plan before doing any building?

What materials have you decided upon that shall go into this building?

What about purity of thought?

What about honesty of purpose?

What about triumphant faith?

What about far-seeing vision?

What about magnanimity?

What about work that reveals the soul's devotion?

What about living the life that is a challenge to others?

What about the place you should give God?

What about the regular practice of worship?

What about the fullest possible participation in all the real interests of the Church?

What about Christian leadership in your home?

What about making your money—little or much, count for constructive good?

What about the regulation of your pleasures—where they always recreate and never dissipate?

What about growing in soul, without any mark of finality?

What about the open mind, that eagerly absorbs from anyone and anywhere?—Selected.

For The Southern Churchman.

MY GOLDEN HOURS.

Florence Van Fleet Lyman.

My hours I spend in living life
Awake or sleep each day:
Some busy ones, some idle ones
And so they slip away.

And some are sad and others glad,
They make me weep or sing;
I only count them golden ones
When worth remembering.

Problems For Parents.

Do you know that you make your child nervous by talking to him about your own nerves ofttimes to enlist sympathy; by talking to him about his nerves and his nervousness, and worrying him about your own worries?—coddling him unduly, physically and mentally, and depriving him of independence of thought and action?

Do you know that you are responsible for temper tantrums in your child by scolding and nagging and often threatening him, when you are angry yourself; setting him the bad example of temper tantrums in the home; frequently reminding him of what a fearful temper he has; having little or no regard for rest for his nerves?

Do you know that if your child is timid, nervous, easily frightened, that you are largely responsible for it, or the home training at least, by resorting to threats, such as corporal punishment, going away and leaving him or frightening him about the "bogy man?"

Do you know that you ofttimes are responsible for your child's disobedience by uttering useless or unreasonable commands, by threatening him and never carrying out the threat; refusing his requests even though they are perfectly reasonable, promising and failing to keep your promises, chastising him for trivial offences?—Dr. C. J. Hastings.

Just as minds wither and waste if they are engrossed by sordid cares, so the thought of God in Christ enlarges and purifies every faculty which is occupied with it, and lends something of its own nobility to the poorest heart which gives it welcome. But we must not forget the inexorable law of God's love. He gives grace for grace. He gives, as His gifts are turned to service.—A. C. Benson.

For the Young Folks

TO BE LOVED.

Love is not free to take, like sun and air;
Nor given away for naught to any one.
It is no common right for men to share—
Like all things precious, it is sought and won.

So, if another is more loved than you,
Say not, "It is unjust," but say, "If she
Has earned more love than I, it is her due—
When I deserve more it will come to me:

But if your longing be for love, indeed,
I'll teach you how to win it—a sure way;
Love, and be lovely, that is all you need,
And what you wish for will be yours some day.

—Susan Coolidge.

For The Southern Churchman.

A Fourth of July Surprise.

Lucile B. Boyd.

The Patterson farm was one of the most inviting places in the world in which to spend a summer vacation, and offered a continuous series of surprises to those who lived there. Even Mr. and Mrs. Patterson had their share of them. In fact, the arrival of the mail one early June morning brought an unexpected letter from the city, in the well-known handwriting of Mrs. Patterson's sister. She asked if Dick Broadhurst could be of service at the farm for the summer, receiving his board for his work. The letter went on to explain that Dick, a boy of fifteen, was the son of a college professor, and his parents wanted him to have the experience which a farm could give during the summer months.

"Oh Boy!" shouted Ben Patterson; "it will be just like going away myself, to have a boy of my own age to help with the work and to go swimming with. Do tell Aunt Mabel that we're just crazy to have Dick come. I wonder when his birthday is! Do you suppose he's older than I am? Anyway, we're both fifteen, and probably we'll have all sorts of things to do and to talk about."

"You want to remember, Dad,' 'suggested James, the older brother home from college, "that one boy's whole boy, two boys a half a boy, and three boys no boy at all."

"Seems to me you've outgrown the boy stage," answered his father. "You ought to be able to keep these two young fellows busy, Jim. What do you think about it, Mother?"

Again Ben offered his suggestion.

"Ever since Jim's had his automobile and goes to see his girl down at the center he's left me out of everything. I want some one to chum with, and I don't want a girl, either," he added with emphasis, at the same time making a gesture of disdain toward Jim.

Mother Patterson knew just how Ben felt. Jim had grown away from the younger brother, and naturally Ben felt the loss. To her mind the presence of Dick Broadhurst in the family for the summer would be the solution of her problem in making Ben content while school was out.

"If Ben really wants a companion for the vacation, and is willing to help me with the extra work in the house which another boy will make, I shall be very willing to write Aunt Mabel to make arrangements for his coming," was her answer.

In two weeks' time Dick arrived. Professor and Mrs. Broadhurst drove up with their son, his luggage, and a big box resembling a tool chest, occupying the rear of the car. After the first shyness had worn away, Ben and Dick were scouting through the barns and farm buildings with an enthusiasm for each other which showed Mrs. Patterson and Mrs. Broadhurst that the two boys were going to be real pals. The following morning as the Broadhursts were leaving, Dick's father assured him that he would send up any parts for "the machine" which he needed.

"What machine did your father mean?" asked Ben as the boys started toward the chickenhouse after waving a final goodbye to the Broadhursts.

"I've brought along my airplane," answered Dick. "It's just a toy machine, but it works on the same principles as a real one, and I have a motor which goes with it. Father told me not to use it except in spare time, after the work is done, however."

Thanks to the system which Mr. and Mrs. Patterson established for the work and play of the two farms hands, Ben and Dick proved the exception to the rule which Jim had previously mentioned. The boys had definite duties, specified hours for labor, for recreation, and also for sleep. The airplane become incentive to them for keeping up their part of the system, and an additional tie of interest and friendship.

One morning during the last week of June, Jim excited the family at breakfast by announcing the big feature of the Fourth of July celebration, which was to be held at Windham the following Wednesday. The monster field day and carnival was always a big event in the vicinity, but this year a real airplane, which would carry passengers on a ten-minute ride for ten dollars, was to be the big attraction. Ben and Dick, of course, were too excited for discretion. They saw no reason in the world why they shouldn't be the first boys on the field to fly. Their excitement knew no bounds until Mother asked Ben where he thought the ten dollars would come from.

Ben thought a few minutes and quickly decided that he would go to town the first of the week and draw the money from his savings account.

"You'd better take time to think it over," cautioned his mother. "If you count the time it has taken you to earn ten dollars, the errands you have done, the berries you have packed, and the saving it has taken, I think you'll regret spending the money for ten minutes in the air."

Ben and Dick thought the matter over. They talked about the celebration and the airplane while they were doing chores, while they were working on the toy machine, and while they were swimming. It was the topic of conversation at the breakfast table, at the dinner hour, and at supper time. Nothing else seemed to matter until the Fourth should be over and the airplane should have come and gone. Ben even made up his mind that his bank account had been established for just such an occasion as this. Never in his life would the need of ten dollars be greater than it would be at the Fourth of July carnival. Dick was willing to spend the last greenback his father had given him to go with Ben and have the thrill which the realization of their dream would produce.

Tuesday evening, Mr. and Mrs. Patterson and the two boys were sitting on the broad porch watching the sunset behind the sheep barn. The sky seemed to be blazing with fireworks, inanticipation of the national holiday which the morning would usher in. Ben had refrained from buying firecrackers that afternoon when he had been to town for the money at the bank. Dick had likewise desisted from investing in his usual supply of fireworks, so that his ten dollar note would be in readiness for the flight. Both boys were studying the manual which had accomplished Dick's airplane, and the usual before-the-Fourth racket was noticeable for its absence.

In the stillness of the evening, the telephone bell rang vibrantly. Before Mr. Patterson could reach the phone, it rang again.

"Some one's in a hurry," said Dick.

"For you, Mother," called Mr. Patterson.

The boys, listening to Mrs. Patterson's conversation, knew that something had gone wrong.

"We'll drive over as soon as we can," they heard her say in an agitated voice.

As she turned from the telephone, Mother Patterson found the boys standing beside her. Mr. Patterson seemed to sense the situation before his wife explained that the message had come from Grandma Randall over at Tinsdale, thirty miles away, and that Grandpa had fallen that afternoon and torn the ligaments from his ankle. It was necessary for Mr. and Mrs. Patterson to start for Tinsdale at once.

"I wish Jim were here," said Mr. Patterson, "I could leave things with him and feel that everything would be all right."

"Dad, you needn't worry about the farm," said Ben in man fashion. "I guess Dick and I know what has to be done in the morning, and we can stay right here and tend to things."

"I know, my boy," replied his father. "But you and Dick are going to the carnival tomorrow, and the chores will take both of you all the morning. Then you'll have to walk six miles to the fair grounds, for I shan't be here to give you a ride. I tell you what to do. Try to get Jim on the phone, and tell him to come back home tonight. Then he can help you in the morning, and you'll get to the celebration all right. I'll leave it to you boys to take care of things. I must hurry along with Mother."

Ben and Dick watched the automobile out of sight, and then went into the house to plan for the morning.

"I suppose we ought to try to phone Jim and tell him what Father said," mused Ben. "But I don't know where to find him."

He called one number after another, thinking possible somebody at the center had seen Jim, or would know where he might be reached. The result was impossible.

"Jim's probably gone to the band concert already. He was planning to stay with another fellow tonight so to be ready for the big parade at six o'clock in the morning. But we don't need his help, anyway, do we Dick?"

Dick agreed that Jim would be unnecessary for the morning's plan of operation, and together the boys decided just what each would do in caring for the cows, the pigs, the horses, and finally the chickens. Those chickens would take the time. There were so many of them, and such lively ones. The Wyandottes didn't need so much attention, for they were too big to crawl through the wires and under the fence. But those Leghorns were Mother Patterson's prize stock, which she had sent away for, and they must be treated with as much regard as Mother herself would give them.

"I guess you'd better leave me at home, Dick, and go to the carnival without me. It's not necessary for both of us to lose out on the airplane. You can help me for a while in the morning, but I ought to stay here until those chickens have their noon meal. Then I'll find some way of getting to the celebration before it's all over."

"Well, I guess not," replied Dick immediately. "We'll go together or we'll stay together. This celebration will be for both of us, or neither of us. That's all there is to it."

The matter was settled, and though each boy had a secret disappointment, he said nothing of it to the other. In the morning they worked rapidly, and with as much energy as they had. Ben did the milking, for Dick had not mastered that part of farm work. But he could grain the horses, and feed the pigs. Together they took care of the chickens, separated the milk, ate their breakfasts, and finished the rest of the chores. They had just time to get ready for the afternoon's excitement when noontime arrived, and those chickens should be fed again. Putting on their overalls they started in on their last work.

As they were finishing with the chickens, the buzz of a motor was heard loud and distinct. The boys rushed out of the chicken yards and looked about. Not far distaint in the north hayfield was the airplane making a landing. The boys watched with amazement. Then they started on the dead run to see what was the matter with the machine.

"Just a little engine trouble," said the pilot, as the two boys inquired why they landed. "The mechanic will have it all remedied in a short time. Sorry to have torn up your field here. But why aren't you fellows at the carnival?"

Ben and Dick explained the situation, all the time examining the airplane and taking in all of the details.

It was some time before the mechanic told the pilot that the engine was all right again. The boys had had a fine chance to inspect a real airplane, and the pilot took pride in explaining it to them.

"Guess you boys better go over to the fairgrounds with us," said the pilot.

Ben looked at Dick. Dick looked at Ben. Off went the overalls. The pilot helped them aboard. In a couple of minutes they were actually flying. Higher and higher. Then glided downward. they had reached the carnival. The crowd was awaiting them. And just as they landed who should appear from the crowd but Jim with his girl friend.

"Well, how in the world did you come to fly at the carnival?" asked Jim as Ben and Dick set foot on the ground.

"Why, we've been planning it for some time," answered Ben.

To the pilot and the mechanic the new aviators offered their thanks.

"If you ever are up in our hayfield again," said Ben, "I hope I'll be there myself."

To Dick he whispered, "We've got our ten dollars at home, too. I think we've been well paid for our morning's work, don't you?"

"Yes," answered Dick. "It pays to be loyal to your parents and your friends. What do you suppose Mr. and Mrs. Patterson will say?"

For The Southern Churchman.

"THE COUNTRY BOY."

Frances Hine.

How I would like to be a country boy,
Roaming the fields and shouting with joy,
Wading in the rippling brooks;
And not a single flower would I overlook.

I would follow the birds, and see them build their rest,
And see the bumble bee doing his best;
I would go on the hills and lie in the grass
And dream of happy times already past.

I'd wear some old blue over-alls,
And I wouldn't wear any shoes at all;
But in all the world my greatest joy
Would be, to be a country boy.

In the Lands of Shawls and Turbans.

"Of all the queer-looking bundles! I wonder what is in it?" exclaimed the girl in the gray uniform with a silver star on the arm band.

"Yes, cut the cords, Vartabed," she continued in response to the questioning eyes of the Armenian boy, who had been opening bales of clothing just received from America.

Charlotte Main waited with eager curiosity while Vartabed removed the wrappings and the contents of the odd-shaped package rolled out on the floor.

"Hats, untrimmed and trimmed, hats, with feathers, and hats with flowers! What an innovation in this land of shawls and turbans," and Charlotte smiled as she pictured the children who would soon be wearing them and the envious glances they would receive from their acquaintances.

She stooped to pick up some of those near her, a red sailor with long streamers and a soft brown felt that could be turned up or down and worn in almost any style, all the once-prized treasures of happy American school girls, now crushed and bent, but offering protection still from cold winds and damp snowflakes.

Charlotte let her imagination carry her back to a group of girls she knew in the homeland, and, as she straightened bent frames and shook out wrinkles, she contrasted the lot of those girls with that of the homeless little ones, whose lives she had gone to the Near East to save.

Suddenly the expression on her face changed to one of surprise and amusement as a large, bright-green picture hat was uncovered.

"When was this room transformed into a millinery shop?"

Charlotte looked up as her co-worker entered.

"What luck," continued Jane Oilver in happy tones.

"Whose luck?" inquired Charlotte. "Surely not ours. I don't know how we can select the children who are to receive these hats and, after we have chosen them, the fortunate ones will be the unfortunate for being the innocent cause of so much envy."

"Oh! I know where they can do," replied Jane. "Yesterday at the clinic they shaved the heads of a long line of poor little waifs who had been gathered in for treatment. Some of them cried when the tangled mass of hair was taken off, and one girl spoke of her 'Mother' used to brush her hair, when they all lived at home. These children will need head coverings more than any others and you know we have so few shawls!"

"Just the thing!" exclaimed Charlotte. "Only shaved heads may sport those hats. That will be some compensation for the loss of hair."

"But what on earth shall we do with this?" asked Jane, discovering the green picture hat and holding it up to view.

The two American girls smiled as their eyes met over the dainty creation of some fashionable milliner back in the States. How altogether out of place it seemed in the world in which they were now living. Here it was so hard to get just the necessary clothing for warmth. Decorating and the things of beauty belonged to the days before the war.

"It's time for you to go to lunch, you know," reminded Jane.

Charlotte took the green hat and placed it on a shelf.

"I think we had better hide this," she said, and leaving the rest of the task to her co-worker, she went out.

That same afternoon a long line of little maidens wended its way down from the clinic to the office from which clothing received from America was given out. A sharp wind was blowing, and while they stood waiting some of the tiny creatures tried to shut out the cold by raising their shoulders and drawing down their neck like birds perched on the branch of a tree. At a signal they filed past the door where the American relief workers placed hats in the small outstretched hands, and, as each child received the gift, to her so wonderful, pride and joy beamed from her bright, dark eyes.

A few murmured their thanks, the greater number were speechless but each one walked away with an air of dignity, which was new to the Americans who stood at the door.

The line became shorter and shorter and the pile of hats grew smaller and smaller. Finally the very last had been passed out.

"Isn't there any for me? Not a single one left?" And a wail arose as from a broken heart. One tiny little girl remained of the long line of shaved-headed ones, and all the hats were gone.

Charlotte Main's heart went out to the poor little creature. Then suddenly she remembered the green picture hat!

"Wait a moment, dear, and I'll see," she answered reassuringly.

"Oh! look how beautiful."

"I wish I'd been last!"

"Mine isn't pretty at all!"

One exclamation followed another as the girls gathered around the green hat now covering the head and shoulders of the last little girl of the line.

The group departed. The next day at the clinic Jane Oliver smiled as she saw the green hat among the others, only the girl wearing it was surely taller than the one who first wore it. The next day it was on the head of a girl with a checked dress made over from one sent from America, whereas the wearer of the day before wore a homespun woven in the orphanage.

"I don't seem to know who really owns the green hat," she said at last to a group of the girls around her.

For a moment nobody spoke. Then the tiny little girl, who had been last in the line, found her voice.

"It's so beautiful, and there is just one, so it had to belong to us all."—Minna McEuen, in The Presbyterian of the South.

Tommy's Taffy.

"It is a remarkable occasion, and may not happen again in all your life," so Tommy's father had told him in regard to his seventh birthday, that came on Easter Sunday that year.

The usual birthday party was put off till Monday, but on Saturday night Tommy and five-year-old Lottie were allowed to sit up unusually late, coloring Easter eggs and making taffy; that is, they watched their mother and the cook, and when the taffy was done they ate all they could hold, after there were several plates full of cream-colored love knots, twisted sticks and animals of all sorts to set away in the ice house, not to be touched till Monday.

It was a bright Easter sun that shone on Tommy's birthday morning, but Tommy's mother had a sick headache and Lottie couldn't wear her new white dress and pink sash to church after all.

She didn't mind the disappointment, but Tommy felt so badly about staying at home, it was decided to trust him alone in the pew, for Tommy's father was the preacher.

When he was dressed in his new white braided suit, feeling very manly with his buttonhole bouquet of lilies of the valley and waiting for his father to come out of his study, Tommy thought of that taffy and what a help and comfort it would be to him through the long sermon.

"I won't go and ask ma about it, because she has such a headache it would be awful cruel," said Tommy to himself, "and pa don't like to be disturbed; besides ma always gives me peppermints and lozenges to keep me awake in church."

So, although he knew that neither of them would let him touch the taffy, by the time he had slipped slyly out to the ice house, wrapped a lot of it in his handkerchief, licked off his fingers and put on his gloves, he had persuaded himself that Tommy Ray was a very good, thoughtful boy to provide something to help him behave well in church, and yet he tried to stand so that his father would not notice the stuffed out pocket.

But he forgot all about it as he proudly marched up the aisle after his father, and the novelty of being alone in a big pew, with so many prayer books, hassocks, and footstools at his service, the singing, floral decorations and other unusual things, drove the candy out of his mind until his father began to preach.

Then he slid down on one of the footstools and drew it out of his pocket. It stuck to his handkerchief and it stuck to his gloves, and before he was satisfied it was all over his face. It was not all eaten by the time he felt sleepy; so he slid along his footstoll to the register in the end of the pew, opened it, and, with the rest of the candy in his hands, laid his head on a hassock he had put on the cushions on the seat, and went to sleep.

His father was preaching an Easter sermon on the resurrection, and speaking of the faithlessness of Thomas, who would not believe the Lord had risen till he should see His hands and put his finger on the prints of the nails, he cried out in an impassioned, reproachful tone: "Oh, Thomas, wherefore didst thou doubt?"

Now this sleeping, sticky little Tommy was accustomed to being called Thomas by his father when he had done something needing reproof, and the words wakened him; so, starting suddenly up, his molasses-covered handkerchief sticking to his curls, he looked wildly around and then toward the pulpit, with a loud, "Sir?"

There was not a little confusion in the house at the funny sight, and, seeing smiles on all the faces around him and his father's look of dismay, he whined out a most pitiful, "What do you want, pa?" and then sank out of sight in a tempest of sobs and tears, mingled with molasses.

Tommy has not forgotten that occasion, and he hopes that, as his father says, "It will not be likely to happen again in his whole life."—Youth's Companion.

JOHN TYLER

THE GREAT STATESMAN

AND

ABRAHAM LINCOLN

THE CREATURE OF ACCIDENT AND VIOLATOR OF OUR CONSTITUTION.

WHO WAS THE DWARF?

A REPLY TO A CHALLENGE.

By Lyon Gardiner Tyler.

In this neat little book of forty-four pages, with three illustrations, Dr. Lyon G. Tyler draws a parallel between two Presidents of the United States. It is brim full of facts and interest. Price, $1.00 a copy, postage prepaid. Address

MEISTER & SMETHIE, Bookbinders,
107 Governor Street, Richmond, Va.

WHILE IN RICHMOND LET US KNOW IF YOU LIKE OUR FOOD

Mrs. Cook's Cafeteria

Near St. Paul's Parish House
Richmond, Va.

INCORPORATED 1882

Virginia Fire and Marine Insurance Company

Of Richmond, Va.

Assets - - - $3,640,152.88

Fred'k E. Nolting, President.

B. C. Lewis, Jr., Secretary — J. C. Watson, Treasurer
J. M Leake, General Agent — Wm. P. Hill, Asst. Secretary

NOLDE BROS. BAKERY

QUALITY BAKERS OF BETTER BREAD

AMERICAN MAID — BUTTER-NUT

Champions of Children

AT YOUR DEALER

THE GRAY LINE MOTOR TOURS SIGHTSEEING TOURS

Parlor Coaches and Packard Sedans For Special Occasions
Office Phone, Randolph 3846: Home, Boulevard 9116
Office: Murphy's Hotel Lobby

P. B. Burnett Owner and Manager — RICHMOND, VA

Classified Advertising and Notices

All notices and advertisements, excepting positions wanted, will be inserted in this department at a rate of 20 cents per agate line, each insertion. Special rates to contracts of any length. A rate of 15 cents per line is made to persons seeking positions. No advertisement accepted for less than 50 cents.

Copy for this department must be received not later than Tuesday of the week in which it is intended that the first insertion shall appear.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

ANTIQUES.

WE PAY THE HIGHEST CASH PRICES for old-time furniture and antiques of all kinds. H. C. Valentine, 209 East Franklin Street, Richmond, Va.

RELIGIOUS TRACTS.

GOOD RELIGIOUS TRACTS MAY BE had by writing to LEVI C. SULLIVAN, blind tract minister, P. O. Box 43, Roanoke, Va. Some excellent tracts for prison work.

SOLD BY A SHUT-IN.

MEDIUM SIZE ORANGE COLOR SELF-Filling Fountain Pens, with gold bands and solid 14K gold pen points, $1.00 each. Jumbo Pens, color black, $1.25. Edward P. Broxton, Keysville, Ga.

BOARDING.

WANTED, TO BOARD TWO SMALL GIRLS, or boy and girl, for June and July, or six weeks, in private home in the country, at the foot of Blue Ridge Mountains. Modern Bungalow, good water and country board. References given. Address Mrs. M. C. O.'Sullivan,(Ivy Depot, Virginia.

SUMMER BOARD.

IN SHENANDOAH VALLEY—LIMITED NUMBER of people desired. Large house and grounds, conveniently located. M. I. $12 and $15 per week. MISS D. L. BRISCOE, Charles Town, Jefferson County, W. Va.

SITUATION WANTED.

CLERICAL.

YOUNG CLERGYMAN, B. D., UNMARRIED, ACTIVE IN community, welfare and young people's work; has built church; highest recommendation as earnest pastor, priest and capable rector; would consider any call to Southern parish. Address "Rector", care of Southern Churchman.

SITUATION WANTED, SEPTEMBER, AS Housemother, or Nurse in school or institution boys or girls. Graduate nurse with best references. Address "Deaconess", 211 East Eighth St., Newton, Kan.

VIRGINIA GENTLEWOMAN DESIRES position as companion, housemother, or housekeeper. References exchanged. Address "Experience 2", care of Southern Churchman.

HELP WANTED.

WANTED: TRAINED SOCIAL WORKER, Episcopal. Address "A. B. C.," care of Southern Churchman.

Deaths

BOLLING: Entered into rest, Saturday, June 22, 1929, CHARLES EDWARD BOLLING, son of the late Thomas and Mary Louisa Bolling, of Bolling Island, Goochland county, Virginia.

"A gentleman without fear and without reproach."

REV. HENRY MOTTET, D. D.

Entered into Eternal rest, REV. HENRY MOTTET, D. D., for nearly fifty years Rector of the Church of the Holy Communion, New York City, at his country home, Great Neck, Long Island, on Thursday, June 20th. in his 85th year.

A true servant of God; a diligent pastor; a friend of the poor and needy.

CHURCH INTELLIGENCE.

(Continued from page 16.)

cently the Social Service Department worked out a cooperative scheme with the Girls' Advisory Bureau, whereby the Bureau will move their offices into the house and a committee from the seven parishes of the city will operate a hostel for girls in the rest of the house. A matron will be in charge and the girls will sleep and eat there, under the care of the Church.

The Girls' Advisory Bureau is a case-working agency similar to our Church Mission of Help, which works with the juvenile court and other courts, and also with the social agencies of the city, in dealing with problem girls. Through this cooperative arrangement the Church will be able to make a real contribution to the social work of the community.

The board of directors of the new "Episcopal House for Girls" is appointed, two from each parish, by the rectors and bishop. The budget will be shared by all the parishes.

Insurance.

Fifty-eight thousand dollars has been allowed by the insurance companies to Grace and Holy Trinity Church, Kansas City, for the fire damage to the church, pipe organ and windows on March 26. Full damages were allowed on the organ and a valuation by Tiffany's of New York was accepted on the windows. The church and contents had been insured for three-fourths their value. New windows are now contracted for and an organ contract is to be entered into at once. H. N. H.

EAU CLAIRE.

Rt. Rev. Frank E. Wilson, D. D., Bishop.

First Annual Council.

The first annual council of the Diocese of Eau Claire was held at Christ Church Cathedral, Eau Claire, Wisconsin, June 5, the Rt. Rev. Frank E. Wilson, D. D., presiding. A Diocesan Seal was adopted by the Council and a diocesan publication was authorized, to be known as the Diocese of Eau Claire. Most of the day was occupied over the new Constitution and Canons for the Diocese. The Woman's Auxiliary met at the Cathedral at the same time as the Council, joining with the members of the Council at a final dinner Wednesday night, when Prof. R. J. Colbert, of the University of Wisconsin, was the chief speaker, and moving pictures were shown of the Consecration of Bishop Wilson. F. E. W.

OKLAHOMA.

Rt. Rev. Thomas Casady, S. T. D., Bishop.

Children's Day at St. Luke's, Ada.

Every third Sunday in the month is Children's Day at St. Luke's Church, Ada, Oklahoma. Congregation and Church School meet in a union service at eleven o'clock. One of the boys recites the prayers and two others read the lessons. The speaker of the occasion is generally one of the professors of the State Normal College. These services are not only well advertised in the local daily, but by handbills distributed by the scholars of the school in their respective neighborhoods. The bills are in the form of an invitation and are signed by the boy or girl distributing them. This is making real missionaries of the children. It is all done with the permission of the Bishop.

Memorial to Bishop Brooke.

The pulpit in the new St. John's Church, Oklahoma City, is to be a memorial to Bishop Francis Key Brooke, first Bishop of Oklahoma, and will be presented by the Chancel Guild and the Church School. Two-thirds of the unit of the $50,000 church under construction has been completed.

Rev. Stangel's Efforts Rewarded.

Closed, silent and solitary for five years, a beautiful little stone church in Chandler, has been opened again, due to the efforts of the Rev. F. J. Stangel, who has charge of several missions.

The Rev. Paul Reese, Sapulpa, has agreed to organize and serve a new mission in West Tulsa, a growing industrial quarter of the City of Tulsa. This new duty is in addition to the field of the Church of the Good Shepherd, Sapulpa.

St. Luke's Church, Chickasha, the Rev. Keppel W. Hill, in charge, has started a financial campaign to raise ten thousand dollars for a parish house.

C. L. W.

HONOLULU.

Bishop Burleson's Annual Report.

As bishop in charge of Honolulu, Bishop Burleson reports that Bishop La Mothe had confirmed 106 last year, and he himself has confirmed 115, with four more classes in his schedule. He reports sixteen priests and one deacon on the staff; sixteen lay readers; three parishes, eighteen missions, two unorganized missions. Bishop Burleson visited every church and institution and attended the annual convocation. He writes: "I know of no more promising field in the American Church. Most of all am I impressed with the opportunities among Orientals, and especially Japanese. Little indeed has yet been done, but a wide area of service is open before us."

WEST TEXAS.

Rt. Rev. W. T. Capers, D. D., Bishop.

New Summer School.

A very encouraging new beginning of a Summer School for the diocese was made June 3-8, at St. Mary's Hall, San Antonio, when fifty-seven registered students and several visitors attended the classes and meetings held for a five-day period.

Classes were held for all Church workers. Miss Mabel Lee Cooper, whose courses on leadership was the central feature of the school, taught especially for Church School workers. Her stories were one of the most interesting features of the week, adding distinctly to the informal evening meetings held on the porch of the dormitory building.

The Rev. F. G. Deis gave helpful talks to the clergymen who attended the school, and also made two addresses at evening meetings. His talks on China, where he spent thirteen years as a missionary, were inspiring and tremendously helpful and encouraging.

Mrs. J. H. Moore gave vivid lessons in Bible study, illustrating various ways of handling Bible themes in Bible classes. She also had a interested group who were studying woman's work in the Church.

An interesting missionary pageant was presented during the week by the Junior Daughters of the King from St. Mark's Parish, under the leadership of Miss Edna Martin. Mrs. J. C. Tolman, provincial president of the Woman's Auxiliary, attended the school, and made an address on the work of the United Thank Offering.

The Bishop of the Diocese, the Rt. Rev. William Theodotus Capers, acted as Chaplain of the School and delivered a talk at the closing exercises.

In connection with the Summer School, there was held the first meeting of the Laymen's League of the Diocese of West Texas, organized by a few interested laymen from over the diocese under the leadership of the Rev. Henry N. Herndon, of Uvalde.

W. T. C.

Personal Notes

The Rev. Harry J. Pearson, rector of the Detroit City Mission, in Mariner's Church, this week announced his resignation to accept a call to the rectorship of the Church of the Messiah, Detroit. Mr. Pearson has been serving the Church of the Messiah as locum tenens since the resignation last spring of the Rev. Hiram K. Douglas. Recently the vestry and the associate vestry both sent him unanimous invitations to assume the rectorship of the parish. He will assume his new responsibilities September 1. upon his return from a visit to relatives in England.

ORDINATIONS.

The ordination of the Rev. Francis Hopkinson Craighill, Jr., grandson of the Rt. Rev. Frederick F. Reese, D. D., Bishop of Georgia, was an ordination of more than usual interest, which occurred on the fiftieth anniversary of Bishop Reese's advancement to the priesthood by Bishop Reese on Saturday, June 8, in St. Luke's Chapel, Sewanee, Tenn. The candidate was presented by the Rev. Charles L. Wells, Ph. D., Dean of the Theological School, of the University of the South, where Mr. Craighill received his academic and theological training. The Rev. W. H. DuBose, D. D., Professor of Old Testament Language at Sewanee, read the Litany. The sermon was preached by the candidate's father, the Rev. F. H. Craighill, rector of the Church of the Good Shepherd, Rocky Mount, N. C., so that there were three generations participating in the ordination service.

A year ago, Mr. Craighill was ordained to the diaconate by his grandfather in his father's parish church. He has just graduated with the degree of B. D., from the Theological School at Sewanee and was elected a member of the Phi Beta Kappa Society. He has accepted an appointment as missionary at St. Andrew's Church, Douglas, and St. Matthew's Church, Fitzgerald, Ga.

Mr. Craighill will be married on June 25 to Miss Catherine R. Willink, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Willink, of Savannah, Ga., and he and his bride will live in Douglas.

F. F. R.

Dr. George Conrad Weiser was ordered Deacon on May 23, 1929, in St. Peter's Church, St. Paul, Minn., by Bishop McElwain. The Rev. E. H. Eckel, Jr., preached the sermon, and the candidate was presented by the Rev. H. A. L. Grindon. Archdeacon Couper and the Rev. George J. Childs took part in the service. The Rev. Dr. Weiser will do missionary work under the direction of the Archdeacon.

Thomas Henry Wright, II., of Wilmington, North Carolina, was ordained to the diaconate on June 9, in St. James' Church, Wilmington, by the Rt. Rev. Thomas Campbell Darst, D. D., Bishop of the Diocese. Mr. Wright was presented by the Rev. Alexander Miller, rector of St. Paul's Church, Wilmington. Mr. Wright is a cousin of the late Rt. Rev. Robert Strange, D. D., Second Bishop of the Diocese of East Carolina. He was elected President of the Student Body at the Virginia Theological Seminary at the last commencement, and will return in the fall to complete his seminary course.

Mr. Herbert Keble Jones was ordained to the diaconate in the Chapel of the Holy Cross, West Park, New York, on Thursday, June 13, by the Rt. Rev. Campbell Grey, D. D., S. T. D., Bishop of Northern Indiana. The candidate was presented by the Reverend Father Superior James O. S. Huntington, O. H. C., and the sermon was preached by the Rev. J. Gregory Mabry.

DEATHS.

The Rev. William J. Cuthbert, rector of St. Martin's, Brooklyn, died in St. John's Hospital Sunday, April 21, after having been in ill health for some months.

Net Rates For Clergymen and Lay Workers

The facilities of this Corporation are cordially extended to clergymen and their families and to lay-workers and their families, to assist them in building up insurance protection at the lowest possible cost. The rates are, in themselves, net rates; which means that they contain none of the usual "loading." In addition, Annual Refunds have been paid to policyholders. The present rate of Annual Refund is slightly more than $4.00 per $1,000 of insurance. This reduces the cost still further and helps to solve your insurance problems.

Inquiries should be addressed to the Corporation and will have immediate attention

THE CHURCH LIFE INSURANCE CORPORATION

14 Wall Street, New York

(Operated under the supervision of the Trustees of The Church Pension Fund)

LEAVES OF HEALING

FOR LATIN-AMERICA

The importance of Latin-American countries has long ago vindicated the officials of the American Tract Society in seeking in every way possible to supply these poverty-stricken people with "leaves of healing" for the nations which speak the Spanish language. To meet the needs of the missionaries, a New Testament, Concordance, Bible Dictionary, Life of Christ, Life of Paul, History of the Bible, History of the Reformation, Cause and Cure of Infidelity, Interpretation of the Bible, Problem of Evil, Commentaries, and other books have been published in Spanish. The Society has also printed, in Spanish, Scripture tracts, on God, Christ, the Church, Society, and many other subjects, and above all has kept the Spanish-speaking congregations supplied with the best Hymnals at the lowest prices. To meet the special needs of the Sunday Schools, the Society publishes a Sunday School paper "Manzanas de Oro." This attractive periodical is loaned from house to house until the paper is worn out. The annual deficit, after using Trust Funds left to the Society for this purpose, now amounts to over six thousand dollars. The Society needs gifts if it is to continue supplying "leaves of healing" for the children of Latin-America.

LEAVES FOR THE NATIONS

From its foundation, the Society has kept the fact in mind that the leaves of the Tree of Life are not alone for America but for the healing of the nations. All countries have been assisted in printing and distributing Christian literature. The total amount of cash appropriated to March 31, 1928, is $805,016.49. During the past year, appropriations in cash have been made to Japan, Mexico and Korea, and appropriations in literature to the countries of Latin-America, Spain, France, England, Turkey, Germany, Italy, Ireland, Finland, Greece, Poland, Australia, Africa, New Zealand, Canada, the Philippines, Syra, Sweden, British West Indies, British Columbia.

But our largest ministry to the foreigner is rendered within our own doors. One day it is a visit of the Greeks, saying, "We would see Jesus" in your Christian literature; another, it is a visit of the Slovaks; another a visit of the Italians, Bohemians, Russians, or some other nationality. People of all nations are coming to our "upper room," like that room in Jerusalem, where, on the day of Pentecost, all nationalities praised God in such a way that each was understood by the other? Shall we permit the neglected district where churches are closing their doors, to go without the Bread of Life; or shall we bring them to hear Jesus, trusting that He will multiply our loaves as we bring them wrapped in the leaves from the Tree of Life?

LEGACIES PROVIDE LEAVES

The American Tract Society is able to carry on its large work to-day because of the friends who have remembered it in their wills; but large sums could be used to the best advantage if they were left for the general work of the Society.

One of the special needs is an endowment to carry the deficit on Spanish publications. A legacy would also enable the Society to increase its usefulness to several other foreign groups, names of which will be gladly furnished on application.

Legacies to the amount of $29,738.67 were received by the Society during the year ending March 31, 1928.

BONDS BUY BIBLES

Annuity Bonds aid in the printing of Bibles and all other Christian literature. They yield a much larger income than can be secured from bonds or stocks, and the annuity gift makes possible the planning of a much larger future program of usefulness for the Society.

The principal of these bonds is protected in the most careful way, so that the investment is absolutely safe. Our obligations in this department have been fully met to the last dollar, and people write us letters expressing great satisfaction with our bonds. Perhaps the best recommendation is the fact that a large proportion of our annuitants, after taking one bond with us, take out more.

While the American Tract Society yields the field of the publication of Bibles in general to the Bible Societies, it recognizes the need of Bibles and New Testaments with Notes, which the American Bible Society, by its charter, cannot publish. The Bible with Notes published by the Society is a great favorite with people who feel the need of explanatory notes with the text and introductions to each book. Large editions of the New Testament with Notes have been distributed. Soon after its publication, this Testament became so popular that there was an imperative demand for it in Spanish. Native missionaries in Latin-America make large use of it.

Every Annuity Bond written enables the Society to plan the printing of more Christian literature and look forward into the future with great confidence. Other religious organizations have advertised their Annuity Bonds very extensively. With a very small amount of publicity, the Society has written twenty-two Annuity Bonds for the year ending March 31, 1928, amounting to $15,400. The largest bond ever written by the Society was for $100,000, the smallest bond was for $100. As high as nine per cent is paid to annuitants.

BUNYAN TERCENTENARY CELEBRATION

One of the greatest services to the cause of evangelical Christianity which the Society has ever had the privilege of rendering is leadership in the Bunyan Tercentenary Celebration in the United States. Through the efforts of the Society, thousands of sermons on Bunyan and "Pilgrim's Progress" will be preached, Libraries all over the country will have special exhibitions of Bunyan books, and a general interest in "Pilgrim's Progress" will be revived.

In this day, when all the old infidel books are being printed for the expressed purpose of destroying the faith of young and old, the printng and distributing of large editions of "Pilgrim's Progress" in English and in foreign languages, will do much to courteract the activities of such organizations as The American Association for the Advancement of Atheism and its twin sister, The Anti-Bible Society.

Through the generosity of the Chairman of the International Bunyan Tercentenary Committee, copies of our new edition of "Pilgrim's Progress," First and Second Parts, together with "Grace Abounding," in one volume, have been made available for donors of five dollars or more to the Bunyan Fund of $50,000, which the Society is raising to print "Pilgrim's Progress" in many languages. A copy of this book is also given to clergymen who agree to preach on Bunyan and recommend that their churches make a gift to the Fund.

Educators from Maine to California have sent in their tributes to Bunyan and are co-operating in increasing interest in Bunyan's books. Missionaries from all over the world are adding their testimony to the missionary value of "Pilgrim's Progress." We now have "Pilgrim's Progress" in English, Russian, Bulgarian, Ruthenian, Danish, German, Italian and Spanish, and have the plates for it in five more languages. Foreign countries are asking our aid in getting out new editions. Present indications are that the re-printing of "Pilgrim's Progress" in many languages will bring about a real revival throughout the Christian world, as many foreign-speaking people are led to Christ by the reading of this wonderful religious allegory.

The following letter was recently received:

"Sirs:

The American Tract Society is confident that its friends will consider it a privelege to make special gifts to the Fund for the printing of "Pilgrim's Progress" in many languages and will not permit this gift to decrease their annual donations to the general work of the Society.

Over one thousand new friends have been made by the Society during the past year, so that the total gifts to the general work for the year closing March 31, 1928, amount to $38,935.95. However, the Society should have donations of at least One Hundred Thousand Dollars a year to meet the demands for literature in all languages that are made upon it. We send forth this report with the earnest prayer that God's people will rally to our support and help set to naught the efforts of those who openly blaspheme His Holy Name.

WM. H. MATTHEWS

DESIGNED FOR THE PROMOTION OF PRACTICAL PIETY, THE DIFFUSION OF RELIGIOUS AND GENERAL INTELLIGENCE, AND THE MAINTENANCE OF THE PRINCIPLES OF THE PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL CHURCH

Southern Churchman

Vol. 94. RICHMOND, VA., JULY 6, 1929. No. 27.

THE BOOK OF BOOKS

The Bible is still the Book of books, not to one nation only, but to all mankind. It is still the guide both of the learned and of the ignorant. Through its vast variety of style and character, light and shade, parable and history, song and prose, sorrowful and joyful, profound and simple, it is more than ever the best means of bringing together the educated, the half-educated, and the uneducated; the inquirer, the waverer, the believer, the misbeliever; if not in one communion of discipline and worship, at least in one communion of thought and feeling. It is still "the witness in all ages of the higher things in the heart of man, the inspired source of truth, the way to the better life." It contains treasures of wisdom, of justice, of tenderness, of toleration, of freedom, which have never yet been exhausted. It stands on a height above all the human speculations which have gathered round it.—Arthur Penrhyn Stanley, D. D.

EDUCATIONAL

The Gundry Home and Training School For The Feeble Minded

Falls Church, Fairfax County, Va.

Established 1892.

For terms and information address

MISS M. GUNDRY.

The General Theological Seminary

CHELSEA SQUARE, NEW YORK.

The next Academic year egins on the last Wednesday in September.

Special students admitted and Graduate Courses for graduates of othre Theological Seminaries.

The requirements for admission and other particulars can be had from THE DEAN, 1 Chelsea Square, New York, N. Y.

The Bishop Payne Divinity School

The accredited Seminary of the Church for training colored men for the ministry. The curriculum covers the full course for Deacon's and Priest's Orders. The degree of B. D. is awarded.

For catalogue and information apply to Rev. F. G. Ribble, M. A., D. D., Dean, Petersburg, Va.

The Protestant Episcopal Theological Seminary Virginia

The One Hundred and Sixth Session Opened Wednesday, Sept. 19, 1928.

For catalogue and other information address The Dean, Rev. Berryman Green, D. D., Theological Seminary, Alexandria, Va.

Schermerhorn Home School

Located six miles north of Richmond on the Washington Highway. A Home School for Children who need Special care and Training.

SUE I. SCHERMERHORN,
Box 57, West End Sta,
Richmond, Va.

STUART HALL

STAUNTON, VA.

Episcopal school for girls, maintaining best Virginia traditions of refinement and culture.

Thorough College Preparation. Varied General Course. Outdoor Life.

EIGHTY-SIXTH YEAR BEGINS SEPTEMBER 13, 1929

For catalogue, address

MRS. H. N. HILLS, Principal

Episcopal Theological School

Cambridge, Massachusetts.

Affiliated with Harvard University.

For catalog address

The Dean.

Chatham Hall

A Church School for girls in Southern Virginia. Thorough college preparation. General and graduate courses. Art, music, expression, home economics, secretarial course. Superb location; 175 acre estate, gardens, dairy; modern, well equipped buildings. Riding, swimming, golf. Address Rev. Edmund J. Lee, M. A., D. D., Box S, Chatham, Va.

Southern Churchman

SOUTHERN CHURCHMAN COMPANY,
628 E. Main Street - - - Richmond, Va.

LANGBOURNE MEADE WILLIAMS
President
ALFRED B. WILLIAMS..Associate Editor
THE REV. FRANK COX
Associate Editor
THE REV. JAMES W. MORRIS, D. D.
Associate Editor
MRS. CONRAD H. GOODWIN.
Associate Editor
MISS SUSANNE WILLIAMS..News Editor
JOHN H. COOKE..Secretary and Manager

Entered at the Post Office in Richmond, Va., as second-class mail matter.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE.

$3.00 a year in advance. To the Clergy, $2.00. Six months, $1.50. Trial subscriptions, 3 months, 50 cents; 10 cents a copy. Foreign postage, 50 cents additional.

For the convenience of subscribers, subscriptions are continued at expiration unless otherwise ordered. Notice of renewal, discontinuance or change of address should be sent two weeks before the date they go into effect.

RECEIPT OF PAYMENT is shown in about two weeks by change of date on address label. If date is not properly extended after each payment, notify us promptly. No receipt for payment will be sent.

Notice post office address. The exact post office address to which we are directing the paper at the time of writing MUST ALWAYS BE GIVEN. Our mailing list is arranged by post offices and not alphabetically.

Make all checks and money orders payable to the Southern Churchman, and not to an individual.

ADVERTISEMENTS—Rates quoted on request. For classified see head of that department.

Representatives wanted in each Parish; liberal commissions.

News concerning the Church at large always welcome.

CONTENTS

	Page.
Thoughts for the Thoughtful	4
Editorial	5
Behold the Lamb of God—G. Osborne Troop	6
How the Treasure Was Found—Dr. J. R. Stratton	7
A Criminal Doctrine—C. H. Spurgeon	7
Others May, You Cannot—G. D. Watson	10
Favorite Scripture Verses	9
The Christ of the Indian Road—How a Converted Hindu Looks At It	10
Bishop Oldham Raps Rogers Snob Creed	10
Original Interpretations in China	11
Book Reviews	11
Letters to the Editor	11
Church Intelligence	12
Family Department	17
Children's Department	19
Personal Notes	23

ST. JOHN BAPTIST SCHOOL for Girls

In the Country near Morristown. Under the care of the Sisters of St. John Baptist (Episcopal).

College Preparatory and General Courses. Music and Art.

Modern Fireproof Building open September, 1929. Ample Grounds. Outdoor Life. Moderate Rates.

For Catalog address

THE SISTER SUPERIOR,
St. John Baptist School,
Mendham, New Jersey.

MARY BALDWIN COLLEGE

For women. Courses lead to B. A. and B. S. degrees. Music, art, spoken English, physical education. Gymnasium and field athletics. Modern equipment. In beautiful Shenandoah Valley. Founded 1842. Catalog. Staunton, Va.

Five Virginia CHURCH SCHOOLS

FOR BOYS: St. Christopher's School, Richmond; Christchurch School, Christchurch, Middlesex County.

FOR GIRLS: St. Catherine's School, Richmond; St. Anne's School, Charlottesville; St. Margaret's School, Tappahannock.

(For Catalogs, address Principals.)

LEGAL TITLE for wills: Church Schools in the Diocese of Virginia (Inc.).

(About gifts or bequests, address Central Office, 110 West Franklin Street, Richmond, Va.)

HOBART COLLEGE Geneva N. Y.

A Church College for men, founded 1828. Four year liberal arts course, leading to the degrees A. B. and B. S. High standards; faculty of thirty. For catalogue and information, address

REV. MURRAY BARTLETT, D. D., Pres.

St. Margaret's School

Tappahannock, Virginia.

A Church School for girls with modern equipment and moderate cost. Intermediate and College Preparatory. Accredited.

Country life and simplicity without isolation. Beautiful grounds on Rappahannock River. Three dormitories for different ages. Supervised Athletics.

EDITH LATANE, Headmistree.

The Emergency Hospital

School for Nurses.

Washington, D. C.,

offers a three years course to High School Graduates. Credit given for college work. Classes admitted January and September. Accredited School. Hospital 200 beds. $10.00 Monthly allowance. Affiliations provided. School announcement on request Superintendent of Nurses, 1711 New York Avenue.

St. Albans

The National Cathedral School for Boys

Thorough Preparation for Leading Universities, splendid equipment, unexcelled location on Mt. St. Alban overlooking Washington.

Eight years' course. Athletics for every boy.

Address:
WILLIAM H. CHURCH, Head Master,
Washington, D. C.

HAMPDEN-SYDNEY COLLEGE

Invites your careful consideration of its Faculty, Courses of Study, Wholesome Christian Atmosphere, and Physical Equipment.

For catalogue write,

REGISTRAR
Hampden-Sydney, Virginia

THE HANNAH MORE ACADEMY

The Diocesan School of Maryland. Founded 1832. A Country School for Girls—fifteen miles from Baltimore. College, Preparatory and General Courses, Music, Art, Supervised Athletics.

Principal, LAURA FOWLER, A. B.,
Reistertown, Maryland.

CHURCH EQUIPMENT SERVICE

SCHOOLS—CONTINUED.

National Cathedral School
A Home and Day School for Girls
The Bishop of Washington, President Board of Trustees. Mrs. Marvin Bristol Rosenberry, Acting Principal. Mount St. Alban, Washington, D. C.

Study at BLUE RIDGE
this Summer
Vacation place supreme

WORKERS with boys and girls will welcome new courses this summer. 1. Camp craft. Includes study of all details of organizing and running camps. 2. Methods in Boys' Work. Special course for those who do not plan to specialize in boys' work. 3. Physical Education. Six sections covering play leadership for boys and girls, folk dancing, indoor games, practice teaching, tennis, camp activities. Ask for booklet.

Every church of any denomination would be helped by sending two or three young men or women.

Blue Ridge attracts thousands every summer. Conferences of many sorts.

BLUE RIDGE ASSOCIATION
Blue Ridge, N. C.

St. Christopher's
A Church Boarding and Day School
Richmond, Virginia
Healthful, beautiful and historic surroundings. Boarding Department limited to 50 boys.
Rate $750.
Reduction to sons of clergymen and missionaries. Illustrated catalogue on request.
REV. C. G. CHAMBERLAYNE, Ph. D., LL.D., Headmaster.

GUNSTON HALL
School for girls. Kindergarten, primary, academic, collegiate. Art, music, expression, domestic science courses. Small classes. All the refinements of a beautiful Washington home. Three handsome residences near Dupont Circle. Instructors with highest standards and ideals, with personality and experience. Riding, swimming, golf, tennis, dancing, fencing. Estab. 1892. Catalog. Mary L. Gildersleeve, Mary B. Kerr, M. A., Principals.
Richard N. Mason, Business Manager, 1930 Florida Avenue, Washington, D. C.

A Prayer For Discernment.

O Lord, who spreadest out the heavens like a curtain, give us, we pray Thee, faithful wills and loving hearts, that in all Thy works we may ever discern Thee. O Lord, we humbly bless Thee for what Thou givest and for what Thou withholdest; for the knowledge Thou bestowest and for the knowledge Thou keepest back. Amen.—Christina G. Rossetti.

CHURCH FURNISHINGS
Gold, Silver and Brass
Church and Chancel Furniture
Write for Catalogue for Episcopal Churches.
W. & E. SCHMIDT CO
308 THIRD ST. MILWAUKEE, WIS

R. GEISSLER, INC.
56 W. 8th STREET, NEW YORK, N.Y.
Church Furnishings
IN CARVED WOOD AND MARBLE · BRASS · SILVER FABRICS + WINDOWS

EMBROIDERED ALTAR LINENS, SILK ALTAR HANGINGS.
Burses, Veils, Stoles, Markers, Chasubles, Damasks, Fringes, Altar Laces, Embroidery Supplies. Materials stamped for embroidering. MISS M. C. ANDOLIN (formerly with Cox Sons & Vining), 45 West 39th Street, New York. Hours 9 to 1.

RAISE CHURCH FUNDS---Easy
Sell Christmas Cards! Make 50c on each $1 Box of 24 Finest Assorted Engraved Designs. 40 per cent on personal greetings. Deal with Manufacturers! Write for Samples and Details. THISTLE ENGRAVING & PUBLISHING CO., Dept. A, 20 Vesey Street, New York.

Church Furniture
Pews, Pulpits, Chancel Furniture
Sunday School Seating
American Seating Company
1029 Lytton Bldg., Chicago

J. & R. Lamb
23-25-27 SIXTH AVENUE NEW YORK
MEMORIALS IN STAINED GLASS
MOSAIC · MARBLE · STONE · GRANITE
CARVED WOOD · METAL · ETC.

Woody's Art Glass Shop
Art Stained and Leaded Glass.
Church Windows a Specialty.
513 East Main Street, Richmond, Va.

BEVERLEY HEATING
The Best for Homes, Churches, Stores and Buildings for all uses.
R. C. BEVERLEY HEATING CO., INC.,
308 E. Main St., Richmond, Va.
QUALITY—SERVICE.

LINEN for the CHURCH
PURE IRISH LINEN FOR ALL CHURCH USES, yard or piece lengths, at lowest import prices. New Special Number for Cottas, eighty-two and one-half cents. Samples on request.
MARY FAWCETT CO.,
350 Broadway, New York.

CHURCH VESTMENTS
Cassocks, Surplices, Stole.
EMBROIDERIES
Silks, Cloths, Fringes.
CLERICAL SUITS
Rabats, Collars, Shirts.
COX SONS & VINING,
131-133 E. 23d St., New York.

Church and Sunday School Furniture
THE SOUTHERN DESK COMPANY,
Hickory, N. C.
Send for Special Catalogue.

When in need of
MONUMENTS and TOMBSTONES
and want honest treatment see
BURNS & CAMPBELL,
Granite and Marble Works
PETERSBURG, VA.
Designs furnished on application and all orders receive prompt attention.

CHURCH FURNITURE
Pews, Pulpit and Sunday School Furniture. Catalog on request.
T. W. ALEXANDER & SON,
Box 147. Waynesboro, Va.

COURAGEOUS SOULS
the world over are always worth while and invariably succeed. As it takes courage to save rather than spend we invite YOUR account.
Establish relations with us!
State-Planters Bank and Trust Co.
RICHMOND, VIRGINIA

Washington Cathedral

A Witness for Christ in the Capital of the Nation

♦ ♦ ♦

THE CHAPTER appeals to Churchmen throughout the country for gifts, large and small, to continue the work of building now proceeding, and to maintain its work, Missionary, Education, Charitable, for the benefit of the whole Church.

Chartered under Act of Congress.

Administered by a representative Board of Trustees of leading business men, Clergymen and Bishops.

Full information will be given by the Bishop of Washington, or the Dean, Cathedral Offices, Mount St. Alban, Washington, D. C., who will receive and acknowledge all contributions.

♦ ♦ ♦

Legal Title for Use in Making Wills:
The Protestant Episcopal Cathedral Foundation of the District of Columbia

VIRGINIA TRUST CO.

Richmond, Va.

THE SAFE EXECUTOR,

Was organized in 1892 to act as Executor-Guardian and Trustee.

Many prudent men and women in every section of the State have named this Company Executor and trustee in their wills.

Inquiries cordially invited—no cost and confidential.

Capital Stock .....$ 1,000,000.00
Surplus earned .....$ 1,500,000.00
Held in trust.....$45,000,000.00

LITTLE TEA ROOM

SANDWICHES

Special Prices to

Clubs, Lodges and Paties

211 N. Jefferson Ran 3958
Richmond, Va.

XANTHINE

Will hereafter be sold in the new style bottle and package. Always best for the hair. Not a dye, but restores the color, promotes growth and prevents dandruff.

Price $1.00 at druggists, or sent prepaid by us.

XANTHINE CO., Richmond, Va.

CHRISTIAN PARENTS! YOUR BOYS

should go to Dr. Howard Guinness' Boys' Camp at Doe Lake, Northern Ontario, Canada, this summer. Its purpose is to lead them to know the Lord Jesus Christ as Saviour and Friend and strengthen them in the Christian Faith. Its situation and variety of activities are such that any boy would be more than happy there. Dr. Guinness is highly recommended by Dr. Dyson Hague, of Toronto.

Further information from:

Hon. Sec., Pioneer Camp for Boys

366 Bay St., Toronto 2, Ontario.

Thoughts For the Thoughtful

We cannot do His work at long range.

The way we treat men is the surest test of our hearts toward God.

The claim upon God's children is regulated by need, not location.—Ex.

A man is always likely to stumble over his strong points.

Unless we receive the power of God's spirit we can never see the real effect of our own power.

The thanksgiving of one day cannot rehearse the gratitude of a year. "Day by day we magnify Thee; and we worship Thy name ever, world without end."

"O God, give me what Thou knowest to be good, and Thou alone knowest what is good; give me more than I can ask or think; if the reverse of what I ask is what I should ask give that; let me not be undone by my prayers."

We are always getting into straits of some sort which shut us up as in stone walls or iron cages. We know the remedy. The disciples did not petition Herod, but Heaven; and Heaven granted an order of release which Herod could not gainsay. Do not let our poor ignorant reasonings about prayer stultify our divine instinct.—W. L. Watkinson.

The Trinity is an unfathomable mystery; but God is revealed to us in this three-fold way. In Christ He is made visible; for He took upon Himself a human form that He might draw near to us and draw us near to Him. It is the only way in which He could reveal Himself to us and thus become the light of the world. Through the Holy Spirit that light has been made to shine within all who by faith have been illumined and warmed into newness of life.—Dr. G. W. Sandt.

It is a good, safe rule to sojourn in every place as if you meant to spend your life there, never omitting an opportunity of doing a kindness, or speaking a true word, or making a friend.—Spurgeon.

Jesus promises us struggle and conflict, for the practice of the Gospel is a costly thing, but in the light of His life and especially in the light of the resurrection we know that the end of the struggle is spiritual victory.—Canadian Churchman.

Wherever mercy lights the ways of men,
Wherever power wields a kindly rod,
The kingdom grows, and saints are written down
For endless fame—within the books of God.
—Thomas Curtis Clark.

"Love is a great beautifier—not necessarily romantic love, but the pure, unselfish love, the Christ love, for one's fellow men. Such love blots out expressions of harshness, criticism, hatred, writing on the face instead the gentle beauty of the soul, which transforms ugliness into light and softness."

The American has just printed a booklet which gives authoritative information on the important subject of wills and modern methods of "Safeguarding Your Family's Future" (this is its title).

It will gladly mail you a copy, with no obligation on your part, upon request, as long as the supply lasts.

Kindly mention this paper.

AMERICAN
BANK AND TRUST COMPANY
Richmond, Virginia

CARPETS for CHURCHES

We carry a large stock of Church Carpets, embracing a wide assortment of designs, colorings and qualities and at prices to meet every requirement. Write and our representative will call with a selection of patterns and give an estimate, or we will send samples, at our expense, for your consideration.

Sydnor & Hundley

700 E. Grace Street,
Richmond, Va.

SOUTHERN CHURCHMAN

Catholic for every truth of God; Protestant against every error of man.

EDITORIALS

Vol. 94. RICHMOND, VA., JULY 6, 1929. No. 27.

LABORERS

"In all times of our tribulation, in all times of our PROSPERITY, in the hour of death and the day of judgment —Good Lord, deliver us."—Litany of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

"Ill fares the land, to hastening ills a prey, Where wealth accumulates, while men decay."
—Goldsmith.

Herbert Spencer's wave theory of human life, of the rising and falling, the advances and recessions, of nations, races, families, individuals, religions and systems of government, is approved by history, by experience and observation, the thought of the greatest and wisest philosophers and the teachings of nature. Prosperity and ease make opportunity for little men with little motives, encourage to mischievous and baleful activities the weak and bad and crafty and cowardly, awake all the instincts of evil. Adversity, tribulation, dangers to be met, obstacles to be overcome, the hour of death, expectation of the day of judgment, bring forth the bigness of big men, develop strength and courage and high, clean motive, unfaltering and valorous endeavor. We may see all this in our own Church and country as in other Churches and countries in recent and remote past. "The blood of martyrs is the seed of the Church" and the greeds, follies, frivolities, treacheries, of the parasites who prey on its growth and beauty, use it as means for promotion of ignoble purposes, are the most dangerous enemies of the Church.

When Protestants were banned, hunted and slain like animals, tortured, burned, Protestantism spread and grew, gathered new power continually, gave immortal examples of heroism and faith. When the Church of England was accepted, protected, maintained, by the world's mightiest and richest monarchs, it was kept alive and potent by brave, devoted, fervently pious men and women. It was burdened, weakened, hindered, by clerical sycophants and politicians seeking preferments and profit for themselves, by parsons openly and shamelessly dissolute and vicious, smoothly hypocritical, blatantly heretical and blasphemous, elaborately enervated, elegant, refined, aesthetic; others noisily profane, coarse, vulgar. Prosperity, safety and dominance bred the parasites, pests, poisons, bringing on Church and religion derisions, suspicion, resentments, prejudices; preparing the way for the vast rush of atheism and infidelity which yet ceaselessly assails Christianity and civilization. Reading intimate chronicles of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, we realize that only the special mercy and Grace of God enabled the Church to survive her two centuries of undisputed supremacy and the hordes of traitors assembled under its flag and desecrating its name.

While the cause of the American colonies seemed desperate, the hard fighting, God-fearing, clean-thinking, straight-thinking men, able and ready always to endure tribulation, perils and privations, controlled and led. With victory and peace rose a swarm of cheap demagogues, quacks, loud and shallow politicians and theorists, foes of religion and order, ardent revolutionists after the dangers and sufferings of revolution was past. These, it is easily seen now, would have wrecked the new confederation within fifteen years, twisted triumph to destruction, had not the real men, with real brains and purpose and love for country and people, forced sanity and unity. In our prosperity we were delivered.

When what now is the Protestant Episcopal Church was discredited, miserably poor, helpless, with parishes vacant, people astray, church buildings falling to decay, some strong, brave, real men, real Christians and real Churchmen, undertook, undaunted by endless difficulties and discouragements, the labor of rehabilitation. They were real laborers, graciously inspired by the Lord and sent by Him into His harvest.

A Roman Catholic priest narrated once, his eyes shining through happy moisture, face glowing, voice quivering, that he had found, accidentally, in a remote part of the South Carolina mountains a family of his faith which had not seen a priest in twenty years, but through all that time had continued faithfully and punctually all the prescribed observances of the Church and conducted its rituals so far as was possible. At intervals he traveled nearly a hundred miles, much of the distance over bad mountain roads, to lead services for these people and nowhere else, he said, was his heart so uplifted and cleansed and his zeal so quickened as in that humble house.

Bishops and priests and deacons of the Protestant Episcopal Church in America, poorly and precariously paid, many times unpaid, toiling, hoping, trusting, faithful and fearless as were Washington's Americans at Valley Forge and after many a failure and defeat, found men and women of the laity loyal and devoted, unconquerable and invincible. These Church people, often isolated from other Church people, made of their own homes consecrated sanctuaries, established within them sacred altars of love and gratitude and fervent worship from the depths of adoring souls. By the kindly guidance and infinite power of the Almighty real laborers were bred from tribulation and adversity—sturdy, stalwart, staunch men, laborers whose hands were set to the plow and who looked not back, never faltered in any stress of cold or heat or tempest. Praying and believing always, with the help of God they sowed and reaped and built magnificently, kindled from what looked to be death new and glorious vitality and vigor.

We of now are beneficiaries of this valor and labor. It is for our clergy and laity of this day to decide whether we shall prove ourselves worthy heirs of the blessings so hardly and bravely won for us and bequeathed to us, or whether we shall repeat once more the dismal story of degrading enervation and degenracy attending prosperity and safety. We must determine whether the splendid laborers developed for us in tribulation and adversity shall be succeeded by other real men and faithful laborers, or by mere manikins, weaklings, self-seekers, furtive or insolent heretics and deserters.

Our Church is very strong, very prosperous, with power and wealth far beyond its numerical proportion. Here in the United States we are in conditions resembling those in England before deserved chastening and disaster brought penitence and renewal of fidelity and vigor.

We may be very humbly and fervently grateful that everywhere in our Church we have faithful laborers, clergy and laity. We have many, many thousands too intent on the reclamation and salvation of souls, on giving light and hope where darkness is, soothing the sorrows of the stricken, carrying comfort to death beds, trying to lift the fallen and alleviating affliction, strengthening the weak and rescuing the endangered, to concern themselves with the halting of the sun for Joshua, Jonah and the great fish, the intricacies and significances of Hebrew words or discussions of interpolations in the Gospels, Epistles or Old Testament. These have real work to do and are doing it. They are living sources of life and growth and endless results for the glory of God and the redemption and uplifting of humanity. It is far better for the Church to limit its laborers and representatives to this kind than to accept or countenance hosts of such as are drawn by the attraction of prosperity and strength.

There is real danger. Men are considering rectorships in our Church, each with its responsibility for priceless human souls, as so many jobs, like places in offices and stores, looking for "easy jobs" and lucrative. There is reason to fear that men are preparing to take very solemn vows they do not intend to fulfil, to profess in public beliefs and faith they repudiate in private or even openly. Men who scheme and plan and pull wires and employ the tricks and devices of politics to obtain high place in the Church, as small politicians do when in pursuit of appointments or elective offices, are products of prosperity—fearfully different from those old bishops of the days of adversity and tribulation who were rectors and bishops because neither salary would support a family—must be repressed and restrained if the Church is to hold its eminence in the respect and affection of its own membership and of the country and the world and escape the peril of prosperity that has cankered and so nearly destroyed it in the past. Surely, it is time to learn from the countless experiences and examples. The promises and warnings of the Sermon on the Mount, the blessings of the reviled, belittled and persecuted, the dangers when we have so far conformed to the low standards of the general world, the scoffers and materialists that all men speak well of us, have deep and wide meaning.

Alfred B. Williams.

"BEHOLD, THE LAMB OF GOD"

Canon G. Osbourne Troop

It is remarkable that we should owe to John the Baptist that mighty sentence, which sums up within itself the very best substance of the whole Bible—"Behold, the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world!" John the Baptist occupies an unique place in the inspired history. He stands midway between the Old Testament and the New. He appears at the close of the Dispensation of Law and at the dawn of the Dispensation of Grace. He is the last of the Old Testament prophets. For four hundred years there had been no prophet in Israel; so it is not to be wondered at that when John was heard, as the long-promised "voice crying in the wilderness," the multitudes were thrilled at his appearance and thronged eagerly to his ministry.

Though he was privileged to baptize our Incarnate Lord, and to proclaim Him as the Son of God, Who should baptize with the Holy Ghost and with fire, nevertheless John himself was not enrolled among the actual disciples of Christ. He did not, in that sense, enter the Kingdom of God. Our Lord bore wondrous testimony to him in the memorable words—"Among them that are born of women there hath not arisen a greater than John the Baptist; notwithstanding he that is least in the kingdom of heaven is greater than he."

It should always be remembered that John was the means of introducing two of his own disciples to the Saviour, when in their hearing he pointed out Jesus as the Lamb of God. One of the two was Andrew, and the other, though unnamed, was doubtless John, known always as "the disciple whom Jesus loved". Imagine the wistful longing with which John the Baptist watched these two following Jesus, while his own ministry withheld from him the privilege of going with them! Nevertheless he had his own deep and unselfish joy, as expressed in his noble words: "He must increase, but I must decrease."

Let us now turn to our Lord Himself, and reverently gaze upon Him as the Lamb of God. Christ, pictured as the Lamb, is forever associated with the Atoning Cross; for the Atonement is the very esence of the Gospel. Those who would take from us the Atonement would rob us of our Saviour. Christ would be left as a matchless Teacher, and a heroic Martyr, but not one sinner would be saved. Christ came into the world "to save sinners", not merely to preach to them the Sermon on the Mount. Moreover, the Atonement originated in the pure and righteous Love of God: for "God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son"; and in this, as St. Paul says, "God commendeth His own Love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us". Were there no Atoning Saviour, I, for one, in all sincerity should wish that I had never been born.

The sin of the world is an appalling reality, and those who would explain it away would rob our Redeemer of His crowning glory. In chapter 5 of the Revelation we see Christ enthroned and glorified as the victorious Lamb who hath redeemed us unto God by His Blood. As the result of His enthronement the Lamb that was slain is acclaimed by the whole creation. As the Revised Version has it—"Every created thing which is in the heaven, and on the earth, and under the earth, and on the sea, and all things that are in them, heard I saying—'Unto Him that sitteth on the Throne, and unto the Lamb, be the blessing, and the honour, and the glory, and the dominion, for ever and ever."

Moreover, it is surely most significant that the Throne of God is now identified forever with the Atonement, for in the last chapter of the Revelation it is spoken of as "the Throne of God and of the Lamb". So for all eternity Christ will be known as the Victorious Lamb, Who was slain to put away the sin of the world. All that a sacrificial lamb stands for is fulfilled in Christ: just as all that the River of Life stands for is fulfilled in the Holy Spirit. Thus we regard the Throne as shared in symbolical reality by the Three Persons of the Blessed Trinity.

We cannot better conclude this article than by pointing out the absolute dependence of all believers upon the Blood of the Lamb for pardon and for victory. In chapter 12 of the Revelation believers are represented as overcoming Satan, "the Deceiver of the whole world", not in strength of their own, but "because of the Blood of the Lamb, and because of the Word of their testimony; and they loved not their life even unto death". In chapter 14 it is written of the victorious 144,000—"These are they which follow the Lamb whithersoever He goeth." And a wonderful description is given in chapter 17, according to the Revised Version: "These shall war against the Lamb, and the Lamb shall overcome them; for He is Lord of lords and King of kings: and they also shall overcome that are with Him, called, and chosen, and faithful."

Yet again the victorious multitude, that no man can number, are described in chapter 7 as coming out of the great tribulation, and as having washed their robes, and made them white in the Blood of the Lamb. And it is significantly added: "Terefore are they before the Throne of God. . . . They shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more, neither shall the sun light on them, nor any heat; for the Lamb which is in the midst of the Throne shall be their Shepherd, and shall guide them unto fountains of waters of life; and God shall wipe away every tear from their eyes." Please note Revised Version in these quoted passages, and most notably in the last chapter of the Revelation, verse 14, where the Revisers have restored the true text—"Blessed are they that wash their robes, that they may have the right to the tree of life, and may enter in by the gates into the city." Our robes are hopelessly stained with sin, and our only right to enter the Holy City and partake of the Tree of Life lies in the blessed fact that we have washed these robes and made them white in the Blood of the Lamb. Let us sing, therefore, with one heart and one voice—"To Him that sitteth upon the Throne, and unto the Lamb, be the glory for ever. Amen."

HOW THE TREASURE WAS FOUND

That is a touching but profound story that has come down to us from the long ago: the story of the poor man who was ambitious for his little daughter. This man, who lived on the edge of a forest, was greatly stirred by the beauty and sweetness of his only child, and he set before his mind certain goals for her, to which he gave all the devotion of his heart. He desired that she should be "a great lady", that she should have silken raiment and gleaming jewels and a palace of marble, such as he had looked upon from time to time, in wonder and awe. His heart was set upon these things, and he hoped and dreamed of nothing else. In one of his dreams a mysterious visitor told him to go and dig under the trees of the forest and he would find at last a chest of gold. But the visitor told him that he could not find this chest of gold until he dug without thought of the gold and what he desired to do with it. So again and again he went into the forest to dig, but always with failure. He tried to make his mind a complete blank about the gold. He tried to put aside the worldly ambitions and plans for his little daughter that he had in connection with it. But he was not able to put these things completely out of his mind and heart. Then the story tells us how the shadows fell across his pathway. This precious child—his only treasure—was stricken down with disease, and despite all his efforts, at last she died. Then the broken-hearted father carried her body out—a burden of love—to bury it beneath the trees. He selected a large and beautiful tree to guard that sacred dust. He laid his burden tenderly upon the sod, and began digging at the foot of this giant oak which was to stand sentinel through the silent years of sorrow. And there, with the last stroke, as he completed the grave, he uncovered the casket of gold. He stood entranced with wonder as he looked upon the gleaming treasure—a king's ransom—but his eyes rained down their tears as he realized that he had found treasure only at the bottom of the grave of his earthly ambition. When his mind was free and his heart was empty of all his plotting and planning, then came the realization of his dream and the fulfillment of his desire for worldly wealth.

And so, dear friends, with us. It is ever true, as the Master taught us, that the higher comes when we turn from following the delusion of the lower. At the bottom of the grave of our worldly ambitions and our selfish striving, we will find the treasures of truth and the gold of God's eternal goodness, grace and power!

Dr. J. R. Stratton, in Bible Champion.

"He that saveth his life shall lose it, and he that loseth his life for my sake shall find it."

A CRIMINAL DOCTRINE

C. H. Spurgeon

"I do not frustrate the grace of God; for if righteousness come by the law, then Christ is dead in vain" (Gal. 2:21).

THE idea of salvation by the merit of our own works is exceedingly insinuating. It matters not how often it is refuted, it asserts itself again and again; and when it gains the least foothold it soon makes great advances. Hence Paul, who was determined to show it no quarter, opposed every thing which bore its likeness. He was determined not to permit the thin edge of the wedge to be introduced into the church, for well he knew that willing hands would soon be driving it home: hence, when Peter sided with the Judaizing party, and seemed to favor those who demanded that the Gentiles should be circumcised, our brave apostle withstood him to the face.

He fought always for salvation by grace through faith, and contended strenuously against all thought of righteousness by obedience to the precepts of the ceremonial law. No one could be more explicit than he upon the doctrine that we are not justified or saved by works in any degree, but solely by the grace of God. His trumpet gave forth no uncertain sound, but gave forth the clear note, "By grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God" (Eph. 2:8, 9). Grace meant grace with him, and he could not endure any tampering with the matter, or any frittering away of its meaning.

So fascinating is the doctrine of legal righteousness that the only way to deal with it is Paul's way. Never yield to it; but remember the apostle's firmness, and how stoutly he held his ground; "To whom," saith he, "we gave place by subjection, no, not for an hour" (Gal 2:5).

The error of salvation by works is exceedingly plausible. You will constantly hear it stated as a self-evident truth, and vindicated on account of its supposed practical usefulness, while the gospel doctrine of salvation by faith is railed at and accused of evil consequences. It is affirmed that if we preach salvation by good works, we shall encourage virtue, and so it might seem in theory, but history proves by many instances that as a matter of fact where such doctrine has been preached virtue has become singularly uncommon, and that in proportion as the merit of works has been cried up, morality has gone down.

On the other hand, where justification by faith has been preached, conversions have followed, and purity of life has been produced even in the worst of men. Those who lead godly and gracious lives are ready to confess that the cause for their zeal for holiness lies in their faith in Jesus Christ; but where will you meet with a devout and upright man who glories in his own works?

Self-righteousness is Natural to our fallen humanity. Hence, it is the essence of all false religions. Be they what they may, they all agree in seeking salvation by our own deeds. He who worships his idols will torture his body, will fast, will perform long pilgrimages, and do or endure any thing in order to merit salvation. The Romish Church holds up continually before the eyes of its votaries the prize to be earned by self-denial, by penance, by prayers, or by sacraments, or by some other performances of man.

Go where you may, the natural religion of fallen man is salvation by his own merits. An old divine has well said, "Every man is born a heretic upon this point, and he naturally gravitates toward this heresy in one form or another. Self-salvation, either by his personal worthiness, or by his repetnance, or by his resolves, is a hope ingrained in human nature, and very hard to remove. This foolishness is bound up in the heart of every child, and who shall get it out of him?"

This erroneous idea arises partly from ignorance, for men are ignorant of the law of God, and of what holiness really is. If they knew that even an evil thought is a breach of the law, and that the law once broken in any point is altogether violated, they would be at once convinced that there can be no righteousness by the law to those who have already offended against it.

Nor is it ignorance alone which leads men to self-righteousness: they are also deceived by pride. Man cannot endure to be saved on the footing of mercy; he loves not to plead guilt and throw himself on the favor of the great King; he cannot brook to be treated as a pauper, and blessed as a matter of charity; he desires to have a finger in his own salvation, and claim at least a little credit for it. Proud man will not have heaven itself upon terms of grace; but so long as he can he sets up one plea or another, and holds to his own righteousness as though it were his life.

This self-confidence also arises from wicked unbelief, for through his self-conceit man will not believe God. Nothing is more plainly revealed in Scripture than this—that by the works of the law shall no man be justified, yet men in some shape or other stick to the hope of legal righteousness; they will have it that they must prepare for grace, or assist mercy, or in some degree deserve eternal life. They prefer their own flattering prejudices to the declarations of the heart-searching God. The testimony of the Holy Spirit concerning the deceitfulness of the heart is cast aside, and the declaration of God that there is none that doeth good, no, not one, is altogether denied. Is not this a great evil?

Self-rigtheousness is also much promoted by the almost universal spirit of trifling which is now abroad. Only while men trifle with themselves can they entertain the idea of personal merit before God. He who comes to serious thought, and begins to understand the character of God, before whom the heavens are not pure, and the angels are charged with folly—he, I say, that comes to serious thought, and beholds a true vision of God, abhors himself in dust and ashes, and is forever silenced as to any thought of self-destruction.

Two Great Crimes

are contained in self-righteousness. It frustrates the grace of God, and makes Christ to have died in vain.

I. The word here translated "frustrate" means to "make void"—needless. Now, he that hopes to be saved by his own righteousness annuls the grace or free favor of God, treats it as useless, and in that way frustrates it.

It is clear, first, that if righteousness come by the law, the grace of God is no longer required. If we can be saved by our own merits, we need justice, but we certainly do not want mercy. If we can keep the law, and claim to be accepted as a matter of debt, it is plain that we need not turn suppliants, and crave for mercy. Grace is a superfluity where merit can be proved.

A man who can go into court with a clear case and a bold countenance asks not for mercy of the judge, and the offer of it would insult him. "Give me justice," he says: "give me my rights"; and he stands up for them as a brave Englishman should do. It is only when a man feels that the law condemns him that he puts in a plea for mercy. Nobody ever dreamed of recommending an innocent man to mercy. I say, then, that the man who believes that by keeping the law, or by practicing ceremonies, or by undergoing religious performances, he can make himself acceptable before God, most decidedly puts the grace of God on one side as a superfluous thing as far as he is concerned. Is it not clearly so? And is not this a crimson crime, this frustration of the grace of God?

He makes the grace of God to be at least a secondary thing, which is only a lower degree of the same error. Many think that they are to merit as much as they can by their own exertions, and then the grace of God will make up for the rest. The theory seems to be that we are to keep the law as far as we can, and this imperfect obedience is to stand good, as a sort of composition, say a shilling in the pound, or fifteen shillings in the pound, according as a man judges of his own excellence; and then what is required over and above our own hard-earned money the grace of God will supply: in short, the plan is, every man his own saviour, and Jesus Christ and His grace make-weights for our deficiencies.

Whether men see it or not, this admixture of law and grace is most dishonoring to the salvation of Jesus Christ. It makes the Saviour's work to be incomplete, though on the cross He cried, "It is finished". Yea, it even treats it as being utterly ineffectual, since it appears to be of no avail till man's works are added to it. According to this notion, we are redeemed as much by our own doings as by the ransom price of Jesus' blood, and man and Christ go shares, both in the work and in the glory. This is an intense form of arrogant treason against the majesty of divine mercy—a capital crime, which will condemn all who continue in it.

More than that, he who trusts in himself, his feelings, his works, his prayers, or in any thing except the grace of God, virtually gives up trusting in the grace of God altogether: for be it known unto you, that God's grace will never share the work with man's merit. As oil will not combine with water, so neither will human merit and heavenly mercy mix together. The apostle saith in Romans 6:6, "If by grace, then it is no more of works: otherwise grace is no more grace. But if it be of works, then is it no more grace; otherwise work is no more work."

You must either have salvation wholly because you deserve it, or wholly because God graciously bestows it, though you do not deserve it. You must receive salvation at the Lord's hand either as a debt or a charity; there can be no mingling of the ideas. That which is a pure donation of favor cannot also be a reward of personal deserving. A combination of the two principles of law and grace is utterly impossible. Trust in our own works in any degree effectually shuts us out from all hope of salvation by grace: and so it frustrates the grace of God.

Thus hoping to be saved by our own righteousness robs God of His glory. It as good as says, "We want no grace; we need no free favor." It reads of the new covenant which infinite love has made, but by clinging to the old covenant it puts dishonor upon it. In its heart it murmurs, "What need of this covenant of grace"? The covenant of works answers every purpose for us." It reads of the great gift of grace in the person of Jesus Christ, and it does despite thereto by the secret thought that human doings are as good as the life and death of the Son of God. It cries, "We will not have this Man to save us."

A self-righteous hope casts a slur upon the glory of God, since it is clear that if a man could be saved by his own works, he would naturally have the honor of it; but if a man be saved by the free grace of God, then God is glorified. Woe unto those who teach a doctrine which would pluck the crown royal from the head of our sovereign Lord and disgrace the throne of His glory. God help us to be clear of this rank offense against high heaven.

I grow warm upon such a subject as this, for my indignation rises against that which does dishonor to my Lord, and frustrates His grace. This is a sin so gross that even the heathen cannot commit it. They have never heard of the grace of God, and therefore they cannot put a slight upon it: when they perish it will be with a far lighter doom than those who have been told that God is gracious and ready to pardon, and yet turn on their heel and wickedly boast of innocence, and pretend to be clean in the sight of God. This is a sin which devils cannot commit. With all the obstinacy of their rebellion, they can never reach to this. They have never had the sweet notes of free grace and dying love ringing in their ears, and therefore they have never used the heavenly invitation. What has never been presented to their acceptance cannot be the object of their rejection. Thus then, my hearer, if you should fall into this deep ditch, you will sink lower than the heathen, lower than Sodom and Gomorrah, and lower than the devil himself. Wake up, I pray you, and do not dare to frustrate the grace of God.

2. The second great crime which self-justification commits is making Christ to have died in vain. This is plain enough. If salvation can be by the works of the law, why did our Lord Jesus die to save us? O Thou bleeding Lamb of God! Thine incarnation is a marvel, but Thy death upon the accursed tree is such a miracle of mercy as fills all heaven with astonishment. Will any dare to say that Thy death, O incarnate God, was a superfluity, a wanton waste of suffering? Do they dare think Thee a generous but unwise enthusiast, whose death was needless Yes, thousands virtually do this, and, in fact, all do so who make it out that men might have been saved in some other way, or may now be saved by their own willings and doings.

The doctrine of salvation by works is a sin against all the fallen sons of Adam, for if men cannot be saved except by their own works, what hope is left for any transgressor? You shut the gates of mercy on mankind; you condemn the guilty to die without the possibility of remission. You deny all hope of welcome to the returning prodigal, all prospect of paradise to the dying thief.

Nor is this all. It is a sin against the saints, for none of them have any other hope except in the blood of Jesus Christ. Remove the doctrine of the atoning blood, and you have taken all away; our foundation is gone. If you speak thus, you offend the whole generation of godly men.

I go further: work-mongering is a sin against the perfect ones above. The doctrine of salvation by works would silence the hallelujahs of heaven. Hush, we choristers, what meaning is there in your song? You are chanting, "Unto Him that loved us, and washed us from our sins in His own blood." But why sing ye so? If salvation be by works, your ascriptions of praise are empty flatteries. You ought to sing, "Unto ourselves who kept our garments clean, to us be glory forever and ever"; or, at least, "Unto ourselves whose acts made the Redeemer's work effectual be a full share of praise." But a self-lauding note was never heard in heaven, and therefore we feel sure that the doctrine of self-justification is not of God.

I charge you, renounce it as the foe of God and man. This proud system is a sin of deepest dye against the Well-Beloved. To say that Christ came to earth for nothing is bad enough; but that He became obedient to the death of the cross without result is profanity at its worst.

II. But, in the second place, I proceed to the solemn fact that—

These Two Great Crimes Are Committed by Many People.

I am afraid they are committed by some who hear me this day. Let every one search himself and see if these accursed things be not hidden in his heart, and if they be, let him cry unto God for deliverance from them.

1. Assuredly these crimes are chargeable on those who trifle with the gospel. Here is the grand proclamation of the Sovereign's grace to fallen man—to sinners—the most wonderful knowledge that ever was revealed, and yet you do not think it worth a thought!

The death of Christ is nothing to you—a very beautiful fact, no doubt; you know the story well, but you do not care enough about it to wish to be a partaker in its benefits. His blood may have power to cleanse from sin, but you do not want remission; His death may be the life of men, but you do not long to live by Him. To be saved by the atoning blood does not strike you as being half so important as to carry on your business at a profit and acquire a fortune for your family. By thus trifling with these precious things you do, as far as you can, frustrate the grace of God and make Christ to die in vain.

2. Another set of people who do this are those who have no sense of guilt. Perhaps they are naturally amiable, civil, honest and generous people, and they think that these natural virtues are all that is needful. We have many such, in whom there is much that is lovely, but the one thing needful is lacking. They are not conscious that they ever did anything very wrong, they think themselves certainly as good as others, and in some respects rather better.

You are very bad, because you are so proud as to think yourself righteous, though God hath said that "there is none righteous; no, not one." (Romans 3:10.) You tell your God that He is a liar. His Word accuses you, and His law condemns you; but you will not believe Him, and actually boast of having a righteousness of your own. This is high presumution and arrogant pride, and may the Lord purge you from it!

3. Another sort of people may fancy that they shall escape; but we must now come home to them. Those who despair will often cry, "I know I cannot be saved except by grace, for I am such a great sinner; but, alas! I am too great a sinner to be saved at all. I am too black for Christ to wash out my sins." Ah, my dear friend, though you know it not, you are making void the grace of God, by denying its power and limiting its might. You doubt the efficacy of the Redeemer's blood, and the power of the Father's grace.

What! The grace of God: is not that able to save? Is not the Father of our Lord Jesus able to forgive sin? We joyfully sing—

> "Who is a pardoning God like Thee?
> Or who hath grace so rich and free"

And you say He cannot forgive you, and this in the teeth of His many promises of mercy. Oh, say not so: let not thine unbelief give the lie to God.

4. And those, I think, commit this sin in a large measure, who make a mingle-mangle of the gospel. I mean this: when we preach the gospel we have only to say, "Sinners, you are guilty: you can never be anything else but guilty in and of yourselves: if that sin of yours be pardoned, it must be through an act of sovereign grace, and not because of anything in you, or that can be done by you. Grace must be given to you because Jesus died, and for no other reason; and the way by which you can obtain that grace is simply by trusting Christ. By faith in Jesus Christ you shall obtain full forgiveness." This is pure gospel.

If the man turns round and inquires, "How am I warranted to believe in Christ"? If I tell him that he is warranted to believe in Christ because he feels a law-work within, or because he has holy desires, I have made a mess of it: I have put something of the man into the question and marred the glory of grace. Those who mingle their "ifs" and "Buts", and insist upon "you must do this, and feel that, before you may accept Christ", frustrate the grace of God in a measure, and do damage to the glorious gospel of the blessed God.

5. And so, once more, do those also who apostatize. Do I speak to any here who were once professors of religion, who once used to offer prayer in the assembly, who once walked as saints, but now have gone back? You, my friend, say by your course of life, "I had the grace of God, but I do not care about it: it is worth nothing. I have gone back to the world." You do as good as say, "I did once trust in Jesus Christ, but He is not worth trusting." You have denied and sold your Lord and Master. I will not now go into the question as to whether you ever were sincere, though I believe you never were, but on your own showing such is your case. Take heed, lest these two terrible crimes should rest upon you, that you do frustrate the grace of God, and make Christ to have died in vain.

III. Now, in closing, I shall carry with me the deep convictions and the joyful confidences of all true believers. It is this, that—

Every True Believer's Trust Is in Jesus Alone.

Come, now, honest hearts, I speak to you. Do you trust in grace alone, or do you in some measure rest in yourselves? Do you even in a small degree depend upon your own feelings, your own faithfulness, your own repentance? I know you abhor the very thought. You have not even the shadow of a hope, nor the semblance of a confidence, in anything you ever were, or ever can be, or ever hope to be. You fling this away as a foul rag which you would hurl out of the universe if you could.

I do avow that though I have preached the gospel with all my heart, and glory in it, yet I cast my preachings away as dross if I think of them as a ground of reliance: and though I have brought many souls to Christ, blessed be His name, I never dare for one moment put the slightest confidence in that fact as to my own salvation. I repose alone in my Redeemer.

What I say of myself I know that each one of you will say for himself. Your alms-giving, your prayers, your tears, your suffering persecution, your earnest work in the Sunday school or elsewhere—do you ever think of putting these side by side with the blood of Christ as your hope? No, you never dream of it; I am sure you never do, and the mention of it is utterly loathsome to you: is it not? Grace, grace, grace is your sole hope.

Moreover, you have not only renounced all confidence in works, but you renounce it this day more heartily than ever you did. The older you are, and the more holy you become, the less do you think of trusting in yourself. I know there are some who never felt themselves to be sinners, who shift about as if they were sitting on thorns when I am preaching grace, and nothing but grace; but it is not so with you who are resting in Christ. "Oh, no," you say, "ring that bell again, sir! Ring that bell again; there is no music like it. Touch that string again; it is our favorite note."

The true believer trusts in the death of Christ; he puts his sole and entire reliance upon the great Substitute who loved and lived and died for him. He does not dare to associate with the bleeding sacrifice his poor bleeding heart, or his prayers, (or his sanctification, or anything else. "None but Christ, none but Christ," is his soul's cry.

He detests every proposal to mix anything of ceremony or of legal action with the finished work of Jesus Christ. The longer we live, I trust, dear brethren, the more we see the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ. We are struck with admiration at the wisdom of the way by which a Substitute was introduced—that God might smite sin and yet spare the sinner; we are lost in admiration at the matchless love of God, that He spared not His own Son; we are filled with reverent adoration at the love of Christ, that when He knew the price of pardon was His blood, His pity ne'er withdrew.

We are one with Him, and, being one with Him, we realize more every day that He did not die in vain. His death has bought us real life; His death has already set us free from the bondage of sin, and has even now brought us deliverance from the fear of eternal wrath. His death has bought us life eternal, has bought us sonship, and all the blessings that go with it, which the Father takes care to bestow; the death of Christ has shut the gates of hell for us, and opened the gates of heaven; the death of Christ has wrought for us mercies, not visionary or imaginary, but real and true, which this very day we do enjoy, and so we are in no danger of thinking that Christ died in vain.

It is our joy to hold these

Two Great Principles, which I will leave with you, hoping that you will suck marrow and fatness out of them, that the grace of God cannot be frustrated, and Jesus Christ died not in vain. These two principles, I think, lie at the bottom of all sound doctrine. The grace of God cannot be frustrated after all. Its eternal purpose will be fulfilled, its sacrifice and seal shall be effectual: the chosen ones of grace shall be brought to glory. There shall be no failures as to God's plan in any point whatever: at the last, when all shall be summed up, it shall be seen that grace reigned through righteousness unto eternal life, and the top stone shall be brought out with shoutings of "Grace, grace unto it."

And, as grace cannot be frustrated, so Christ did not die in vain. Some seem to think that there were purposes in Christ's heart which will never be accomplished. We have not so learned Christ. What He died to do shall be done; His own He will have; those He redeemed shall be free; there shall be no failure of reward for Christ's wondrous work: "He shall see of the travail of His soul and shall be satisfied."

On these two principles I throw back my soul to rest. Believing in His grace, that grace shall never fail me. "My grace is sufficient for thee," saith the Lord, and so shall it be. Believing in Jesus Christ, His death must save me. It cannot be, O Calvary, that thou shouldst fail! O Gethsemane, that thy bloody sweat should be in vain! Through divine grace, resting in our Saviour's precious blood, we must be saved. Joy and rejoice with me, and go your way to tell it out to others. God bless you in so doing, for Jesus' sake. Amen.

FAVORITE SCRIPTURE VERSES

(In this space each week will appear a favorite passage of Scripture as sent in by a different reader. Every one is, therefore, invited to send us their favorite verse. It is suggested that all who can, join with the rest of us in committing to memory the verse which so appears here each week, including its location in the Holy Book; and in due time your memory chest will be laden with choice eternal treasures, indeed. "Thy word have I hid in my heart, that I might not sin against thee."—Ps. 119-11.)

This week the following verse was submitted by Miss Dorothy Chamberlin, age twelve, Los Angeles, Cal.: "Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God."—Matt. 5:9.

Who will send one from the far-away places as well as very near us?

Others May, You Cannot

If God has called you to be really like Jesus He will draw you into a life of crucifixion and humility, and put upon you such demands of obedience that you will not be able to follow other people or measure yourself by other Christians, and in many ways He will seem to let other good people do things which He will not let you do.

Other Christians and ministers who seem very religious and useful may push themselves, pull wires and work schemes to carry out their plans, but you cannot do it; and if you attempt it you will meet with such failure and rebuke from the Lord as to make you sorely penitent.

Others may boast of themselves, of their work, of their succes, of their writings, but the Holy Spirit will not allow you to do any such thing, and if you begin it He will lead you into some deep mortification that will make you despise yourself and all your good works.

Others may be allowed to succeed in making money, or may have a legacy left to them, but it is likely God will keep you poor, because He wants you to have something far better than gold, namely, a helpless dependence on Him, that He may have the privilege of supplying your needs day by day out of an unseen treasury.

The Lord may let others be honored and put forward, and keep you hidden in obscurity, because He wants to produce some choice, fragrant fruit for His coming glory, which can only be produced in the shade. He may let others be great, but keep you small. He may let others do a work for Him and get the credit of it, but He will make you work and toil on without knowing how much you are doing; and then to make your work still more precious, He may let others get the credit for the work which you have done, and thus make your reward ten times greater when Jesus comes.

The Holy Spirit will put a strict watch over you, with a jealous love, and will rebuke you for little words and feelings, or for wasting your time, which other Christians never seem distressed over. So make up your mind that God is an infinite Sovereign and has a right to do as He pleases with His own. He may not explain to you a thousand things which puzzle your reason in His dealings with you, but if you absolutely sell yourself to be His love slave, He will wrap you up in a jealous love, and bestow upon you many blessings which come only to those who are in the inner circle.

Settle it forever, then, that you are to deal directly with the Holy Spirit, and that He is to have the privilege of tying your tongue, or chaining your hand, or closing your eyes, in ways that He does not seem to use with others. Now when you are so possessed with the living God that you are, in your secret heart, pleased and delighted over this peculiar, personal, private, jealous guardianship and management of the Holy Spirit over your life, you will have found the vestibule of heaven.—G. D. Watson, in Living Words.

"The Christ of the Indian Road"

How a Converted Hindu Looks At It.

(Reprinted from "The Presbyterian Survey.")

Much has been written about Dr. Stanley Jones' book, "The Christ of the Indian Road," and not a few Western writers have commended it. Their views may be interesting, but much more important is the impression which the book makes upon Indian readers. What does an intelligent Hindu think about it? Mr. S. P. Bannerji, of Calcutta, an experienced Christian worker, gives his opinion, in the article which follows.

As an Indian Christian, I should like to submit some remarks on this striking book, which a missionary friend sent to me from America some time ago. I have read with interest many of the articles which have appeared in the Christian press both for and against it, but the author's question, "How differs this Christ of the Indian Road from the Christ of the Galilean Road?" remains unanswered. Hence this writing.

Dr. Jones has devoted a whole chapter to the question, "What or Whom?" and he concludes that the determining factor is to be whom we believe rather than what. But if faith is to have a solid basis on which to rest, must not our knowledge of the whom be determined by the what that has been told us concerning Him in the Bible? To "hold fast" to the teachings of the first and true witnesses of the Word, as they have again and again exhorted us to do, cannot be to confine the Christ in grave clothes, it is to preserve ourselves from deception. It is here I feel that Dr. Jones has erred, and here are grave perils for the Christian movement in India.

Regarding baptism, it is certainly not apostolic to leave baptism an open question for individuals to decide for themselves. After reading Dr. Jones, the non-Christian feels that baptism is really an unnecessary thing in spiritual religion, and may therefore safely be dispensed with—a reflection surely upon the wisdom and spirituality of Christ Himself, who both personally received it, and ordained it for us. When we omit the requirement of baptism from our proclamation of the gospel, we in effect allow the professing Hindu believer in Christ to do as he is naturally so very prone to do—revere Christ along with all his other gods, and so come short of that exclusive self-committal to Christ which He demands and which alone can bring salvation.

Christ is the Only Hope of Hindus.

Said a Hindu cousin of mine to me after he had read this book, "Why did you play the fool by becoming a Christian, when one of your own leaders here advocates the contrary?" And right here in Calcutta I have heard of at least two Hindu families, all ready for baptism, who suddenly declined it after reading this book. Thus the two prominent Hindus our author quotes on page 176 would seem to have caught the point exactly when they said, "The invigoration of Hinduism is only possible through the Christ spirit . . . Christ is the only hope of Hinduism!" With all my heart I wish these gentlemen had felt led to say, "Christ is the only hope of Hindus." The one means Hinduism; the other Christianity.

"The Christ of the Galilean Road" is the Christ of God, who was not careful to "work with the national grain," as Dr. Jones tells us Christianity must do to succeed in India (p. 23). God's Christ called men to repentance from sin, including the sin of idolatry, and to be baptized in His name, and so trust alone in Him for salvation. Whereas the Christ of the Indian Road concerns himself without Indian nationalism, and assures the Hindu that He has come "not to destroy but to fulfil"—which to the Hindu means the fulfilment and rejuvenation of Hinduism and all that it stands for. Little wonder the Brahmia referred to on page 28 was so ready to follow the Christ of the Indian Road in preference to the Christ of our Churches!

There is not one word about what God says is man's greatest need, viz., his need of salvation from sin, and consequently there is not one clear word in Dr. Jones' whole book about salvation preached on the ground of Christ's vicarious sacrifice of Himself in dying for our sins (Luke 24:46-48). There is no expiation in the Cross of this Christ of the Indian Road. Thus is comes that Dr. Jones' presentation of Christ meets with no opposition from the Hindu mind. Why should it? The offense of the Cross has ceased.

The Christ of the Indian Road is not the Christ of the Bible. A Hinduized Christ is never going to Christianize Hindus. As a Hindu convert I feel this matter deeply. I find my joy and full sufficiency in Christ. There is nothing of any value in Hinduism that is not in still richer and fuller measure in Christ. We need none of the "living seeds" that may be found in the dead hand of a mummified Hinduism (p. 173). Even to suggest as Dr. Jones does, that the world would lose anything with Hinduism utterly dead and forgotten, is to my mind to dishonor Christ the Lord, "in whom are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge."

We may thank God for Indian believers like Mr. Bannerji, who are loyal and true to Christ and His Word, and who set a noble example of sincerity and fidelity to many Western Christians.—Henry M. Woods.

Bishop Oldham Sharply Raps Rogers' Snob Creed

Picturing the snob as the most despicable and pathetic of creatures, Dr. G. Ashton Oldham, bishop coadjutor of Albany Diocese, last night sharply attacked the ideal of snobbery presented recently by Professor Rogers of Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Bishop Oldham was addressing guests at the decennial dinner of St. Stephen's College, Columbia University, celebrating the tenth year of Dr. Bernard I. Bell as head and the first year of St. Stephen's as country college of a great university.

"The most unfortunate and unnecessary bit of advice I have ever known given to college graduates," said Dr. Oldham, "was that they should be snobs. The supply of that commodity already exceeds the demand, and much in our modern life tends to increase it alarmingly. The demand for quick results on every hand tempts multitudes to pretend to qualifications they do not possess.

"Our magazines fairly shriek at us their short cuts to desirable ends. One should learn French, and may do so with fifteen minutes a day, not for the sake of acquiring entrance to a wider Culture, but to impress the boss and get a raise in salary. One may become acquainted with the classes, not for their wisdom and beauty, but to make a hit with one's hostess by a display of fictitious learning.

"There is altogether too much of this sort of pretence, this bluff and bluster, this putting on of airs, this keeping up with the Joneses, all of which is characteristic of that most pathetic and despicable of creatures, the snob. College education could scarcely sink lower than to aim at such a product; and, if that is the best our colleges can do, the sooner they close the better.

"What the world supremely needs today is reality, not appearance; honesty, not pretense; and it has a right to look to our educational institutions for help in just this direction. Our colleges should aim more at building character than just imparting knowledge, at teaching men how to live rather than simply to make a living, at encouraging every individual to be his own best self, rather than to seem or pretend to be something other. Thus and thus only will they be making the best contribution to the individual and to the world."

Original Interpretations of Scripture in China

1. A preacher discoursing upon the miraculous draught of fishes (Luke 5:5) remarked in true oriental language, "And when they let down the net at the command of the Lord Jesus all the fish in that part of the lake began to say, "Where's that net?"

2. A Chinese leader was explaining the doctrine of "justification" on the ground of the sacrifice of Christ Jesus as "The Lamb of God," "made sin for us . . . that we might be made the righteousness of God in him."

Those familiar with the Chinese Bible know that the term "justification" is very accurately rendered by the two words, , meaning, 'to call or reckon righteous'. And one of these, the word , ee, meaning righteousness, is the combination of two words—one, the first personal pronoun , I, me, which is close hiding, as it were, beneath the other, a , sheep.

There are various explanation of the structure of this ideograph, but this speaker with true spiritual discernment employed its structure to fix clearly in the hearts of his hearers the simple truth about justification thus: "You see," he said, "the Me" (that means you yourself) is down under the sheep (or, as we can say, the lamb which is a little sheep). The lamb is Jesus Christ, the Lamb of God, who died on the cross for your sins (He Himself said He did). Don't you see that when God looks down from heaven, He can't see you at all, He can only see the Lamb of God, your Saviour. The Lord Jesus has taken you under Himself; God looks on you as under your Saviour and belonging to Him, and you are safe. That is the meaning of "justification"; it is right there in the word , ee."

3. A misinterpretation. Many years ago there was in Tientsin city an Anglo-Chinese school whose students, from wealthy and influential families, were sent because of the reputation of the foreign Principal for literary attainments in English and Chinese, and for his sympathetic understanding of the Chinese people. In the regular curriculum of the school was the reading and explanation of the English Bible—it was before the days when the Bible's tenure of a place in the regular school curriculum depended upon the pupil's preferences. The Principal of the school once told the writer of these lines that one day, in the course of Bible reading, they came to the tenth chapter of Luke's Gospel—the parable of the Good Samaritan—which one of the students, a lad of perhaps eighteen, read aloud before the class, paraphrasing as he went, to prove his comprehension of the English text; when, after commenting on the sad plight of the waylaid traveler and the timely offices of the passing stranger, be brought the wounded man to the inn. Then the pupil's face lightened with a new and knowing gleam as he read verse thirty-five, And on the morrow when he departed, he took out two pence, and gave them to the host, and said unto him, "Take care of him; and whatsoever thou spendest more, when I come again, I will repay thee." Whereupon he added this crowning comment—"And this he said, knowing that he would never come that way again." The way the Good Samaritan "did" the innkeeper was a striking feature of the parable.—Reprinted from The Bible for China.

Book Reviews

FRANKNESS IN RELIGION. By Robert J. Hutcheon. The Macmillan Co., New York. $2.50.

Professor Hutcheon is teaching in the Meadville Theological School and is Unitarian. The book follows their well-known line of negations. Having turned from God, they are now busy trying to construct a new one. A certain type of mind seems unwilling to admit that humanity cannot lift itself by its own boot-straps, let alone manufacture a god.

The old prophet poured scorn on those who took the remnants of their wood with which to construct a god. No one today would think of attempting to duplicate the action of these idolators. But men will attempt still the equally foolish venture of creating a god out of the remnants of their philosophies.

Why a man should think himself particularly frank and bold because he holds these negative views is difficult to tell. One merit they cannot claim is that of newness. Because of the thinness of their teachings Unitarians are the least missionary and the least socially minded (except in theory) of any group. Some one has said that they represent the Fatherhood of God, the Brotherhood of Man, and the neighborhood of Harvard.

Frank Cox.

THE STRANGE CASE OF MISS ANNIE SPRAGG. By Louis Bromfield. Frederick A. Stokes Company, New York. $2.50.

This story takes one through our Middle West of fifty or more years ago, down into later day London and Italy. The author has made a mistake, common to many of the young writers of today, in his selection of the central theme, and has missed the real taste and trend of thought of the average reader, who finds no pleasure in the fall of the pastors or the people of any creed. The intimation that the characters are a type is misleading because virtue thrives both in Rome and Geneva.

G. W. M.

CIVILATION REMADE BY CHRIST. By Fred A. M. Spencer, B. D. Cloth. Pp. 287. Price $3. The Morehouse Publishing Company, Milwaukee, Wis.

An external study of the value of Christianity to society. The author seeks to solve the problems of war, peace, methods of government, the treatment of criminals, the use of money, marriage and the family, the relief of destitution, class distinctions, adult education which are treated in the light of the teachings of Jesus. Of course, the processes of reasoning are psychological, not spiritual; humanly devised, not divinely imparted. But, why not? The air is full of the tingle of social culture. Why not implicate our Lord in it? For the Christian system of truth and conduct is the initial foundation of world betterment. If the latter-day teachers have involved it in an inextricable relation with ideals which are not altogether germain to its original spirit, who can blame the author for trying to harmonize the apparent incongruity? For while all of the problems treated are as old as the world itself, Christianity did not meet them on the plane of self-devised methods, but the rather in the seeking of any doing of the recognized will of God. It is the systematized manner with which evils are treated that calls for the differentiation of causes and results, classification and such like. But why may this not all be done without the pretension that it is a better expression of our holy faith than the Church has always presented? Christian civilization which owes its very genius to Christ long ago departed from Him. It has maintained a separate life for decades, if not centuries. The teachings of our Lord may be made adaptable to modern exigencies, without placing Him as the source and center of them. We like this book. It is a fine presentation of the modern social aspirations. But, we still ask, How much is the exalted Lord Jesus related to it? Religion is here. Morals are here. There are about thirty references to His teachings that affect the modern world. But is He, Himself? It is hard to press such questions, in the face of such well-meant intentions to solve the intricacies of present-day life. But we cannot help wondering if another title might not have been more suitable. However, the book is praiseworthy.

Kenneth Mackenzie.

Letters to the Editor

In this Department the Editor will at all times welcome communications expressing opinions on the various topics which are engaging the attention of the Church. But the Editor will not hold himself responsible for such opinions.

No "Letters to the Editor" will appear in our columns except those coming to us signed by writer.

Mr. Editor:

Thank you so much for offering to insert an advertisement of the Evangelical Theological College situated at Dallas, Texas, for one year free of cost. I am asking Mr. Rollin T. Chafer, the Registrar, to make this advertisement and to send it to you. I am sure there must be some who would like to study where the professors are both scholars and Bible believers. The teaching there is most fine.

Armistead F. Selden.

Mr. Editor:

Will you kindly give the enclosed notice space in the Southern Churchman:

Those fortunate enough to attend the Tappahannock Summer School of Religious Education and become members of the class taught by Miss Laura Boyer, Vice-President for Education for the Woman's Auxiliary of the Diocese of New York, were gratified to have the fact brought out by a member of the class that Miss Boyer's "Teachers' Helps for the Course", "Roads to the City of God", can be secured by sending, 15 cents a copy, to Miss Laura Boyer, Pelbrook Hall, Fifth Avenue, Pelham, N. Y., before she sails July 11, to return in September. Miss Louisa Davis, of Leesburg, heartily endorses all Miss Boyer's work if you wish a reference.

Ellen Middleton Young,
President Woman's Auxiliary, All Saints' Church, Chevy Chase, Md.

Mr. Editor:

We must not only save the Church from the "Anglo-Catholics", but we must try to save them from themselves. Hence I respectfully protest against Judge Marsilliot's statement: "No one questions the right of the 'Anglo-Catholic' to reserve the Sacrament, worship it, say Mass, etc." (Quoted from his timely letter in your issue of June 15.)

It is an indisputable fact that all these extreme practices constitute a recrudescence of the superstitions practiced in the Dark Ages. They are not a part or function of Christ's Church, but a deadly disease. They therefore should be placarded as an infected house, full of corruption within and threatening the health of the whole neighborhood.

Consecrated common sense therefore urges us all to do our utmost, prayerfully and practically, to save these our benighted brethren from their own malignant heresy.

James L. Smiley.

Annapolis, Md.

Church Intelligence

BIBLE INSTITUTE OF PENNSYLVANIA.

The sixteenth school year of the Bible Institute of Pennsylvania is drawing to its close. It has been a year of joyous forward movement; a year of realizing our own weakness and of being "strengthened with might by His Spirit in the inner man" (Eph. 3:16). With a total enrollment of three hundred and ninety students since September 18, 1928, our time has been full of service and His grace abundant. Thousands have heard the testimony of Trustees, Faculty, Workers and Students. No one can measure the influence of this body of over four hundred soldiers of the cross as they receive and tell the Good News "with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven" (1 Peter 1:12).

Saint Mary's, Raleigh, N. C., Ends Eighty-seventh Session.

The eighty-seventh continuous session of Saint Mary's School and Junior College was brought to a successful close on June 4 when twenty-six graduates received their diplomas at the final exercises.

According to the annual custom Commencement opened with the presentation by the Dramatic Club of one of Shakespeare's plays. This year "Romeo and Juliet" was chosen. The finished acting of the famous "pair of star-crossed lovers" and the rest of the cast rivaled that of a professional company. The effective stage settings of the play were made with the assistance of the art department.

The baccalaureate sermon was preached in the school Chapel on the morning of June 2 by the Rt. Rev. Albert S. Thomas, D. D., Bishop of South Carolina. The separation of secular and sacred in a world in which all things should be consecrated was discussed by Bishop Thomas. The true measure of mans' spirituality is his ability to see God in the everyday world, he told the graduating class, urging them not to be blinded by material things and impressing on them that it is easier for us to see spiritual truths while we are young.

Sunday afternoon a special vesper service for the Alumnae was held in the Chapel. The Rector of the School, Dr. Warren D. Way, spoke intimately at this service to the visiting alumnae.

Class Day Exercises were held on Monday morning. On this occasion the Seniors made their appearance, carrying the beautiful daisy chain and the School's annual year book, "The Stage Coach", was distributed. Following these exercises the annual alumnae luncheon was held in the dining room. It was attended by a large and enthusiastic body of old girls. One member of the class of 1857 was present. The most interesting feature of the luncheon was that it was the occasion for the reunion of the Class of 1879. Four members of the original class of five girls were back at Saint Mary's to celebrate this fiftieth anniversary. Together with them came one of their old teachers, Miss Czarnomska, formerly Lady Principal of Saint Mary's now professor of Bible at Sweet Briar College. The enduring love and enthusiasm of these old girls for their alma mater was very evident and very inspiring.

Monday evening the Annual Concert of the Music Department took place in the Auditorium. Following this Dr. and Mrs. Way and the members of the graduating class received the Commencement guests at an informal reception in the school parlor.

Dr. Francis P. Gaines, President of Wake Forest College, delivered the stimulating and forceful Commencement address on the morning of June 4. His subject was "The Heresy of the Short Cut". The real value of education, which lies in the inspiration received through the personalities of teachers, in the ability to solve problems by bringing to them the carefulness, perseverence and exactness demanded in the preparation of daily assignments and in the development of a capacity for loyalty which finds its highest expression in citizenship, can be found in no short cut but must come through the long, slow processes of education, Dr. Gaines told his audience.

After the Commencement address and the presentation of awards, the students, faculty and trustees went in procession to the Chapel, where final impressive services were held and where the diplomas were awarded. Bishop Edwin A. Penick, president of the Board of Trustees, presented the diplomas to the graduating class.

Saint Mary's ranks for the 1928-29 session broke when the chief marshall pronounced the words, "The 87th session of Saint Mary's School is now dismissed", to the silent and expectant semi-circle drawn up before the main building.

W. W. W.

These are the things I prize
And hold of dearest worth;
Light of sapphire skies,
Peace of the silent hills,
Shelter of forests, comfort of the grass,
Music of birds, murmur of little rills,
Shadows of cloud that swiftly pass,
And, after showers,
The smell of flowers
And of the good brown earth—
And best of all, along the way, friendship and mirth.

—Henry Van Dyke.

MOUNTAINEER CLERGYMEN.

An Associated Press news story says 56 men, most of them from the Cumberland Mountains, are hard at work at DuBose Memorial, 70 miles from Chattanooga, Tenn., studying for the Episcopal ministry. The students range from 25 to 55 years of age and are former mechanics, teachers and farmers. The Memorial was organized in 1921, its special purpose being to train men for rural charges. It is on a large farm and was founded by Archdeacon W. S. Claiborne, of Sewanee, the endowment plan being under direction of Bishop Gailor, of Tennessee. The Memorial has had more than one hundred students, of whom twenty-seven have been graduated and are in charge of parishes.

THINGS THE CHURCH NEEDS.

Fewer leaders and more followers.
Fewer proselytes and more disciples.
Fewer Catholics and more catholicity.
Fewer Liberals and more liberality.
Fewer satisfied saints and more dissatisfied sinners.
Fewer martinets and more St. Martins.

More efficiency and less officiousness.
More light and less lime-light.
More poise and less pose.
More oil and less gas.
More meat and less pastry.
Less emphasis upon dollars and more emphasis upon sense.
Fewer programs and more performances.
Fewer reformers and more performers.
Fewer tinkers and more thinkers.
Fewer shirkers and more workers.
Less bunk and more spunk.
Fewer Young People who are conscious of their virtues, and more old people who are conscious of their faults.
Bigger and better waste-baskets, without which no man can see the Lord.
—From "The Lion of St. Marks", Evanston, Illinois.

AN ARAB SHEIKH.

The British Syria Mission reports a conversation remarkably illustrative of the independent action of God. An Arab Sheikh, a wealthy trader in camels and sheep, some time ago had a vision of the Lord Jesus, of whom he had never heard, standing in light before him. He prostrated himself before the Lord, and put his hand into His. Seeking to get into touch with Christians (he himself is unable to read) he attended some Catholic services, but could not understand the worship, and the icons troubled him. He then received instruction in Protestant churches in Haifa and Jerusadem, and has been in touch with the British Syria Mission in Baalbec. He has confessed Christ before his tribe. God can reach men where churches are dead, mission nonexistent, Christ unknown, Scripture untranslated, souls illiterate, hell supreme.
—"The Dawn."

Cutting Down Has Started Where the Needs Are Greatest.

Bishop Thomas, in order to make up the required amount of $2,400 to be cut from the Brazil budget for 1929 has taken the following steps:

The appropriation for his traveling expenses is reduced. This means less travel by the Bishop or drawing on his own pocket for the difference.

He has given up office help and will write his own letters by hand. It means the heavy accumulation of mail when he is off on a long vacation.

Some needed repairs on buildings will have to go over for another year, with almost certain increased cost then.

The Bishop gives up $700 on account of house rent and will do his best to provide for himself and family.

The running expenses of several missions will be cut down with consequent loss to the work.

The Bishop and one of his missionaries have given up aid in the education of children.

Broadening of St. Augustine's College, Raleigh.

St. Augustine's College, Raleigh, N. C., has closed a successful wear. There were 377 students; junior college department, 74; high school, 192; grades, 67; St. Agnes Training School for Nurses, 36; Bishop Tuttle School, 8. While most of them naturally come form North Carolina, there are also students from Colorado, New England, the West Indies and South Africa.

Rapid improvement in public school facilities for Negro youth in Raleigh and throughout the state has resulted in lessening the need of elementary work, and in increasing the need and demand for high school and college training. The addition of a third-year college class at St. Augustine's next year and of a fourth-year college class the following year will still further emphasize the advanced work, and bring St. Augustine's nearer to the ideals of the Institutions as outlined in its original charter.

The commandant of a North Carolina training school for delinquent colored boys and the matron of a home for colored girls are both graduates of St. Augustine's.

A generous gift from the Rev. Dr. A. B. Hunter is to provide a much-needed new library, and a gift from the Rosenwald Fund will equip it.

The school ended the year with a small balance in the treasury. The budget for next year is about $82,000.

Sufficient funds have been secured to obtain the conditional gift from the General Education Board. This means that the erection of the dining hall and domestic science building, to be known as the Cheshire Building, and the new girls' dormitory, Delany Building, is assured. Over $30,000 of this sum came from North Carolina.

A new nurses' home for St. Agnes' Hospital has been provided by a gift from the United Thank Offering amounting to $30,000, supplemented by gifts of $15,000 each from the Duke Foundation and the Rosenwald Fund.

The Bishop Tuttle School graduated a class of five young women trained for religious and welfare work. Members of the school, at a meeting of the Students' Missionary Society, recently presented Mrs. Hobart's play, "The Angels of Magdalena", the purpose of which is to illustrate the work of the Church Mission of Help. Two of last year's graduates of the Bishop Tuttle School are engaged in the work of the Church Mission of Help.

Bishop Cheshire confirmed a class of twenty at St. Augustine's last spring.

The Appointment of English Bishops.

Holding that the present system does not afford adequate safeguards against unworthy or ill-considered Church appointments, the Committee of Bishops, in an interim report to the Church Assembly today, recommended that the electing body should be entitled, without any penalties, to refuse to elect as Bishop the person named in the King's missive. The recommendation does not mean that the electing body should be entitled to appoint any other person than the one designated by the Government through His Majesty, but merely claims negative powers may be exercised for reasons to be given in writing.

Th Crown may, if desired, override the decision of the electing body by letters patent under the Great Seal, the committee points out.

It is claimed that the Prime Minister, before making any recommendations to the King, should consult an advisory committee of at least seven members of the Church Assembly, to be chosen by him, including both the Archbishops of Canterbury and of York. The committee claims that freedom to refuse to elect the King's appointee is a matter of real importance, and the existing laws in this respect are an anachronism. The present safety of the system depends on the personal qualities of the Prime Minister, modified to an unknown extent by the personal qualities of the Sovereign, the committee says. It points out the Prime Minister may not necessarily belong to the Church of England, and may have no knowledge of or interest in the affairs of the Church.

The Bishops' Committee was appointed in 1923, and includes the Archbishop of York and the Bishops of Chichester, Ely, Gloucester and Oxford, with the Bishop of Manchester as Chairman.—The Canadian Churchman.

Liberia Loses a Sincere and Devoted Friend.

A cable despatch received at the office of the National Council in New York, June 29, announced the death at Monrovia, Liberia, of Mr. James L. Sibley, from yellow fever.

Mr. Sibley was sent out in 1925 as the representative of the joint missionary bodies of the Episcopal, Methodist and Lutheran Churches to attempt a unification of the educational work of these three communions in the Liberian Republic. The Phelps-Stokes Foundation and the American, New York and Massachusetts Coloniation Societies were also interested in this work which, a short time after Mr. Sibley's arrival, was expanded so that Mr. Sibley became the educational adviser of the Republic as well. At the same time Mr. Sibley also undertook an effort looking toward the conservation of health in Liberia and the development of native industries.

Mr. Sibley's task had entered upon an advanced stage when he was overtaken by the fever. In a recent report from Liberia, Bishop Campbell said:

"Our school work has received a real addition in the person of Mr. James L. Sibley, sent out from America as advisor to the 'American Committtee on Education in Liberia'. He has offered some excellent suggestions for the improvement of curricula and teacher training. Each of the points he has specified—lack of equipment, lack of industrial and agricultural training, and the poorly trained teachers, will require time and money to rectify."

Through Mr. Sibley's death a real loss has been sustained by the Church and the cooperating communions and organizations in whose interests he was working. He was a native of Juniper, Geor, gia, was forty-six years old and unmarried. A graduate of Georgia University, Mr. Sibley at various times had been associated with the State Department of Education of Alabama, and with the Agricultural Extension Service of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute. He spent three years in the Philippines, training groups of natives in modern agricultural methods. In the World War, Mr. Sibley was in charge of the rehabilitation of disabled soldiers in Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana, and had done post-graduate work in Social Science at Hartford and Columbia University.

A cable despatch to the Department of Missions of the National Council from President King of Liberia read as follows:

"Please accept my deepest sympathy on the death of Dr. J. L. Sibley. In his loss Liberia loses a sincere and devoted friend."

NEW YORK.

Rt. Rev. William T. Manning, D. D.,
Rt. Rev. A. S. Lloyd, D. D., Suffragan.
Rt. Rev. Herbert Shipman, Suffragan.

Calvary Church.

Calvary Episcopal Church is a landmark at the corner of Twenty-first Street and Fourth Avenue, New York. Its old wooden beams, put up nearly ninety years ago, are as strong as ever. Its beautiful proportions are there, but it is many years since the interior was painted, and paint does not last as woodwork does. It was a question as long ago as when Bishop Satterlee was rector, in the minds of the vestry and members of the congregation, as to whether the church should not move farther up town, where much of the congregation had already gone. But when the Rev. S. M. Shoemaker, Jr., four years ago answered the call as rector of Calvary Church, he felt there was work to do in this old neighborhood in spite of the fact that business was wiping out the residential district which had once lain about it. Slowly the congregation has grown. The old rectory was pulled down a year ago and Calvary House, with its rectory on the top floor, apartments for the assistant ministers, the living quarters for the staff, and the guild room and the great hall, was built.

At the last meeting of the vestry, held this week, Mr. Shoemaker presented to the vestry the following list of memorials which have been offered to him since the last meeting of the vestry. These memorials, together with contributions for other needed work in the church building, total gifts to the value of over $33,000.

Mrs. James J. Goodwin, as a memorial to her husband who was long a vestryman of the church, is redecorating the entire interior of the church. No drastic changes are to be made, but fresh paint in beautiful colors will bring out the dignity and grace of the old building. The front half of an old gallery at the rear of the church will be removed.

Mrs. Bache McE. Whitlock is giving new lighting fixtures all over the building in memory of her husband, who was also a loyal member of Calvary's vestry for many years.

Mrs. William M. Carson and her family are giving a new pulpit in memory of Mr. William M. Carson, who was for many years a vestryman of the church.

Mrs. F. Livingston Pell and her brother, Mr. Richard Lewis Morris, are giving a new communion rail in memory of their father and mother, Dr. and Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish Morris. Dr. and Mrs. Morris were among the oldest and most devoted of Calvary's parishioners.

A clerical chair for the chancel is also to be given by the Morris family.

The choir is to be enclosed in a parapet about four feet high, just behind which will stand three clergy stalls, the lectern and pulpit. One of these stalls is being given by the Men's Club of Calvary Church in grateful recognition of the rectorship of the Rev. Dr. Theodore Sedgwick from 1912 to 1924.

The figure of Christ over the altar was made of temporary material. This is to be carved into Caen stone.

All the cushions and carpets are to be replaced.

NEW JERSEY.

Rt. Rev. Paul Matthews, D. D., Bishop.
Rt. Rev. A. W. Knight, D. D., Coadjutor.

To Flower Lovers.

Flower lovers passing through Beverly, New Jersey, this summer should take the opportunity of visiting the Sunken Gardens of the Rev. William T. Snead, according to the Beverly Banner of that town. The Babylonian Gardens were conceived and constructed by Mr. Snead himself who has not only created a style of architecture entirely his own, but has gathered from every quarter of the land every variety of herb and plant common to the north temperate zone. Apetalous, achlamadeus, monesius, polygonatum and the semphoricarpus here rival each other in their beauty. Mr. Snead charges nothing for admission, but takes pleasure in showing visitors this work of art.

Mr. Snead some time ago retired as rector of St. Stephen's Church, Beverly.

VIRGINIA.

Rt. Rev. H. St. George Tucker, Bishop.

Spilman Memorial Parish House Dedicated.

The Rt. Rev. H. St. George Tucker, Bishop of the Diocese of Virginia, visited Hamilton Parish, Warrenton, Va., the Rev. Paul D. Bowden, rector, on Friday, June 14, where he dedicated the Spilman Memorial Parish House. The service was held in the auditorium of the parish house and was attended by a large congregation. In his address to the congregation, Bishop Tucker emphasized four ways in which the building can be made of great value. First in the religious education of the children; secondly, in educational meetings for the older people; thirdly, in the promotion of fellowship and good will among the members of the parish, and fourthly, in the promotion of good will and understanding between Christians of various denominations. The service of dedication was followed by an informal reception and inspection of the building. Light refreshments were served by the members of the Parish Aid.

The building is of a modified Gothic design carried out in pebble dash and heavy timber, and forms a quadrangle with the church building. The upper floor, which faces and is on a level with Culpeper Street, contains a large auditorium with kitchen and pantry adjoining, individual classrooms for the Sunday School, and a hall leading to the chapel. Along the south wall of the auditorium, facing the quadrangle, is a cloister paved in flag stone. The two entrances from Culpeper Street are under this cloister, one leading directly into the auditorium and the other leading into the stair hall.

Downstairs, with an entrance from Beckham Street, there are the rector's office, a library and committee room, the choir rooms, and lavatories. There is also a large gymnasium on this floor. The woodwork and furnishings throughout the building are of weathered oak, the walls of cream colored plaster.

The parish house is given in memory of the late General Baldwin Day Spilman by his widow and children. General Spilman was a lifelong member of Hamilton Parish. He had been vestryman and warden for a number of years. Always faithful and eager for the success of the church, he gave loyal service to both his own parish and the Church at large. He was for many years delegate to the Diocesan Council and a member of the Diocesan School Board. It is most fitting that such a building should be erected to his memory where the ideals of Christian service for which he labored can be taught and put into practice by future generations.

P. D. B.

WASHINGTON.

Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman, D. D., Bishop

The College of Preachers, Washington Cathedral, has attracted attention from the outset—perhaps because it seemed unique in our already established list of educational institutions, and perhaps because it has appeared to accomplish from the beginning a most worthwhile piece of work.

Now, with the marked progress in the erection of the actual College of Preachers' Buildings and the recent bequest of $1,000,000 endowment by the will of the late Alexander Cochran, it would seem as if the hopes and ideals of those very particularly interested and responsible would soon be realized.

The important and significance of this undertaking is well set forth in an editorial from one of Washington's leading dailies (Sunday Star), which it seems well worthwhile to reprint here:

The College of Preachers.

"The great universities of Christendom had their origin as 'colleges of preachers'.

Paris, Oxford, Bologna and the medieval German institution were substantially such in the beginning. The arts and sciences secured a place only as adjuncts to theology, which was considered the only subject worthy of intellectual attention.

In modern times theological studies have not been given so prominent a place. The great universities have, in large measure, discarded them. The preacher and theologian have been falling toward the status of outcasts in the world of learning while the once despised physician, attorney and natural scientist have become the princes of the realm. This is true particularly in the United States.

But at the Washington Cathedral a type of institution new to this country is about to be opened. Already the building is nearly complete—a substantial and beautiful structure—ready for dedication next November. And through the will of the late Alexander Cochran this new College of Preachers receives an endowment of $1,000,000 or approximately $50,000 a year.

It is certain to become a notable center of advanced theological education in the United States. The institution will not be a seminary, as the word is generally understood, but a place for special classes of ordained clergymen, not necessarily restricted to the Anglican faith, for advanced study of timely problems which arise in connection with their pulpit and pastoral duties. Similar classes have been gathering at the Cathedral for several years. One has just been concluded after listening to lectures on the relations of mind and body—a subject of the greatest importance which has come to the fore since most of these men completed their formal education. Only a few days before there was an interdenominational gathering of Church leaders to obtain each other's viewpoints on the question of Christian unity.

Clerical education no longer can be completed in a four-year seminary course. The man who rests contented on his accumulation of knowledge at the time of his ordination soon will find obsolete his methods of practice in the care and cure of human souls. The sum of human knowledge is increasing at an enormous rate. Much of the new knowledge has an intimate bearing on the functions of the church. Theology, in the broadest sense of the word, is not a dead science, but a rapidly expanding body of facts and theories, receiving constant accretions from researches in other spheres of learning."

M. M. W.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Rt. Rev. J. B. Cheshire, D. D., Bishop
Rt. Rev. E. A. Penick, D. D., Coadjutor.
Rt Rev. H. B. Delaney, D. D., Suffragan

Memorial Window.

A beautiful stained glass window, made by the Gorham Company, depicting the Parable of the Good Samaritan, was placed in Calvary Church, Tarboro,

North Carolina, and dedicated with appropriate ceremony on Easter, 1929, the same being a memorial to Colonel John W. Gordon, of Richmond, Va., by Mrs. Gordon, his wife. The inscription reads, "In humble gratitude to God for the precious memory of my husband, Colonel John W. Gordon: March 25, 1847-January 5, 1928. Blessed are the merciful."

Colonel Gordon was a gallant Confederate soldier, and a devoted Churchman. He was for many years prominent in the business life of Richmond, and noted for his zeal in all good causes. He was married to his wife in Calvary Church, Tarboro, April 4, 1877, she being Miss Annie Pender, of Tarboro.

Mrs. Gordon has also placed in St. Anne's Church, one of the country missions connected with Calvary Church, a fine brass altar cross in memory of her husband, and a pair of altar vases in memory of her brother, the late Judge James Pender, of Tarboro.

Colonel Gordon left in his will the sum of one thousand dollars to be used in the maintenance of this country mission.

B. E. B.

UPPER SOUTH CAROLINA.

Rt. Rev. K. G. Finlay, D. D. Bishop.

Rector Celebrates Twentieth Anniversary.

The Rev. W. H. K. Pendleton has recently observed his twentieth anniversary as rector of the Church of the Advent, Spartanburg. per South Carolina.

On Sunday the religious observance of this event was held. There were two celebrations of the Holy Communion, both well attended. In the evening the two colleges of the city, Wofford (men) and Converse (women), with which the rector has been closely associated through the years of his ministry, were invited to a special service, and attended in large numbers. The presidents of both these were present. The members of the two faculties occupied seats in the chancel and took part in the service, while the senior class of Converse College, within a week of graduation, attended in a body in their academic caps and gowns. The college students contributed several numbers to the musical program of the evening. The rector's subject was, "The Contribution of the College to Society."

On Monday, May 6, the actual anniversary, the vestry and ladies of the church tendered to the rector and his family a delightful reception in the parish house, built during his ministry. At the close of the evening, Mr. Emert S. Rice, Superintendent of the Church School, in the name of that organization, presented the rector with a silver cross. The Hon. James F. Byrnes, a member of the vestry, presented him with the keys to the hearts of the congregation and to a beautiful new car, which waited outside. The rector, who had anticipated only the religious celebration of the occasion, was deeply moved by these evidences of appreciation and affection, and declared, in the words of Woodrow Wilson's first inaugural address, "It is not a day of triumph but a day of dedication"—rededication to the service of a congregation which had given so many evidences of appreciation and affection.

Within the twenty years the communicant list of the church has grown from 198 to 550; the Church School enrollment within the parish from 54 to 526. The church contributions have increased from approximately $3,000 a year to $28,000.

Within this rectorate the beautiful stone parish house, containing twenty-five rooms, has been erected to care for the Church School and the Parish activities. The Cleveland Memorial Tower, adding beauty and dignity to the group of buildings, has been built, and recently the Cleveland Memorial Chimes have been placed in it.

Two missions for the people of the mills, St. Timothy's and All Souls', have been founded and are now in successful operation. The rector has likewise had oversight from time to time of the colored Episcopal congregation, and directed the building of the present beautiful Epiphany Mission Chapel.

Altar of Carrarra Marble Consecrated.

A new altar was recently consecrated in the Church of the Good Shepherd, Columbia, South Carolina. This marks the result of years of effort on the part of members of the congregation.

The pieces that make up the altar and the base of the two steps on which it rests are of white Carrarra marble and were made at the quarries of Carrarra, Italy, having taken nine months to arrive in this country after being ordered. The plans were furnished by Robert Lafaye of Lafaye and Lafaye of Columbia, and the assembling done by the Columbia Stone Company.

The design of the altar is Gothic, the front face of the table consisting of four columns surmounted by chapiters, exquisitely carved, and three panels. The left panel bears the letter Alpha, the right Omega, and the center one a cross, all of these characters standing out in relief against a background of sanded marble. The face of the retable is similar in design, bearing the words, "Holy, Holy, Holy" in raised Gothic letters, together with two raised crosses.

A new sanctuary floor and baseboard of white Vermont marble have been built, and the whole interior of the church has been refinished.

A member of the congregation, Mrs. Charles Fetener, has made a filet lace cloth for the altar which was used Easter. The design contains heads of wheat, bunches of grapes, and the chalice. It is a work of art, and required three years for its completion.

The service of consecration of the altar was conducted by the Rev. L. N. Taylor, rector of the church.

WESTERN NEW YORK.

Rt. Rev. D. L. Ferris, D. D., Bishop.

The Diocesan Convention.

The ninety-second annual convention of the diocese, which met in St. John's Church, Buffalo, May 20 and 21, made history for itself. For then seemingly final settlement was made of a question which for a generation at least has intermittently been under discussion, viz. the division of the diocese. In fact this matter so absorbed the attention of the Convention that the larger part of its sessions were occupied with its discussion. The announcement previously made by Bishop Ferris of his intention to ask for a reconsideration of the subject (which had been laid on the table last year) undoubtedly explained the unusually large attendance both of clerical and lay delegates. . . .

After vigorous debating, at times somewhat heated, and consideration of every angle, with a fine exhibition of fair-mindedness and Christian courtesy, the opposition finally moved that the action be made unanimous by the formal vote of both Orders, which was done. So the matter stands. The next General Convention, meeting in 1931, must approve of our action after which the actual separation will take place and the new diocese will be constituted.

B. S. S.

Bishop Brent—A Tribute.

(At its regular meeting held in Buffalo, Tuesday, May 7, the following Memorial, presented by the committee appointed to prepare the same, was unanimously adopted by the Executive Council by a rising vote, ordered to be spread upon its Minute Book and published in the June issue of "Our Diocesan Fellowship".

Attest: Benjamin S. Sanderson, Secretary.)

"Into the infinite silence, Wherewith death's shore is bound," has passed our beloved Bishop, the Rt. Rev. Charles Henry Brent, D. D., LL. D., who, walking the way of The Mount of Vision, died at Lausanne, Switzerland, the twenty-sixth of March, 1929.

It becomes us not, at this meeting of the Executive Council, to essay an estimate of his life nor of our loss. We are grateful to Almighty God for the years during which, as Bishop of this Diocese of Western New York and as President of this body, he enriched our lives with his leadership and fellowship, companying with us as our great counselor, friend and brother. "Did not our heart burn within us while he walked with us by the way?" He sought for himself and for us who were committed to his charge, as well as for all men, fulness of life:—fulness of divine understanding, fulness in spiritual attainment, fulness in Christian performance and achievement. No feature of such living was beyond his endeavor, no aspect of it daunted him. He held that—

"Man is no little thing
That, like a bird in spring
Comes fluttering to the light of life

And out into the darkness of long death."

but that—

"The breath of God is in him
And his age-long strife
With evil has a meaning and an end.

He looked up—

"To see blue skies and hear God speaking through
The silence of the stars."

Bishop Brent saw life in terms of the whole; not of the here nor of the hereafter only, but in terms of both—of the eternal. One has written: "The vision of eternal life makes men see life as one. They only know one world and that the eternal world. They have only one life and that the eternal life. Behind the material they discern the spiritual. All the earth becomes a sacrament. Every hill-top speaks of heaven and every flower flames with God. Men with the vision are not indifferent to this world, but are keen to make it perfect with keeness that no worldly man could ever know. . . . The men of vision are the only sort that can build the great Democracy where there shall be no waste of human souls; they see the Truth, that men are one, one family and every child of equal value in God s sight. They have the Truth in them and they can make it felt. By the power of that vision and in the light of that Truth, all lies can be destroyed and Truth can have its way."

Bishop Brent was such a man; a man of vision, a man of Truth, a man who made the Truth felt and who helped it have its way.

God make us worthy the years we had him as Bishop and brother, and the example he has left us.

Respectfully submitted,
G. Sherman Burrows,
Myron W. Ludlow, Jr.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Rt. Rev. Thomas J. Garland, D. D., Bishop.

Services in the New St. Paul's, Chestnut Hill.

The congregation of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Chestnut Hill, Whitsunday, held their first services in the new church that had been in course of construction for nearly a year on the site of the old church which had served as the home of the parish since 1866. First services of the day was an early celebration of the Holy Communion at eight A. M., at which the rector, the Rev. Malcolm E. Peabody was the celebrant.

Bishop Garland officiated and celebrated the Holy Communion at the eleven o'clock service. Assisting the Bishop at that service were the rector, the rector's father, the Rev. Endicott Peabody, of Groton, Mass.; the Rev. John H. Chapman, former rector of the parish, and the Rev. Robert P. Frazier, in charge of the Hare Industrial School in South Dakota. A special Choral Evensong Service was held at 7:45 P. M., when all the workmen who had been employed in the building of the new church joined with the general congregation in the service.

The new St. Paul's Church was erected at a cost of approximately $550,000, and apart from its striking architectural beauty, in many other respects is said to be most unique and unlike any other church building in this country. The architects were the Philadelphia firm of Zantzinger, Borie and Medary. Since last June the work of replacing the old church with the new structure has been going on, the new church built around the old building while the demolition of the latter was taking place. In addition to the new church the congregation has completed the erection of a new wing to its already commodious parish house and has purchased about one acre of ground to the east of the church grounds fronting on Chestnut Avenue and Bethlehem Pike to preserve the setting of the church and to be set apart as a park.

R. R. W.

SOUTH FLORIDA.

Rt. Rev. Cameron Mann, D. D., Bishop.
Rt. Rev. J. D. Wing, D. D., Coadjutor.

Young People's Meeting.

The annual diocesan meeting of the Young People's Service League was held in Tampa, June 28-30, the Corporate Communion being held in St. John's Church at the early service on the thirtieth, with a special service and sermon by Bishop Wing later that morning in St. Andrew's Church.

Extensive alterations and improvements have recently been completed on Holy Trinity Church, Bartow, with also the completion of an attractive parish house, the latter connected with the nave of the church in such way that it can be used for additional seating accommodations when needed, by opening folding doors. Under the leadership of the Rev. Frank M. Brunton, the congregation has met in full the cost of these improvements, leaving no debt to be paid.

Sveral new church buildings are either definitely planned or now under erection at points on the East Coast section of South Florida, part of these replacing hurricane losses of last September. Plans have been drawn for St. Andrew's Church, Lake Worth; for St. Paul's Church, Delray Beach, and for St. Matthew's Church (colored congregation), Delray Beach. At Fort Pierce the parish house, nearly demolished in September, has been rebuilt and enlarged.

The Rev. George B. Scriven has been holding services at Canaveral, on the East Coast, and steps have been taken to organize a mission at this point. Land has been secured for the church, and plans drawn for a parish house, soon to be erected, which will serve as a place for worship until the desired church building can be added.

Rev. C. H. Bascom, formerly of Ocala, is supplying for this summer in St. Mary's Parish, Daytona, during the absence on vacation of the rector, the Rev. H. G. Walker.

C. R.

LONG ISLAND.

Rt. Rev. E. M. Stires, D. D., Bishop.

At St. Luke's, Brooklyn, provision has been made for administration of Holy Communion at stated times by intinction, a suitable vessel having been provided by gift of two parishioners. This method has for some time been in use for bed-side communions at St. John's Hospital; the wafer is dipped in the wine and placed in the patient's mouth. At the bed-side this method is much easier than any other. Perhaps the gradual extension of this method in parish churches would meet the difficulty that some communicants feel, or are alleged to feel, with regard to the common cup.

Burning of Mortgage Feature of Celebration.

St. Stephen's Church, Brooklyn, of which the Rev. Harry T. Morrell recently became rector, lately celebrated its sixtieth anniversary. A feature of the commemoration was the burning of a mortgage that had encumbered the property. The match was applied to the offensive document by Mrs. Jane Appleton, ninety years of age, for forty-six years a member of the parish.

John Williams' Memorial Fund.

An unusual memorial has been inaugurated in Calvary Church, Brooklyn, to perpetuate the memory of the late Rev. John Williams. The memorial is a fund to be known as the John Williams' Memorial Fund, as a permanent endowment towards the support of the parish. A bronze tablet was unveiled in the church on the evening of Ascension Day, bearing this inscription: "In ever grateful memory of the Rev. John Williams, M. A., rector of this parish from 1905 until he entered life eternal, this tablet has been placed in Calvary Church to record the establishment of the John Williams' Memorial Fund, created by his devoted parishioners and faithful friends to be an enduring help in the work for which he lived. August 10, 1866—October 25, 1926. Comfort ye, comfort ye, my people, saith your God. Isaiah 40:1. Unto this end our rector lived."

C. H. W.

HARRISBURG.

Rt. Rev. J. H. Darlington, D. D. Bishop.

The York County Ministerial Association was recently entertained by its President, Archdeacon Paul S. Atkins, for the closing meeting of the season. A motor pilgrimage was made to Harrisburg, where over seventy members were entertained at luncheon by the ladies of St. Stephen's Parish, following which addresses on Christian Unity were made by the rector, the Rev. Chas. F. R. Treder, D. D., and Bishop Darlington. The concluding portion of the program included a visit to the See House, where the members were guests of Bishop and Mrs. Darlington. Bishop Darlington, after a short service in the Kefferstein Memorial Chapel, conducted the members through his home and spoke most interestingly and entertainingly concerning his unique collection of curios and musical instruments.

P. S. A.

With the approval of the vestry of the parish, the Ven. Franklin T. Eastment, Archdeacon of Altoona, has been appointed honorary assistant to the Rev. Hiram R. Bennett, rector of Christ Church, Williamsport.

Miss Mary F. Ward, a graduate of the Deaconess Training School in Philadelphia, has been appointed by the rector as parish assistant, in place of Deaconess E. A. Christmas, resigned.

Lyken: The Rev. Joseph Henry Benner has been appointed by Bishop Darlington as vicar of Lykens, Williamstown and Millersburg. His address is Christ Church Rectory, Lykens, Pa.

(Continued on page 22.)

Family Department

JULY.

1. Monday.
4. Thursday.
7. Sixth Sunday after Trinity.
14. Seventh Sunday after Trinity.
21. Eigth Sunday after Trinity.
25. Thursday. S. James.
28. Ninth Sunday after Trinity.
31. Wednesday.

COLLECT FOR SIXTH SUNDAY AFTER TRINITY.

O God, who hast prepared for those who love Thee such good things as pass man's understanding; Poor into our hearts such love toward Thee, that we, loving Thee above all things, may obtain Thy promises, which exceed all that we can desire, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

For The Southern Churchman.

GOD IS LOVE.

Martha S. Gielow.

He is the Love that comforts
The lame and the deaf and the blind—
The cheer of tender service—
Of friendliness that's kind.

He is the soul that whispers
And lifts us from despair;
The Presence-lighting darkness,
The Peace that follows prayer.

He is the Dawn of Conscience,
The Courage that rights the wrong,
The Spirit that lovingly hovers
And changes each sigh to a song.

He is the heart's brave endeavor,
Undaunted by failure and pain—
The Sun in rainy weather—
The Joy without personal gain.

Are the Four Gospels Trustworthy?

The Four Gospels, little pamphlets that can be read through at a sitting and that may seem like mere leaves blown out of the first Christian century, are yet the foundation on which rests the historic structure of Christianity. It is therefore of supreme importance that we know whether or not they are historically trustworthy.

The first question in this connection is the date of these little books. If they originated one or two hundred years after the events they relate, their value would be impaired. The Fourth Gospel is admittedly later than the first three, or the Synoptics as they are called, because they give a synopsis or outline of the life of Jesus; and is dated by scholars near the end of the first century. It is also attributed by many scholars to John the disciple or to a disciple of John and all acknowledge its historical value.

A base line for determining the dates of the Synoptics is the date of the Acts of the Apostles. This book is practically the biography and letters of Paul, and Luke, its evident author, closes it with Paul in prison waiting for his trial, obviously closing the narrative at this point because there was nothing more about Paul to tell at that time. Paul perished under Nero and probably in the Neronian persecution of 64 A. D., and as Luke wrote the Acts before Paul's death we may date this book at about 62 A. D. But Luke wrote the Acts, as its preface shows, after he wrote his Gospel, and we may therefore date the Gospel of Luke at about 60. Comparison of the Gospels of Matthew and Luke with Mark shows that Matthew and Luke used Mark's Gospel, following his order of events and incorporating nearly all of his material in their narratives, and therefore Mark falls between 50 and 60 A. D. This line of reasoning and these dates are supported by the weighty authority of Harnack and other scholars. We are now back within twenty-five or thirty years of the death of Jesus, and this excludes legend and myth and gives us good historical ground.

Luke in his preface to his Gospel tells us that he had in hand many narratives of the life of Jesus written by those who had received their knowledge from those "who from the beginning were eye-witnesses and ministers of the word," and that he himself had traced the history accurately from the first in order that he might give a systematic account of it to confirm the faith of his friend Theophilus. This is an exceedingly valuable part of Luke's Gospel and assures us, not only that he was not simply depending upon and repeating second-hand sources and traditions, but that he had investigated the subject with the thoroughness of a scholarly historian and that he had as the basis of his narrative many sketches or outlines of the life of Jesus written by those who were themselves eye-witnesses or were in touch with them. He thus based his history on contemporary witnesses and documents after the approved method of the modern scientific historian. This preface of Luke is of inestimable value as an historical authority. Even though all the Synoptics were dated considerably later, yet would this little preface of Luke to the Third Gospel assure us that its author had trustworthy sources in his hand as the basis of his narrative.

An outstanding feature of the Gospel narratives is that they have none of the marks of imagination and myth, invention and legend, vision and ecstasy, which are careless of order and system, causes and consequences, and unmindful and unconscious of contradictions and impossibilities as they weave all sorts of incongruities and absurdities in the subjective fabric of preconceived wished for beliefs and desires. These writers and witnesses do not lose touch with the earth and take to the wings of fancy; on the contrary, due allowance being made for the supernatural events they are relating, they keep down on the ground of sober reality and concrete details and observe the order and unity and harmony of normal human experience and historic fact. Facts are freely and frankly recorded that would have been carefully glossed over or suppressed in a partisan account or fictitious story. They tell us things adverse to themselves and to their Master because they were telling the simple truth. In a word, these narratives have the simplicity and artlessness of truth, and these inimitable watermarks of historicity are so many seals authenticating the testimony of these witnesses and writers.

It is true that there are differences and discrepancies in these narratives, but these variations, though they may be overstrained and magnified into seemingly fatal contradictions, when properly considered are not serious disharmonies and are far removed from fraud or deception, but are what might have been expected and admit of explanation. These writers were not composing a systematic and comprehensive history of the life of Jesus and are not even trying to set forth facts to prove their beliefs, but are only giving personal experiences and impressions from their different points of view. And hence we have only disconnected incidents and fragments of the entire story, and it is not surprising that we cannot put these together so as to make them match all around their ragged edges when other parts are missing that might complete the harmonious whole.

These differences also in general are such as ought to be found in independent accounts. If the writers had all related the same story in exactly the same way, this would throw suspicion on them all as having been in collusion. These individualistic variations in the form of the testimony are strong indications of fruitfulness. It may be said of the writers of the Bible as a whole that they were competent men with opportunities of knowing what they related and with honest intentions to tell us what they knew or believed to be true. That they were impostors or mere credulous deceived story-tellers is not to be believed and is not borne out by their books that have long won and maintained a supreme place among scholars and in the religious world.—Presbyterian Banner.

He Goes Before.

"He goes before them, and the sheep follow him." An Eastern shepherd does not drive his flock before him, as Western shepherds do, but goes before them, and they follow him as their leader. So it is with our divine Shepherd. As Dr. F. B. Meyer says: "There is no path of legitimate duty into which we are called to go, in which He does not precede."

As we start out on each day's toil, however commonplace and humdrum it may be, we can see Him striding patiently on ahead. He has made our labor His labor. He has taken our load on His shoulders. He wields our tools, whatever they may be. Not a perpexity of our lot but He shares it. Not a weariness of our work but He feels it. Not a hope for our success, but He entertains it with us.

He has gone on before. Who knows how many obstacles He has thrown out of our way, how many brambles He has cut down, how many waters He has bridged, how many ravening beasts He has slain? He has gone on before, but not so far ahead that we cannot keep Him ever in sight, to cheer, to encourage, to inspire. He has gone on ahead, and He will reach the green pastures a little before us, and be waiting there for us with a smile.

Who would not travel far with such a Leader? Who would not brave any wilderness with such a Guide? Who shall falter when the Shepherd goes on before?—Amos R. Wells.

Once when Felix of Nola was fleeing from his enemies, he took refuge in a cave. He had scarcely entered when a spider began to spin its web over the fissure. The pursuers, passing by, saw the spider's web, and did not look into the cave. The saint as he came out in safety remarked: Ubi Deus est, ibi aranea murus, ubi non est ibi murus aranea. —Where God is, a spider's web is a wall; where He is not, a wall is but a spider's web.—Selected.

A Prayer for Every Day.

O Lord, let me do my work each day, and if the darkened hours of despair overcome me, may I not forget the strength that comforted me in the desolation of other times.

May I still remember the bright hours that found me walking over the silent hills of my childhood, or dreaming on the margin of the quiet river, when a light glowed within me, and I promised my early God to have courage amid the tempests of the changing years.

Spare me from the bitterness and the sharp passion of unguarded moments. May I not forget that poverty and riches are of the spirit. Though the world knows me not, may my thoughts and actions be such as shall keep me friendly with myself.

Lift my eyes from the earth, and let me not forget the uses of the stars, Forbid that I should judge others lest I condemn myself. Let me not feel the glamour of the world but walk calmly in my path. Give me a few friends who will love me for what I am.

And keep ever burning before my vagrant steps the kindly light of hope, and though age and infirmity overtake me, and I come not within sight of the castle of my dreams, teach me still to be thankful for life and for time's olden moments that are good and sweet.

And may the evening twilight find me gentle still; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

HE WHO IS GLAD.

He who is glad for every day's bright beauty;
For a flower or a red leaf in the wood,
Who sees fresh color in each hour's drab ddty—
I think he thanks his Maker as he shoold.

He who is brave to meet each strange new sorrow,
Whose courage marches with him as he goes,
Carries a stronger heart into tomorrow,
And thanks his God the very best he knows.

He who walks calmly, surely, through disaster,
Trusting an unseen hand to bring him peace,
Lifts up his life—a prayer unto His Master,
And offers him a praise that does not cease.

He who moves pently when the stress is pressing,
Lending a hand, such as a woman would,
Who turns his days and years into a blessing—
I am sure he thanks his Master as he should.

—Grace Noll Crowell.

Life.

"With Thee is the Well of Life."
"I am come that they may have life."
"I am the Resurrection and the Life."
"He that loseth his life shall find it."

The source of life and its nature is a problem for the learned; a problem as yet unsolved. It is no problem for those who accept the Lord as the giver of Life. I think we should not be far astray even from the point of view of the learned if we thought of Life as consciousness. All living creatures appear to have some degree of consciousness. In man, with whom we are chiefly concerned, consciousness reaches a high degree of awareness of itself.

There are many who say that our chief work and duty here is self realization; full self expression. At first sight this would seem to be the view of our Lord. But as we meditate on His words we see that He recognizes two fields in which life works. One the kingdom of this world whose prince has nothing in Him; the other the Kingdom of God which is among us and within us. To enter that Kingdom fully and freely we must have more abundant Life; Life from above and not from below. Life poured down from the City of God, from our lost Eden, and not life struggling upwards from below craving for fuller self expression. Our Lord is the Resurrection and the Life because He causes us to enter a different world; He gives us the full and perfect self expression.

Here we notice another difference. The Law of self expression in the Kingdom of this world is to grasp and to gain; the Law of teh Kingdom of God is to sacrifice; to offer all in Love. He who loseth his life shall find it. There is a life which spells death. There is a death which gives Life eternal.

And Life eternal does not begin in the "next world" as we call it; it begins here and now.

As we continue our meditation we see that our Lord did not seem to trouble Himself about the reform of the kingdom of this world. I mean that He did not denounce slavery, which was prevalent; He did not denounce war, as many do today; He bade the Jews pay tribute to Caesar; and obey the Scribes and Pharisees, while not imitating their lives. Why was this? If we reflect we remember that He compared the Kingdom to leaven hidden in flour. Now leaven has a very marked effect on flour, though the process is not at first obvious. Leaven and fire combined make sticky dough into light well baked bread. The Life of the Kingdom working in human souls changes all their values. The things they desired they no longer desire; the things to which they were indifferent are the good to which they press.

No law can stand the pressure of universal public opinion; when public opinion is strong enough laws change. When every human soul on earth receives the Life given by the Lord Jesus; when the objects of every soul, the dearest hope, the highest ambition is to know God and do His Will then, obviously, there will be no need for schemes of reform; disarmament conferences, leagues of nations, religious conferences and congresses will be needless. There will be no abuses in the world to be remedied when full Life has been given to every human soul. There will be One Faith, the knowledge of Christ; one Baptism, the Fire of the Spirit burning in all hearts; one Church, the radiant City of the most high God and Father of all that lives.—Healing Church.

Secret of Success.

What is the secret of obtaining the men and the women needed and the money required for missions? In every land and among all peoples, wherever Christ, people see that He should have light of way in themselves and full control of all that they have or ever may possess. It is inconceivable that the living Christ, who rose from the dead, should stand out in any company, or before any individual who acknowledges Christ, and not accomplish marvelous things—things that transcend all other experiences and that are sufficient to meet every need.

Why is it that in some colleges and seminaries, in certain homes and conventions, strong lives have been surrendered in such numbers, whereas, in other colleges and in other homes and conventions there have not been such offerings? The more deeply I have studied these cases, the more fully I have been convinced that the secret has been that in the former places Christ was lifted up, and in other cases He was not. In one case the conditions were complied with, and as a result He manifested himself. Old things passed away, all things become new; the right motives asserted themselves and dominated. The men and the money needed were forthcoming.

The only method that will bring forward workers who will stand the test in the day of trial and temptation, the workers who recognize that they receive their call not from man, and not from a dead Christ, but from a living Christ, and the only way in which we can obtain the money needed, and that will not bring greater dangers than now surround us, is the lifting up of Christ. We must hold Him up in our own lives primarily, in our homes and churches, conventions and conferences, in our board meetings and committees. We will say less perchance about the motives and about the methods, and more about Him, and we will leave Him free to work.

If we will let the living Christ stand out in the central place, then we will have times of refreshing from His presence.—Dr. John R. Mott, in the Missionary Review of the World.

THE WATER LILY.

Rising from mud and slime
Up thro' clear water,
Tending to light and sky,
Earthborn, blest of Heaven—
One perfect blossom!

Awakening to morning star,
Open to noonday sun;
Pearly pink, white and golden.
Petals, row upon row, in gradations of beauty;
Heart of gold, alive and a-quiver
Fragrant, delicate, pure, aromatic—
A lover's heart, ardent and humble—
A perfect blossom
Perfect in purity, beauty, humility, dignity;
Symbol in loveliness
Of that Bride whom her Lord in His love is preparing
To present to Himself,
A glorious Church, a chaste Virgin
Arrayed in white robes of fine linen
Without spot, or wrinkle, or such thing;
Fair as the moon,
Clear as the sun,
Made perfect in beauty,
His beauty upon her.

O Perfect Love!
O Perfect Blossom!

—A. G. White, in The Bible for China.

A Life.

It is the lives like the stars, which simply pour down on us the calm light of their bright and faithful being, up to which we look and out of which we gather the deepest calm and courage. No man or woman of the humblest sort can really be strong, gentle, pure and good, without the world being better for it, without somebody being helped and comforted by the very existence of that goodness.—Phillips Brooks.

For the Young Folks

For The Southern Churchman.

HIS NAME.

F. B. Stone.

O praise the Name of Jesus,
Thy Holy Name we love,
Which every name surpasses
In earth or heav'n above.

O breathe the Name of Jesus
Upon your knees in love,
For Jesus' sake the Father
Will bless you from above.

Faith in the Name of Jesus
Brought healing to the lame,
Its power has never altered,
Forever 'tis the same.

The pass-word to the Father,
It opens heaven's door;
The way to life eternal,
The name that we adore.

O breathe it, sing it, praise it!
Salvation's in that name!
Most precious name that heavenly
Or human lips can frame.

For The Southern Churchman.

All About Little Gray Cat.

Josephine Sanger Lau.

Little Gray Cat was hungry. His stomach was so empty that it ached, and because he was lonesome it ached harder than ever.

To be sure, the old dry goods box in Somebody's cellar was as snug and warm as ever, but what was the good of that, when there hadn't been a mouse in the cupboard for ever so long, or even longer?

Little Gray Cat crept about the box and sniffed at the cracks. Mother had told him not to call. But Mother had been gone so long, surely he must call if she hadn't come soon. He tried to sleep, all curled up in a ball so his stomach wouldn't pinch so hard.

And then he dreamed. Mother was there and she had brought him food. Her warm tongue was smoothing his rough coat and she was talking to him softly, with that coaxing little "Mer-ow" that he loved so much. It was all so wonderful that he jumped and woke up, mewing at the top of his voice! He looked all around—and then wished that he had stayed asleep, for Mother wasn't there, and there was nothing to eat.

"Mother," he mewed frantically, "Mother, Mother, Mother!"

Then he waited and it did seem as if he could hear her voice. But he couldn't be sure, and he called again. Then he waited and called and waited, until he was tired.

Something, he thought, was keeping his mother from coming to him: therefore, he must go to her. Very cautiously he poked his nose out of the little door. Should he call again? Better look around first. So he crawled out of the excelsior and onto the cold stone floor. Something scurried across the corner, and Little Gray Cat jumped high into the air, the fur on his gray overcoat standing out in evey direction. He caught a glimpse of the hurrying little shadow and his heart stopped beating so hard. Pooh! Looked like a mouse. And it had run away from him, too. Why, he could probably have caught it, if he'd thought about it in time; and a funny little growl bubbled up in his furry throat.

The cellar was full of queer looking boxes and barrels, and the walls were very high. There was a window on one side, but it was far out of reach. He wobbled across the floor. Then he looked up at the bars of warm, yellow sunlight that streamed through the window, and suddenly he knew that if ever he were to find his mother, he would have to get out of the cellar.

All around the walls he traveled. It was a long journey, and it took a long, long time. For Little Gray Cat's mother had taught him to look all about before he ventured into strange places. So Little Gray Cat sniffed this way and that, and lifted his clumsy little paws without making the tiniest sound. Sometimes the dust made him sneeze, and the cobwebs tickled his bobbing pink nose, so that he had to stop and rub them out of his whiskers. And all the time his stomach ached harder and harder.

At last he reached the stairs. He raised his dusty little head and got up onto his hind legs. The step was high, but perhaps it was a way out. Then he tried to leap; but he was such a very little cat, and his legs just wouldn't do what he told them to do. So instead of climbing up, he tipped over backwards and rolled over and over on the hard tone floor.

He just couldn't help crying a little at that, but he wasn't going to give up with one fall. So he scrambled to his feet. This time he dug his sharp little claws as hard as ever he could into the spintery wood, and was just ready to try again when a startling thing happened. It was so very startling to a lonesome little kitten that he tumbled over again, and then scurried across the floor faster, it seemed to him, than any little gray cat had ever traveled before.

A door at the top of the stairs had opened suddenly, and Somebody began to descend. His heavy feet made the stairs creak, and his big voice filled the cellar until it rumbled and grumbled from one wall to another. And Little Gray Cat squeezed himself in between a box and the wall and kept perfectly still.

"Here Jerry," said the Voice. "I want you to clear out all these boxes and barrels. Take them into the back yard and burn them. They're just a refuge for rats and mice."

He took hold of the box behind which Little Gray Cat was hiding. Little Gray Cat crouched closer to the wall, and then as the box was lifted away, he ran to another.

"Hello," said the Voice, "there's one now! Guess I'll have to bring the cat back."

Little Gray Cat wriggled and squirmed to get as far out of sight as possible.

"Hi, Jerry, come here and help me catch this rat!"

The box was lifted to one side, and Little Gray Cat lay as still as still—while the Voice rumbled louder than ever.

"Well, well, well! It isn't a rat after all! It's a tiny mite of a kitten! Come kitty, kitty, kitty!"

But Little Gray Cat had never heard a man's voice before, and the nearer it came the worse it sounded.

Then warm, strong fingers closed around him and Little Gray Cat was lifted into the air. Oh, yes, he scratched and kicked and bit just as his mother had taught him to do, but the fingers didn't seem to mind, and stranger still, they didnt' try to hurt him.

"You poor, scared little cat," said the Voice, "How in the world did you get into this cellar? Fell in the window, maybe." And he stroked the rough coat until Little Gray Cat lay still in the big, warm hands.

"Here, Jerry," continued the Voice, "take him out and put him in the car. I'll take him home when I go to lunch. He'll be company for Pussy. She's been so discontented since I took her home from the store day before yesterday."

Then Little Gray Cat changed from one big hand to another. He went up, up, up the stairs just as easy as easy, and out into the bright sunlight. A door was opened and he was placed among soft fur rugs. Then the door closed with a bang and Little Gray Cat was left alone in the car.

As soon as he dared, he looked about. Where was he? And where—was Mother? He must, he must find her now! And he mewed with all the strength of his baby voice. Then he crawled about. The door was shut tight and the windows were too high. Round and round he went, calling and trying to scramble up on the seat.

At last he was too tired to try any longer, and he curled up on the rug and went to sleep.

He awoke with a start. There was a great racket somewhere; under him, apparently, but before he had decided what to do about it, the car began to move in a most upsetting manner. Little Gray Cat was bounced around and overturned every time he tried to stand on his feet. At last he managed to crawl under a fold of the rug where he lay very still, hoping that the Big Noise wouldn't find him there.

He had even begun to get drowsy again when the noise and bumping stopped. The door was opened and Little Gray Cat was lifted out. This time he didn't bite and scratch as the big warm fingers closed about him. He just poked his head down out of sight between his paws and shut his eyes tight. Then he was carried through the sunshine again, up more steps and into a sunny room.

"Come and see what I've brought you, Mary," called the big rumbling Voice, and Little Gray Cat opened one eye to see a little girl come running down into the room.

"What is it, Daddy?" she asked, only her voice was sweet and soft like a bird's voice and Little Gray Cat didn't mind it a bit.

"A kitten! A dear tiny mite of a kitten!" and she patted her hands together and laughed. Then Little Gray Cat was put down on the rug.

"Bring Pussy," said Daddy, "let's see see if they're going to be friends."

Little Gray Cat drew his tail under him and lay very still. His stomach ached harder than ever and he was too tired to move. The little girl ran out of the room and Little Gray Cat could hear her calling, "Kitty, kitty, kitty!"

And then, and then—a Big Gray Cat was put down on the rug beside him! He stiffened and sniffed, his little heart beating wildly—then he flung himself against her. "Mother!" he mewed, "Mother, Mother Mother!"

Closer and closer he wriggled, and all the time he was so happy that he just couldn't stop crying. Big Gray Cat nudged him with her warm nose as if to make sure it was really he, then she stroked his dirty gray coat with her rough tongue, mer-owing and singing, and almost crying herself.

"Why, Daddy," said the little girl. "What can it mean? I do believe—it must be—it is—Pussy's own baby!"

"I think you're right, Mary," answered Daddy. "She must have had him hidden there at the store all the time. Poor little Mother! No wonder you were discontented!"

He stroked Big Gray Cat's back and she sang louder than ever. "Bring some milk, Mary. The poor little thing has had nothing to eat for two days."

And very soon there was the most delicious smell right under Little Gray Cat's nose. He sniffed, and bobbed his nose into the saucer so far he bumped his chin on the bottom. He licked the warm milk from his whiskers and tried again. It took a great deal of sniffing and sneezing, but at last Little Gray Cat learned to rest his weight on his paws and lap the milk with his little pink tongue.

Then he ate and ate and ate—until his little fur overcoat was stretched tight over his stomach, and he dared not swallow another mouthful for fear he would burst a button.

Finally he was lifted into a basket and he didn't mind at all, for there was just the nicest smell all about it—a familiar mother-smell.

His stomach didn't ache any more, either, and if it should ache again, it would be a very different kind of a pain.

Little Gray Cat was not afraid now. Indeed, he felt rather bold and very proud of himself. For had he not come all the way from Somebody's cellar to find his mother? And wasn't she right there in the basket beside her?

"Thread n' a thrum, thread n' a thrum, thread n' a thrum—" purred little Gray Cat. He even reached out a milky paw to slap playfully at his mother's gently waving tail.

"Thread n' a thrum, thread-n'- a-thrum, thread-n'-a-thrum—" This time very softly and very—very slowly. Then at once he stopped—sighed—and lay very still. Little Gray Cat was fast asleep.

And that's that about Little Gray Cat.

A RULE FOR HAPPINESS.

"Keep cheerful," chirped the Robin.
"Keep busy," hummed the Bees.
"Keep loving," sighed the Dewdrop.
"And no matter what you do,
If you're busy, loving, cheerful,
You will be happy too."

—The Sunbeam.

FROM A SHUT-IN.

American Magazine	$2.50
American Boy	2.00
Cosmopolitan	3.00
Good Housekeeping	3.00
Nature Magazine	3.00
St. Nicholas for Boys and Girls	4.00
Delineator	1.00
Modern Priscilla	2.00
McCall's Magazine	1.00
Woman's Home Companion	1.00
Pictorial Review	1.00
Saturday Evening Post	2.00
Youth's Companion	2.00
Time	5.00

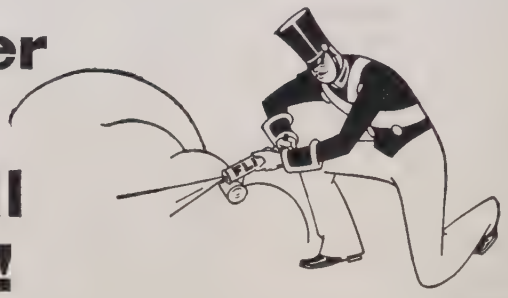
I take subscriptions for any magazine published, at publishers rates or less.

EDWARD P. BROXTON,
Keysville, Ga.

The Holy Communion.

At the Lord's table we should be one in Christ. It is a family gathering of those who believe, love, and serve alike in the kingdom of our Lord. Yet the differences that hold Christians of various denominations apart center round that very sacrament. Shoran S. Gingha, the famous convert from Hinduism to Christianity, states the case frankly in an article in The Christian World, London. "It is a tragedy indeed to realize that the Holy Communion which was meant to be the great bond of unity amongst the followers of the Nazarene should be the one hindrance to the attainment of the great purpose for which He prayed that "they all may be one." Let us pray that the spirit may lead us into the truth.—Presbyterian Banner.

For The Southern Churchman.



MY DOG!

Mary Esten Cooke, age 9.

My dog's name is Tinker Bell,
Named for the Fairy I like so well;
He's black and white and has lovely eyes.
He chases bees and butterflies!

Each night before I go to bed,
I tuck him in and pat his head,
He lies down in his cozy nest,
And there he stays for a good night's rest.

Easier way to Kill Flies!

Banish dirty dangerous flies from your home quicker! Just a few moments with the handy Flit sprayer and every fly and mosquito dies. More people use Flit because it has greater killing power, though harmless to humans. Guaranteed to kill or money back.

"The yellow can with the black band"

FLIT

REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

© 1929 Stanco Inc.

A Bank of Strength and Character

CARTER N. WILLIAMS, President
ROBERT W. DANIEL, Chairman of Board

RICHMOND TRUST COMPANY

7th and Main — 211 West Broad

WHILE IN RICHMOND LET US KNOW IF YOU LIKE OUR FOOD

Mrs. Cook's Cafeteria

Near St. Paul's Parish House
Richmond, Va.

INCORPORATED 1882

Virginia Fire and Marine Insurance Company

Of Richmond, Va.

Assets - - - $3,640,152.88

Fred'k E. Nolting, President.
B. C. Lewis, Jr., Secretary — J. C. Watson, Treasurer
J. M. Leake, General Agent — Wm. P. Hill, Asst. Secretary

One of the Ancient Inca Tombs on the high plateau of Bolivia.

Inca Monuments

WHETHER the Incas, a race of Peruvian Indians, stood at the beginning of civilization or whether, as some believe, they represent a culture as old as that of Egypt and more advanced than that of their Spanish conquerors, is still disputed. But, they certainly left some remarkable monuments which tell of a strong and highly gifted race.

All that is left of the Monuments and Architecture of the Incas is the granite.

It is well for us to learn this lesson, a fact that is proven by the history of all races—Granite Monuments last longer than any other. Scientific tests prove that granites vary in the quality of durability and show

Winnsboro Granite

"The Silk of the Trade"

superior to other grey granites. Its flawless beauty, stalwart strength, and great durability, combined with adaptability to design make it the ideal monumental stone.

Be sure that "Winnsboro Granite" is specified in your contract for monuments. Like other high quality materials, there are many inferior substitutes, which resemble this granite on first appearance, but do not possess its lasting qualities and permanent beauty.

Have your monument dealer furnish you with a personal guarantee from the quarries that the monument you purchase is cut in genuine Winnsboro Granite.

The certificate of the quarries is signed by B. H. Heyward, Treas., and General Manager, whose signature insures genuine Winnsboro Granite. A facsimile of this signature is reproduced below.

Write for free descriptive literature.

Winnsboro Granite Corporation, Rion, S. C.

B H Heyward Treas. & Gen. Mgr.

Classified Advertising and Notices

All notices and advertisements, excepting positions wanted, will be inserted in this department at a rate of 20 cents per agate line, each insertion. Special rates on contracts of any length. A rate of 15 cents per line is made to persons seeking positions. No advertisement accepted for less than 50 cents.

Copy for this department must be received not later than Tuesday of the week in which it is intended that the first insertion shall appear.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

ANTIQUES.

WE PAY THE HIGHEST CASH PRICES for old-time furniture and antiques of all kinds. H. C. Valentine, 209 East Franklin Street, Richmond, Va.

RELIGIOUS TRACTS.

GOOD RELIGIOUS TRACTS MAY BE had by writing to LEVI C. SULLIVAN, blind tract minister, P. O. Box 43, Roanoke, Va. Some excellent tracts for prison work.

SOLD BY A SHUT-IN.

MEDIUM SIZE ORANGE COLOR SELF-Filling Fountain Pens, with gold bands and solid 14K gold pen points, $1.00 each. Jumbo Pens, color black, $1.25. Edward P. Broxton, Keysville, Ga.

—CATHEDRAL STUDIOS—
Washington London

Church Embroideries and Vestments, Silks, Fringes, Gold Thread, Stoles with crosses from $7.60, Burse and Veil from $15. Surplices and exquisite Altar Linens, Church Vestments imported for the Churches free of duty.

MISS L. V. MACKRILLE,
11 W. Kirke St., Chevy Chase, Washington, D. C. Telephone Cleveland 52.

CHILDREN TO BOARD.

LARGE FARM, CHILDREN FROM 4 to 14. Healthy location; good food and water; safe swimming hole, etc. Terms reasonable. Address Mary Brockenbrough, Hevitt, Graduate Nurse, Fairfax Station, Va.

FOR CONVALESCENTS.

HOME FOR CONVALESCENTS AND INVALIDS; nursing care; special diet; large shady yard. Rates reasonable. Address Mrs. G. H. Trumbo, 231 Blue Ridge Avenue, Front Royal, Va.

SITUATION WANTED.

SITUATION WANTED, SEPTEMBER, AS Housemother, or Nurse in school or institution boys or girls. Graduate nurse with best references. Address "Deaconess", 211 East Eighth St., Newton, Kan.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORKER AND PARish secretary desires position. Address YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORKER, Christ Church Parish House, Savannah, Ga.

WANTED, POSITION IN SCHOOL OR INstitution; matron, linen room, or general office work. Address Miss Garrett, 409 East Franklin Street, Richmond, Va.

HELP WANTED.

WANTED: TRAINED SOCIAL WORKER, Episcopal. Address "A. B. C.," care of Southern Churchman.

Deaths

COCKERILLE: Died, Friday, May 24, 1929, in his home in Arcadia, Calif., HARRY COCKERILLE, formerly of Valdez, Alaska; oldest son of the late Dr. Samuel J. and Hevila Dufour Cockerille. Interment in California.

IN MEMORIAM.

Miss Lalla Falkner Plummer.

Entered into rest May 31, 1929. In the passing of this faithful servant of God the Woman's Guild of Trinity Episcopal Church, Portsmouth, Virginia, has lost a most devoted and valuable member, one ever ready to give herself, who counted no sacrifice too great if the interest of her beloved Church could be served.

Therefore be it resolved: That while the Woman's Build deeply laments its loss, we thank God for the good example of this consecrated member, "who departed this life in His faith and fear, beseeching Him to give us grace" to follow in humility where she has led; that we express to her bereaved family our heart felt sympathy; that these resolutions be recorded in the minutes of the Woman's Guild, printed in the Southern Churchman and a copy be sent to her family.

Signed,
MRS. V. GARLAND WEAVER,
President.
MRS. CHARLES R. NASH,
Secretary.

CHARLES E. BOLLING.

In Richmond, Va., on Saturday morning, June 22, 1929, CHARLES EDWARD BOLLING entered into life eternal.

The son of Thomas Bolling, of Bolling Island, and Mary Louisa Morris, of Taylor's Creek, Hanover County, and a direct descendant of John Rolfe and the Indian princess, Pocahontas, he was born at Bolling Island, Goochland County, on May 4, 1852. There and at the home in Nelson County, Va., of his sister, Mrs. Philip B. Cabell, who took the place of the mother who died at his birth, his happy childhood and early youth were spent.

He came to Richmond in 1873 and four years later he married Imogen, daughter of Corbin Warwick, Esq., the young wife who lived only eighteen months.

On April 17, 1894, he was married to Parke Chamberlayne, daughter of Dr. George W. and Lucy Parke Chamberlayne Bagby, thenceforth his beloved and devoted companion to life's end.

The achievements of his public life have been set forth in the daily papers—and those who walk our smooth tree-haded streets and drink our clear, wholesome water may well give a grateful thought to "Charlie Bolling", who served the city of Richmond for nearly sixty years—but suffice it here to say that those services were given with "that upright integrity, that strict adherence to truth and principle, that disdain of trick and littleness which a man should display in every transaction of life."

His charm of personality, depth of sympathy, warm affection and strict sense of justice, won for him friends in every walk of life, and it has been truly said that he is mourned by more real friends than the average man can count as mere acquaintances.

He loved country life, children and animals, and during his brief holidays was always most happy in the field with gun and dog. But the strongest elements of his character were the high sense of honor which guided every thought and action, and the tender heart which felt the troubles and sorrows of others more deeply than its own.

Advancing years brought many deprivations and as the evening of his days drew near a painful illness came upon him but the fortitude with which he had endured every trial of his life sustained him through this last ordeal and he turned his face to the setting sun with indescribable sweetness and courage.

When his body had been committed to the earth at Hollywood and the solemn words of the benediction had been pronounced, there came suddenly the familiar call of a partridge, clear and twice repeated, as though sounding "Taps for "the hunter home from the hill".

This was the salute that he himself would have chosen, before he crossed over the river, "and all the trumpets sounded for him on the other side".

"Life's race well run,
Lifes' work well done
Life's victory won."

CHURCH INTELLIGENCE.
(Continued from page 16.)

Enola: Col. Henry Wharton Shoemaker has presented the St. James' Shoemaker Memorial Church, Enola, with an additional plot of ground thirty by one hundred and fifty. This completes a large square of about one-half a city block, laid out in green lawns around the church and parish hall in the centre. The lower story of the hall is of cut stone, and the two upper stories are of frame, forty by forty feet. The church is absolutely free of debt, and the small congregation is hoping to raise an endowment fund after certain necessary repairs to the roofs are made.

Harrisburg: Mme. Marius de Brabant has given a bell from the Meneely Bell Foundry, Troy, N. Y., to St. Gerald's Memorial Chapel, Harrisburg. The bell is a memorial to the donor's father, Senator William Andrews Clark. The chapel building and parish house are memorials to her infant son, Gerald.

Through the will of the late Hugh McAlister North, of Lancaster, a member of the Lancaster County Bar, St. Paul's Church, Columbia, has received a legacy of $10,000. An additional gift of $20,000 was given to provide an endowment for the North Memorial Parish House, in the same parish. The rector is the Rev. Guy Franklin Caruthers, D. D.

A. A. H.

MICHIGAN.

Rt. Rev. Herman Page, D. D., Bishop.

British Empire Day.

A friendly gesture in international relations was made by St. Paul's Cathedral, Detroit, Sunday, May 19, on the occasion of the third annual observance in that place of British Empire Day. The service consisted largely in the singing of national airs of Great Britain, Canada and the United States. The lesson was read by Mr. John A. Cameron, British Consul in Detroit, who was preceded in the procession by two servers carrying British flags. The sermon was preached by the Very Rev. Arthur Carlisle, Dean of Christ Church Cathedral, Montreal. Dean Carlisle thanked God for many evidences of friendship, but pointed out the possibility of serious misunderstanding arising from some of the serious problems connected with the relations between the two great English-speaking powers. He reminded his hearers that if on both sides, British and American, people were busy with great and worth-while plans, there was little possibility of trouble. "The idle nation is the dangerous nation." At the close of the sermon, "Rule Britania" was sung in a most stirring manner, the congregation of over a thousand joining heartily with the massed choristers of the Cathedral, two hundred and thirty in number. Then the Union Jack was displayed from the altar steps, while "God Save the King" was sung. This was followed by the dipslay of the flag of the United States, the signal for the singing of the national anthem. The service closed with prayers for the Empire and the Republic.

BETHLEHEM.

Rt. Rev. F. W. Sterrett, D. D., Bishop.

Summer School.

The Bethlehem Summer School opened auspiciously on June 24, with an enrollment of over a hundred young people from the Dioceses of Bethlehem and Pennsylvania. All the members of the faculty are present and have taken enthusiastic hold of their work. The members of the faculty are:

The Rt. Rev. Frank B. Sterrett, D. D., LL. D.

The Rev. Nathaniel B. Grotan, Executive Officers of the Blue Mountain Conference, Supervisor of Summer Conferences of the Third Province, an Expert in Young People's Work.

The Rev. Francis C. Hartshorne, a learned Bible Exegete, from the Diocese of Pennsylvania.

The Rev. Charles J. Harriman, a very inspiring Summer Conference Instructor in Young People's Work—one of the favorite members of the faculty of last year's Bethlehem Summer School.

Miss Frances Arnold, Diocesan President of the G. F. S. of Maine. Miss Arnold's work has been highly commended by the National G. F. S. Office.

Miss Margaret Marston, National Educational Secretary of the Woman's Auxiliary, a most forceful and inspiring lecturer.

Mrs. Thomas J. Bigham, Director of Religious Education of the Church of the Advent, Pittsburgh. A very practical, experienced, and well equipped instructor in the Church Normal School of the Diocese of Pittsburgh.

Miss Zettan Gordon, Director of Religious Education for the Diocese of Bethlehem.

Miss Mary Simms, Secretary for Religious Drama in the Diocese of Pennsylvania, and a very excellent and well qualified Leader of the classes in Religious Drama for the Church Normal School in Philadelphia.

The Rev. Glen B. Walter, rector, Church of the Redeemer, Sayre. Experienced in directing recreation at Junior Brotherhood Camps.

SPOKANE.

Rt. Rev. E. M. Cross, D. D., Bishop.

Talk by Deaconess Newell.

"How College Girls Can Serve the Church" and St. Margaret's House, Berkeley, California, formed the subjects for a splendid talk by Deaconess Newell to a group of young women from the State College of Washington at Pullman, Wash. The meeting was held at the home of the Rev. and Mrs. E. C. Schmeiser, whose guest the Deaconess was during the time of her stay.

At the request of the Rt. Rev. Edward M. Cross, S. T. D., Bishop of Spokane, the Rev. F. R. Bartlett, field representative for the National Council in the eighth province, is making a survey of the Church's work i nthe District of Spokane.

Around the Rev. Harold P. Kaulfuss and Miss Mildred James of the National Council, the District of Spokane has built a splendid faculty for its summer school to be held at McDonald's Point, Lake Coeur d'Alene, from July 2-12. Bishop Cross will act as hCaplain of the School.

Personal Notes

Trinity Church, Carbondale, has just elected the Rev. R. Y. Davis, of Grace and Holy Trinity Church, Richmond, Va. He will commence his new work on September 1. His address will be Carbondale, Pa.

Mr. A. F. C. Fiske, of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, 1 Madison Avenue, New Yoork City, is now the National Treasurer of the Bishop Seabury Memorial Fund, succeeding his late father, Haley Fiske, Esq.

ORDINATIONS.

The Rev. Alfred W. Price was ordained Priest on St. John Baptist's Day, in the Church of the Good Shepherd, Ecranton, Pennsylvania, the Rev. James Lawrence Ware, rector. The Archdeacon preached the sermon on the text, "Until Christ be formed in you." The Rev. Robert P. Kreitler read the Litany. The Rev. Chester A. Porteus, a classmate and curate at the Church of the Holy Trinity in St. James' Parish, New York, read the Epistle. The Rev. J. Lyon Hatfield read the Holy Gospel; he is rector of St. Mark's Church, Dunmore. Dean Robert F. Kline, Calvary Church, Wilkes-Barre, served the Bishop, the Rt. Rev. Frank W. Sterrett, D. D., who celebrated and ordained the candidate.

After the ordination the parish served a fine luncheon to all who wished to stay, at which time a number of felicitous speeches were made.

Mr. Price is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, and has just beenr graduated by Cambridge Theological Seminary. He accepted an appointment as curate in Christ Church, East Orange, N. J. The Rev. C. Hutchison is rector.

Unique Ordination.

Epiphany Chapel, Guntersville, a mountain village in Alabama, was the scene of an unusual ordination on June 23. There are about a dozen faithful communicants, and two of these were ordered Deacon at the same time by Bishop McDowell: Joseph Hodge Alves, Jr., a graduate of Sewanee and the Virginia Seminary, and Robert Comer Fletcher, a graduate of Gallaudet and the Philadelphia Divinity School. Mr. Fletcher, who will become Deaf-Mute Missionary in the Province of Sewanee, is the son of a Baptist minister who was present at the ordination. Mr. Alves will work for the present under Bishop Seaman in North Texas.

On Wednesday, June 12, the Rev. Thomas Earl Dudley was ordained to the Priesthood by the Bishop of Tennessee, in St. Luke's Chapel, Sewanee.

The Rev. Henry Irving Louttit was advanced to the Priesthood by the Rt. Rev. John Durham Wing, D. D., Bishop Coadjutor of South Florida, in Trinity Church, Miami, on the Fourth Sunday after Trinity, June 23. The candidate was presented by the Rev. Robert T. Phillips, rector of Trinity Church, and the sermon was preached by the Rev. R. D. Tracy, rector of All Saints' Church, Fort Lauderdale.

The Rev. Mr. Loutti received his A. B. degree from Hobart College and his B. D. degree from the Virginia Theological Seminary. During the summer he will assist the rector of Trinity Church, Miami, and in September will assume charge of All Saints' Church, Tarpon Springs, and St. Stephen's Church, New Port Richey, Fla.

Mr. John Totman was ordained to the Diaconate on Sunday, June 9, in the Church of the Incarnation, Dallas, South Dakota, by the Rt. Rev. W. Blair Roberts, D. D., Suffragan Bishop of South Dakota.

The Rev. J. A. McNulty, of Winner, Dean of the Rosebud, presented the candidate, and read the Litany. Bishop Roberts preached the sermon. Mr. Totman will continue in charge of the work at Dallas under the direction of Dean McNulty.

Mr. Joseph F. Fletcher and Mr. Joseph B. Riddick were ordained to the Diaconate on Sunday morning, June 23, by the Rt. Rev. W. L. Gravatt, D. D., Bishop of West Virginia, in Christ Church, Fairmont. The candidates were presented by the Rev. Robert S. Lambert. Sermon by the Rev. John S. Alfriend, D. D.

W. L. G.

The Rt. Rev. Peter Trimble Rowe, D. D., Bishop of Alaska, ordained to the Diaconate William R. Macpherson in St. Matthew's Church, Fairbanks, Alaska, on Sunday, June 2. The candidate was presented by the Rev. M. L. Wanner, priest-in-charge of St. Matthew's Mission, who also read the Litany. The sermon was preached by Bishop Rowe. The Rev. A. A. Fullerton read the Epistle, and W. R. Macpherson the Gospel. In the Ordination Eucharist, the Bishop was the celebrant, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Wanner. Mr. Macpherson has been a missionary in the Church of the Brethren, and stationed at Seward, Alaska. He will serve as deacon-in-charge of St. Peter's Church, Seward, and All Saints' Church, Anchorage, with address at Seward, Alaska.

M. L. W.

TIDEWATER TALES

A book into which is gathered the folklore, traditions and history of Tidewater Virginia. Written in a delightful informal style by Prof. William C. Garnett.

The President of a College in South Carolina writes: "I have never read a work of this kind the style of which I have found more attractive, simple and yet elegant, interesting but never monotonous."

A prominent representative of a Publishing Co. writes: "This book will be read by our children and children's children. I could read 'A Fox Hunt 'Fo de War' every week."

A prominent attorney in Washington writes: " . . the charming description of the old homes, the history and traditions, and the true-to-life stories in local color, combined to delight me."

A professor in one of the Virginia Universities writes: "You have put posterity in your debt by presenting so skilfully to them characters that have passed to the beyond."

Price, $4.00 per copy. Order from WM. GARNETT, Dunnsville, Va.

THE COLLEGIATE SCHOOL FOR GIRLS IN THE CITY OF RICHMOND

1615-1619 MONUMENT AVENUE.

A private day school for girls, with kindergarten, primary, intermediate and high school departments. College preparatory, general and graduate courses. Home Economics, Stenography and Typewritting.

There will be a responsible person at the school building throughout the summer months to supply catalogues, or information by telephone daily from 9:00 to 11:00 A. M. Telephone number, Boulevard 2311. Letters of inquiry should be addressed to Miss Greenleaf, Head of Collegiate School for Girls, 1619 Monument Avenue, Richmond, Virginia.

THE CONFRATERNITY OF UNITY

A curious movement has been organized under the leadership of a man in orders in the Diocese of the Presiding Bishop of the Church, says "The Chronicle," of Poughkeepsie, N. Y. This organization is The Confraternity of Unity, whose purpose is stated to be corporate reunion with Rome based upon a constitution which takes the full papal position as the final ideal for a reunited Catholicism. The leader of this organization here takes to task the Pastoral Letter on the subject of Church Unity issued by the Bishops assembled at the last General Convention in Washington. The latter described the church's function as "not to draw men out of the human family, but to make that family conscious of its relation to God."

All this is apparently wrong, the function of the church, according to the Confraternity, is to make the human family conscious of its relations to the Pope, because corporate reunion is based on that article in the Credenda of the Confraternity, which says, "I believe in the Primacy, not only of honor but of jurisdiction, of the Roman Pontiff, successor of St. Peter, Prince of the Apostles, Vicar of Jesus Christ."

All this is very plain and easy to be understood. It is an absolute volte face from the position of the so-called Lambeth plot, which is described as a campaign to commit our communion to a scheme for inter-communion or actual communion with the Protestant sects. In other words, the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States of America is not a Protestant body, but is, in the language of the Confraternity, merely one of the "afflicted parts of the body of Christ" which was wounded by the Reformation.

The following is an accurate reprint of the Constitution of the Confraternity of Unity, an organization of "priests" within the Protestant Episcopal Church. Comment here is not necessary. Our readers can draw their own conclusions.

CONFRATERNITY OF UNITY

PREAMBLE

The Confraternity of Unity is composed of members of the Anglican Communion who believe that the See of Rome is the center of unity for all churches. This Confraternity, therefore, seeks through corporate action within the Anglican Communion a basis of reunion with the Holy See which will not be prejudicial to the facts of her sacramental life and adopts this Constitution.

THE CONSTITUTION

ARTICLE I

Name

The name of this society shall be the Confraternity of Unity.

ARTICLE II

Purpose

The purpose of this Confraternity shall be to promote that movement within the Anglican Communion which looks towards corporate reunion with the Holy See.

ARTICLE III

Credenda

(1) Creeds: This Confraternity accepts as its credenda the three creeds commonly called the Apostles', the Nicene, and the Athanasian, and interprets them in accord with the decrees of the Oecumenical Council and the traditions of the Catholic Church.

(2) General Council: This Confraternity also accepts (a) such dogmatic decrees of the first seven Oecumenical Councils as have been received by both the East and the West, and (b) of the other General Councils, those dogmatic decrees that the Holy See considers oecuemnical.

(3) This Confraternity receives the following profession of faith as a summary of its credenda:

I believe in one only God in three divine Persons, distinct from, and equal to, each other—that is to say, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost.

I believe in the Catholic doctrine of the Incarnation, Passion, Death, and Resurrection of our Lord Jesus Christ; and the personal union of the Natures, the divine and the human; the divine Maternity of the most holy Mary, together with her most spotless Virginity.

I believe in the true, real, and substantial presence of the Body and Blood, together with the Soul and Divinity, of our Lord Jesus Christ, in the most holy Sacrament of the Eucharist.

I believe in the seven Sacraments instituted by Jesus Christ for the salvation of mankind—that is to say, Baptism, Confirmation, Eucharist, Penance, Extreme Unction, Order, Matrimony.

I believe in Purgatory, the Resurrection of the Dead, Everlasting Life.

I believe in the Primacy, not only of honor but of jurisdiction, of the Roman Pontiff, successor of St. Peter, Prince of the Apostles, Vicar of Jesus Christ.

I believe in the veneration of the Saints and of their images.

I believe in the authority of the Apostolic and Ecclesiastical Traditions, and of the Holy Scriptures, which we must interpret and understand only in the sense which our holy mother the Catholic Church has held and does hold.

And, I believe in everything else that has been defined and declared by the sacred Canons and by tFe General Council, and particularly by the holy Council of Trent, and delivered, defined, and declared by the General Council of the Vatican, especially concerning the Primacy of the Roman Pontiff, and his infallible teaching authority.

ARTICLE IV

Discipline

(1) This Confraternity accepts not only oecumenical doctrine, but also oecumenical discipline, and believes that when corporation reunion becomes a fact, details of discipline must then be submitted to the judgment of the Holy See.

(2) Priests on becoming members of this Confraternity shall undertake, so far as is practicable, to follow the discipline required of priests of the Latin Rite.

ARTICLE V

Membership

(1) Any person accepting the credenda and discipline of this Confraternity is eligible for membership, and upon application to the Council may be received as a member of this Confraternity.

(2) All members shall undertake to pray daily for reunion with the Holy See, and to offer a daily prayer for the Holy Father. Priests in addition shall say each week a Mass of reunion.

ARTICLE VI

Methods

The purpose of this Confraternity is to be promoted by prayer and study, by avoidance of controversy between Catholics, and also by taking advantage of all opportunities for building up friendly relations and breaking down prejudices. The keynote of the method is charity.

ARTICLE VII

The Council

The executive body of this Confraternity shall be a Council composed of not more than six priests.

(1) The Council shall elect annually from among its members a Chairman and a Secretary-Treasurer.

(2) Vacancies that occur may be filled by the election of new members at any regular meeting of the Council.

DESIGNED FOR THE PROMOTION OF PRACTICAL PIETY, THE DIFFUSION OF RELIGIOUS AND GENERAL INTELLIGENCE, AND THE MAINTENANCE OF THE PRINCIPLES OF THE PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL CHURCH

Southern Churchman

DOMINUS FRUSTRA NISI 1835

Vol. 94. RICHMOND, VA., JULY 13, 1929. No. 28.

WHAT MAKES A NATION GREAT?

Alexander Blackburn

Not serried ranks with flags unfurled,
Not armored ships that gird the world,
Not hoarded wealth, nor busy mills,
Not cattle on a thousand hills,
Not sages wise, nor schools, nor laws,
Not boasted deeds in freedom's cause—
All these may be, and yet the State
In the eye of God be far from great.

That land is great which knows the Lord,
Where songs are guided by His Word,
Where justice rules 'twixt man and man,
Where love controls in act and plan,
Where breathing in his native air
Each soul finds joy in praise and prayer—
Thus may our country, good and great,
Be God's delight—man's best estate.

THE NATION'S RELIGIOUS ACKNOWLEDGMENT

The only flag that ever flies above the banner of the Stars and Stripes is a pennant which bears upon it the picture of a cross. It is hoisted to the top of the staff when the time for religious worship arrives where any of the troops of our nation are assembled on land or sea. Thus does the mightiest power on the globe make acknowledgment to the yet mightier Power which created and maintains the universe. However far short of exhibiting the spirit of Christ our country may fall, to this extent at least its government is Christian.

The significance of this practice has been thus interpreted by "The Outlook": "The flying of that pennant is the answer which such a nation as ours gives to those arch-infidels who deny that a State owes allegiance to any power other than itself. It is the answer to those who contend that might makes right. It is the answer to those who proceed on the assumption that there is no obligation resting on the government of any nation to observe its pledged word or to act in accord with the dictates of conscience."—The Southern Methodist.

EDUCATIONAL

The Gundry Home and Training School For The Feeble Minded

Falls Church, Fairfax County, Va.

Established 1892.

For terms and information address

MISS M. GUNDRY.

The General Theological Seminary

CHELSEA SQUARE, NEW YORK.

The next Academic year egins on the last Wednesday in September.

Special students admitted and Graduate Courses for graduates of othre Theological Seminaries.

The requirements for admission and other particulars can be had from THE DEAN, 1 Chelsea Square, New York, N. Y.

The Bishop Payne Divinity School

The accredited Seminary of the Church for training colored men for the ministry. The curriculum covers the full course for Deacon's and Priest's Orders. The degree of B. D. is awarded.

For catalogue and information apply to Rev. F. G. Ribble, M. A., D. D., Dean, Petersburg, Va.

The Protestant Episcopal Theological Seminary Virginia

The One Hundred and Sixth Session Opened Wednesday, Sept. 19, 1928.

For catalogue and other information address The Dean, Rev. Berryman Green, D. D., Theological Seminary, Alexandria, Va.

Schermerhorn Home School

Located six miles north of Richmond on the Washington Highway. A Home School for Children who need Special care and Training.

SUE I. SCHERMERHORN,
Box 57, West End Sta,
Richmond, Va.

STUART HALL

STAUNTON, VA.

Episcopal school for girls, maintaining best Virginia traditions of refinement and culture.

Thorough College Preparation. Varied General Course. Outdoor Life.

EIGHTY-SIXTH YEAR BEGINS SEPTEMBER 13, 1929

For catalogue, address
MRS. H. N. HILLS, Principal

Episcopal Theological School

Cambridge, Massachusetts.

Affiliated with Harvard University.

For catalog address
The Dean.

Chatham Hall

A Church School for girls in Southern Virginia. Thorough college preparation. General and graduate courses. Art, music, expression, home economics, secretarial course. Superb location; 175 acre estate, gardens, dairy; modern, well equipped buildings. Riding, swimming, golf. Address Rev. Edmund J. Lee, M. A., D. D., Box S, Chatham, Va.

Southern Churchman

SOUTHERN CHURCHMAN COMPANY,
628 E. Main Street - - - Richmond, Va.

LANGBOURNE MEADE WILLIAMS
President
ALFRED B. WILLIAMS..Associate Editor
THE REV. FRANK COX
Associate Editor
THE REV. JAMES W. MORRIS, D. D.
Associate Editor
MRS. CONRAD H. GOODWIN,
Associate Editor
MISS SUSANNE WILLIAMS..News Editor
JOHN H. COOKE..Secretary and Manager

Entered at the Post Office in Richmond, Va., as second-class mail matter.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE.

$3.00 a year in advance. To the Clergy, $2.00. Six months, $1.50. Trial subscriptions, 3 months, 50 cents; 10 cents a copy. Foreign postage, 50 cents additional.

For the convenience of subscribers, subscriptions are continued at expiration unless otherwise ordered. Notice of renewal, discontinuance or change of address should be sent two weeks before the date they go into effect.

RECEIPT OF PAYMENT is shown in about two weeks by change of date on address label. If date is not properly extended after each payment, notify us promptly. No receipt for payment will be sent.

Notice post office address. The exact post office address to which we are directing the paper at the time of writing MUST ALWAYS BE GIVEN. Our mailing list is arranged by post offices and not alphabetically.

Make all checks and money orders payable to the Southern Churchman, and not to an individual.

ADVERTISEMENTS—Rates quoted on request. For classified see head of that department.

Representatives wanted in each Parish; liberal commissions.

News concerning the Church at large always welcome.

CONTENTS

	Page.
Thoughts for the Thoughtful	4
Editorial	5
Undoubtedly He is Coming Again—Arthur Mercer	7
It Works Wonders	8
Favorite Scripture Verse	8
Don't Kill It: You Need It—W. E. Shepard	9
For the Spirit of Prayer—Selected	9
Why I Go to Church—Hon. John Wanamaker	9
Here a Little: There a Little—Rev. C. E. Lucas	9
Historical Abbey at Westminster	10
Book Reviews	11
Letters to Editor	11
Church Intelligence	11
Family Department	17
Children's Department	19
Personal Notes	23

ST. JOHN BAPTIST SCHOOL for Girls

In the Country near Morristown. Under the care of the Sisters of St. John Baptist (Episcopal).

College Preparatory and General Courses. Music and Art.

Modern Fireproof Building open September, 1929. Ample Grounds. Outdoor Life. Moderate Rates.

For Catalog address
THE SISTER SUPERIOR,
St. John Baptist School,
Mendham, New Jersey.

MARY BALDWIN COLLEGE

For women. Courses lead to B. A. and B. S. degrees. Music, art, spoken English, physical education. Gymnasium and field athletics. Modern equipment. In beautiful Shenandoah Valley. Founded 1842. Catalog. Staunton, Va.

Five Virginia CHURCH SCHOOLS

FOR BOYS: St. Christopher's School, Richmond; Christchurch School, Christchurch, Middlesex County.

FOR GIRLS: St. Catherine's School, Richmond; St. Anne's School, Charlottesville; St. Margaret's School, Tappahannock.

(For Catalogs, address Principals.)

LEGAL TITLE for wills: Church Schools in the Diocese of Virginia (Inc.).

(About gifts or bequests, address Central Office, 110 West Franklin Street, Richmond, Va.)

HOBART COLLEGE Geneva N. Y.

A Church College for men, founded 1828. Four year liberal arts course, leading to the degrees A. B. and B. S. High standards; faculty of thirty. For catalogue and information, address
REV. MURRAY BARTLETT, D. D., Pres.

St. Margaret's School

Tappahannock, Virginia.

A Church School for girls with modern equipment and moderate cost. Intermediate and College Preparatory. Accredited.

Country life and simplicity without isotion. Beautiful grounds on Rappahannock River. Three dormitories for different ages. Supervised Athletics.

EDITH LATANE, Headmistree.

SAINT MARY'S SCHOOL AND JUNIOR COLLEGE

Raleigh, North Carolina.

Rev. Warren W. Way, A. M., Rector.

An Episcopal School for Girls. Have your daughter receive her education in a Church School.

Saint Mary's offers four years' High School and two years' College work all fully accredited by the Southern Association. Also Courses in Music, Art, Expression, Home Economics and Business.

20-acre campus. Gym and Field Sports. Tennis, Indoor Tiled Swimming Pool. Horseback Riding.

For Catalogue and View Book address A. W. TUCKER, Business Manager.

St. Albans The National Cathedral School for Boys

Thorough Preparation for Leading Universities, splendid equipment, unexcelled location on Mt. St. Alban overlooking Washington.

Eight years' course. Athletics for every boy.

Address:
WILLIAM H. CHURCH, Head Master,
Washington, D. C.

HAMPDEN-SYDNEY COLLEGE

Invites your careful consideration of its Faculty, Courses of Study, Wholesome Christian Atmosphere, and Physical Equipment.

For catalogue write,

REGISTRAR
Hampden-Sydney, Virginia

THE HANNAH MORE ACADEMY

The Diocesan School of Maryland. Founded 1832. A Country School for Girls—fifteen miles from Baltimore. College, Preparatory and General Courses. Music, Art, Supervised Athletics.

Principal. LAURA FOWLER, A. B.,
Reistertown, Maryland.

CHURCH EQUIPMENT SERVICE

MOLLER PIPE ORGAN

Endorsed by the most eminent organists. Built in the world's largest factory. Every organ a special creation for a particular use and fully guaranteed. Moller Organs lead all quest.

Booklets and specifications on reother makes for church, school and auditorium use. The Moller "Artiste" Reproducing Organ for residence use is without equal.

M. P. MOLLER
Hagerstown. Maryland.
COL. E. S. LIGON, President,
Blackstone Box R. Virginia.

CASSOCKS

Surplices, Stoles, Eucharistic Vestments, Choir Cassocks, Cottas, Ties and Collars, Altar Linens, Materials, Tailoring.

J. M. HALL, Inc.
174 Madison Ave.
(Bet. 33d & 34th Sts.)
New York.

R. GEISSLER, INC.

56 W. 8th STREET, NEW YORK, N.Y.
Church Furnishings
IN CARVED WOOD AND MARBLE · BRASS · SILVER FABRICS + WINDOWS
EST. 1877

SCHOOLS—CONTINUED.

FISHBURNE MILITARY SCHOOL

Aim—"Not the largest, but the best"

IN EVERY class each boy recites every day. Contacts with schoolmates from all over the country. Graduates enter all colleges. Certificate privileges. Mild year 'round climate. Easily reached. Full athletic program supervised by experienced men. Modern equipment. Swimming pool. Col. M. H. Hudgins, Box , Waynesboro, Virginia.

Member Ass'n of Military Colleges and Schools of U. S.

DIVINITY SCHOOL

of the Protestant Episcopal Church in Philadelphia
42nd and Locust Streets.
Graduate Courses in Theology, Privileges at the University of Pennsylvania.
Address: The Rev. G. G. Bartlett, D. D., Dean.

PEABODY

BALTIMORE, MD.
The Leading Endowed Musical Conversatory in the Country, Scholarships, Operatic training. Tuition in all grades and branches.
Circulars mailed.

St. Anne's,

Charlottesville, Va.
Box G.

Beautiful location in far famed Blue Ridge Mountains College preparatory and elective courses. Fully accredited. Open gymnasium allows sports in the fresh air in all weather. Sleeping porches. Riding taught by expert. Music. Art. Bishop of Virginia President of Trustees. Laura Lee Dorsey, Principal.

THE UNITY OF THE PENTATEUCH

An Examination of the Higher Critical Theory as to the Composite Nature of the Pentateuch

By the Rev.
A. H. FINN,
Lately Chaplain in Burma and India; at one time Hebrew Lecturer, Leeds Clergy School.

Preface by the late
RT. REV. HANDLEY C. G. MOULE, D. D
(Bishop of Durham).

"This book consists of a clear, scholarly and straightforward examination of the Higher Critical Theory that the Pentateuch is a composite work, and as whole cannot be the production of a single author writing not many years after the Exodus. The volume deserves careful study, for it is manifestly the result of a very great deal of thought on the part of a writer evidently well qualified for his task by his knowledge of Hebrew, and his thorough familiarity with the Higher Critical Theory."—Dr. St. Clair Tisdall.

Price 10-6.

MARSHALL BROTHERS LIMITED,
London and Edinburgh.

MEMORIAL BELLS

A tribute to your loved ones; eloquent, enduring, inexpensive. Write for illustrated Free Catalog.
THE JOHN B. MORRIS FOUNDRY CO.
Dept. 70 Cincinnati, O.

PIPE ORGANS

HINNERS

Highest quality. Superb tone. Modern accessories. Durable construction. All sizes.

Write for catalog of Pipe Organs, Reed Organs, or Electric Blowing Outfits.

HINNERS ORGAN CO.
PEKIN, ILLINOIS

CARPETS for CHURCHES

We carry a large stock of Church Carpets, embracing a wide assortment of designs, colorings and qualities and at prices to meet every requirement. Write and our representative will call with a selection of patterns and give an estimate, or we will send samples, at our expense, for your consideration.

Sydnor & Hundley

700 E. Grace Street,
Richmond, Va.

St. Paul's Boys' School

Boarding and day pupils—Fifth grade to college. Rogers Avenue, Mt. Washington, Md.
WALTER B. LAWRENCE, M A., Headmaster.
Faculty all College Graduates.
REV. ARTHUR B. KINSOLVING, D. D., President Board of Trustees.
Enrollment limited to Fifty Boarding Pupils. Tuition $450. Choir Scholarships. Next sesison begins September 11, 1929.

J. & R. Lamb

23-25-27 SIXTH AVENUE NEW YORK
MEMORIALS IN STAINED GLASS
MOSAIC · MARBLE · STONE · GRANITE
CARVED WOOD · METAL · ETC.

Woody's Art Glass Shop

Art Stained and Leaded Glass.
Church Windows a Specialty.
513 East Main Street,
Richmond, Va.

BEVERLEY HEATING

The Best for Homes, Churches, Stores and Buildings for all uses.
R. C. BEVERLEY HEATING CO., INC.,
308 E. Main St., Richmond, Va.
QUALITY—SERVICE.

LINEN for the CHURCH

PURE IRISH LINEN FOR ALL CHURCH USES, yard or piece lengths, at lowest import prices. New Special Number for Cottas, eighty-two and one-half cents. Samples on request.
MARY FAWCETT CO.,
350 Broadway, New York.

CHURCH VESTMENTS
Cassocks, Surplices, Stole.
EMBROIDERIES
Silks, Cloths, Fringes.
CLERICAL SUITS
Rabats, Collars, Shirts.
COX SONS & VINING,
131-133 E. 23d St., New York.

Church and Sunday School Furniture

THE SOUTHERN DESK COMPANY,
Hickory, N. C.
Send for Special Catalogue.

When in need of

MONUMENTS and TOMBSTONES

and want honest treatment see

BURNS & CAMPBELL,
Granite and Marble Works
PETERSBURG, VA.

Designs furnished on application and all orders receive prompt attention.

CHURCH FURNITURE

Pews, Pulpit and Sunday School Furniture. Catalog on request.
T. W. ALEXANDER & SON,
Box 147. Waynesboro, Va.

Washington Cathedral

A Witness for Christ in the Capital of the Nation

♦ ♦ ♦

THE CHAPTER appeals to Churchmen throughout the country for gifts, large and small, to continue the work of building now proceeding, and to maintain its work, Missionary, Education, Charitable, for the benefit of the whole Church.

Chartered under Act of Congress.

Administered by a representative Board of Trustees of leading business men, Clergymen and Bishops.

Full information will be given by the Bishop of Washington, or the Dean, Cathedral Offices, Mount St. Alban, Washington, D. C., who will receive and acknowledge all contributions.

♦ ♦ ♦

Legal Title for Use in Making Wills:
The Protestant Episcopal Cathedral Foundation of the District of Columbia

VIRGINIA TRUST CO.

Richmond, Va.

THE SAFE EXECUTOR,

Was organized in 1892 to act as Executor-Guardian and Trustee.

Many prudent men and women in every section of the State have named this Company Executor and trustee in their wills.

Inquiries cordially invited—no cost and confidential.

Capital Stock	$ 1,000,000.00
Surplus earned	$ 1,500,000.00
Held in trust.....	$45,000,000.00

LITTLE TEA ROOM

SANDWICHES

Special Prices to

Clubs, Lodges and Paties

211 N. Jefferson Ran 3958

Richmond, Va.

XANTHINE

Will hereafter be sold in the new style bottle and package. Always best for the hair. Not a dye, but restores the color, promotes growth and prevents dandruff.

Price $1.00 at druggists, or sent prepaid by us.

XANTHINE CO., Richmond, Va.

FROM A SHUT-IN.

American Magazine	$2.50
American Boy	2.00
Cosmopolitan	3.00
Good Housekeeping	3.00
Nature Magazine	3.00
St. Nicholas for Boys and Girls ..	4.00
Delineator	1.00
Modern Priscilla	2.00
McCall's Magazine	1.00
Woman's Home Companion	1.00
Pictorial Review	1.00
Saturday Evening Post	2.00
Youth's Companion	2.00
Time	5.00

I take subscriptions for any magazine published, at publishers rates or less.

EDWARD P. BROXTON,
Keysville, Ga.

Thoughts For the Thoughtful

The smallest thing, well done, becomes artistic.—William Mathews.

"All real life," wrote Bishop Westcott, "is made powerful by sacrifice."

The Christian ideal is gloriously elusive. We reach the top of a hill only to find it a new horizon. Till the end we shall say with strengthening conviction, "Not that I have already attained . . . but I press on".

No one can really know human nature that does not know God.—Rev. Dr. Wm. Porkess.

When a man is sad on his own account it can usually be laid either to selfishness or to sin.

"While the Master says, 'Come and rest', He is sure also to say, 'Go and work'."

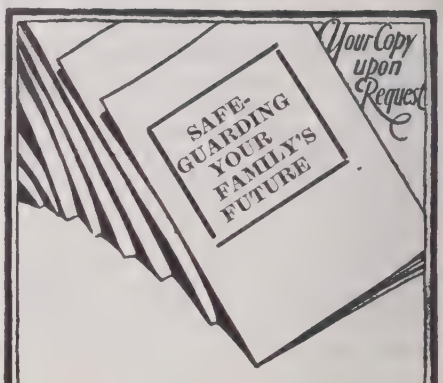
Were we more on the Mount with God our faces would shine more with men.—Leighton.

Our bravest men are often those of whom the world hears the least. Life to them is a constant struggle. They meet their obstacles every day and overcome them in silence.

Any man's fall in mature years can be traced to some fault he has always allowed in himself.

Regret was considered one of the forty-two deadly sins by the ancient Egyptians,, because it consumes the life and does no good.—George Ebers.

The world is rolling toward dawn, not night. Wickedness approaches its more certain and universal overthrow; righteousness its more certain and universal coronation.—Exchange.



We need a deeper personal devotion —prayer and Bible reading in the individual life, time for fellowship with Christ. Are our own lives good and honest lives? "For so is the will of God, that by well-doing we should put to silence the ignorance of foolish men."

While the cup of blessing may and often does run over, I doubt if the cup of suffering is ever more than filled to the brim.—George Macdonald.

The richest harvest that your soul can know
Is that it caused a brother man to grow
A greater, wiser, still more useful aid
To other men and all the bounties laid
By you on him be multiplied and live,
Inspiring all to work, and hope, and give.

—McQuilken.

Jesus' remedy for the weary world is just Himself. He still stands by the wayside of life, looking with pity and deep understanding at the toiling multitude. He sees their weariness. He sees them chafing and restless under a yoke that is too heavy for them to bear. And He offers them as a remedy Himself.—Rev. C. M. Campbell.

The American has just printed a booklet which gives authoritative information on the important subject of wills and modern methods of "Safeguarding Your Family's Future" (this is its title).

It will gladly mail you a copy, with no obligation on your part, upon request, as long as the supply lasts.

Kindly mention this paper.

AMERICAN
BANK AND TRUST COMPANY
Richmond, Virginia

TIDEWATER TALES

A book into which is gathered the folklore, traditions and history of Tidewater Virginia. Written in a delightful informal style by Prof. William C. Garnett.

The President of a College in South Carolina writes: "I have never read a work of this kind the style of which I have found more attractive, simple and yet elegant, interesting but never monotonous."

A prominent representative of a Publishing Co. writes: "This book will be read by our children and children's children. I could read 'A Fox Hunt 'Fo de War' every week."

A prominent attorney in Washington writes: " . . the charming description of the old homes, the history and traditions, and the true-to-life stories in local color, combined to delight me."

A professor in one of the Virginia Universities writes: "You have put posterity in your debt by presenting so skilfully to them characters that have passed to the beyond."

Price, $4.00 per copy. Order from WM. GARNETT, Dunnsville, Va.

SOUTHERN CHURCHMAN

Catholic for every truth of God; Protestant against every error of man.

EDITORIALS

Vol. 94. RICHMOND, VA., JULY 13, 1929. No. 28.

MOODS

Probably the shrewdest and most intensively accurate and comprehensive of all puns is the answer to, "Is life worth living?" "It depends on the liver."

That is double-barreled. It applies to the organ of the body, the condition of which we permit to influence so strongly our feelings and conduct and to us doing the living in our respective and widely variant ways.

"Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty," not only for nations, but for each of us individually. In bodies of people, tyrants and traitors plot for power and plunder and forces of destruction work busily, some secretly, others with insolent ostentation. In our own bodies, enclosing the marvelous and mysterious complexity and combination of spiritual, mental and physical, nerves, organs, senses, circulation system, emotions, thought, encountering ever changing contacts and conditions, the tyrants and traitors, the secret and open foes, threaten and assail continually and demand our vigilance, courage and energy to resist and defeat them.

The tyrants, traitors, destroyers, may invade the innermost and most sacred sanctuaries of our souls and there deceive, betray, pollute. They may transform and deform beautiful and noble purpose and high devotion and loyalty to hideous fanaticism, intolerance, hates, remorseless cruelty. They may—too often do—degrade the wise and right instinct of thrift to the mean grasping of avarice, the equally wise and right impulse to generosity, to wastefulness and negligence, proper prudence to abject cowardice, courage to misuse for oppression and promotion of bad causes, honest and stimulating ambitions to coarse greed and brutal disregard of all laws of God and honor. The speed and stealth with which the sweetest virtues may be exaggerated to absurdities and wrongs and misdirected to become abominable vices are proverbial. The disguises, strategems and instruments of the enemies of our souls and hopes and peace are innumerable and baffle detection.

We can not trace always the sources of the invasions. They may come with sudden, powerful rush or without warning, advancing, stealing on us little by little, through months or years. Neglecting the eternal, unrelaxing, unremitting vigilance, we wake, perhaps too late for rescue or deliverance, to fearful knowledge that we have fallen to be industrious slaves of Hell.

Watchfulness of our moods is the beginning of the vigilance that must be used by all of us, of all conditions of life, at all stages of life, from the beginning of consciousness of struggle of the warring powers within us to the ending of it with the parting sigh. The great majority of us avoid open, flagrant crime and offenses against the commendments, the decencies and the laws of the land. Certainly many of us, however, perhaps most of us, submit to be ruled by our moods. Very happy and much to be envied and admired are those whose prevailing moods are pleasant, kindly, heavenward. Fortunately, for the world, some such are everywhere. People who radiate cheer and sunshine and comfort in the most difficult circumstances. Nearly every harrowing story of direst disaster is illuminated and glorified by at least one gallant, splendid soul breathing encouragement, banishing fear, defeating despair. Unfortunately, they are far too few. It is a serious and ever present question for most of us to ask ourselves how we may be like them, whether we are not of the opposite dismal, cowardly, harmful extreme, habitually black, cloudy, stormy, or of the untrustworthy variable and shifting kind, unstable as water, changing from day to day or hour to hour. This last is the most troublesome and mischievous of all the types, kinds and developments of humanity. By care and experience we may train ourselves to allowances and endurance for the chronic pessimist, grouch and ill temper. The deacon mistaking his liver for his conscience and convinced that he and his congregation—or the congregation with himself excepted—are doomed to perpetual and dreadful punishment figures largely in humorous literature and the drama and is found here and there an actuality. We may adjust ourselves to him and his counterparts, of both sexes, in all the walks and relations of existence and activities. Probably eight tenths of us are submissive victims of varying, sudden, more or less surprising and startling moods and, therefore, responsible for an awful proportion of the sin and sorrow and suffering of humanity and it is we who must be eternally, constantly and continually vigilant if we intend to do more good than harm and evil, to be brave, helpful, useful, faithful servants of God, instead of the servile subjects of our own appetites, indulgences, whims, passions, caprices, moods.

The weather bureau, after years of laborious, intelligent, scientifically directed study, knows little of the origin of storms, heat waves, cold waves. We human people may be just as ignorant, mystified and baffled regarding the changes in our moods. The difference is that we can, if we will, control our own individual weather and keep it always fair and equable. Envying and admiring those who seem to do it naturally—by inheritance, perhaps; and no richer or sweeter heritage can be bequeathed; or by earnest striving and cultivation of habit—we may imitate them. All of us can, if we will, control and regulate and guard against our moods. There is vivid truth and sound philosophy for real life in the old fairy tale of the girl who in different moods found her mouth giving out alternately beautiful and precious jewels and loathesome, venomous reptiles. We can choose.

A writer narrates that on an occasion of crisis the peace of all Europe and the lives of many thousand men were endangered by a bit of unchewed, undigested bacon, eaten at breakfast and lodged wrong in the interior of a powerful king, jangling and agitating his nerves so that peace and mercy were distasteful. Every day of every year the unity and affection of families are imperilled or ruined and miseries, follies and sins are brought by yielding to untoward moods where happiness and love should be. The moods may be made by something misplaced in the many yards of tubing inside us, by something wrong in the much, and justly, blamed liver, by trivial or large provocations, defeats, disappointments, annoyances. Always vigilance, courageous self-control, loyalty to our duty to the Almighty and those who depend on us for brightening or darkening their days, fervent and humble plea to the Eternal Source of Strength and Purity, can guard and deliver us, save from all the perils of mental and physical disturbance. If that is not true, all our hope and faith is vain. If it be true, we know of sure defence and protection against insidious or violent assault against our sanctuaries and citadels by the mysterious, always eager and present enemies of our souls and welfare.

Nobody has studied enough to learn accurately the moods of humanity. The patter of the professional psychopaths, so persistently obtrusive now, usually is arrant nonsense, because the professionals themselves do not know how much of what they call psychology is liver, how much unpaid bills, unpalatable news in the newspapers, domestic clash or some of the innumerable troubles that afflict us. Each age and stage of life brings its special tendency to special moods. Shakespeare tells in humorous detail of the seven parts each man plays, but he deals with the fun and absurdities of it all, from infancy, with the senses not yet acquired, to decreptitude with most of the senses departed. Youth has its own moods, from the confused visions of career born with earliest actual experiences, through the romantic, the poetic, the cynical and sense of superiority periods. With age come temptations to selfishness and jealousies, bitterness toward youth and innovation, on one side; weakness and fear and surrender on the other. Each mood is its own luxury and gladness, or its own danger of curse and blight. For manhood and womanhood there can be no work more important or nobler, no better or higher service to God or finer demonstration of the spirit and meaning of Christianity than ceaseless vigilance on our moods and control and direction and government of them. In all our varied fortunes, conditions and situations the determinations between happiness and unhappiness, uselessness and hopelessness or usefulness and helpfulness is with us. We cannot escape it nor cloak it with cheap excuses. We are endowed with minds and will power and there is a God from whom to seek and with whom to find help. It is the same with the humblest and poorest, the stateliest and the most abundantly provided of us. None is so lowly as to escape the responsibility, none so high as to be above it. Milton, great as philosopher and poet, gives us in two lines a world of truth—

"The mind is its own place and in itself
Can make a Heaven of Hell, a Hell of Heaven."

Alfred B. Williams.

UNDOUBTEDLY HE IS COMING AGAIN

Arthur Mercer

Many years ago a certain vessel, named the Thetis, was cruising in the Mediterranean in search of a shoal or bank, said to exist beneath the treacherous waters.

The captain, after all his efforts to find the rock had failed, decided to give up the search, declaring "that the reported danger was all a dream".

An officer on board, being of a different opinion, went out by himself on an expedition afterwards into the same part, and there discovered a reef or rocks, which he reported to the admiralty, and it was inserted in the charts, the discoverer being rewarded with a high appointment.

The news came to the captain's ears; he could not believe in the discovery. He was a shrewd, clever, practical man, but unscientific, incredulous and obstinate.

"The whole thing is a falsehood," he exclaimed one day, adding: "If ever I have the keel of the Thetis under me again in those waters, if I don't carry her clean over where the charts marks a rock, call me a liar and no seaman."

Two years after, he was carrying, in the same vessel, the British Ambassador to Naples. One night, when the wind was blowing and the waves running high, he and the master went up to examine the chart on deck, by the light of a lantern, when suddenly the latter pointed out, very hurriedly, the sunken rock on the map.

"What!" exclaimed the old seaman. "Is this invention to meet me in the teeth again? No! I declared I would sail over the spot the first chance I had, and I'll do it."

He went down into the cabin, and merrily related the story of the company, saying, "Within five minutes we shall have crossed the spot". There was a pause—then taking out his watch, he said, "Oh! the time is past; we have gone over the wonderful reef".

Presently, however, a grating touch was felt on the ship's keel; then a sudden shock, a foundering! Through great exertions most of the crew were saved, but the captain would not survive his own folly—the last seen of him was on the dark hull of the Thetis, as the foam dashed around her bow and stern.

He perished! and why? He possessed a chart, a good chart, but he neglected its warning note. He would not believe!

We are living in an age of unbelief. Some go so far as to say we are actually in "the last days" spoken of in 2 Timothy—that the "perilous times" are upon us. Whether that be so or no, there is undoubtedly a spirit of unbelief abroad, and especially so perhaps with regard to our Lord's return. St. Peter in his second Epistle says, "Knowing this first, that there shall come in the last days scoffers . . . saying, Where is the promise of His coming"? I would venture, therefore, to throw out a few thoughts in regard to the Second Coming of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, for which so many are eagerly watching.

Far away back in history certain important words were spoken. They will be found in Gen. 3:15, 22:18, 26:4 and 49:10—you can look them up at your leisure. They pointed to Some One who was coming to this earth. At last He came. We read, "Christ Jesus came into the world" (1 Tim. 1:15).

After finishing His work, "He was taken up", Acts 1:9. But before He went He said something very important—you will find it in St. John 14:3, "I will come again", and in the next to last verse, in the last chapter of the Bible we read, "Surely I come quickly". So that one thing is very clear, and that is that Christ is coming again.

Possibly you will at once look up and say, "Jesus Christ coming again?—but when"? A most important question, and one that has been repeatedly asked, and has never yet had a answer.

Much harm has been done by those who have presumed to fix dates. Their dates have come and gone and nothing has happened. Those who try to fix the day or the hour of His Advent, fly in the very face of Scripture, they are endeavoring to know "the secret things which belong unto the Lord" alone. Deut. 29:29. Indeed, Christ says in St. Mark 13:32, "Of that day and that hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels which are in heaven, neither the Son, but the Father".

Is the truth that our Lord Jesus Christ is coming again to be found in God's Word and if so, is it often referred to?

God has predicted it in His Word, and it is our bounden duty to search out as far as possible all that God has been pleased to reveal in connection therewith.

May we therefore put our thoughts in connection with Christ's return under four heads:

First—"What our orders are."
Second—"What our duty is."
Third—"What our attitude should be."
Fourth—"What our feelings should be."

First—"What our orders are." If we turn to the thirteenth chapter of St. Mark, we shall find in verses 32 to 37 a "day" and an "hour" referred to, with a reiterated command to "watch"! But of that day and that hour knoweth no man, not the angels which are in heaven, neither the Son, but the Father. Take ye heed, watch and pray, for ye know not when the time is. For the Son of Man is as a man taking a far journey, who left his house, and gave authority to his servants, and to every man his work, and commanded the porter to watch. Watch ye, therefore; for ye know not when the master of the house cometh, at even or at midnight, or at the cock-crowing, or in the morning; lest coming suddenly he find you sleeping. And what I say unto you, I say unto all, watch.

Again, in St. Matthew 25, after that searching story of the Ten Virgins, Christ says quietly, solemnly and in warning tones—"Watch, therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of Man cometh."

In business affairs many a successful man can look back to a day or an hour in his career when, on account of his being ready, and prepared to respond to a certain call or opportunity placed within his reach, he has leapt forward at a bound, attaining the object of his ambitions.

One day Rothschild, the rich merchant of Frankfort, interviewed one of the officials in his employ, telling him that he was thinking of starting a business in the United States, at the same time asking him how much time he would require before he could sail for San Francisco, if he were appointed to undertake the work.

The man thought a long while and then said, "Ten days".

"Very well," said Rothschild, "if I decide to send you, I will let you know."

He then called another man, making the same inquiry of him.

"I would need three days," was the reply.

A third man was called, who in answer to the same question said he would be ready to sail at once. "Good," said Rothschild, "from today you may consider yourself as a partner in our new firm in San Francisco.

This man was Julius May, who became one of San Francisco's richest men. His readiness to respond to his employer's invitation, and to depart at a moment's notice, was the beginning of his success. The critical hour of his life had arrived, and had found him on the alert—ready!

Was ever a keener watch kept in earthly affairs than on board the Cruiser H. M. S. Birmingham on Sunday, August 9, 1914, when a number of periscopes were seen to be silently but swiftly moving through the water, indicating that a flotilla of German submarines were about to make a bold attack on a portion of our fleet in the North Sea? Which of us was not thrilled as we read the account how, being in a complete state of preparedness, and keenly on the alert, the attack was steadily met, the nearest submarine, U-15, being sunk and the rest disappearing as fast as they could.

The orders to the fleet were very clear; they were to watch. And our orders, too, are "Watching"!

Second: "What our duty is." We find this in the fifth chapter of St. John, and the thirty-ninth verse. Here is a command—"Search the Scriptures," and one which should we disobey, we do so at our peril, and to our eternal loss.

Commands given by those in authority cannot be easily disregarded, and if disobeyed they may bring about disastrous results.

Frederick the Great, anxious on one occasion to deceive the enemy as to his position, gave orders that there should be no lights throughout the camp. Towards midnight, while patrolling the ground, doubtless with a view to making perfectly sure that such an all-important order was being carried out to the letter, he saw a faint glimmer in the distance. Moving noiselessly in the direction, and coming up to the tent, he suddenly drew aside the canvas, revealing a young officer who had only shortly joined the army.

In response to the stern inquiry as to what he was doing, the young officer explained that he had lighted the taper, for a few moments only, in order to write a short line to his newly-married wife.

"Finish your letter, sir," said the stern disciplinarian, "and add that you are to be shot tomorrow for disobedience to orders." Early the next morning the sentence was accordingly carried out.

Earthly duties may not be trifled with—how much less duties that may have far-reaching results in the spiritual realm.

Some one has pointed out that in the two hundred and sixty chapters of the New Testament there are some three hundred references to Christ's return. Our duty in this matter therefore seems to be quite clear, namely—"Studying."

Third: "What our attitude should be." If you will turn to Titus, the second chapter, and the eleventh to the fourteenth verses, you will find these words, "For the grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared to all men. Teaching us that, denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly righteously and godly in this present world, looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ; Who gave Himself for us, that He might redeem us from all iniquity." So that our attitude, according to this, should be—"Looking."

Fourth: "What our feelings should be." To find that out we must turn to one more text, this time to 2 Tim. 4:7 and 8, two striking verses where St. Paul is found recounting his experiences: He says, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith: Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but unto all them that love His appearing." It is clear, therefore, that our feelings should be—"Loving". Are they? Should we be really glad if Jesus Christ returned, say, tonight? Would He find us ready?

"Watching" — "Studying" — "Looking" — "Loving." Is that how we are found today? Believing or unbelieving?

Some years ago now a certain passenger was crossing the Atlantic in the Scotia, one of the largest and finest steamers of that time. From her size and strength she looked like a floating castle, fitted to defy the utmost fury of winds and waves.

The vessel had reached mid-ocean, and was hundreds of miles from the nearest land, and out of the ordinary track of vessels. The night was pitch dark, though calm and still. The sea as smooth as a millpond, and there was hardly wind enough to raise a ripple, or to move the mist which hung around the ship. The captain, having no duties on deck requiring his attention, had joined the party in the cabin, where the usual amusements on board ship were going on. It was noticed that there was a shade of anxiety upon his face. He often went to consult the thermometer, which hung just outside the cabin, and then went on deck for a few minutes.

The passenger above referred to had his curiosity aroused, and at length followed him, and to his surprise found that the ship was only going at half-speed, and he heard the captain give orders to shut off steam and go "dead slow". This seemed so strange an order that he ventured to ask the reason. The captain's reply was short and to the point. "The thermometer," said he, "has been sinking steadily all the evening, and within the last quarter of an hour has been falling so rapidly that there must be a large quantity of floating ice near us, and I should be a fool to risk the loss of the ship and all on board just to save a few hours on the voyage."

Before midnight those on board had reason to be thankful for their captain's prudence. They were surrounded by immense masses of floating ice, which rose like mountains on every side. Had the good shop struck upon one of them whilst going at "full speed", even the Scotia would have been shivered to atoms, and probably every soul on board would have perished.

Here was danger, real, imminent and terrible, though the existence of it could only be known beforehand by faith in the instrument. None of those on board had seen or could see those icebergs till they were close upon the ship and too late to do anything to save themselves from being wrecked upon them. The thermometer alone gave warning of their approach, the captain believed the warning and saved himself and ship, passengers and crew, from the disaster which would otherwise almost certainly have overtaken them.

May you and I so believe God's Word and the warnings contained therein, that coming events may not find us unprepared.

It Works Wonders.

Some years ago, says the Public Leader, a lady, who tells the story herself, went to consult a famous physician about her health. She was a woman of nervous temperament, whose troubles—and she had many—had worried and excited her to such a pitch that the strain threatened her physical strength and even her reason. She gave the doctor a list of her symptoms, and answered the questions, only to be astonished at the brief prescription: "Madam, what you need is to read the Bible more."

"But, doctor," began the bewildered patient. "Go home and read your Bible an hour a day," the great man reiterated, with kindly authority. "Then come back to me a month from today." And he bowed her out without a possibility of further protest. At first his patient was inclined to be angry. Then she reflected that, at least, the prescription was not an expensive one. Besides, it certainly had been a long time since she had read the Bible regularly, she reflected with a pang of conscience. Worldly cares had crowded out her prayer and Bible study for years, and though she would have resented being called an irreligious woman, she had undoubtedly become a most careless Christian. She went home and set herself conscientiously to try the physician's remedy. In one month she went back to his office.

"Well," he said, smiling, as he looked at her face, "I see you are an obedient patient, and have taken my prescription faithfully. Do you feel as if you needed any other medicine now?"

"No, doctor, I feel like a different person. But how did you know this was just what I needed?" For answer, the famous physician turned to his desk. There worn and marked lay an open Bible. "Madam," he said, with deep earnestness, "if I were to omit my daily reading of this Book I should lose my greatest source of strength and skill. I never go to an operation without reading my Bible.

"I never attend a distressing case without finding help in its pages. Your case called not for medicine, but for source of peace and strength outside your own mind, and I showed you my own prescription. I knew it would cure."

"Yes, I confess, doctor," said the patient, "that I came very near not taking it."

"Very few are willing to try it, I find," said the physician, smiling again. "But there are many, many cases in my practice where, if tried, it would work wonders.

This is a true story.

The physician has died, but his prescription remains. It will do no one any harm to try it.

FAVORITE SCRIPTURE VERSES

(In this space each week will appear a favorite passage of Scripture as sent in by a different reader. Every one is, therefore, invited to send us their favorite verse. It is suggested that all who can, join with the rest of us in committing to memory the verse which so appears here each week, including its location in the Holy Book; and in due time your memory chest will be laden with choice eternal treasures, indeed—"Thy word have I hid in my heart, that I might not sin against thee," Ps. 119:11.)

This week the following verse was submitted by Mrs. Charles H. Upham, Burnt Hills, N. Y.:

"My people shall be satisfied with my goodness." Jer. 3:31.

Who will send one from the far-away places as well as very near us?

Don't Kill It---You Need It

W. E. Shepard.

"Redeeming the time, because the days are evil." Ephe. 5:116.

I met a man at a seaside resort. He said, "I was just killing time". How his words pierced me! I had heard the expression many times before, but this time it got hold of me. Poor innocent Time! What had it done that it should be killed? Is it such a criminal that one should murder it on the spot?

Rather let us recognize time in its true light—a beneficent friend. Then why kill such a friend? It has stuck closer than a brother, lo, these many years. Even to separate it from one's company would be the calamity of life. When time ends something else begins, which cannot be measured by moments or millenniums.

To kill time is a crime against one's best interests. Perhaps all too soon the time-murderer will be run down by the sleuth hounds of justice; he will be headed off, cornered up, captured, convicted and sentenced to a life of wasted opportunities. Then time will have its revenge; its slayer will spend his days in berating himself for the precious years wasted.

Those who have made a success in life are they who put a proper estimate upon this important asset. To rate time properly will enable one to put the right evaluation upon other necessary factors in life. To despise time is to despise life itself. Prodigality, vagrancy and a final cipher in humanity will be the result of too much killing of time.

Fifteen minutes of physical exercise daily on arising will do wonders for the body. Thirty minutes of prayer every morning will do wonders for the soul. Fifteen minutes daily will enable one to read the Bible through in a year. What an education that would be! Yet how many waste an hour every day!

It is said of Daniel Webster that when he was a child he registered a vow never to idle away a moment that could be devoted to study. One writer is glad there is a life beyond this, where he will have time enough to accomplish the work which he cannot hope to finish in this world.

Life is short—just a span from the cradle to the grave—just "a vapor that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away".

It is said of a certain noted author that he never wastes a moment of his time. As he rides on the train he writes upon a portfolio resting in his lap. He accomplishes several times what the average man does by husbanding his energy and minutely organizing his time. One day he was asked a certain question and replied by saying, "Let us walk over to the cemetery and I will explain". He pointed to a tombstone on which were these words: "JANE EVERSLEY. Born 1805. Died 1895. Her time was short." Then said he: "I decided after seeing this inscription that if it could truly be stated of any one who had lived to be ninety years old, that her time was short, then this was precisely the climate and environment for me." In replying to the wonderful works he had accomplished, he said: "They are the result of drudgery, persevered in every day for twenty-five years. Anybody can get my skill for the same price." He declared that ninety-nine per cent of him was just like everybody else. By appreciating the value of time, and carefully employing his moments to enable him to reach his goal, he became a noted author. And what helped him to gain that end was his freedom from bad habits. He drank no intoxicants, not even taking tea or coffee. He never smoked and never swore.

Great men we have read about are not those who frittered away the golden moments of life. There may be exceptions in certain individuals, who, earlier in life, missed the mark and wasted their time, only to catch themselves later on and see their folly. But how carefully and scrupulously they employed their remaining days to reach the desired end, yet always with the regret that their former years had been so ruthlessly wasted and their time so cruelly killed.

To the careless observer of time it would really be an epoch in life to receive some jolt that would awaken him from his stupor and start him on the road to success, by giving him the proper appreciation of a moment of time.

"I have only just a minute,
Just sixty seconds in it;
Forced upon me—can't refuse it,
Didn't seek it, didn't choose it,
I must suffer if I lose it,
Give account if I abuse it.
Just a tiny little minute;
But Eternity is in it."

HERE A LITTLE---THERE A LITTLE

Rev. C. E. Lacas

Church of the Holy Communion, Buffalo, N. Y.

Isa. 28:10: "Here a little and there a little".

I would like to speak to you this morning concerning the Revised Prayer Book which will shortly be ready for distribution.

In so doing it is necessary for me to deal with the past history of what is known today as Anglo-Catholicism, as the Revised Prayer Book is merely one further step in the ever onward march of that sect within our ranks which through the years has been called by various names, but which in purpose and spirit is one and the same movement.

The Oxford Tractarians, Pussyites, High Churchmen, Anglo-Catholics are the several titles by which this sect has been known to its opponents. I mention them that you may the easier identify this movement, by whatever name it may be called, as one and the same movement.

Many Episcopalians have thought of the High Church or Anglo-Catholic movement as merely a ritualistic movement devoid of any special doctrinal significance. Such is not the case.

The Anglo-Catholic is not a ritualist for the rituals sake. It is a sound pedagogical principle that the most effective way to teach is through the "eye-gate". Therefore ornaments, vestments, ritual—are used for a specific purpose, i. e., to teach the doctrines of Anglo-Catholicism.

"It is the mass that matters" is a phrase that might well be termed the battle cry of that sect. They love the ritual because it is an integral part of the mass.

They use the Special Vestments because of their association with the mass.

They advocated certain additions to the Communion Office, including the addition of Prayers for the Departed, because the added items are necessary and essential to the mass.

At the beginning of the nineteenth century several young clergymen, mostly associated with Oriel College, Oxford, Eng., inaugurated the "Oxford Movement, which was the birth of Anglo-Catholicism.

One of the most brilliant, popular and widely-known leader of this new sect was John Henry Newman, then a clergyman in the Church of England, but who later went to Rome, finally becoming a Cardinal in that Church.

Several hundred clergy and laymen followed him. They no doubt recognized that the Roman Church was their logical spiritual haven, as they taught those doctrines of the Medieval Church which that Church had retained, but which the Church of England had repudiated. That they were earnest and sincere in respect to these matters no one questions.

In spite of the defection of Newman and the withdrawal of his followers, the movement persisted and has continued to gain headway both in the Church of England and the Protestant Episcopal Church in America. The full signifi- cance of the movement is becoming more apparent with each passing year.

In our own, Protestant Episcopal Church, the Order of the Holy Cross has been one of the most ardent and active advocates of Anglo-Catholicism.

Following the example of their English contemporaries, the Order of the Holy Cross has issued through the years a series of tracts purporting to teach the doctrines of the Episcopal Church.

Some of the doctrines which they have so industriously propagated as "doctrines of the Episcopal Church" have been those very doctrines against which the Thirty-Nine Articles most emphatically protest.

The avowed purpose of this Order is to teach "the whole catholic faith". That you may the better understand what the term 'the whole catholic faith" means to an Anglo-Catholic I quote from an open letter written by Rev. John A. Staunton to Bishop Seaman in August, 1926—

> "the last General Convention (1925) selected to be its Bishop of Liberia a priest belonging to that Order of the Holy Cross which for half a century has taught the whole catholic faith and largely been instrumental in bringing back THE MASS, Confession, Prayers for the Dead, Invocation of Saints, the Hail Mary, and the use of the Rosary; indeed, everything which pertains to the practice of the Catholic religion".

A perusal of their tracts indicates the Order of the Holy Cross has also taught as "doctrines of the Episcopal Church" the following additional "catholic doctrines":

Purgatory.
Transsubstantiation.
The Use of Holy Water.
"The Sign of the Cross."
"The Use of the Crucifix."
"The Reservation of the Sacrament."

In other words, the Anglo-Catholic conception of "the whole catholic faith" is to reincorporate into the doctrines and worship of the Protestant Episcopal Church everything which today can be found in the Roman Catholic Church.

In so doing they necessarily, by their actions, if not verbally, assert that this Church has been wrong—that this Church has erred to the extent that we discarded the doctrines and customs which the Roman Church still retains.

So believing and so teaching, the Anglo-Catholics have reintroduced

(a) Church Furniture and Ornaments.
(b) Vestments and Ritual.
(c) Customs and Practices.

which our forefathers discarded because of their association with The Mass, Transsubstantiation and other Roman doctrines.

With the return of these once discarded practices, customs and furnishings the Romish doctrines previously associated with them are being openly taught.

Slowly, but surely, and with ever-increasing momentum, the character of the Protestant Episcopal Church is being transformed. I quote again from the letter of Rev. John A. Staunton to Bishop Seaman—

> "The truth is—and let us not blink it—that all Catholic doctrines may be, and are, propagated in a "Church" commonly believed to be "Protestant"; slowly out-and-out Catholic propaganda is clearing up the situation. When, at length, the Catholic religion is believed in and practiced by all of our church people, we may confidently expect that the misleading and ephemeral title, "Protestant Episcopal", will slough off without effort and disappear."

That is the ultimate aim of the Anglo-Catholic movement, as stated by one of them, viz., the destruction of the Protestant character of our Church and the changing of its name—a complete repudiation of the Reformation—a return to Rome.

That has been the definite goal of the movement since its inception. With infinite patience, "line upon line, precept upon precept, here a little and there a little", slowly but surely it presses on to the realization of its ideal.

Every change in vestments, church furniture, ornaments or ritual has been made with this one definite object in view—the ultimate restoral of the "whole catholic faith".

In 1913 General Convention appointed a commission to consider and recommend changes in the Prayer Book. In the fall of 1925 General Convention approved further changes along the same line. If it is borne in mind that The Mass always includes such prayers and that to the Anglo-Catholic, "it is The Mass that matters", the full import of these additions will become apparent.

Certain changes in the Communion Office, which on the surface may seem small and unimportant, will take on due significance if you will remember every time you see the new office that "it is The Mass that matters".

Yes, brethren, the Revised Prayer Book which will shortly come from the press is merely one further step in the ever onward march of Anglo-Catholicism whose ultimate aim is the destruction of the Protestant character of this Church to which you and I belong. You can accept this new Book, you can use it, you can say the changes are too small, too insignificant to worry about. Nevertheless,

Big oaks from little acorns grow.

Your city, one of the largest of our Southland today, began in a small way. The great institutions of our land—financial, social, religious—all began in a small way.

Consider the Sunday school, the Salvation Army, the Y. M. C. A.—they all began in a very small way. No one ever dreamed in the beginning that they would encompass the world as they do today.

So with Anglo-Catholicism. A century ago a small group began to sow the seed and it grew. Men of vision warned their constituency of the ultimate result of these small innovations, but the warning was not heeded.

Not long ago a beautiful old ante-bellum home was destroyed by fire. Some workmen in a plant nearby noticed some time before the blaze came to view what appeared to be mere sparks among the trees of the grove in which the home was located. They watched it for awhile, but finally concluded the matter was too small to investigate. Sparks—not worth taking seriously, no use to raise the alarm. But after awhile the sparks which no one took serious notice of became a mighty flame that destroyed that home.

Sparks—"small things"—too small to take seriously, say many Episcopalians today. Even as their fathers said in their day when those innovations began in a small way, so their children say today about those changes in the Prayer Book. Only "small" changes—nothing of real importance.

Nevertheless, Anglo-Catholicism from its inception till now has fed upon small things.

"Here a little and there a little". With infinite patience, slowly but surely Anglo-Catholicism works with this one definite goal in mind—the ultimate destruction of the Protestant character of the Episcopal Church.

Illustrative of the importance of small items, I ask that you consider Hymn 5, in the New Hymnal, one line of which now reads—"Grant them Thine eternal rest."

It formerly read—"Grant us Thine eternal rest."

A very small change indeed, the short word us changed to the word them. Very, very small. Does that small change convey any significance to you. Well, it means a great deal to the Anglo-Catholic who builds great dostrines on small changes like that. I quote from Rev. S. C. Hughson, of the Order of the Holy Cross:

> "The American Church has now inserted definite prayers for the dead in her official worship. In the New Hymnal occurs the ancient prayer, 'Grant them Thine eternal rest'."

Only one little word—yet that small change teaches a new doctrine—the pronoun them makes the hymn a prayer for the dead. The pronoun us makes that same hymn a prayer for the living 'Here a little and there "a little".

Now you can accept the Revised Prayer Book, without protest, but remember these "little changes" that mean nothing to you, for another link in the chain of Anglo-Catholicism and the elect of that sect will build successfully upon the foundations thus laid all doctrines essential to his conception of "the whole catholic faith".

"Small things". That is why I made this study. The thought kept recurring—Why should they make such small changes? If they were of no importance, but no meaning—

Why Were They Made? ? ?

Going back some four hundred years, I traced step by step the changes made in the Communion Office at the time of the Reformation and those made since then. I examined some nine Prayer Books in use during that period. Taking the Revised Book item by item, I compared it with all that preceded it.

For lack of time I cannot give you in detail the result of this study. I will, however, do two things—first, point out several minor changes—small things that may be termed "signs of the times"—then consider two items of greater moment.

The great objective of the Anglo-Catholic is to restore "The Mass" as the chief service of public worship, and to bring back all practices and doctrines associated with The Mass. If you will ever keep that thought in mind I believe you will soon realize that even the smallest change is freighted with meaning to that sect.

Here and there in the Communion Office, a phrase, a rubric, a word, a response, a transposition—and they all seem so small—and if your rector is conservative the new service will seem very much like the old, and so it will be. Nevertheless, whenever you read that new service I want you to remember "it is The Mass that matters". The Anglo-Catholic does not expect to change you older people, but he is going to change your children, and unless you and your children do change you will eventually feel exceedingly uncomfortable in this Church.

On page 22 this rubric has been added—

> "Here may be sung a Hymn or Anthem."

The purpose of this new rubric is to authorize the singing of a hymn or anthem immediately after the Epistle is read.

None of the Prayer Books from 1549 contains such authority. But in the latest Roman Mass I found this rubric—

'The priest next reads the Epistle—with the Gradual, and if there be any, the Tract or Sequence.

"At solemn high Mass the Epistle is sung by the subdeacon, the choir afterwards singing the Gradual."

Brief as it is, this new rubric gives the necessary authority to sing The Gradual, or The Tract and The Sequence, after the Epistle, whenever the Anglo-Catholic desires to borrow from The Missal of another Church. What is The Gradual! Merely an anthem, that's all. Nothing so awful about it.

But The Gradual is sung or said in The Mass, and "It is The Mass that matters", hence this small change.

Another "small item" is this—

"And after the Gospel may be said,
PRAISE BE TO THEE, O CHRIST."

The phrase is innocent enough. It has no significance for you. I direct attention thereto merely because I could not find it in any Prayer Book to which I had access. However, in the Roman Mass I found this—

"The Gospel ended, the acolyte answers:
PRAISE BE TO THEE, O CHRIST."

Just a "sign of the times". To the uninitiated it is devoid of meaning, but to the Anglo-Catholic it is very precious because it is in The Mass. "Here a little and there a little, for "it is The Mass that matters".

On page 228 a revised rubric instructs the priest to "offer" the Bread and Wine before placing on the Lord's Table.

Every time you read that revised rubric I want you to remember the Eucharistic Elements are always offered in The Mass. The Reformers abolished the practice along with others associated with Transsubstantiation and The Mass.

Only one word added—a small thing—but it reintroduces a practice associated with doctrines against which the Thirty-Nine Articles protest.

There are other small changes. They will mean nothing to you, but the Anglo-Catholic realizes exactly what they mean—they are found in The Mass and to him "it is The Mass that matters". Slowly but surely the objective is being attained, and always through the process of "here a little and there a little". (To be continued)

HISTORIC ABBEY AT WESTMINSTER

Origin of Shrine Long a Burial Place of Chiefs and Kings Is Shrouded in Tradition.

Begun by St. Millitus.

Centuries Later Edward the Confessor Restored the Church in Style of Grandeur.

The following interesting account of the building of the Abbey through the centuries with all the old legends and traditions handed down from the days before even London was, appeared recently in the New York Times:

"London existed as a British city before the Romans landed under Julius Caesar, and it was a prosperous trading city under the Roman rule, says Thomas Hannon, a writer in the Edinburgh Scotsman, adding that if the words of Tertullian, writing about 200, can be taken literally, there were Christians in Britain in his day. There were certainly three British Bishops at the Council of Arles in 314.

"As the Scotsman, or for that matter the Englishman, walks along Victoria Street in the ancient City of Westminster," continues the writer, "traverses the Abbey precincts, views the Houses of Parliament and crosses Westminster Bridge, it is difficult to realize that in those Roman days London was about seven miles away, and that Westminster was a marshy island lying in a great bend of the River Thames as it flows north. The name of the island as we have it is Thorn-ey, but that is Saxon, the second syllable meaning island, and perhaps being akin to the first letter and syllable of Iona.

"Some have said that a church existed on Thorn-ey in the Roman times; and since we know that the martyrdom of St. Alban took place about the year 304 somewhat further north, it is not unlikely. If so, it was a kind of prophecy or 'predestination' of our great Imperial Fane. William of Malmesbury, without referring to such a British church, which must have been a temporary structure, says that St. Mellitus began the Abbey as a church. The Gregorian Mission, under Augustine, the priest-monk, had arrived in Kent in 597, supported by Bertha, the Christian wife of Ethelbert the heathen king; and Kent soon accepted the Gospel.

A Legend of St. Peter.

"Mellitus was the leader of the second band of missionaries sent by Gregory the Great, and arrived in England in 601. He was to consecrate the church on Thorn-ey, which he built. But, according to a legend, St. Peter did it himself.

"Lambeth is on the opposite side of the river from Westminster, and on the night before the day fixed for the consecration a boatman was hailed by a stranger priest on the Lambeth side. The boatman took the priest across and awaited his return. He soon saw the church brilliantly lighted, and heard the singing of angels; while the priest on returning told him that he was St. Peter, that he had consecrated the church, and that he was to convey the message to Mellitus next morning. So that church in its various structures has always been St. Peter's.

"Mellitus, the first Bishop of London of the Anglo-Saxon Church, was soon driven out of his Diocese by a revival of heathenism, and went to Gaul, whence he returned into Kent, and became the third Archbishop of Canterbury, dying in 624.

"From Mellitus to Edward the Confessor is a long step in time. Offa and Edgar are said to have restored the church, but there is nothing reliable until the building or restoration under the Confessor, who is regarded as historically the real founder of the Abbey. He had made a vow of a pilgrimage to Rome, had been unable to carry out his intention, and built a great church instead. It was the first church in England built in the Norman style, and the dedication of it was an occasion for a gathering of nobles and clergy from far and near, but the dedication had to be hurried on because of the King's illness on Christmas Eve. It took place just in time for his burial in the church on January 6.

"The dedication and the burial are notable—the former marking the church as a national institution, and the latter as making the national institution a burial place of the great ones of the kingdom. And so it has continued from that year, 1066, until the present generation. It was the Confessor's building which first received the name of the 'West Minster'. His tomb was opened thirty-six years afterward by the Abbot Gilbert, who found the body in perfect preservation.

A Temple of Apollo.

"William Camden, the historian of the reign of James VI, has a great deal of information about the Abbey in a small space in his Britannia. Camden was headmaster of Westminster School, and therefore specially interested in the history of the Abbey. He gives the tradition that a temple of Apollo once stood on the site, and that it was thrown down by an earthquake in the reign of Antoninus Pius—that is, before the year 161; and that Sebert built the church to St. Peter out of the ruins of the temple. He states that this church was destroyed by the Danes and rebuilt by St. Dunstan, who was successively Bishop of London and Archbishop of Canterbury, dying in 988. It was this church, given by Dunstan to the Benedictines, that the Confessor worked into a great building as recorded above.

"After the Confessor's work the next stage is found in the reign of Henry III, who began his work at the Lady Chapel on Whitsun Eve in 1221, laying the foundation stone in person. Camden's actual words, as translated from the Latin, are—'K. Henry the third pulled down this fabric in Edward's and erected a new one of curious workmanship, supported by several rows of marble pillars and leaded over, which was fifty years in building.' King Henry III reigned fifty-six years, and seems to have been busy all the time adding to the glory of the church.

The Scottish Stone of Destiny.

"The next distinct stage is that of the reign of Henry VII, but in the intervening period one incident especially appeals to Scotland. It is that of the year 1296, when King Edward I—'Malleus Scotorum', the 'hammer of the Scots'—carried the Lia Fail or 'Stone of Destiny' from Scotland and placed it in the Abbey, where it still forms part of the Coronation Chair. We need not grudge it to the Abbey now, for Scottish sovereigns are throned upon it, fulfilling ancient prophecy.

"According to Camden, Henry VII, 'for the burial of himself and his children, added to the east part of it a chapel of most neat and admirable contrivance', of which he laid the foundation on January 24, 1502, the 'whole charge amounting to no less than 14,000 pounds sterling'—an immese sum in that day. The Lady Chapel, built by Henry III, and an adjoining tavern known as 'The White Rose', were pulled down to give place to this addition.

'Camden, who died in 1529, gives a list of royal burials in the Abbey up to his time—Sebert, the East Saxon king; Harold, son of King Canute; Edward the Confessor and his Queen Editha; Maud, wife of Henry I, and daughter of the Scottish King Malcolm Canmore; Henry III; Edward I, his son and his wife, Eleanor; Edward III and his wife

Philippa of Hainault; Richard II and Ann, his wife, sister of the Emperor Wenceslas; Henry V and his wife, Catherine; Anne, wife of Richard III and daughter of the Earl of Warwick; Henry VII, his wife, Elizabeth, and his mother, Margaret, Countess of Richmond; Edward VI, Anne of Cleves, fourth wife of Henry VIII; Queen Mary and our late most sincere Lady Queen Elizabeth of blessed memory, the darling of England."

Book Reviews

JESUS ON SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS. By Shailer Mathews. The MacMillan Co., New York, N. Y. Price $1.50.

It has become a popular thing among some to give us a picture of Christ with as little reference as possible to the New Testament portrait. This book is written by one who has been a leader in that line, and as far as we can learn from its pages his attitude is still the same. The attempt is made to present a glorified social reformer who tries to turn the tide of revolution in his day to a more spiritual form of revolution, and to replace the hatred and passion of the oppressed with the ideals of good will and brotherhood.

The book is evidently intended to present a Jesus who is the way out of the present unrest, and to persuade revolutionists to accept a program of love and betterment in place of the hatred and discord that many are spreading. The Dean is woefully oblivious to the fact that the revolutionary spirit that is stirring in some places is the direct and logical outcome of the doctrine that he himself has been busy inculcating for many years. He does not like the fruit of his own teachings, and so instead of the fruit of revolutionary discord that is sure to attend the downfall of New Testament Christianity, he would like to have it replaced by love and brotherhood.

Love and brotherhood, however, come only from the worship of the New Testament Christ. That figure the Dean repudiates. His atonement is cast into the discard, His resurrection is never mentioned, all the central facts of the Good News that give the power from which Christian love arise have no place in the Dean's mind. If we are to have the fruit we must have the root. Love and brotherhood are not engendered by the contemplation of a social reformer who never existed save in the mind of a writer like this one. They are the fruit that results in the lives of those who have known Christ and "the power of His Resurrection".

Frank Cox.

SPANISH SUMMER. By George Craig Stewart. Cloth. Pp. 118. Price $2.50. Published by the Morehouse Publishing Co., Milwaukee, Wis.

Dr. Stewart knows how to travel and how to travel best to see the most. This volume is a charming delineation of sights, sensations and reminders accruing in a trip to that fascinating land of Moor and peasant, grandee and beggar, Spain, immortalized by Irving, and yet, emergent into modern life with vital awakenings. No country is more strangely commingled with the freightage of an illustrious past and the vibrant pulsations of present-day aspirations. This contribution is delightfully written and superbly illustrated. Being a library edition, it is fitting for gift-making, say to the bride on her honeymoon, or to the active American, who in his flittings about the country needs the suggestion of easy transition in scene and thought. For here are history, adventure, appeal to a glorious past and the warming allurement of a newly found life in this ancient Commonwealth.

Kenneth Mackenzie.

Letters to the Editor

In this Department the Editor will at all times welcome communications expressing opinions on the various topics which are engaging the attention of the Church. But the Editor will not hold himself responsible for such opinions.

No "Letters to the Editor" will appear in our columns except those coming to us signed by writer.

MAJOR GENERAL J. C. HOOKS,
Commander Virginia Division, Forrest's Cavalry Corps, U. C. V.
New Market, Va., July 5, 1929.

Mr. Editor:

I am inclosing check for three dollars, the amount of my subscription to your excellent paper for 1929-1930. I have been a little slow in making this remittance because of the extreme illness of my wife, who for months has been at death's door. My expense has consequently been very heavy. I regard the Southern Churchman one of the soundest, most evangelical, Christian papers that is published in the world today. I have seen nothing in it that I could not endorse. There is not even a trace of Modernism in it. Any one looking for old-time religion, such as Jesus and His apostles preached, he will certainly find it in the Southern Churchman. I bid you Godspeed in your glorious work and know that you are loyal to the Great Head of the Church.

J. C. Hooks,
Pastor M. E. Church, South, New Market, Va.

Mr. Editor:

Can you give me the address of Dr. Landon C. Bell, who delivered the fine address on Robert E. Lee. I would appreciate it if you would. I enjoy every issue of your paper, and it is such a spiritual and educational paper in every way.

Oliver Orr.

Macon, Ga.

Church Intelligence

Different Views of "Dick" Sheppard, the New Dean of Canterbury.

The Church Times comments as follows on the appointment of the Rev. H. R. L. ("Dick") Sheppard as Dean of Canterbury:

"The Rev. H. R. L. Sheppard is one of the most attractive, one of the most devoted, one of the most gifted, and one of the most exasperating priests in the Church of England. His success at St. Martin's was the result of fine sympathy and understanding and magnificent eagerness to serve. Hundreds of men and women of all types and classes, hitherto untouched by religion, were attracted by Mr. Sheppard's sincerity, and, during the war and the years that followed, St. Martin's became an invaluable House of Prayer. The Catholic Churchman was compelled to regret Mr. Sheppard's indifference to tradition and the accepted forms of Catholic worship, and to regret still more his tendency, on occasion, to "tickle the groundlings" with mere "stunts". But for the man and his work Catholics, as well as Protestants, have the deepest admiration, and there was the sincerest regret all through the Church when ill-health brought his incumbency to an end. Now Mr. Sheppard is restored to health, and is to be dean of Canterbury. It is a bold, picturesque appointment. Mr. Sheppard will not be the conventional dean. We earnestly trust that he will not be too unconventional. He may find the gaiters an uncomfortable garment, but we trust that he will regard them as a useful discipline. We hope, too, that he will remember St. Thomas and the great Catholic traditions of the cathedral, that he will emulate the efforts of other deans to restore Catholic worship in all its beauty, and that he will not fall into the delusion that Christendom can be reunited if Nonconformist ministers preach in cathedral pulpits. We read Mr. Sheppard's book, The Impatience of a Parson, with considerable regret. We are looking forward to reading with pleasure its sequel, "The Patience of a Dean!"

News From China.

The Rev. Leighton C. Y. Yang, formerly of Shasi, China, has volunteered as a missionary to go to Sian, Shensi Province, some 550 miles north and west of Hankow, for a five-year term.

The Chinese Board of Missions has for some time been calling for volunteers for this missionary district of the Chinese Church, and for lack of a permanent volunteer, the Rev. Nelson E. P. Liu went there last autumn and has been holding the fort. But a priest who can remain and "dig in" is needed, and the district of Hankow is proud to send one of the best. Mr. Yang knows something of work in a hard field and will not be easily discouraged. He is not much over forty and his family are at an age when they can be left at school, much as are the children of American missionaries when parents leave for a distant land. Indeed, to a Chinese from Central China, Shensi is a distant land and in many ways a strange one. Mr. Yang passed an excellent physical examination, and is the picture of health and vigor. He and Mrs. Yang, who will be a great asset in the Shensi work when conditions are such that she can join her husband, have four children, the two oldest in Ginling College for Women, the third at St. Hilda's, and the fourth, a boy of thirteen, at home.

Mr. Yang was to leave for his new field in June.

The Rev. James Y. K. Lung, known to many as the priest who has been holding on at Anyuen, the colliery center, is to succeed Mr. Yang at Shasi. The Rev. Fred S. Y. Liu goes to Anyuen.

Mr. Samuel Seng, librarian of Boone Library, was elected by the whole China Library Association to go as its representative to the International Library Congress, meeting in Rome in June. He expected to go by way of Siberia.

A not often realized contribution which English classes in China make to the Church in America has been illustrated by the Rev. Robin Chen of Anking, all of whose training was received at Boone. He is studying this year at the Philadelphia Divinity School, and, although he had been in this country only four months, he was able to make public addresses at the Wellesley Conference, where he was quite at home and much admired, and where he added greatly to the American Church people's love and respect for China.

The next "General Convention" of the Chinese Church is scheduled to meet in Hangchow, April 25, 1931.

"A Program for Social Service in a Rural Community."

In the city the Church may perhaps confine itself to furnishing the dynamic, to contributing the motive power for the workers in social agencies, to furnishing its quota of workers, to sponsoring organizations of trained workers of Church-centered agencies, such as the Church Mission of Help. But even in the city, the pastor of every church needs a social vision, should know something of the technique of modern social work, should understand more than the first principles of mental hygiene, if he is to meet the needs of the clients of social agencies entrusted to his care. No family or individual is properly adjusted socially unless his religious needs are being met. Society needs well integrated personalities. The Church and the social agency must direct the development of such personalities, together with the help of the client himself and the Master case-worker of all, Jesus Christ.

The fundamental principle that all Christian social work is based upon is that Christ is not only the Saviour of all men, but also of all of man. Apply this to the rural situation and what happens? The rural priest looks at his job to minister to all men in every conceivable way. In developing a program for rural work we must bear in mind that the Church is in the rural field to make its contribution to the welfare of the community. This welfare is physical, mental, spiritual, and social health.

If we are to have a social work program for the rural parish, we must have priests with a social vision. Priests in rural fields must be given social training. We are preparing men for the field in our seminaries. We should make more provision for the training of those already in the field. Then the men once there should be given enough to live on, time to develop their plans, and a reasonable amount of money to carry them out. I believe that four out of five programs for rural work must be underwritten outside the community, for at least two years. This is something for boards of missions, bishops, the Woman's Auxiliary, larger churches which want to do diocesan missionary work, all to think about and act upon. The average community, unless poverty-stricken, will rise to support a program which works.

We can often see certain needs when we enter upon our task and we should seek to meet these, always watching for others. But a survey is quite essential, a survey undertaken with the definite object of finding the community's needs and resources.

May we bear witness to the splendid assistance which the Church Mission of Help is to the rural field? Confronted with problems of the unmarried mother, of delinquent girls, of unadjusted young women, of problem parents, of girls on parole, of unwholesome sex situations in a school, the rural priest should learn to call in the C. M. H. worker to help him with his problems.

The wise rural social worker will win the clergy to her cause. The wise clergy will welcome the visit of the cooperative social worker. There is an unfortunate tendency on the part of the professional worker and the clergy to ignore each other until there is need for them to work together and then each may attempt to dictate. Each may have a misunderstanding of the other's position and a critical attitude toward it. Therefore, the rural worker should make it her job to win the confidence of the clergy in her field as soon as possible upon entering it, and the rural clergyman should make it a part of his task to know and get the viewpoint, aims, and understanding of all new workers in his field. It strengthens the clergyman to know that he has a fellow-worker who knows more of the technique of the work than he does. It strengthens the worker to know she has a supporter from the start.

I realize that the man who dares to suggest that our schools are not all they ought to be may be accused of treason, and of meddling in the sacred realm of politics, though why our schools should be mixed up in politics is a mystery to me.

Nevertheless, because every year the influence of the teacher grows, often at the expense of the parent, who delegates ever more and more of his responsibility to teachers, I am firmly convinced that it is a real part of the social work program of the rural parish to work for more efficient schools, teachers highly trained, in love with their work, and of excellent moral character and well integrated personalities. It is the Church's privilege and duty to cooperate in every conceivable way with the school.

Rev. Harold P. Kaulfuss.

(Extracts from paper read at Social Service Conference, San Francisco, June 26-29.)

The Rev. Dr. Mottet Dies in Eighty-fifth Year.

(From the New York Sun.)

The Rev. Dr. Henry Mottet, rector for almost fifty years of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the Holy Communion, with which he had been connected for the last seventy-one years, died yesterday in Great Neck, L. I., in his eighty-fifth year. He was the oldest rector of the communion in active service in this city. On November 2, next, he would have completed half a century as rector.

Dr. Mottet had been in failing health for some time, but administered his parish to the last.

Dr. Mottet recently completed the raising of a $1,000,000 endowment for his church, achieving his desire throughout the half century, the anchoring of it on its present site in perpetuity. The little brown-stone edifice nestling among the tall commercial buildings at Sixth Avenue and Twentieth Street has always sought under Dr. Mottet's rectorship to minister to people of every class.

One of his last accomplishments was to arrange for the church to be kept open all night 365 nights of the year, so that those who pass by in the "wee, small hours" might heed the invitation as in the day to enter for a moment or more for "rest, meditation and prayer". This is believed to be the only church in America that never closes its doors.

Some years ago Dr. Mottet established a service every Sunday for Negroes. About the same time he started giving the use of the church once a week to a Greek Orthodox congregation.

With part of the $1,000,000 Dr. Mottet had planned all along to erect a large community house and a sixteen-story hotel to accommodate about 500 working men and women on the site of the present parish building, part of which are on the Sixth Avenue side and part on Twentieth Street side.

One of Dr. Mottet's greatest prides was that the Church of the Holy Communion, which was founded in 1846, became the first free church in America. No sittings were ever sold or rented, rich and poor being invited to worship together. The church all through the years has received its entire support from voluntary contributions. The first John Jacob Astor, his wife and son, were among its early members. Another fact of which Dr. Mottet was very proud was that St. Luke's Hospital, now opposite the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, was founded by the Rev. Dr. William Augustus Muhlenberg, founder of the Holy Communion Church.

Dr. Mottet was born in Stuttgart, Germany, on May 20, 1845, the son of Joseph and Philippine Mottet. He became a choir boy in the Church of the Holy Communion at the age of thirteen and was confirmed seventy-one years ago.

On his eightieth birthday the Greater New York Federation of Churches tendered Dr. Mottet a dinner in the Hotel Astor. The speakers were the Rev. Dr. George Alexander, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church; Bishop Arthur S. Lloyd and the late Bishop Ethelbert Talbot, of Bethlehem, Pa.

The Church of the Holy Communion has always been known as one of the "lowest" churches of the Protestant Episcopal communion, and this was one of the boasts of Dr. Mottet.

Convocation Address by Bishop Thomas, Pro-Cathedral, Paris, May, 1929.

"Since the last meeting of Convocation in Paris, two well-known men, who served terms of office in Europe, have passed to their well-earned rest. The Rev. John Mitchell Page, Priest and Canon of the Washington Cathedral, died suddenly within a few days of the time when I was to have fulfilled an appointment with him to talk over some of the affairs of the American Churches in Europe, and this at the suggestion of the Presiding Bishop who esteemed him highly.

The Rev. Mr. Page was a gentelman of fineness, geniality, tactfulness and wisdom. He will long be remembered by many. In the hearts of those who remember, he will be enshrined. . . . . Charles Henry Brent passed into life eternal in Lausanne on March 27, and was buried where he died, in a special plot given by the city for perpetual use. Dean Beekman of our Cathedral here in Paris, delivered the address at the church, and the Rev. Dr. Everett P. Smith, of Geneva, was present at the interment. Never since the death of Phillips Brooks has the life and service of one of our Bishops occupied so much attention in the public press as Bishop Brent's. Take him all in all, he was distinctively our outstanding Bishop.

James Thayer Addison, in his fine review of him in the Churchman, summarizes him in these words, "Missionary, soldier, statesman, saint". To this, one might add the words, seer and prophet. Bishop Brent was both venturesome and creative in his use of English. While many of us were lamenting the innumerable subdivisions of a divided Christianity, Brent was framing resolutions for remedies, and while others dreamed of the unity of the Church, which once, under the inspiration of the Spirit had led it, in its unity to such a point of spiritual understanding that it could determine the books of Scripture, the phraseology of the creeds, and the polity of the Church, Brent was seeing a vision of the return of that amity, and flung out a challenge to the general convention, seemingly as wild as was Mott's assured vision of a converted world in one generation, which was so appealing to the spirit of adventure, that action was taken leading within the decade, to the mighty gathering of Lausanne in which a great majority of the Churches in the world gathered to consider what might be done once more to heal schism. There has been some disposition since that gathering, when aggressive protestantism presented itself in such aggressive form that the Catholic Churches of the East felt it desirable to withdraw, to belittle the success of the venture. The Congress was, of course, destined to failure as it was premature, but the astonishment is, that under the leadership of Bishop Brent, such interest was aroused in the general subject that such a congress was possible. Time will come when further strides forward will be made and the time may come before the millennium when the Church once more will be united; but if that times does come, I make bold to venture the prophesy that the name of Bishop Brent in that final consummation will not be forgotten. . . .

It would be idle to attempt to recount all his gifts, for his versatility was extreme. Had he been nothing but a missionary he would have been remembered for his work in Noston and in the Philippines. Had he been nothing but a writer of books, he would have been remembered as one of the most prolific idealists of our day. Had he been nothing but a diplomat men could have counted it to his credit that he had achieved the Congress in Lausanne, and so it seems to me that it was fitting that Bishop Brent should die in Switzerland. The land of lofty altitude and far-flung achievements, the land of the Lausanne conference of which he was the distinguished father and president. The Philippines had a claim for his last resting place, but we cannot think him there. Washington, where once he was elected Bishop, might register a claim, for its cathedral, where the bodies of many of America's greatest men are gathering, but it is not in Washington the remains of Bishop Brent should lie, nor would his own home in Western New York, which is the place most men would naturally esteem a final sepulchre be suitable; nor lastly his own boyhood town in Canada, where for family reasons his body might have been taken, that the family burial plot might be given distinction by reason of his ashes, but in Lausanne, where he for the moment happened to be. Here this spiritual adventurer found a stopping place congenial to his own soul, and dear to the memory of us who see in him the eagle of the Church resting above the dust and in the clear light of the sun. . . .

The only and one man I know to satisfy the requirements which this Convocation enumerated when you asked the Church for a Bishop for the Churches in Europe, was Bishop Brent, and he has passed. If men are ever deep as well as versatile, Brent was both. In this generation we shall be fortunate to look upon his like again.

Under the present regime, where Bishops, many and numerous, are sent to Europe to look after the Church's interests here, it seems utterly unfitting that a new man who knows little of Europe and nothing of its religious problems should upon his first visit tour of duty, presume to offer a policy or a program for the Church's work, far-flung as it is over half a continent. Yet, I suppose, inasmuch as this is an Episcopal Church, and not a congregation body, it seems that a Bishop should become a focus of concerted endeavor whereby the experience and aspiration of the clergy and laity who are familiar with the conditions here, might be able to express their convictions and should endeavor to assist in the formation of a program. . .

I therefore am going to presume to offer some suggestions looking toward the unification of our work and the focussing of our policies and plans which I trust will be the task of this Convocation. I have no wish to impress upon this body my own opinions—unless they express your own. I am convinced, however, that though we may not undertake to act upon any of the suggestions which I make, either in substance or in form, this Convocation may bend its endeavor to the effort of unifying.

I have discovered that there is difference of opinion on the part of some of the clergy and laity relative to certain matters which are more or less fundamental. Even our Convocation has not found itself. There are those who think that we have so little to do when we meet, that one meeting in each triennium quite sufficient. There are others who think the gathering worthwhile, no matter how much specific work is accomplished. It would seem to me desirable that we should, if we can, at this Convocation determine a little more sharply what a Convocation in Europe might properly be. There is no canonical provision, so far as I know, upon which our Convocation is based. . . . I, therefore, suggest that before our Convocation is over, if the matter meets with approval, that steps may be taken for the formation of a committee on by-laws and regulations which I trust I may be able to report, if possible, before we adjourn. These by-laws should contain provision for the determination of the friendship of the body, the functions of the body and the ways in which these functions can best be served, under the condition prevalent in Europe.

It would seem to me desirable that the possible unification of our work along financial lines might be obtained through a standing committee of this body, known as a finance committee. We have a secretary and a treasurer of this body, but the duties of neither have been determined. I think I see the value of a standing committee on hospitality, whose duty it might be to minister in some way to the increasing flood of transients who pour into Europe, at various seasons of the year.

The Bishop in Charge of European Churches.

The whole matter of the episcopate is still in statu quo. I asked our delegates from the European Churches to the last General Convention, to make a report as to the reception of our memorial upon this subject and to tell us what the situation is at the present moment. There is to be a meeting of the House of Bishops in America on October 2, and this body might have jurisdiction in the premises, provided we saw fit to modify our memorial in such a way as not to ask for the election of a resident Bishop. Were we to ask for a permanent Bishop instead of a resident Bishop, this might be provided by the House of Bishops. The word resident is likely to raise the question as to the status of the American Church in Europe. That we can neither work as a diocese or a missionary district seems obvious, and Bishops are not creative under our American usage, except to serve in either a diocese or a missionary district. There seems hardly enough work to do in Europe for a Bishop who gives to it his whole time, unless there be added to his task something more or less heterogeneous. The death of Bishop Brent seems to have, for the moment at least, made impractical any commitments to the European Bishop of tasks which might embroil the Church at home in the entanglements, theological and otherwise, existing here, although approaching to certain of the National Churches may be greatly desired. I, personally, have little hope that our General Convention will agree to risk our establishment to either the wisdom or caprice of any one Bishop which they may assign to service in Europe. The election of any priest to the Bishopric of the European Churchs therefore seems to me unlikely, until Canonship and perhaps constitutional provision is secured on the ground that we have no recognized unit to which he might be elected Bishop. As you know, the suggestion offered by the National Council to the General Convention was met with disavour, so that the whole subject of Episcopal care over the Churches in Europe may be considered, I think now de novo.

A permanent Bishop, however, if asked for, might be secured, provided a retired Bishop could be found who would accept the office, should the Presiding Bishop appoint him, or if the office could be supplied satisfactorily to the Convocation by the appointment of a Diocesan Bishop for a limited period each year, as an addition to his own jurisdiction. The subject is difficult and in some places thorny. I am inclined to think that the House of Bishops will grant to the Convocation in Europe the sort of Bishop this Convocation desires. . . .

May I call your attention to the fact that the Lambeth Conference meets in London next year, from July 7 to August 9. A flood of American Bishops, therefore, will be in Europe. It would seem wise that we should take some steps to offer every hospitality possible to our visiting Bishops. The more intimately the members know the work of the churches in Europe, the more interest they will assuredly have in it. From the ninth of October until fall, some of these Bishops will be traveling. I am particularly anxious that as many of them as possible should be invited to occupy our pulpits.

In conclusion may I request that a committee to consider the Bishop's address to take into consideration before making a report, the advisability of recommending it with its findings concerning Convocation, the advisability of a clerical gathering immediately before or subsequent to the next Convocation for the purpose of abetting fellowship and mutual stimulation. . . . The burden of my message is this, that we give up ourselves in this Convocation largely to the consideration of those matters which will tend to unify our work and to extend its survey beyond the horizon of our own parishes. Convocation is the only large unit we possess. How shall we use it? Not, I trust, as a burden upon the parishes, but as an instrument for the parish to use in the tasks too large for the parishes to attempt alone. If Convocation is not a communal instrument for the accomplishment of the task for which the individual is responsible, it has little reason for being.

Commending ourselves to the love and greater service of the Lord, may I ask you to join me in the prayer of Bishop Andrews for the Church now enshrined in our new prayer book.

Florence Nightingale Service.

Nearly a thousand uniformed nurses and student nurses, from more than twenty of Detroit's hospitals marched into St. Paul's Cathedral for the annual Florence Nightingale Service, under the auspices of the Guild of St. Barnabas for Nurses, Detroit Branch. Only in the transepts, gallery and aisles of the Cathedral was there room for those who were not nurses. The sermon was preached by the Rev. Alvin E. Magary, minister of North Woodward Presbyterian Church. An interesting circumstance was that heading the procession of nurses at this celebration of the one hundred and seventh anniversary of Florence Nightingale's birth was Miss Maicock, trained under Miss Hanan, herself one of Miss Nightingale's closest friends and disciples.

ALABAMA.

Rt. Rev. Wm. G. McDowell Bishop

The Chapel of the Redeemer.

I will tell you something about our mission here at Anniston, known as The Chapel of the Redeemer. Please remember we have no chapel at all—just an old three-room tenement house with a few benches, an organ, a lectern, an altar and a Bible. We frequently have more than sixty children at Sunday School here in the afternoon on Sunday. We started about a year and half ago and have had many ups and downs—more downs than ups. When we started many thought that Good Friday was "the best day to plant beans," but now they know it commemorates the sacrifice on the Cross. They were quite prejudiced at first to the Cross on the Altar—they seemed to associate a cross with the Roman Church only. The Holy Rollers, and other sects, attact many of them, but they usually return to us after a time. Many still cling to the idea that immersion is the only proper mode of baptism—must "go under the water" and that "sprinkling" (pouring on of water) is something peculiar to the Episcopal Church. We had a lovely Christmas tree for them, and the children gave that sweet little play, "Bethlehem", under the direction of one of our teachers. At Easter we took between sixty and seventy of these children to Grace Church for the children's celebration. I enclose a kodak picture of a class of seven little girls who recited most beautifully, Duty to God and Duty to Neighbor for the Grace Church children. Their faithful and devoted teacher is now working with the boys and girls at the Appalachian School at Penland, N. C. We have baptized eighteen and now have five confirmed members and feel that we have done something for the Master. Next week we will have our annual picnic for these children and they will have a royal time under the big trees near the spring at Peaceburg, jumping ropes, playing games and eating ice cream, and other good things which will be prepared for them. We hope some day to have a real chapel.

H. P. T.

MISSISSIPPI.

Rt. Rev. T. DuB. Bratton, D. D., Bishop.
Rt. Rev. W. M. Green, D. D., Coadjutor.

Convocation of Church Workers Among Colored People.

The Convocation of Colored Workers of the Diocese of Mississippi held its annual session in St. Mary's Episcopal Church, the Rev. S. A. Morgan, rector, June 13. The Rt. Rev. Wm. Mercer Green, Bishop Coadjutor of this Diocese, administered the Holy Communion. He was assisted by the rector and the Rev. J. M. Hicks, Chaplain of Okolona Industrial School.

Bishop Green then delivered a forceful address to an appreciative audience on the subject: "The Place of the Christian Church in the Affairs of the World."

After the service, the Convocation was duly organized. The Woman's Auxiliary was also duly organized, and officers were elected.

The afternoon session was taken up with reports of various committees. The report of the committee on state of the Church was especially interesting and became the topic of discussion for the afternoon. The report was as follows:

The Bishops, officers and members of the Convocation of the Colored Missionary Jurisdiction of the Diocese of Mississippi, greetings: "We, the undersigned members of the committee appointed to report on the state of the Church, beg leave to make the following report:

1. We wish to re-affirm our faith in the principles of the Protestant Episcopal Church and our confidence and deep affection for the Bishops of our Diocese, the Rt. Rev. Theo. D. Bratton, D. D., and our Bishop Coadjutor, the Rt. Rev. Wm. Mercer Green, D. D.

2. After a careful study of the reports of the delegates attending this Convocation, representing the Colored missions of the diocese, we believe that the time has arrived for energetic action and organized effort among Colored Episcopalians to the end that the Colored people of the State of Mississippi may be correctly informed with regard to the faith and ritual of the Church and the work the Church is doing through education to elevate the Colored people of Mississippi. Therefore, we respectfully recommend to the Bishops the importance of an annual Convocation to be held in the various missions of the diocese at a convenient time, for the purpose of arousing the interest among the Colored members of the Church and attracting the attention of other Colored people of the state who are not members of any church.

We respectfully recommend and urge our Bishops to take such steps as they may deem proper to secure priests for all of the missions now active and to arouse the membership of the inactive missions to reorganize the work of the Church in their locality.

We believe the Colored people of Mississippi would welcome and support such action on the part of our Bishops and that the Church would be greatly benefited thereby.

We wish further to express our heartfelt gratitude to the White friends of the diocese who have given the Colored work generous support, and especially do we thank Mrs. J. W. Johnson for her magnanimous gifts to St. Mark, St. Mary and to the Y. M. C. A. These gifts inspire us to greater service than we have yet rendered. We invoke the blessings of health and happiness upon Mrs. Johnson and pray that she may live long to witness the progress of our race through her generous gifts.

We beg to express our faith in the untiring energy, integrity and ability of our Colored priests in charge of our religious and educational work, and we do hereby pledge them the loyalty and continued support of our membership."

A very interesting program was rendered at the evening session. The Creed was repeated and prayers were said. Then several spirituals were sung by some of our best local talent. The Mt. Heroden Sextette and the Y. M. C. A. choir, both directed by Mrs. M. G. Miller, sang anthems and spirituals. A quartette from the Mound Bayou Training School, led by Zee Alfin Anderson, a former Vicksburger, sang a very touching spiritual. The leaders then recited Dunbar's "When Malindy Sings", in matchless style. This reading was prepared by her under the direction of Prof. Frederick Hall, while she was attending the Jackson College and she has thrilled many audiences by her fine interpretation of this popular poem; but never before had the writer heard her or any other reader recite the poem so well. The audience gave evidence of its appreciation of the young woman's elocutionary talent.

The Rev. Mr. Morgan presented a class of four children and one adult to Bishop Green for confirmation.

After the class was confirmed, Dr. C. B. Wilmer preached a sermon on "Love", the like of which one seldom hears. It abounded in simple illustrations which were at times humorous and at times pathetic, and it closed with one of the most stirring appeals for greater loyatly to Christ that has ever been made. It was thoroughly enjoyed by the large bi-racial audience that followed every word of the speaker.

W. A. Rembert came in for his usual share of congratulations for his fine rendition of, "I know that My Redeemer Liveth".

The meeting was appropriately closed with a fatherly talk from our prelate and friend, Bishop Theo. D. Bratton.

Rector Morgan extends thanks through this column to those who took part on the program and to those who rendered service in any way to make the visitors comfortable. He says they all left delighted with the entertainment they received in Vicksburg.

The next Convocation meets with the Rev. J. T. Jeffrey, rector of St. Mark's Church, Jackson, Miss.

S. A. M.

NEW YORK.

Rt. Rev. William T. Manning, D. D.,
Rt. Rev. A. S. Lloyd, D. D., Suffragan.
Rt. Rev. Herbert Shipman, Suffragan.

Summer Plans for Services at the Church of the Heavenly Rest and Chapel of the Beloved Disciple.

Among preaching engagements filled this summer by the Rev. Dr. Henry Darlington, rector of the Church of the Heavenly Rest and Chapel of the Beloved Disciple, was that at the Chapel in Watch Hill, Rhode Island, where he preached on Sunday, July 7.

Dr. and Mrs. Darlington, with their two young sons, Peter and Henry, Jr., are summering at Watch Hill, where they have taken the cottage, White Sands, for the season.

During the following week, Dr. Darlington will be at Camp Dix, New Jersey, at the Headquarters of the Forty-fourth Infantry Division, of which he is Divisional Chaplain.

Again on August 4, Dr. Darlington will assist in the services at the Watch Hill Chapel, when the Rt. Rev. Herbert Shipman, D. D., Suffragan Bishop of New York, will preach.

For the Church of the Heavenly Rest and Chapel of the Beloved Disciple, Fifth Avenue and Ninetieth Street, the Sunday services at 8 and 11 A. M., will be in charge of the Rev. W. Harold Weigle, Jr., who is Chaplain of the Episcopal Actors' Guild; the Rev. John G. Robinson, of the Episcopal City Mission Society, who is a Chaplain at Bellevue Hospital, and at the House of the Holy Comforter; and the Rev. Elliott Darlington, who was the preacher Sunday morning, July 7.

Afternoon services at this church will be discontinued until September. Morning services will be held in the new chapel adjoining the church at Fifth Avenue and Ninetieth Street, while construction work on the church proper is being completed. The latter will again be opened for worship on the last Sunday in September.

Saints' Days and Holy Days will be observed throughout the summer with celebration of the Holy Communion at 7:30 and 11 A. M. These include: St. James' Day, July 25; Feast of the Transfiguration, August 6; St. Bartholomew's Day, August 24.

Calvary Church.

The Rev. David T. Eaton, one of the assistant ministers of Calvary Church, is spending the summer at Swampscott, Mass., where he is in charge of the Episcopal Church there. He is continuing during the summer editing The Calvary Evangel, and will be back at his post September 1.

The Rev. Garrett R. Stearly and Mrs. Stearly have gone on an evangelical journey to South Africa with the Rev. F. N. D. Buchman.

The Rev. J. Herbert Smith, who has come on the staff as one of the assistant ministers, will preach his first sermon in Calvary next Sunday night at eight o'clock. He is a graduate of the University of Chicago, 1921, and of the General Theological Seminary, 1926. For two years he was rector of St. Andrew's Church, Emporia, Kan., and was in charge of St. James' Church, New York, last August. Mr. Smith is coming to Calvary in order to get the evangelistic training given there.

The Rev. Norman Von Post Schwab, Yale, 1926, Virginia Seminary, 1929, who was ordained to the Diaconate by the Bishop of Connecticut on June 16, has come as a full-time volunteer on the staff as an assistant minister. He is a direct descendant of Henry Melchoir Muhlenburg, and is a nephew of the late Rev. Lawrence Henry Schwab.

A member of the summer staff, who will be here only until he returns to Berkeley Divinity School in the fall, is Mr. Theodore Dorsey. Mr. Dorsey has been preaching on the Green at New Haven daily. He is to be in charge of the outdoor services at Calvary this summer. The first service will be held on Sunday evening at seven o'clock. The clergy and choir in robes will march from the church at Twenty-first Street and Fourth Avenue at seven o'clock. At Twenty-fifth Street and Madison Square, from a soap box, Mr. Dorsey will give his own personal testimony. Among others who will witness are Miss Olive Jones, an ex-president of the National Education Association and now in charge of the Church School at Calvary; Mr. Everett M. Daly, the sexton of Calvary Church, and the rector, the Rev. S. M. Shoemaker, Jr. At five minutes of eight the choir re-forms, and, headed by the crucifer bearing a great wooden cross, marches back to the church on Twenty-first Street and Fourth Avenue. There the organ will pick up the hymn that is being played by the trumpeter, and the choir, singing, will march up into the chancel, the people who have followed going into the pews on the right and left among the regular congregation.

Last Tuesday, June 25, Fred Tillman, the janitor of Calvary House, celebrated his third anniversary in the Christian life, at Calvary Mission, 346 East Twenty-third Street. Before he came to Calvary he had spent twenty-seven years in reform schools and jails. He is a member of the Calvary Brotherhood and helps with the services there, as well as doing his work at Calvary House.

ATLANTA.

Rt. Rev. H. J. Mikell, D. D., Bishop.

Canons Appointed at St. Philip's Cathedral, Atlanta, Ga.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Chapter of St. Philip's Cathedral, Atlanta, Georgia, three non-resident canons were appointed on the nomination of Bishop Mikell and the Very Rev. Raimundo de Ovies, Dean of the Cathedral. They are the Rev. Charles L. Wells, Ph. D., Dean of the Theological Department of the University of the South; the Rev. Carey B. Wilmer, D. D., rector emeritus of St. Luke's Church, Atlanta, and a professor in the Theological Department at Sewanee, and the Rev. George B. Myers, Dean of the Department of the Philosophy of Religion, University of the South, formerly Dean of the Cathedral at Havana, Cuba.

Canons Wells, Wilmer and Myers are preparing courses of lectures to be delivered before the diocese in meetings to be arranged at the Cathedral, the subjects to be announced later.

A. B. G.

SOUTH FLORIDA.

Rt. Rev. Cameron Mann, D. D., Bishop
Rt. Rev. J. D. Wing, D. D., Coadjutor.

Seventy-third Birthday Party.

A most enjoyable surprise birthday party was recently given in honor of the Rev. Dr. J. B. Blanchet, who for many years has conducted the devotional exercises at the Olga Community Union Sunday School, and is still in charge of the Adult Bible Class.

The entertainment was held at the attractive home of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Mills, the Superintendent. The rooms opening en suite were tastily decorated with beautiful flowers; several games were enjoyed by the young folks, while a number of musical selections were rendered by Mrs. E. M. Prevatt, the organist, and Mr. Carl Lohmeyer, the teacher of the young people's Bible class.

Much interest was evidenced in the lighting of the seventy-three candles on the birthday cake.

Dr. Blanchet has been engaged in this social communal service here for some twelve or more years and the deep appreciation of his splendid work was evidenced by the large number present.

Assisting Mr. and Mrs. Mills in looking after the pleasure of the guests were Mr. and Mrs. John L. Blanchet of Jacksonville.

OKLAHOMA.

Rt. Rev. Thomas Casady, S. T. D., Bishop.

Greater Vestry System.

Emmanuel Church, Shawnee, Oklahoma, has adopted the greater vestry system, following closely after the plan which has proved so successful at Christ Church, Williamsport, Pa. It is composed of the canonical vestry, eleven in number, nine other men and nine women.

Placing thirty bouquets on the graves in the local potter's field was the manner in which the Scout Troop at the Church of the Good Shepherd, Sapulpa, Oklahoma, observed the day.

Bishop Thomas Casady has confirmed two hundred and eighty-one persons in Oklahoma since January 1.

The Superintendent of the Municipal Hospital, Shawnee, Oklahoma, is a communicant. A number of women of Emmanuel Parish, there, have taken the lead in fostering the Shawnee Hospital Auxiliary, which aids the institution in various ways. Recently a new X-Ray equipment was purchased at a cost of one thousand dollars. The Auxiliary is helping pay for it.

BETHLEHEM.

Rt. Rev. F. W. Sterrett, D. D., Bishop.

Because of the appointment of Dean Holmes to Leonard Hall, it became necessary to elect a new Dean of the Convocation of Scranton. It met in the Church of the Redeemer, Sayre, the Rev. Glen B. Walter, rector, and the Rev. Robert F. Kline, rector of Calvary Church, Wilkes-Barre, was unaimously elected as the new Dean.

H. P. W.

MICHIGAN.

Rt. Rev. Herman Page, D. D., Bishop.

Trustees of the Detroit City Mission have elected the Rev. George Backhurst, missionary-in-cahrge of St. Paul's Church, St. Clair Shores, Michigan, to succeed the Rev. Harry J. Pearson as Superintendent of the Mission. Mr. Backhurst, a native of England, was trained in St. Paul's College, Lincoln. Before he entered college he served three years in the Church Army of England. He was ordained in Nova Scotia and has served in the Dioceses of Albany and Duluth.

Mr. Ernest E. Piper, Superintendent of Religious Education for the Diocese of Michigan, is a member of the faculty of the summer session of the Graduate School in Religious Education, being held at the Presbyterian Theological Seminary at Chicago, during July and August.

McE.

LEXINGTON.

Rt. Rev. L. W. Burton, D. D., Bishop.

St. Mary's Church, Middlesboro.

The Rev. Claudius F. Smith, Rector.

During the month of May, the Rev. Claudius F. Smith held services each week and began as rector-missionary June 1. The services are being well attended and an increasing interest is manifested on every hand. As yet no rectory has been procured but a good committee has been appointed to arrange for the disposal of the small house now owned by the parish and use the means thereby obtained in purchasing a house adequate for the purpose.

Services will be held during June in Pineville and Barbourville, where there are a few communicants.

The Guild elected officers last week making Mrs. Everett Silvers, president; Mrs. J. S. Whitfield, vice-president; Mrs. Dr. Zimmerman, secretary, and Mrs. Saunders, treasurer. They are enthusiastically at it and are very ably carrying forward a new program. The vestry committee handled the recent Every Member Canvass very successfully. It was the best canvass in the history of the parish and the people feel a just pride in the results. The rector hopes to take up his residence early in the fall or sooner if possible. His address is Box 503, Middlesboro. Much enthusiasm was aroused by our new Bishop at his recent visit June 4. His inspiring sermon, so ably delivered, captured the minds and hearts of the large congregation. The diocese must feel profoundly grateful in having him. There is much to be done in building up the Sunday school and bringing the choir back to its former strength. The Guild is arranging for a supper for men the latter part of this month, looking toward forming a men's organization of some kind. We are off to a fairly good start, so to speak, and hope to take our place some day in the diocese.

May the Diocese and Diocesan News prosper.

C. F. S.

SOUTHWESTERN VIRGINIA.

Rt. Rev. Robert C. Jett. D. D., Bishop.

Rector Celebrates Two Anniversaries.

On June 5, the Rev. Devall Langhorne Gwathmey, rector of St. John's Church, Wytheville, had a special celebration of the Holy Communion; thus observing the fifteenth anniversary of his ordination to the Priesthood.

On Sunday, June 30, the close of the eighth year since his coming to Wytheville, he had a Communion service particularly for those persons who have been confirmed during his rectorship there.

The Parish Aid Society has given to St. John's a handsome set of purple chancel hangings in memory of the late Miss Ella R. Goodwin, for many years a faithful and devoted member of the parish.

The Virginia Council of Religious Education (interdenominational) met in Wytheville June 19-21. The Rev. Mr. Gwathmey gave the address of welcome on behalf of the Wytheville Churches, and the Parish Aid Society of St. John's served the young people's banquet of two hundred plates. Nearly all of the St. John's Church School teachers and a number of other members of the congregation were registered as members of the Conference. Episcopal clergymen from other points attending the Conference were: the Rev. Messrs. Edwin R. Carter, D. D., of Petersburg; Herbert H. Young, of Bluefield; John A. Wilson, Jr., of Richlands, and Jacquelin Ambler, of Dante.

Wedding of Pulaski Rector.

On the evening of Thursday, June 20, in the First Presbyterian Church at Clinton, South Carolina, the Rev. James McDowell Dick was married to Miss Sara Elizabeth Young. The ceremony was performed by the Rt. Rev. Kirkman G. Finlay, D. D., Bishop of the Diocese of Upper South Carolina, who was assisted by the Rev. Dr. D. J. Woods, the bride's pastor.

Mr. Dick's best man was his brother, Mr. Hugh Dick, of Charlotte, N. C., and Miss Margaret Copeland, of Clinton, was maid of honor.

The bride is the only daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Jack H. Young, of Clinton.

The Rev. Mr. Dick is a son of Mrs. Margaret Fraser Dick, and the late James McDowell Dick, of Sumter, S. C. He is an alumnus of Virginia Seminary, and since December 1, 1928, has been rector of Christ Church at Pulaski in the Diocese of Southwestern Virginia.

LONG ISLAND.

Rt. Rev. E. M. Stires, D. D., Bishop.

First Summer School Held.

For the first time, the sessions of a Provincial Summer School are being held in Long Island Diocese. The location, the Stony Brook School property, is almost ideal, being on high ground, with spacious lawns and many shade trees, near the railroad and main highways, and not far from salt-water bathing. There are school buildings with the necessary classrooms, sleeping accommodations, dining-room and kitchen and a large auditorium. The recently built memorial chapel, though of the "meeting-house" type and consequently a little awkward for administration of Holy Communion, is certainly a beautiful building.

The conference opened with luncheon on July 1 and ended with breakfast on July 11. The registration is one hundred and fifty-five. Eighty are from Long Island, and all the other dioceses of the province are represented except Western New York. There is one scholar from Porto Rico. Several dioceses not in this province have one or two representatives present.

Bishop Oldham, of Albany, is pastor of the conference. The Rev. Charles H. Ricker, of Manhasset, L. I., is dean and opened the conference with an excellent statement of its purpose. The most popular course is said to be that given by Miss Mabel Lee Cooper, National Secretary for Teacher Training, on "How to Teach". Courses on the Church's Program are given by the Rev. Elmer N. Schmuck, D. D., and the Rev. Chauncey E. Snowden. A valuable course on "Present Day Problems of Life and Thought," given by the Rev. Joseph H. Titus, is well attended and highly appreciated. The revision of the Prayer Book is interestingly dealt with by the Rev. Thomas A. Conover. Other courses are on Old Testament Heroes; the Gospel of St. John; Coordinating Agencies of the Church; Religious Drama; Leaders of the American and English Churches; and on several phases of Church School work and mission study. Dr. John W. Wood is to make an evening address on "An Act of International Good-Will". Miss Mildred H. Brown, who is giving the course on Religious Drama, will also produce a drama or pageant at the close of the conference, choosing and training the personnel from those present.

Much good may be expected to result to our parishes from the inspiration and material which our eighty participants in the conference will surely receive. Long Island has always been well represented in the provincial summer schools, but naturally when one is held in our territory, it is to be expected that our people should be present in still larger numbers. We hope the success of this session will be such that a permanent arrangement may be made to have the school meet in Long Island every year.

House of St. Giles the Cripple.

The year-book of the House of St. Giles the Cripple has lately been issued. This interesting and appealing charity well deserves the support it receives from the people of the diocese. Founded by Sister Sarah in 1891, its progress has been steady, though often too slow to please those most interested in its advance. The present hospital, located in Brooklyn, was thought when it was built in 1913, to be adequate for a long time to come, but it is now in need of enlargement. The convalescent home and school in Garden City, newly built in 1923, serves its purpose admirably but already needs expansion in respect of certain facilities. The present general manager, Major Juan C. Butts, is doing an excellent work, and not the least of his achievements is the compilation of a most interesting year-book. The volume and character of work done, the patient after-care through a term of years, the development of normal occupations and sports among the crippled children, are presented with a most pathetic appeal for these handicapped boys and girls. Comparison of the present condition of certain patients with their state several years ago is graphically made by photographs, which are also used with telling effect to illustrate the daily life of the children.

It is encouraging to read the list of contributors to this excellent work No one could read the report without desiring to do something to help.

The graduates of the Lay Readers' School, started two years ago in this diocese by Bishop Stires, recently formed an organization with the aid of Bishop Larned. They wish to make it known that they hold themselves in readiness to help in any way needed, and they wish to develop their own usefulness through association. In the

(Continued on page 22.)

Family Department

JULY.

1. Monday.
4 Thursday.
7. Sixth Sunday after Trinity.
14. Seventh Sunday after Trinity.
21. Eighth Sunday after Trinity.
25. Thursday. S. James
28 Ninth Sunday after Trinity
31. Wednesday.

COLLECT FOR SEVENTH SUNDAY AFTER TRINITY.

Lord of all Power and might, Who art the Author and Giver of all good things; Graft in our hearts the love of Thy Name, increase in us true religion, nourish us with all goodness, and of Thy great mercy keep us in the same through Jesus Our Lord. Amen.

SUCH AS I HAVE.

Lord, I have laid my heart upon Thine altar,
But I cannot get the wood to burn;
It hardly flares when it begins to falter,
And to the dark return.

Old sap or night-fallen dew has damped the fuel,
In vain my breath would flame provoke;
You see, at every door attempt's renewal,
To Thee ascends the smoke.

'Tis all I have, smoke, failure, foiled endeavor,
Coldness and doubt and palsied lack—
Such as I have, I send Thee: Perfect Giver.
Send Thou Thy lightning back.

—George MacDonald.

The Universal Need of Jesus.

While all giving for religious purposes in America has been going up during recent years, the giving for the missionary end of religion has been gradually slipping. On the foreign mission fields many schools and hospitals and churches have been closed and missionaries have been dismissed. We are in the backwash of a lack of interest in the world. After the World War we became disillusioned, and withdrew to ourselves, and became interested in things rather than in people.

At the center of it all is the fact that we are not quite certain that Christ is necessary to human life. If we were certain, I would not have to plead the cause of Christian missions—for the very essence of the gospel is the giving of ourselves for others.

Idolatry is simply a yearning for God to be near. The old Hindus first worshipped three gods, then thirty-three, then 330 gods, then 33,000 gods, then 33,000,000 gods. They added god to god, hoping to find a satisfactory one. The only reason we do not also add god to god is because Christ showed us what God is like. God is Christ-like. The answer to the mystery of the universe is God; the answer to the mystery of God is Christ.

The only reason we do not have the thousands of superstitions of India and the rest of Asia is because a man once came and brushed aside superstition. That man was Christ.

I have looked into the soul of the East, and I have found it is empty of all but yearning.

Men in Christ find satisfaction for their yearning; men without Christ do not find it. The whole world is a great area of human need. No one in East or in West is getting along well without Christ.

The human heart is made for God, as the eye is made for light, as the ear is made for hearing, as the esthetic nature is made for beauty.

The Eastern nations have resented the constant portrayal of their worst side. They do not like the lower parts of their life to be flaunted; America would not like the lower parts of her life flaunted across the world. I have learned to love and respect India, and yet I know that her needs are still there. I wish I could tell you that the caste system was broken, but 60,000,000 outcasts are still here. I wish it were otherwise, but superstition and ignorance and disease are still in India.

We missionaries see as deep a need as ever, but we try to keep her from being degraded in the eyes of the world. But we see that the very fiber of men's thinking is being changed by the gospel in India and elsewhere in the East.

We see the "Christ of the Beginnings" everywhere. We find Buddhists and Hindus who have been led by the Christian example and spirit to found orphanages. We find individuals who try to live according to Christ's way, though they do not profess His name; we find the spirit of Christ influencing legislation, making more happy the place of women and children.

Everywhere we see the beginnings of Christ's influence and an interest in His teachings. We are not satisfied with beginnings only, but we rejoice in them.

Is Christ to be also the "Christ of the Final Word?"

Is the gospel concerning Christ a religion, or the religion, or religion itself? We believe that it is religion itself. We believe that the Orient which has now the beginning will accept Christ also as "religion", as the "final word".

A learned professor of philosophy recently said to me, "You know we in Europe are looking for a new religion." I asked him what essential he thought this new religion would have, and he replied, "The scientific attitude—the love of truth; a humanism—a love of humans."

But, as I told the professor, those are essentials of Christianity, Christ had the scientific attitude, He sought the truth and condemned the superstitions and untruths everywhere about Him. And was there ever a man more in love with humans than was Christ?

Christ not only loved "humanity", He loved people, personally and individually. The terms "the least", "the last", and "the lost", were constantly on His lips.

No, Christianity is not afraid of science. All we ask, that it be sufficiently scientific. All we say is to go the limit and seek the facts. When we get all the facts we will come out at Christ. The more scientific the attitude to life grows, the more masterful Christ becomes in the world.

The gospel comes out of life, it speaks to life; it comes out of reality, it speaks to reality.

We believe that Christ shows us God and can bring us to God. We believe that He is the "final word". Since the center of the gospel is "to give", we must share our knowledge of Christ with needy people everywhere—and we must share everything we have.

Let Christ have full play in your soul and you will be a missionary or stop being a Christian.

I found people in South America in my three months' tour deeply interested in Christianity if the gospel were presented not in dogmatism and traditionalism, but as a vital way of life. Many thousands of the educated peoples have broken away from their traditional faith and are following various new cults or are classified as agnostics and atheists.

These men and women flocked to our meetings, and we found in them the same yearning for something that would satisfy their souls as we had found in the Orient. The need for Christ is the one universal need.—Dr. E. Stanley Jones, in Boston Transcript.

My Wife.

(Written concerning one wife and inscribed to all true wives, who deserve a nobler tribute than can be penned by any husband.)

My wife is the woman who married me. She knows me at my best and at my worst—but that is another story. I am absent from home a good bit, but I am well acquainted with my wife and children.

Fifty-odd years ago a beautiful mother and her baby girl paused at a place like Ephrath, which was Bethlehem, where two worlds meet. Halfway here and halfway there they parted. This babe "of the right hand" came on alone. Alone, the Rachel mother went on to the land where angels of children behold the face of our Father.

That little girl went to school and returned home; she afterwards taught in the schools and returned home; she gave much time to the Church and returned home; she married well, her husband himself being judge, and she has found her throne room of usefulness and happiness in that sacred, sunny spot, our home.

My wife was a spinster, but she does not spin; our flax wheel is a relic. Nor does she weave; the loom is now an heirloom. For all this, my wife is an orthodox Hannah, after the pattern of 1 Samuel 2:19. She makes, remakes, patches, and darns garments new and old for our Samuels and their sisters.

My wife has a piano, a radio, a fireless cooker, an electric washing machine, a cuckoo clock, and a family tree, but no career. Her accomplishments are the refinements that fit her for wifehood, motherhood, and sainthood.

My wife has not the face and figure of Venus of Milo, but she has the beauty mark that God puts upon virtue. She is not a prima donna; she is a mother donna and hums sleep-time lullabies for her children with a voice as soft as a flute note.

My wife gives attention to the health and happiness of our children, to their bread-and-butter needs, their clothing, their play, their school work, and their religious instruction. People who interfere with this program do not find my wife interesting.

My wife has a carefully selected shelf of books—books on child nature and child nurture, children's storybooks, and the Book of books. She attends the meetings of the Parent-Teacher Association and cooperates with teachers in the Church School. Mother and children close the door of each day with a golden key—bedtime stories and prayers. My wife's meetinghouse religion is positive; her dwelling house religion is superlative.

My appointments are not my wife's disappointments. She can gather her jewelry, which consists mainly of two rings, and her jewels, which consist wholly of two girls and a pair of boys, and move from a home into a house between suns.

I would not have any gentle readers to conclude that I married a piece of perfection; I did not. Genealogical and theological accuracy compels me to admit that my wife traces her ancestry back to Eden. She is akin to Eve and Mary Wordsworth:

"A creature not too bright or good
For human nature's daily food,
For transient sorrows, simple wiles,
Praise, blame, love, kisses, tears, and smiles."

If my wife were perfect, I should want to slip away with Mr. Jiggs to Dinty Moore's now and again. As it is, I am quite comfortable in her company.

I have an idea that my wife would like always to remain her husband's sweetheart. But what's the good of that? He gives her flowers and candy at Christmas, on her birthday and wedding anniversary. He works hard to support the home. He lives straight to deserve and give her and the children an honorable name. If it were necessary, he would open his veins and give his lifeblood for her.

But perhaps a wife longs for the fondling of affection more than she needs blood transfusion; therefore a word to the wise: Whisper into the listening heart of your wife ever and anon, "I love my sweetheart", meaning, of course, the one you married.

"She's adorned
Amply that in her husband's eye looks lovely,
The truest mirror that an honest wife
Can see her beauty in."

—Dehaven, In Home Quarterly.

"Peace Be Unto You."

On the dawn of the First Easter morning a weeping woman stood beside a grave. And on the evening of that day, within closed doors, a band of sorrowful men met together with fear in their hearts, "fear of the Jews". The woman was weeping, and the men were sad, because they had lost Jesus. And their hearts were sore, and their hopes were dead. But "Jesus came". Out of the awful silence into which men thought they had put Him forever, He came. Came into the garden and said, "Mary"; and a wild joy filled her heart: "I have seen the Lord." Came again at the close of the day to the forlorn and terrified band, and said: "Peace be unto you." Spoken to men who had met in fear, and who looked forward to troubled days, it had a wondrous power to soothe, coming from the lips of the Lord, fresh from His victory over death. "The disciples, therefore, were glad when they saw the Lord." Jesus is strangely earnest about the peace. Those worn, hunted men need it; and He will not leave them till He has made them sure of it. "Jesus, therefore, said unto them again, 'Peace be unto you'."

The vision of the risen Christ, with a message of peace upon His lips, turned the disciples' terror into gladness, and still today are that vision and that message mighty to save from any grief or fear that frets us. To all who face sorrow, defeat, bereavement, death, the Easter voice says, "Peace be unto you"—a voice from a world wherein these things have all been swallowed up in victory.—J. E. McFayden.

For The Southern Churchman.

"GOOD NEWS" TO EVERY CREATURE.

F. B. Stone.

We thank Thee for the greatness of the task
That Thou hast giv'n Thy Church to do for Thee,
Too great for human kind, except it ask
And gave the strength from Thee on bended knee;
"Go ye and teach all nations," calls for grace
That can be found on earth no other place.

Lord, wing Thy workers forth all o'er the earth,
Thy chosen ones filled with the Holy Ghost,
To speed Thy Word around the whole world's girth—
By millions take it to the scattered host;
That every one may read God's Holy Word,
And learn of Thee of Whom they've never heard.

And may Thy people who remain behind,
Pray daily for the workers far away,
That through new-birth repentant souls may find
Their way to Thee, a nation in a day,
And thus be done the Heavenly Father's will,
As Thy loved Church its purpose doth fulfill.

The Grace That Enlarges.

By the Rev. J. S. Kendall, D. D.

The efficiency of the Church of Jesus Christ depends on the strength of her individual members. This being true, every child of God should be anxious to meet every condition that will lead to his largest development and most fruitful service. I wish here to call special attention to the grace of liberality or giving as a source of strength.

The Apostle in 2 Corinthians 8:7, classes giving with other graces, such as faith, utterance, knowledge, diligence, and love, and he says, "As ye abound in these, see that ye abound in this grace (liberality) also". I can point out only a few general principles.

1. Liberality destroys selfishness. There is nothing that so dwarfs the soul and hinders the growth of the individual in the spiritual life as selfishness. Jesus taught that to become His disciples we had to deny self; and experience has taught us that to live a life of fellowship with Him we must live a life of self-denial. There is no channel through which the average man can put self to death and destroy selfishness more quickly than by the liberal giving of his means.

2. It develops love. Where our treasures are, there will our hearts be also; or, in other words, where our investments are, there will be our love and heart affections. If money is myself, as Doctor Schauffler states, then where our money is invested we are personally invested, and as we invest ourselves in any cause there is a growing love for that cause. It is the giving of life and service in the defense of the Flag that caused such deep love for the Stars and Stripes. As we give bountifully, whether it be in service or means, for the cause of Christ, it will increase our love for Him and the cause for which He laid down His life.

3. Liberality has power to multiply the service of the individual. We can go with our money where we cannot go in person. It can toil for us in avenues for which we are unfitted; it can speak all languages and do all kinds of service; it can minister to all conditions of life. With it we can perpetuate the activities of our lives; can educate and train workers; can provide medicine and physician for those in dire need; can build churches and endow schools, can send out missionaries and provide comfort for aged ministers; can put in motion influences and activities that will continue when we are unable to serve.

4. It leads to prayer and thanksgiving. As our investments are made in the cause of the Kingdom, our prayers will increase in fervency and power for that Kingdom. When the home Church will give of its life and substance for extending the Kingdom into the regions beyond, it will be led to greater service in prayer for those parts. Read St. Paul in 2 Corinthians 9:11: "Ye being enriched in everything unto all liberality, which worketh through us thanksgiving to God." As we begin to praise, we shall begin to enlarge and grow in strength. Again, it will cause the benefactors to cry unto God for us. See 2 Corinthians 9:12-14: "For ministration of this service not only filleth up the measure of the wants of saints, but aboundeth also through many thanksgivings unto God; seeing that through the proving of you by this ministration they glorify God for the obedence of your confession unto the Gospel of Christ, and for the liberality of your contribution unto them and unto all; while they themselves also, with supplication on your behalf, long after you by reason of the exceeding grace of God in you."

5. Methods must be right. If we desire to have our giving a source of strength, we will have to adopt such methods of giving as will make God a real factor in our daily business. I am sure that God intends that man's employment shall be to him an aid in his spiritual life. We know that, with some, money-getting tends to divorce them from God; but this should not be so. I am persuaded that, when we get a proper vision of the relation of our lives and substance to the Kingdom of God, farming, trading, and honest labor of every kind will deepen and quicken the spiritual life.—Rev. J. S. Kendall, D. D.

The Use of the Bible.

The primary use of the Bible is to find the Redeemer in it. Many other persons and very many other things can be found, but if men miss the Redeemer and redemption they are not getting to the heart of it. This is its center. The God revealed to mankind in its pages is above all the saving God. And in this day of many voices, some of them distracting voices, our churches ought to be speaking in the sure voice of those who hold all their other views around this one as the center. It is not enough for any one to hold better views. And it is pure pharisaism to hold any views with conceit. Evangelical insight must be matched and must be saved by evangelistic fervor. Otherwise the light becomes darkness.—William Fraser McDowell, in "A Real Use of the Bible".

For the Young Folks

For The Southern Churchman.

'TIS HARD.

Maude F. Mumma.

'Tis hard to count the blessings
At home, or near at hand;
We think we have to find them
In some far distant land.

'Tis hard to see the beauty,
That everywhere is nigh;
The glory of the sunset,
The splendor of the sky.

'Tis hard to see the greatness,
That in the soul doth dwell;
What treasures there lie hidden,
No tongue of man could tell.

Green fields are always greenest,
When not too near at hand;
A prophet without honor,
Must dwell in his own land.

The Kitten Brooch.

They both saw it at once, the tiny kitten brooch. It was a cat's head in a grey enamel with emerald eyes.

Primrose and her cousin Petronel, who was staying with her, were bending over the mysterious holes in the floor that the men had made. Electric lights was being put into Hillsboro Lodge, and the workmen had been obliged to take up the boards of the nursery in order to bury the long grey ribbon wire you could bend in your hands under the floor.

It was a wet afternoon and the girls had been very glad, because it gave them an excuse to haunt the nursery passage to see what the men were doing.

Petronel, who lived in Norway generally, was not so excited about the coming of the electric lights as was Primrose.

"We all have it out there," she said, grandly, as she sat on Primrose's pretty fawn colored wooden bed, so charmingly painted with mauve wisteria and swung her long legs.

"But there's something awfully wonderful about it even if you have had it for a long time," persisted Primrose. "Is it all light inside that wire, and do fairies live inside it?"

It was then that they both stooped down to look into the boarding, and saw the little brooch sticking up out of a small crevice.

"Oh!" said Primrose.

"Oh!" said Petronel.

One rosy hand and one brown grabbed at the brooch. Petronel, who was stronger, though younger than the ten-year-old Primrose, got it and brought it up out of its hiding place. She held it out for inspection. As they both stared at it they both wanted it most tremendously. It was so extraordinarily pretty! It was the liveliest little pussy's head. The kitten's face, somehow or other, was much more like a kitten than such imitations usually are; the whiskers on its round grey face were lifelike.

"Somebody must have dropped it on the old oak floor very long ago, and it slipped down between the boards."

Primrose wanted the brooch passionately.

"You're not fond of cats, Petronel," she stammered, after Nancy had gone down to get tea. "I am. And I've just lost my own live kitten; remember, it's been away a week, and it will never come back!"

"The brooch will go with my mauve linen dress," said Petronel firmly. She had dashed off to her wardrobe and had got out her new frock. The cat, with its winking, friendly eyes, certainly looked very delightful against a mauve background. "I'd love to have it," Petronel repeated breathlessly. "I'm your guest, too. Guests always get things given to them."

"I want it specially because it's like James, my dear kitten that's lost," breathed Primrose, faintly.

Petronel said nothing; and, nurse, coming in, glanced from one hot, angry face to the other, took the kitten brooch and laid it on the dressing table, and made them both have tea.

No more was said just then. The evening passed somehow, but when both girls were in bed Primrose lay wakeful. She knew she ought to be unselfish and give her guest the brooch, and she was screwing herself to make the sacrifice. Beautiful brooch, what a memento it would have been of dear, grey, live Jamesay, who had so mysteriously disappeared from his happy home. "But I must play the game, of course," Primrose told herself again and again.

With an inward groan, but a firm resolve to do the right thing, Primrose, in her pink nightdress, at last jumped out of bed, went to the dressing table, fetched the brooch and laid it on Peronel's pillow. Petronel was awake, but sleepy. She clutched it with a happy grunt, "Thanks awfully," and Primrose slowly, slowly went back to bed again, perfectly miserable in the pale moonlight.

Lying down she felt relieved and resigned, tired but peaceful. It was all over now, fiery temptation. It was only because she wanted to remember dear Jamesey.

Then she glanced toward the window, and, through her tear-filled eyes, she saw a silvery-grey kitten on the window-ledge waiting to come in. It was Jamesey himself come home, real furry, purry Jamesay, alive and better than all the kitten brooches in the world!—British Weekly.

A Plucky Connecticut Girl.

By Laura B. Hall.

Every one knows that during the Civil War men were drafted for the army, both North and South; but all may not know that in the Revolutionary War, at least in some parts of the country, horses were drafted as well as men.

Think what his horse was to the isolated New England farmer of those early days! No steamcars or steamboats then carried him—or anybody—anywhere; even the lumbering old stage coach had not yet arrived; no daily mail brought him the news from the uttermost parts of the earth. The farmer's horse furnished his only means of communication with the outer parts of his limited world. On this useful animal did he jog along to church on Sunday, with his good wife on the pillion behind him; on week days the same broad back carried to mill the corn laboriously raised on his rocky acres, to be ground into the meal that made so large a proportion of the family fare. And how was the country store, with its calico and molasses, its codfish and good-natured gossip, to be reached without this trusty helper?

Somewhere in the State of Connecticut—we should not like to tell this tale of meanness if the name of the grand old State did not bring to mind Putnam and Hale and many another brave and worthy son—lived a man whose horse the government had drafted. This man made up his mean and selfish mind that not his own, but the horse of a poor widow who lived not far away, should be the one to go to the war. So over he went to where the unprotected woman was trying to keep a home for her six fatherless children, and informed her that her horse had been drawn for the army, and that he had been directed to come at a certain hour early next morning to take it to the place appointed for the gathering of the drafted horses.

Imagine the consternation of the mother and the lamentations of the children over this dreadful news!

But twelve-year-old Mabel, who had listened in silence, kept her own counsel; and when bedtime came she went up to her little room as usual. But she quietly waited till all the household were asleep, and then she gently opened her window, crept down the roof of the shed below it, and noiselessly slid to the ground.

She went to the barn, led out the horse, put herself without any saddle upon his faithful back, and away she rode, her familiar voice softly urging the animal to his utmost speed.

We do not know whether the night was light or dark; but we do know that the dauntless child went on and on "till she came to a thick wood" (as it says in the robber stories), and into its gloomy depths she guided her precious horse.

There she stayed all through the long, lonely night. It was not until long after sunrise, when she knew the danger was over, that the determined girl returned to her home.

What must have been the clamorous joy of those children of a hundred years ago, and the relief of the anxious mother, when the old horse clattered soberly into his stable, and his courageous young rider went into the house for her breakfast, like any other hungry little girl!

The crafty neighbor was probably not so jubilant, for after all his scheming he had been forced to furnish his own horse to the government, since the intended substitute was nowhere to be found.

Mabel lived to see the war ended, and our beloved Stars and Stripes floating over a free and peaceful land; and it was a descendant of her family, a lady who wears a crown of silver hair, but whose heart is still brave and young, who told the writer this true story of the plucky girl whom she called "Aunt Mabel".—Religious Herald.

Winning the Race.

Jimmie had been coddled during his long illness, for every one had acted as though his slightest wish must be granted, and the result was a very selfish boy. This naturally distressed his mother, Mrs. Reimer.

"Jimmie, dear," she said as she overheard him refuse to lend his skates to a less fortunate playfellow, Bill. "If you had no skates or your skates were being repaired, would you not desire Bill to lend you his?" "I suppose so, mother, but then you see I do not need to borrow, for I have everything," and he gave her a big hug which made Mrs. Reimer breathless.

"That is just it, sonny, you should place yourself in the position of others. Just think of their side, and you will be more generous."

Mrs. Reimer was grieved; and as Jim genuinely loved his mother, he said: "Of course, if you want me to lend them I will, mother, but I really need more practice for the race."

"That's fine," said his mother, though she would have preferred to have him lend the skates, because he wanted to rather than for her sake, "take them over now, will you, and on your way back call for your father; he said he would come home for lunch."

Not very cheerfully Jim started off, and on the way he met Bill. "Say, Bill, what is wrong with your skates?"

"Most everything. Dad is fixing them, but he says they will not last very long. I hope they will last throughout the race. Of course, I know you are the best skater around here, but you never can tell. You might have an off day, and I'd have a chance to win."

"Well," sighed Jim, for he really did not want to part with the skates, "I've changed my mind. You can use my skates this afternoon, but be sure to bring them back, for I want to do a little practicing myself."

"Gee, you're a peach! Thanks a lot, Jim. I haven't skatched for so long a time that I was afraid I'd be rusty and squeak when I moved."

Bill's face glowed with such happiness that Jim went away with just a little glow transplanted to the region of his heart.

"I am the best skater, you know, dad, and I'm sure I'll win the silver skates. Won't you be proud of me?" Jim had called for his father and they were on the way home.

"Proud!" Mr. Reimer's voice shook as he recalled the days when he and his wife anxiously feared that their son might always remain an invalid. "Son, you win that race and you'll get the sweater set you've been speaking about." He gave Jim a playful cuff.

"I'll do it, you'll see. Be there at ten to cheer."

The day of the race was just the finest for the purpose, tingling but not bitterly cold. A large crowd had come to view even the minor events.

At last the big race was started. At the sound of the pistol they were off. Jim, Bill, and eight others of ages between ten and thirteen. At first they seemed to be evenly matched, but gradually Jim and Bill drew away. First one seemed to be ahead, but before one could really decide, the other had passed. Suddenly Bill wobbled. It took just a second to make the necessary adjustment, but during that time Jim forged ahead; and even though Bill put forth every effort, he could not regain what he had lost. It seemed that Jim would surely win when just before the finishing line, for no visible reason, he stopped to make an adjustment, a slight one, for as soon as Bill had passed he was up and finished second.

After the race Jim received condolences and Bill congratulations, which they both took in good sportsman-like manner.

"Too bad, son," said Mr. Reimer, glancing keenly at Jim's face, "if it weren't for that accident, you would have won the sweater set. Now, I guess you will have to wait a year."

"I guess so, dad," but Jim did not look very doleful; in fact, he smiled, for Bill had just passed with his skates and had told Jim that this time the better skater did not win, but really deserved to.

That evening Mr. Reimer entered the house carrying a large package.

"For me?" inquired Jim, and then seeing the contents. "Why, dad, you said I'd have to wait. I didn't win the race—but this sure is a spiffy set."

"Like it? I'm glad. Who said you didn't win the race? My son, you won a much finer one. Make a clean breast of it to your dad. Why did you pretend that something was wrong with your skates?"

"Pretend Oh, only," and Jim stopped embarrassed. "Well, my skates are good, and Bill's are a wreck. The prize meant a lot to him. I kept thinking all the time of what mother had said, and gee, dad, don't tell any one, but it's funny. I really—don't laugh—felt more elated when I lost this race than when I won the race two years ago. Did you see Bill's face?"—Christian Advocate.

THE CHASE.

Tell me, how can I ever find out
What the little wind looks like, that hurries about
So quickly and shyly from place to place,
And why does he always keep hiding his face?

I follow him flying from tree to tree
And run through the meadow as lightly as he!
For how shall I know what he's like, until
I come on him, breathlessly standing still?
—Everyland.

Dangerous Travelling Companions.

Wild animals shipped across the sea sometimes get loose on the voyage. Some years ago Mr. Clarence Bartlett came over from India to England with six or seven thousands dollars' worth of animals on a sailing ship.

He had an Indian badger loose for two weeks, and a specimen of the sacred monkey of northern India for nearly the whole voyage. Where the badger concealed itself during the day nobody knew but the meat and boiled rice that were put out for it at night always disappeared before morning.

The monkey lived up in the rigging comfortably enough, notwithstanding that it had five feet of chain hanging to it. Food was put out for every night, and by day it satisfied its hunger by catching and eating the potatoes that the sailors amused themselves by throwing to it. One day a sailor threw up a lump of coal, and got it back very promptly on the top of his head.

A more dangerous experience was one in which a hyena broke loose on board a ship going to London from the Persian Gulf. The captain ordered the shooting of the animal, but when it came to executing the order the hyena could not be found. Naturally everybody on board was more or less nervous, especially at night. It was decided to keep the hyena well fed, and to this end food in plenty was left in dark corners of the vessel.

When the ship arrived in dock the stevedores, hearing that a wild animal was at large upon her, hesitated about beginning to unload. They finally summoned sufficient courage to unload and soon found and captured the hyena. It was in the hold, and was in splendid condition. How it came to its hiding-place could never be explained.

Another unexplained mystery was the loss of a python. Nine pythons were sent across the continent. They are usually sent by threes in a sack, the sacks' being put in a large box and the lid nailed down. This time, however, they were sent loose in a box.

Their owner himself saw nine put in, but only eight were there at the end of the journey. The box was perfectly tight, and the python could not have got out. It was never known what happened, whether one swallowed another—and pythons are not known to do this—or whether the box had been tampered with. Anyhow, the snake was gone.—Exchange.

WHICH WOULD YOU BE?

Little Miss Smile and Master Frown
Went off for a ramble out of town.
The skies were blue and the blossoms gay,
And birds were singing along the way.

"How clear and sweet they sing," said she,
"But they make my head ache," grumbled he;
"Oh, look," she cried, "at those roses red!"
"But they prick my fingers so," he said.

"See the bees in the clover"—"But bees have stings,
And those dandelions are common things!"
Then scolding and scowling Master Frown
Empty-handed went back to town.

But little Miss Smile along the way
Had gathered a bunch of the blossoms gay,
And she laughed and jumped and sang for glee,
Now, which of the two would you rather be?

The Runaways.

Jim was a little boy and Caddy was a yellow dog with a tail that curled over his back in a funny little queue.

"Tisn't much fun playing by ourselves, is it, Caddy?" said Jim, as they romped in the yard. "I wonder why Ted doesn't come." He climbed up on the fence and looked toward Ted's house. He saw Frances, Ted's little sister, but there was no sign of Ted.

A moment later Jim and Caddy were running up the street.

"Hello, Frances!" said Jim, when he reached the other house. "Where's Ted?"

"Oh, didn't you know?" cried Frances. "Grandfather came and took Ted home with him to stay a week. I wanted to go, too, but I'm going to be flower girl at Aunt Beth's wedding. Mother is down at the church now, helping to decorate it."

"Let's go down and watch," said Jim.

After they had walked for a long while, Frances said, "When I go to church with mother it is only a little way, but now it seems ever so far."

"It must be right round the next corner," replied Jim.

But when they had turned the corner there was no church to be seen.

"That's queer!" said Jim. "It must be the next corner, then."

But again he was mistaken.

Then they decided to go home, but by that time the corners were badly mixed.

"Oh, dear!" said Frances, as a tear trickled down to the end of her nose. "I'm afraid we shall never see our mothers any more."

Jim had been looking very solemn, but he had to smile at that. "Why, the idea, Frances Hall!" he said. "Of course, we shall!"

Frances shook her hair over her eyes and began to sob. But just then there was a loud hiss somewhere near, and she stopped her sobbing.

"Oh! looked at that crooked cat," she cried.

Caddy looked, too; the cat had seen him first and had arched her back in anger. The instant Caddy spied her he was off like a flash. Before the children knew what was happening the two animals were having a wild race.

"Caddy, Caddy, come back!" Jim called; but Caddy paid no heed.

That was more than Jim could stand. "If he gets lost I shall never see him again!" he cried; and, catching Frances by the hand, he went racing after the fleeing pair.

Up on street and down another the four went running—the black cat, the yellow dog, and the two panting children. They ran across a park and then into a side street, where both the cat and Caddy disappeared in an alley.

Heel Toe Race.

There is only one hard thing about this race, but that one thing is awfully hard. Each runner has to put his right foot down on the ground and then put his left foot in front of the right foot, so close that his right toes are touching his left heel. Then he lifts his right foot and puts it close in front of the left foot, and so on all the way—to the goal and back.

If any small boy or girl can do this fast—but then, I needn't offer a prize, because no small boy or girl can do it fast.—"What Shall We Play?"

Whose Silk?

Elsie had the strip of pink flowered silk. Floy saw it in her little sister's hands.

"Don't eut that," she said.

"I will, too," insisted Elsie, gathering up her strip of silk and tripping right off with it. "I'm going to Mabel's right now and make a doll dress out of it. Mother said I might."

Floy closed her lips tightly. She could not believe that her mother would give away that strip of pink silk her aunt gave her—not if she knew it was Floy's. Yet there Elsie had gone running off with the strip of pink silk in her hands, to make a doll dress, when Floy wanted to make little sachets out of it.

It was all she could do to keep from running after her little sister and taking the goods away from her. She wasn't so sure she could catch her. Even if she did, if she tried to take the silk away from her, when Elsie thought it was her own, they would probably ruin the pretty silk in struggling over it.

Besides, Floy had promised her mother that she would have the back yard cleaned up nicely by the time she got home, and she would have to work fast to do it. She was really glad that she was working with a rake, and dumping things in the trash can, and doing things like that. It relieved her feelings much more than any quiet work could have done, like sewing, for instance.

But she did want to sew as soon as her mother came home and she could get to it. She only hoped Elsie wouldn't cut the goods into very small pieces in making her doll dress, so when her mother made her give it up, enough sachet squares could still be cut out of it.

When Floy had anything she wanted to keep very carefully indeed, she put it in her little cedar chest. That's where she thought she put the strip of pink-flowered silk her Aunt Maud gave her. It was such a pretty shade of pink, and it felt so soft to the touch as Floy ran her fingers over it. It was just what she wanted to make satchets out of, and there was just enough of it to make the number she wanted.

She wanted the first one to be especially pretty, because it was to be her mother's birthday gift. And she wanted to make it right away that very evening, because the next day was her mother's birthday. She could do it, all right, if she could just get her hands on that strip of pink silk.

She had bought the other things she needed on her way home from school. She had her sachet powder and a little roll of cotton, and two yards of very narrow pink satin ribbon.

But Floy knew very well that, no matter how pretty a sachet she might make, there would be something wrong with her gift, somehow, if she had been cross and quarreled with her little sister about the goods to make it out of. She knew that would just spoil it all for mother, and for her, too. With all her might she held her temper down. But that strip of pink silk was hers. Aunt Maud gave it to her.

She finished cleaning up the yard befor her mother came home, and ran into the kitchen to wash her hands. Everything did look nice, she thought to herself, as she looked out of the window at the neat back yard with everything in order and all trash disposed of. Somehow her disposition had smoothed out, too. She didn't feel so cross as she had before.

"I believe I'll go up stairs and get out the things I have," she decided, "so when mother comes home and makes Elsie give me the pink silk I can go to work right away."

She had thrown the little package with her purchases in it on the bed. She got it now and took out the cotton and the sachet powder and the length of narrow pink satin ribbon.

"They are going to be pretty," she smiled, measuring the length of the ribbon by doubling it in her hands. "I believe I'll just get out my little scissors and cut the ribbon. I already know what length I want it to be."

Stepping to her little cedar chest, she lifted the lid—and there lay the pretty strip of pink-flowered silk her aunt had given her.

"Oh!" gasped Floy, staring at the silk before her eyes.

Just then she heard her mother's step on the porch.

"I surely am glad I didn't say any more to Elsie than I did," she said, with a little feeling of shame because of her anger with her little sister, "but I didn't know there was any of this pink silk in the house except what Aunt Maude gave me."

A moment later Elsie came running up the stairs.

"Let me put it in your cedar chest till morning, will you, sister?" she begged, holding up a cunning little doll dressed in pink silk, and seated on a fat pin-cushion Elsie had bought for a nickel.

"You see," she whispered, as if afraid her mother down in the kitchen might hear her, "it's for mother's birthday. Don't you think she'll like it? I sewed her on the pin-cushion. See the big stitches underneath?" she giggled, lifting up the doll's pink skirts, "and you stick the pins all around her."

"Oh, mother will like that; I know she will," praised Floy, taking the doll on the pin-cushion and slipping it in the corner of her cedar chest to wait for morning and mother's birthday.

"I didn't want to stop to tell you all about it this afternoon," explained Elsie, "because I just had to get it made when I could get Mabel to help me with it. I knew you were busy out in the yard then, and you'd have to make your present after supper; I heard you say so. What are you going to make for mother, sister?"

"A sachet out of this," answered Floy, taking up her strip of pink-flowered silk.

"Oh, it's just like the piece mother gave me!" exclaimed Elsie. "Auntie gave it to her for something, and it wasn't just what mother needed, so she gave it to me. And now I'm going to give it back to her in a birthday pin-cushion. And the pin-cushion and sachet will match, isn't it funny," laughed Elsie, running downstairs so full of her secret that it was going to be hard work for her to keep it till morning.—The Elementary Teacher.

Don't blame your friends for judging you by your worst self, for often that is the only self you give them to see. You may have a heart of gold, but your friends do not know it unless you show it. You may have beautiful thoughts, but your friends cannot know it unless you express them. If you show your best self more often, people will be glad to judge you by it.—Exchange.

WHILE IN RICHMOND LET US KNOW IF YOU LIKE OUR FOOD

Mrs. Cook's Cafeteria

Near St. Paul's Parish House
Richmond, Va.

INCORPORATED 1882

Virginia Fire and Marine Insurance Company

Of Richmond, Va.

Assets - - - $3,640,152.88

Fred'k E. Nolting, President.

B. C. Lewis, Jr., Secretary — J. C. Watson, Treasurer
J. M. Leake, General Agent — Wm. P. Hill, Asst. Secretary

Classified Advertising and Notices

All notices and advertisements, excepting positions wanted, will be inserted in this department at a rate of 20 cents per agate line, each insertion. Special rates on contracts of any length. A rate of 15 cents per line is made to persons seeking positions. No advertisement accepted for less than 50 cents.

Copy for this department must be received not later than Tuesday of the week in which it is intended that the first insertion shall appear.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

ANTIQUES.

WE PAY THE HIGHEST CASH PRICES for old-time furniture and antiques of all kinds. H. C. Valentine, 209 East Franklin Street, Richmond, Va.

RELIGIOUS TRACTS.

GOOD RELIGIOUS TRACTS MAY BE had by writing to LEVI C. SULLIVAN, blind tract minister, P. O. Box 43, Roanoke, Va. Some excellent tracts for prison work.

SOLD BY A SHUT-IN.

MEDIUM SIZE ORANGE COLOR SELF-Filling Fountain Pens, with gold bands and solid 14K gold pen points, $1.00 each. Jumbo Pens, color black, $1.25. Edward P. Broxton, Keysville, Ga.

FOR CONVALESCENTS.

HOME FOR CONVALESCENTS AND INVALIDS; nursing care; special diet; large shady yard. Rates reasonable. Address Mrs. G. H. Trumbo, 231 Blue Ridge Avenue, Front Royal, Va.

SITUATION WANTED.

WANTED, POSITION IN SCHOOL OR INstitution; matron, linen room, or general office work. Address Miss Garrett, 409 East Franklin Street, Richmond, Va.

WANTED BY SEPTEMBER 1 POSITION as housekeeper or matron in school or institution. Address "Matron" care of Southern Churchman.

NURSE DESIRES POSITION FOR SUMmer. Country neighborhood preferred. Experienced, cultured, good references. Address "J" care of Southern Church man

GOVERNESS DESIRES POSITION. Would like to get in touch with party leaving city for northern resort or beach. Reliable, cultured, good references. Address "B", care of Southern Churchman fall it is proposed to hold a meeting of all the licensed lay readers in the diocese, perhaps as many as two hundred.

CHURCH INTELLIGENCE.

(Continued from page 16.)

A beautiful new window in Christ Church, Mahasset, was dedicated by the Rev. Charles H. Ricker, rector, on Sunday morning, June 23. The theme of the window is the Glory of Christ, and it occupies the space over the altar. The central panel shows the Crucifixion below and the Ascension above. Flanking this are the Nativity and the Presentation, and the outer panels show Isaiah, the prophet of the Messiah, and David, who sang His praises in anticipation. The window is in rich colors, and done in the medieval manner. It was designed and made by Henry Wynd Young of New York, and given George W. Skidmore in memeroy of his wife, Rosalie Elizabeth Skidmore.

The Church of the Redeemer, Brooklyn, displayed the American and the British flags in the chancel on a recent Sunday morning, and the rector, the Rev. Thos. J. Lacey, Ph. D., urged his people to join with their brethren of the Church of England in thanksgiving for the King's restoration to health. Dr. Lacey is thus quoted in a daily paper: "As people closely bound to the English, we ought to offer our thanks for the recovery of King George from his recent illness, and recognize that the strongest part he plays in English affairs is the creation of a great wave of good feeling. His illness demonstrated his popularity. Such good-will should exist among the peoples of the earth. When it does, all nations like America and Canada will have no need for forts on their border lines.

The seventy-seventh annual report of the Church Charity Foundation of this diocese has just been issued. It covers the year 1928. This diocesan charity is believed to be unique in its scope, including in a single corporation a general hospital of 232 beds, a school of nursing with provision for 102 pupil nurses, a home for the aged caring for 78, cottages for 40 orphan children, and a home for the blind with a capacity of 18. The total expense of maintaining these departments for 1928 was $247,742.92, and the total receipts from patients and beneficiaries was $103,027.29. The difference was nearly made up by income of $132,975.46 from invested endowments, and donations of $6,985.27; the actual deficit being but $4,561. A large sum of money was paid in during the year towards building the new St. John's Hospital, and the dedication of the new Hospital was the outstanding event of the year. Endowment capital was increased during the year by $63,047.21, and now amounts to $2,580,283.52.

The story of the beginning of this great charity, in 1851, by a few people, with faith and vision but little financial means, ought to be of interest to those who need encouragement to make a beginning in faith and trust.

The rector and people of St. Josepn's Church, Queens Village, ought to be feeling proud and grateful for the success that has attended their joint efforts to build up their church. In the past twelve months ninety-seven persons have been confirmed in two classes, and 152 communicants have been discovered and induced to bring letters of transfer to this parish. An increase of 247 communicants members in a single year is certainly a fine result, and indicates the character of work that has been done in "visitation evangelism".

The Church of the Resurrection, Richmond Hill, intends to choose twelve men to be Associate Vestrymen, and to set them to work under the lead of the rector, with definite tasks related to the educational, social service, and evangelistic work of the parish, and also in ushering, publicity work, etc. The vestry will retain its proper function of care of property and of finances, and will welcome the assistance of the new body in the activities of the parish.

The Rev. Wm. S. Blackshear, B. D., was instituted on Sunday evening, June 23, as rector of the Church of St. Matthew, Brooklyn, by the Rt. Rev. J. I. Blair Larned, D. D., Bishop Suffragan. The choir of St. Paul's Church, Flatbush, rendered the musical part of the service. In the chancel and in the congregation were a number of the clergy of the neighborhood.

Bishop Creighton, of Mexico, records his "sense of affection and gratitude to the Bishop of Long Island and the Diocesan Convention for their sympathetic interest in our dilemma and for considering Mexican needs worthy of a hearing during the busy convention days."

The Rev. G. Warfield Hobbs, editor of the Spirit of Missions, recently ended a term as locum tenens of the Church of the Ascension, Rockville Center. The "Parish News" says of him: "He took as keen an interest in our work, problems and difficulties as though he were actually rector of the parish, and we know that every one will be glad to welcome him whenever he finds time in his busy life to come and pay us a visit."

The Rev. J. H. S. Putnam, on June 16, completed five years of his rectorship of St. Michael's Church, Brooklyn. Parishioners seized the occasion to present him a substantial token of their regard.

The Rev. W. Jusserand de Forest, rector of St. James, Brooklyn, is sailing on June 20 for Spain, Italy, France and England. The Rev. Robert T. Walker will be in charge of the parish during the rector's absence.

C. H. W.

WEST MISSOURI.

Rt. Rev. S C. Partridge, D. D., Bishop.

Twentieth Anniversary.

At a reception recently held for the Rev. and Mrs. Robert Nelson Spencer in recognition of Mr. Spencer's twentieth anniversary as rector of Grace and Holy Trinity Church, Kansas City, Mr. Henry D. Ashley, junior warden of the parish, presented to Mr. Spencer, on behalf of the wardens and vestrymen, a purse representing the entire cost of a summer's travel in Europe for the rector and his family. Mr. and Mrs. Spencer and their daughter are to sail from New York on July 4.

H. N. H.

WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA.

The Rt. Rev. J. M. Horner, D. D., Bishop.

Seventh Annual Convention.

The seventh annual convention of the Diocese of Western North Carolina and the annual meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary, met at Kanuga Lake, Hendersonville, N. C., June 11, 12 and 13, the place of assembly having been lately acquired through the gifts of generous Churchmen for the use of the camps and conferences now being held each year with increasing interest by the dioceses of the Carolinas and the Church generally in the Southeastern States.

The Rev. Henry D. Phillips, D. D., Columbia, S. C., addressed the Woman's Auxiliary, and representing the National Council, spoke to the convention on the work of the Church's Program. The annual address of the Bishop included the following appreciative comment of two outstanding leaders of the Church and the nation.

"Bishop Brent of the Diocese of Western New York and Bishop Anderson of the Diocese of Chicago, were two outstanding figures of the Convention in Washington. Their advice was asked frequently in difficult situations and was followed when given. They were looked upon as inspired prophets of God who have a message for the people. Both these men, in their love and enthusiasm, had responded too freely to the demands made upon them. Their bodily strength was not equal to the strain. Since the Convention, Bishop Brent has been taken to his Heavenly Home and has his reward.

Bishop Anderson has been forced to give up temporarily the charge of his diocese and is taking a much-needed rest.

When such personalities are taken from the active work of the Church, we wonder sometimes what the effect is going to be, and how much the Kingdom of God will suffer loss. The answer comes through faith. The Kingdom is under the loving care of the Eternal Son of God. Instead of losing heart and faith because of the loss, at critical times, of wonderful human personalities such as these, we should have our faith increased thereby—knowing that our God is a living and loving God—and that He careth for us and for His Church. The example of these two spiritual leaders as of many like characters all through the ages, should serve to increase our faith and trust in God, rather than to cause us anxiety lest the Kingdom of God should suffer because of the loss of the active ministry of these men."

Official visitors were the Rev. Alfred S. Lawrence, rector of the Church of the Holy Cross at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill; the Rev. Warren W. Way, D. D., rector St. Mary's Junior College, Raleigh, N. C., and the Rev. William H. Wheeler, Superintendent Thompson Episcopal Home.

Notable action in Diocesan organization was provision by Canon whereby the diocesan educational institutions will be directed by a newly-created department of the Executive Council of the diocese. This will concern the management of the Valle Crucis School for Girls, the Patterson School for Boys, the Appalachian School, Penland, and, if desirable, Christ School for Boys, Arden; these schools are maintained through the liberal cooperation of the National Council as a part of the missionary undertakings in the Appalachian mountains.

At a joint meeting of the two bodies in session, the Rt. Rev. K. G. Finlay, D. D., Bishop of Upper South Carolina, announced the Church's possession of the Kanuga Lake grounds and buildings, these including the Kanuga Lake Inn, four large annexes, a large pavillion at the lakeside, thirty-nine cottages and four hundred acres. He spoke appreciatively of the gift of $45,500 towards the purchase price of $100,000 from a donor who desires that he shall remain unknown in this gift.

For five vacancies in the Executive Council, four by termination of office and one through the resignation of the Rev. Sanders R. Guignard, who is moving to Columbia, S. C., the following were elected: The Rev. Messrs. L. A. Jahn, C. P. Burnett, J. P. Burke, and Messrs. W. L. Balthis and Sheldon Leavitt.

Other elections resulted in continuing the present Standing Committee of the Diocese, also the present Secretary and the Treasurer.

Those elected to attend the Synod meeting in Columbia, S. C., the first week in November, were the Rev. Messrs. G. F. Rogers, J. W. C. Johnson, B. M. Lackey, L. A. Jahn, A. W. Farnum, J. P. Burke, and Messrs. H. Parker, W. L. Balthis, J. W. Yeager, H. V. Smedberg, Mrs. Fred W. Thomas and Miss Mary Woods Sumner.

The Rev. Harold Holt of the Social Service Department of the National Council, led a conference on Christian Social Service, bringing to it a clearness of grasp and force of presentation that were most helpful.

At the close of the convention, in the name of the Diocesan Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary, the President, Mrs. Fred W. Thomas, presented to Bishop Horner "as an expression of our love and appreciation of the faithful services of our Bishop, a black silk chimere as a gift from the Woman's Auxiliary of this diocese."

ORDINATIONS.

The Rev. J. J. Ambler, Jr., was ordained Priest in St. John's Church, Wytheville, on Saturday, June 8, by the Rt. Rev. Robert Carter Jett, D. D., Bishop of Southwestern Virginia.

The sermon was preached by the Rev. William Page Dame, D. D., Principal of Christchurch School, Middlesex County, Virginia, from the text: "I am in the midst of you as he that serveth," St. Luke 22:27. The Rev. Edward W. Hughes, of Pearisburg, read the Litany, the Rev. Devall L. Gwathmey, of Wytheville, presented the candidate, and the Rev. A. W. Taylor, of Marion, joined with the other clergy in the laying on of hands.

An especially interesting feature of the occasion was the presence of twenty-four members of St. Mark's Church, Dante, Virginia, where Mr. Ambler had been serving his diaconate. Following the service the visitors from out of town, members of Mr. Ambler's family and the clergy were entertained at lunch in the parish house of the church. At this time there were several brief addresses, the Bishop acting as toastmaster.

Mr. Ambler is a native of Amherst County, Virginia, attended William and Mary College at Williamsburg, and the Virginia Seminary. He was ordained to the diaconate in Ascension Church, Amherst, Virginia, May 1, 1928, and immediately began his work in the Associate Missions Field. As priest, Mr. Ambler continues to have his headquarters at Dante and to serve as assistant to the Rev. H. H. Young, Dean of Associate Missions.

Mr. Edward Gilmour McCance, of Bethlehem, and Mr. Albert Marks Holloway, of Alden, were ordained to the diaconate on June 8, 1929, in the Pro-Cathedral Church of the Nativity, Bethlehem by the Bishop of the Diocese, the Rt. Rev. Frank W. Sterrett, D. D. Mr. Holloway was presented by his father, who is the rector of St. Andrew's Church at Alden, and Mr. McCance by the Very Rev. D. Wilmot Gateson, Dean of the Pro-Cathedral.

Both young men have just been graduated by the Philadelphia Divinity School. Mr. Holloway has been appointed as curate to St. Mark's Church Frankford, of which Dr. Potter is the rector. Mr. McCance has been appointed as curate at St. James' Church, West Philadelphia, the Rev. Dr. John Mockridge, rector.

Maryland has had three ordinations this month. Bishop Murray ordained each candidate and Bishop Helfenstein was also present.

The first one was that of Mr. Tollie LeRoy Caution in St. James' First African Church, Baltimore. Mr. Caution was presented by the Rev. Dr. George F. Bragg, Jr., D. D., rector of St. James' Church, and the sermon was preached by the Rev. Gustav H. Caution. Mr. Caution was ordered Deacon.

Immediately following M. Caution's ordination, the Bishops left for All Saints' Church, Reisterstown, to ordain the Rev. Francis Eric Irving Bloy to the Priesthood. Mr. Bloy was presented by the Rev. T. N. Barth, and the sermon was preached by his father, the Rev. Francis J. F. Bloy, of Kirkwood, Missouri. The Rev. Francis E. I. Bloy has already taken up his duties as rector of All Saints' Church, Reisterstown.

On Tuesday, June 11, All Saints' Church, Frederick, was the scene of the ordination of Mr. Reno S. Harp, Jr. Mr. Harp was ordained deacon, and was presented by the Rev. Douglas Hooff. The Rev. Mr. Hooff also preached the sermon. Mr. Harp will take up his duties as minister-in-charge of Christ Church, West River.

N. E. P.

The Rev. Elmer M. Lofstrom was advanced to the priesthood by the Rt. Rev. F. A. McElwain on June 26, in Trinity Church, Litchfield, Minnesota. The sermon was preached by the Rev. D. F. Fenn, of Gethsemane Church, Minneapolis, and the ordinand was presented by the Sev. F. D. Butler, rector of St. John's Church, St. Paul, four other priests joining in the laying on of hands. The Rev. Mr. Lofstrom goes at once to St. Peter's Church, New Ulm.

DEATHS.

The Rev. Herman E. Kneiss, formerly rector of the Church of St. Barnabas, Reading, Pa., died Sunday morning, June 23, 1929. The funeral services were held in his church at ten A. M., June 25. The Bishop of the Diocese being in charge, he was assisted by the Rev. Frederick A. MacMillan, of Christ Church, Reading, who read the opening sentences and the Psalter. Dean Howard W. Diller, of Trinity Church, Pottsville, read the Lesson. Interment took place at Hazleton, where his family lives. The Rev. John H. Dickinson, rector of St. Peter's, Hazleton, had the service there.

Mr. Kneiss had been sick for some time, principally of heart trouble, and finally developed dropsy, which was the immediate cause of his death. Well loved by his congregation and his fellow clergy, he and his work will be greatly missed.

The Rev. Edwin H. Green, a retired minister of the Diocese of Virginia, died in Charlotte County, Virginia, on May 30, at the age of seventy. He is survived by two sisters, and by two brothers, the Rev. Berryman Green, D. D., Dean of the Virginia Theological Seminary, and M. K. Green, of Charlotte Courthouse.

The Rev. George E. Howell, missionary-in-charge of the Church of the Epiphany, Summerville, S. C., and St. Paul's, Orangeburg, died in Summerville, S. C., on June 4, and was buried in Pineland Cemetery, Summerville, on Thursday, June 6, at 4 P. M. The funeral was conducted by the Bishop of South Carolina, the Rt. Rev. A. S. Thomas, D. D., assisted by the Ven. E. L. Baskervill, Archdeacon for Colored Work.

The Rev. Mr. Howell had given forty-three years of faithful service in the sacred ministry, of which thirty-six years were spent in the Diocese of South Carolina. He began his ministry in 1886 in in the Diocese of Virginia.

Kill All Flies! THEY SPREAD DISEASE
Placed anywhere, DAISY FLY KILLER attracts and kills all flies. Neat, clean, ornamental, convenient and cheap. Lasts all season. Made of metal, can't spill or tip over; will not soil or injure anything. Guaranteed.

Insist upon
DAISY FLY KILLER
from your dealer.
HAROLD SOMERS, Brooklyn N. Y.

St. John's Church, Ensley
Trinity Church, Birmingham

St. Mark's Church, Oakman
Mission Station, Jasper

VEN. V. G. LOWERY, Archdeacon
2515 Ensley Avenue
ENSLEY, ALABAMA

Dr. J. E. McCulloch,
Vanderbilt University School of Religion,
Nashville, Tenn.
My dear Dr. McCulloch:

As I reflect on the wonderful accomplishment of the Vanderbilt Rural Church School, and think of what great strides have been made in such a short time, it fills me with gratitude to think that we have in this Southland leaders with such vision and faith to fulfill the same as has inspired and led forth Dean Brown and his co-workers in the Vanderbilt School of Religion.

To the many splendid things that you have already received from the hearts of men who have been grateful because of the wonderful benefits that have come to them by what has been provided through the Vanderbilt School of Religion to those who are struggling with the great problems confronting rural church workers, I would like to add my humble appreciation and sincere gratitude for what you and your co-workers have made possible to the rural missionaries of the South.

I am still convinced that the Vanderbilt Rural Church School is the most wonderful of its kind in America. This conclusion is based upon the following facts: First, because it is the only school in America of which I know anything that gives to those who attend their transportation to and from Nashville and provides board and lodging during the period of the School. Second, I believe unquestionably that the Vanderbilt Rural Church School has the most outstanding faculty gathered together by any of the schools in this country. Third, that contrasted with those rural church schools sponsored and assembled by agricultural institutions, the Vanderbilt School, because of its religious background and setting, is superior to the other schools of this kind in all the country.

I am therefore very happy in the privilege that has been mine to be associated with you and your fellow workers in the carrying on of this Rural Church School, and thank you most sincerely for everything that you have so graciously done for me personally.

With sincere good wishes for your continued success and that of the Vanderbilt School of Religion, I am, with deep gratitude,

Cordially and faithfully yours,

V. G. LOWERY.

DESIGNED FOR THE PROMOTION OF PRACTICAL PIETY, THE DIFFUSION OF RELIGIOUS AND GENERAL INTELLIGENCE, AND THE MAINTENANCE OF THE PRINCIPLES OF THE PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL CHURCH

Southern Churchman

1835

Vol. 94. RICHMOND, VA., JULY 20, 1929. No. 29.

HOW TO USE THE BIBLE

When in sorrow, read John 14.
When men fail you, read Psalm 27.
When you have sinned, read Psalm 51.
When you worry, read Matthew 6:19-34.
Before church service, read Psalm 84.
When you are in danger, read Psalm 91.
When you have the blues, read Psalm 34.
When God seems far away, read Psalm 139.
When you are discouraged, read Isaiah 40.
If you want to be fruitful, read John 15.
When doubts come upon you, try John 7:17.
When you are lonely or fearful, read Psalm 23.
When you forget your blessings, read Psalm 103.
For Jesus' idea of a Christian, read Matthew 5.
For James' idea of religion, read James 1:19-27.
When your faith needs stirring, read Hebrews 11.
When you feel down and out, read Romans 8:31-39.
When you want courage for your task, read Joshua 1.
When the world seems bigger than God, read Psalm 90.
When you want rest and peace, read Matthew 11:25-30.
When you want Christian assurance, Romans 8:1-30.
For Paul's secret of happiness, read Col. 3:12-17.
When you leave home for labor or travel, Psalm 121.
When you grow bitter or critical, read 1 Corinthians 13.
When your prayers grow narrow or selfish, Psalm 67.
For Paul's idea of Christianity, read 2 Cor. 5:15-19.
For Paul's rules on how to get along with men, Rom. 12.
When you think of investments and returns, Mark 10:17-31.
For a great invitation and a great opportunity, Isa. 55.
For Jesus' idea of prayer, Luke 11:1-13; Matt. 6:5-15.
For the prophet's picture of worship that counts, Isa. 58:1-12.
For the prophet's idea of religion, Isa. 1:10-18; Mic. 6:6-8.
Why not follow Psalm 119:11 and hide some of these in your memory?

—Prof. Harris Franklin Rall.

EDUCATIONAL

The Gundry Home and Training School For The Feeble Minded

Falls Church, Fairfax County, Va.

Established 1892.

For terms and information address

MISS M. GUNDRY.

The General Theological Seminary

CHELSEA SQUARE, NEW YORK.

The next Academic year egins on the last Wednesday in September.

Special students admitted and Graduate Courses for graduates of othre Theological Seminaries.

The requirements for admission and other particulars can be had from THE DEAN, 1 Chelsea Square, New York, N. Y.

The Bishop Payne Divinity School

The accredited Seminary of the Church for training colored men for the ministry. The curriculum covers the full course for Deacon's and Priest's Orders. The degree of B. D. is awarded.

For catalogue and information apply to Rev. F. G. Ribble, M. A., D. D., Dean, Petersburg, Va.

The Protestant Episcopal Theological Seminary Virginia

The One Hundred and Sixth Session Opened Wednesday, Sept. 19, 1928.

For catalogue and other information address The Dean, Rev. Berryman Green, D. D., Theological Seminary, Alexandria, Va.

Schermerhorn Home School

Located six miles north of Richmond on the Washington Highway. A Home School for Children who need Special care and Training.

SUE I. SCHERMERHORN,
Box 57, West End Sta,
Richmond, Va.

STUART HALL

STAUNTON, VA.

Episcopal school for girls, maintaining best Virginia traditions of refinement and culture.

Thorough College Preparation. Varied General Course. Outdoor Life.

EIGHTY-SIXTH YEAR BEGINS SEPTEMBER 18, 1929

For catalogue, address
MRS. H. N. HILLS, Principal

Episcopal Theological School

Cambridge, Massachusetts.

Affiliated with Harvard University.

For catalog address
The Dean.

Chatham Hall

A Church School for girls in Southern Virginia. Thorough college preparation. General and graduate courses. Art, music, expression, home economics, secretarial course. Superb location; 175 acre estate, gardens, dairy; modern, well equipped buildings. Riding, swimming, golf. Address Rev. Edmund J. Lee, M. A., D. D., Box S, Chatham, Va.

Southern Churchman

SOUTHERN CHURCHMAN COMPANY,
628 E. Main Street - - - Richmond, Va.

LANGBOURNE MEADE WILLIAMS
President
ALFRED B. WILLIAMS..Associate Editor
THE REV. FRANK COX
Associate Editor
THE REV. JAMES W. MORRIS. D. D.
Associate Editor
MRS. CONRAD H. GOODWIN,
Associate Editor
MISS SUSANNE WILLIAMS..News Editor
JOHN H. COOKE..Secretary and Manager

Entered at the Post Office in Richmond, Va., as second-class mail matter.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE.

$3.00 a year in advance. To the Clergy, $2.00. Six months, $1.50. Trial subscriptions, 3 months, 50 cents; 10 cents a copy. Foreign postage, 50 cents additional.

For the convenience of subscribers, subscriptions are continued at expiration unless otherwise ordered. Notice of renewal, discontinuance or change of address should be sent two weeks before the date they go into effect.

RECEIPT OF PAYMENT is shown in about two weeks by change of date on address label. If date is not properly extended after each payment, notify us promptly. No receipt for payment will be sent.

Notice post office address. The exact post office address to which we are directing the paper at the time of writing MUST ALWAYS BE GIVEN. Our mailing list is arranged by post offices and not alphabetically.

Make all checks and money orders payable to the Southern Churchman, and not to an individual.

ADVERTISEMENTS—Rates quoted on request. For classified see head of that department.

Representatives wanted in each Parish; liberal commissions.

News concerning the Church at large always welcome.

CONTENTS

	Page.
Thoughts for the Thoughtful	4
Editorial	5
Truth and Freedom—Bishop W. A. Candler	6
Man in the Re-Making—Rev. William Porkess, D. D.	8
Life and Sight Says	8
The Protestant Reformation of Christian Churches—Dr. James C. Biddle	9
Topics and Men	10
Why I Go to Church—Hon. John Wanamaker	10
Poem—His Hand Upon the Hills	10
Poem—Tomorrow	10
Church Bell Found in Cellar	10
Favorite Scripture Verse	10
Book Reviews	11
Letters to the Editor	11
Church Intelligence	12
Family Department	17
Children's Department	19
Personal Notes	23

ST. JOHN BAPTIST SCHOOL for Girls

In the Country near Morristown. Under the care of the Sisters of St. John Baptist (Episcopal).

College Preparatory and General Courses. Music and Art.

Modern Fireproof Building open September, 1929. Ample Grounds. Outdoor Life. Moderate Rates.

For Catalog address
THE SISTER SUPERIOR,
St. John Baptist School,
Mendham, New Jersey.

MARY BALDWIN COLLEGE

For women. Courses lead to B. A. and B. S. degrees. Music, art, spoken English, physical education. Gymnasium and field athletics. Modern equipment. In beautiful Shenandoah Valley. Founded 1842. Catalog. Staunton, Va.

Five Virginia CHURCH SCHOOLS

FOR BOYS: St. Christopher's School, Richmond; Christchurch School, Christchurch, Middlesex County.

FOR GIRLS: St. Catherine's School, Richmond; St. Anne's School, Charlottesville; St. Margaret's School, Tappahannock.

(For Catalogs, address Principals.)

LEGAL TITLE for wills: Church Schools in the Diocese of Virginia (Inc.).

(About gifts or bequests, address Central Office, 110 West Franklin Street, Richmond, Va.)

HOBART COLLEGE Geneva N. Y.

A Church College for men, founded 1828. Four year liberal arts course, leading to the degrees A. B. and B. S. High standards; faculty of thirty. For catalogue and information, address

REV. MURRAY BARTLETT, D. D., Pres.

St. Margaret's School

Tappahannock, Virginia.

A Church School for girls with modern equipment and moderate cost. Intermediate and College Preparatory. Accredited. Country life and simplicity without isotion. Beautiful grounds on Rappahannock River. Three dormitories for different ages. Supervised Athletics.

EDITH LATANE, Headmistree.

National Cathedral School

A Home and Day School for Girls

The Bishop of Washington, President Board of Trustees. Mrs. Marvin Bristol Rosenberry, Acting Principal. Mount St. Alban, Washington, D. C.

St. Anne's,

Charlottesville, Va.
Box G.

Beautiful location in far famed Blue Ridge Mountains College preparatory and elective courses. Fully accredited. Open gymnasium allows sports in the fresh air in all weather. Sleeping porches. Riding taught by expert. Music, Art. Bishop of Virginia President of Trustees. Laura Lee Dorsey, Principal.

St. Albans The National Cathedral School For Boys

Thorough Preparation for Leading Universities; splendid equipment, unexcelled location on Mt. St. Alban, overlooking Washington.

Eight years' course. Athletics for Every Boy.

Address:
REV. ALBERT H. LUCAS, Head Master,
Washington, D. C.

HAMPDEN-SYDNEY COLLEGE

Invites your careful consideration of its Faculty, Courses of Study, Wholesome Christian Atmosphere, and Physical Equipment.

For catalogue write,

REGISTRAR
Hampden-Sydney, Virginia

THE HANNAH MORE ACADEMY

The Diocesan School of Maryland. Founded 1832. A Country School for Girls—fifteen miles from Baltimore. College, Preparatory and General Courses, Music, Art, Supervised Athletics.

Principal. LAURA FOWLER, A. B.,
Reistertown, Maryland.

CHURCH EQUIPMENT SERVICE

DEAGAN
Tubular Bell
Tower Chimes
Played direct from Organ Console
The memorial that makes the Church a landmark.
J. C. DEAGAN, Inc.
112 Deagan Building, Chicago
STANDARD SETS $4375 AND UP

SCHOOLS—CONTINUED.

Study at BLUE RIDGE
this Summer
Vacation place supreme

WORKERS with boys and girls will welcome new courses this summer. 1. Camp craft. Includes study of all details of organizing and running camps. 2. Methods in Boys' Work. Special course for those who do not plan to specialize in boys' work. 3. Physical Education. Six sections covering play leadership for boys and girls, folk dancing, indoor games, practice teaching, tennis, camp activities. Ask for booklet.

Every church of any denomination would be helped by sending two or three young men or women.

Blue Ridge attracts thousands every summer. Conferences of many sorts.

BLUE RIDGE ASSOCIATION

Blue Ridge, N. C.

St. Paul's Boys' School

Boarding and day pupils—Fifth grade to college. Rogers Avenue, Mt. Washington, Md.
WALTER B. LAWRENCE, M A., Headmaster.
Faculty all College Graduates.
REV. ARTHUR B. KINSOLVING, D. D., President Board of Trustees.
Enrollment limited to Fifty Boarding Pupils. Tuition $450. Choir Scholarships. Next sesison begins September 11, 1929.

GUNSTON HALL

School for girls. Kindergarten, primary, academic, collegiate. Art, music, expression, domestic science courses. Small classes. All the refinements of a beautiful Washington home. Three handsome residences near Dupont Circle. Instructors with highest standards and ideals, with personality and experience. Riding, swimming, golf, tennis, dancing, fencing. Estab. 1892. Catalog. Mary L. Gildersleeve, Mary B. Kerr, M. A., Principals.
Richard N. Mason, Business Manager, 1930 Florida Avenue, Washington, D. C.

THE JERICHO ROAD.

I know the road to Jericho,
It's in a part of town
That's full of factories and filth.
I've seen the folk go down.
Small folk with roses in their cheeks
And star-light in their eyes,
And seen them fall among the thieves
And heard their helpless cries.
When toiling took their roses red
And robbed them of their stars
And left them pale and almost dead.
The while, in motor-cars.
The priests and levites speeding by
Read of the latest crimes
In headlines spread in black or red
Across the "Evenings Times.'
How hard for those in limousines
To heal the hurt of man!
It was a slow-paced ass that bore
The Good Samaritan.

—Christian Century.

CHURCH FURNISHINGS
Gold, Silver and Brass
Church and Chancel Furniture
Write for Catalogue for Episcopal Churches.
W. & E. SCHMIDT CO
308 THIRD ST. MILWAUKEE, WIS

EMBROIDERED ALTAR LINENS, SILK ALTAR HANGINGS.

Burses, Veils, Stoles, Markers, Chasubles, Damasks, Fringes, Altar Laces, Embroidery Supplies. Materials stamped for embroidering. MISS M. C. ANDOLIN (formerly with Cox Sons & Vining), 45 West 39th Street, New York. Hours 9 to 1.

R. GEISSLER, INC.
56 W. 8th STREET, NEW YORK, N.Y.
Church Furnishings
IN CARVED WOOD AND MARBLE · BRASS · SILVER FABRICS + WINDOWS
EST 1867

CHURCH FURNITURE
Pews, Pulpits, Chancel Furniture
Sunday School Seating
American Seating Company
1029 Lytton Bldg., Chicago.

CANADIAN

KESWICK CONFERENCE

July 14th to August 11th, 1929

At Ferndale, Muskoka Lakes

Motto: "All One in Christ Jesus."

Business Office: 366 BAY STREET, TORONTO, CANADA.

J. & R. Lamb
23-25-27 SIXTH AVENUE NEW YORK
MEMORIALS IN STAINED GLASS
MOSAIC · MARBLE · STONE · GRANITE
CARVED WOOD · METAL · ETC.

Woody's Art Glass Shop
Art Stained and Leaded Glass.
Church Windows a Specialty.
513 East Main Street, Richmond, Va.

BEVERLEY HEATING
The Best for Homes, Churches, Stores and Buildings for all uses.
R. C. BEVERLEY HEATING CO., INC.,
308 E. Main St., Richmond, Va.
QUALITY—SERVICE.

LINEN for the CHURCH

PURE IRISH LINEN FOR ALL CHURCH USES, yard or piece lengths, at lowest import prices. New Special Number for Cottas, eighty-two and one-half cents. Samples on request.
MARY FAWCETT CO.,
350 Broadway, New York.

CHURCH VESTMENTS
Cassocks, Surplices, Stole.
EMBROIDERIES
Silks, Cloths, Fringes.
CLERICAL SUITS
Rabats, Collars, Shirts.
COX SONS & VINING,
131-133 E. 23d St., New York.

Church and Sunday School Furniture
THE SOUTHERN DESK COMPANY, Hickory, N. C.
Send for Special Catalogue.

When in need of
MONUMENTS and TOMBSTONES
and want honest treatment see
BURNS & CAMPBELL,
Granite and Marble Works
PETERSBURG, VA.

Designs furnished on application and all orders receive prompt attention.

CHURCH FURNITURE
Pews, Pulpit and Sunday School Furniture. Catalog on request.
T. W. ALEXANDER & SON,
Box 147. Waynesboro, Va.

Washington Cathedral

A Witness for Christ in the Capital of the Nation

THE CHAPTER appeals to Churchmen throughout the country for gifts, large and small, to continue the work of building now proceeding, and to maintain its work, Missionary, Education, Charitable, for the benefit of the whole Church.

Chartered under Act of Congress.

Administered by a representative Board of Trustees of leading business men, Clergymen and Bishops.

Full information will be given by the Bishop of Washington, or the Dean, Cathedral Offices, Mount St. Alban, Washington, D. C., who will receive and acknowledge all contributions.

Legal Title for Use in Making Wills:
The Protestant Episcopal Cathedral Foundation of the District of Columbia

VIRGINIA TRUST CO.

Richmond, Va.

THE SAFE EXECUTOR,

Was organized in 1892 to act as Executor-Guardian and Trustee.

Many prudent men and women in every section of the State have named this Company Executor and trustee in their wills.

Inquiries cordially invited—no cost and confidential.

Capital Stock .....$ 1,000,000.00
Surplus earned .....$ 1,500,000.00
Held in trust.....$45,000,000.00

LITTLE TEA ROOM

SANDWICHES

Special Prices to
Clubs, Lodges and Paties

211 N. Jefferson Ran 3958
Richmond, Va.

XANTHINE

Will hereafter be sold in the new style bottle and package. Always best for the hair. Not a dye, but restores the color, promotes growth and prevents dandruff.

Price $1.00 at druggists, or sent prepaid by us.

XANTHINE CO., Richmond, Va.

$50 TO $100 IN SPARE TIME

Write for Schwer's CHRISTMAS CARD & NOVELTIES PLAN. Popular and different from others. $50. to $100. easily made. No investment. Great for Home Effort. Write at once to CHARLEY C. SCHWER, DEPT. 185 WESTFIELD, MASS.

CARPETS for CHURCHES

We carry a large stock of Church Carpets, embracing a wide assortment of designs, colorings and qualities and at prices to meet every requirement. Write and our representative will call with a selection of patterns and give an estimate, or we will send samples, at our expense, for your consideration.

Sydnor & Hundley

700 E. Grace Street,
Richmond, Va.

Thoughts For the Thoughtful

Excuses given as reasons are falsehoods.

"A bird cannot fly in a vacuum; so the soul cannot subsist on an abstract conception of God."—Dr. E. Y. Mullins.

"Only the weak man needs to talk much about his rights."

"Sympathy is learned only in the school of sorrow."

"A Partnership with God is motherhood;
What strength, what purity, what self-control;
What love, what wisdom should belong to her
Who helps God fashion an immortal soul."

"They who keep the path of prayer well worn have no difficulty in finding God in trouble."

"You cannot determine the length of your life, but its width you must."

Influence is the immortal proof of life. Some say it is the only immortal part of life. That idea does not satisfy me, and yet the thought of the immortality of my influence, conscious and unconscious, makes life to me a terrible, as well as a joyous thing.—George L. Cody.

Lesser things will drop out as the hand closes upon the larger duty or the greater blessing, just as the hand that reaches out to grasp the great strong oak lets go its hold on the blade of grass it had gathered.—Phillips Brooks.

When Michael Faraday was dying some one said to him, "Mr. Faraday, what are your speculations now?" "Speculations?" said Faraday. "I have none, I thank God! I am not resting my dying head on guess-work. I know whom I have believed, and I am persuaded that He is able to guard that which I have committed unto Him against that day."—Exchange.

Just stand aside, and watch yourself go by;
Think of yourself as "He" instead of "I".
Pick flaws; find fault; forget the man is you,
And strive to make your estimate ring true.
The faults of others then will dwarf and shrink.
Love's chain grow stronger by one mighty link,
When you with "He" as substitute for "I"
Have stood aside and watched yourself go by.

—Strickland W. Gillian.

A double mind is in itself a failure. In order to do anything well a man must be ready to give himself wholly to the doing of one thing at a time. Two brand-new locomotives pulling in opposite directions would be worth less as a motive power than one lame mule.—Henry Clay Trumbull.

Your Copy upon Request

6% First Mortgage Real Estate Gold Coupon Bonds

EXCELLENT is the word used by one investor who buys American Bonds.

Issued by one of the largest financial institutions in the South with a record of "never a day's delay in payment of principal or interest," these prime First Mortgage Real Estate Gold Bonds excel as investments for those who seek safety and 6%.

Can we send you full details of current issues? Drop a postal, also mention this paper.

Investigate American Bonds before you invest.

AMERICAN
BANK AND TRUST COMPANY
Richmond, Virginia

TIDEWATER TALES

A book into which is gathered the folklore, traditions and history of Tidewater Virginia. Written in a delightful informal style by Prof. William C. Garnett.

The President of a College in South Carolina writes: "I have never read a work of this kind the style of which I have found more attractive, simple and yet elegant, interesting but never monotonous."

A prominent representative of a Publishing Co. writes: "This book will be read by our children and children's children. I could read 'A Fox Hunt 'Fo de War' every week."

A prominent attorney in Washington writes: " . . the charming description of the old homes, the history and traditions, and the true-to-life stories in local color, combined to delight me."

A professor in one of the Virginia Universities writes: "You have put posterity in your debt by presenting so skilfully to them characters that have passed to the beyond."

Price, $4.00 per copy. Order from WM. GARNETT, Dunnsville, Va.

SOUTHERN CHURCHMAN

Catholic for every truth of God; Protestant against every error of man.

EDITORIALS

Vol. 94. RICHMOND, VA., JULY 20, 1929. No. 29.

"INTELLECTUALS"

With the wise dictates of the Eternal Mind."
"How ill accord the views of vain mankind
—The Iliad, 1200, B. C.; translated by Alexander Pope, 1715, A. D.

To the human male, reared in civilization and amid surroundings of average intelligence, several developments come within a few years. He finds awakening interest in a sprouting beard, profound knowledge of the sex problem, tendencies toward misanthropy, cynicism and disgusted belief in the decadence of the human race generally and his own community and most of his family specifically. With these arrive, usually, consciousness of his own intellect, illimitable faith in its powers, in the grandeur of all intellect and the conclusiveness of its conclusions, deductions and decisions. All these are normal maladies and penalties of youth. Most of us outgrow and outlive them—which is good for everybody and for ourselves especially. Rough, tough, sometimes repulsive and many times discouraging, contacts and experiences free us of much cumbering and crippling conceit, teach us that wisdom and knowledge above our own actually exist and are potent and that facts must be accepted. We have forced on us comprehension that the quality, or gift, or hardly won acquisition, known as common sense and possessed by many quite ordinary people, is to be respected and sought. The large majority of us gather these lessons in course of passing years and successive part or complete failures and successes, mortifications and triumphs and the common vicissitudes. A few of us refuse to see or learn. These become fervently and chronically intellectual, producing nothing substantial or useful, train themselves laboriously to disbelieve, hate and distrust all but themselves and such as they may induce to admire them. Some of these acquire professorships in colleges or universities or posts in less pretentious schools advertised as institutions of learning. Some set up in business as philosophers or authors or writers or orators of various kinds and degrees, exuding, at intervals, more or less frequent and regular, feeble froth, slightly rancid with stale rationalism, modernism, other impregnations of atheism. Yet others take to art or science or pose merely as professionally Superior Persons. Unhappily, an occasional specimen gains a chair even in a theological school and gives to an afflicted denomination repetitions and representatives of himself, each of these prone to waft across his pulpit, timidly and cautiously or blatantly, according to salary prospects and other conditions, wisps of misty intellect taken from the higher criticism or "liberal" investigation, and containing some germs of moral malaria.

One very queer characteristic of the chronic Intellectual is his pathetic belief in his own newness and originality. Really, he is old as mankind. Always there have been Intellectuals, convinced that for them were no mysteries, from them could nothing be hidden. Job described the typical Intellectual as assuming wisdom even when born like the colt of a wild ass and we are told by an indisputably wise man that there is more hope of an obvious and confessed fool than of a man wise in his own conceit. The absolute, demonstrated impossibility for the human mind to grasp space and eternity does not daunt the Intellectual. He has before him leadership in human progress and increasing supremacy in human affairs by the peoples accepting Christianity and believing in God, but Christianity and God and the Holy Scriptures and all the principles and precepts of religion are favorite objects of his animosity and contempt. With purblind eyes he peers into the vastness of the unknown and from it brings and bestows on any who may heed him darkness, futility, beginning nowhere, ending in nothing. Despite failure through centuries of endeavor and experiment to originate life or find the place and principle of the life of the tiniest grain or insect, he discourses and writes volubly and voluminously on the origin of life. From far scattered, decayed and profusely debated bones and from strata of rock and metal he is assured of destruction, chaos, vacuity, of no meaning or purpose anywhere or in anything. With theories and speculations and guesses he attempts to fill gaps wide and fathomless in physical evidence and of thousands or millions of theoretical years. He ignores such obvious truths, accessible to the dullest and most unlearned of us, as that the body of man has changed no whit in the unnumbered years since the first pictures intended to portray it were made; that nation after nation has attained and been blighted by great prosperity, wealth and high civilization, sordid slavery to riches and despicable worship of intellect uniting to establish gross materialism, to reject divinity and obliterate the soul, and has fallen to decay. Through countless generations we have, by breeding and selection and retention of the fittest, improved the qualities of our domesticated living creatures and products of the ground, but we have not changed the essential natures nor the original instincts or tendencies of any. Uncontrolled, they relapse. Descendants of the most affectionate dogs left to run wild a few generations are wolves again. Attempts to create lines of human perfection by mating children of kings, conquerors and heroes have resulted in some respectable characters, at best, in many weaklings, cowards, scoundrels, imbeciles. All of which to the full-fledged Intellectual means nothing.

"The centipede was happy quite until the toad for fun said, pray, which foot goes after which. This roused his mind to such a pitch, that he lay distracted in a ditch, forgetting how to run."

The Intellectual is too intellectual to learn or see anything. To quote once more the much dissected and much assailed Book of Job, the Intellectual is the people and with him must wisdom die. He detests and disdains alike the facts clearly visible to the simplest and humblest of us and the inconceivably enormous unknown. Survival of the fittest, natural selections, Darwin's kind of evolution, are sacred to him, the authorities being dead and removed as competitors in yellow publications and for jobs in yellow institutions of learning. His attenuated attention is turned especially just now to the miracles related in the Bible. From toiling pens and thousands of hours of intricate research and analysis and deep delving amid Hebrew, Greek and Latin roots, he draws and pours on us demonstration that all the miracles told in Old Testament and New are tricks, inventions of fervid imaginations or falsehoods deliberately devised and recorded by writers separated from each other by centuries, by men narrating what they said they had seen and going gladly to death by many forms of torture rather than retreat or modify a word of their testimony. Not infrequently, the Intellectual, with sagacious eye on his place or face, concedes to us of the common sense that there may be an Almighty Power, a Creator, but proceeds to prove to us that the miracles could not have been. He can not quite deny that this planet on which we are living is here, that it weighs some quintillions of billions of tons and that it whirls in space unsupported, keeping to its orbit.

"In reason's ear they all rejoice,
And utter forth a glorious voice,
Forever surging as they shine
The hand that made us is divine."

The Intellectual who condescends to concession that some Power created, established and ordained these conditions assures us that it would have been impossible for this Creating Power to change the customary course of the nature and laws He made, cover the earth with water, suspend the revolution of the planet, while Joshua completed his victory or called the dead back to life. The Maker of the earth, who made all things, the Intellectual sapiently argues, could not have halted it in its turning; the Giver of life could not have restored it to the body from which it had departed. Because the combined power and skill and science and intellect of the billion or two of us now here can not make alive and fruitful one crushed or parched mustard seed, the Intellectual is very sure the Saviour could not have been born of a virgin nor arisen from death—testimony of eye-witnesses notwithstanding, "begotten, not made, being of one substance, with the Father, by whom all things were made, God of God, Light of Light, King of Kings, Lord of Lords, My King and My God.

So far as the records show, this Intellectual type never has proved itself to have any use or value, never has done anything to aid the onward progress of our race, for betterment of conditions, stimulation of minds to further human power or comfort or happiness, for alleviation of human sorrows or miseries, for purification or uplifting of the soul it wrathfully denies. Always it has done some harm, has disturbed weak faith, strangled hopes and aspirations, given new sting to human troubles, new agonies to fear. It has gloated, with the black and bitter joy of the conscious coward and weakling, the deformed, defective, degenerate, over evil achieved. Mephistopheles, Faust, Frankenstein—all, appropriately, made in Germany, home, also, of Freud, Schopenhauer, Marx and Nietzsche—are more or less idealized or exaggerated pictures of the Intellectual, but with more brains and courage than he is likely to manifest in real life—things with physical and mental equipment of man, but without soul or hope or capacity for love or trust or the clean and honest emotion that is born in the soul and is part of it.

Frankenstein may have been drawn by Mrs. Shelley from her own unhappy husband, genius and Intellectual voluntarily divorced from soul, wife and moral obligations. A recent magazine writer, undertaking to tell the plight of a friend, a self-declared Intellectual now living, describes Frankenstein with fidelity perhaps unconscious. This Intellectual holds the human intellect to be the infallible, final, judge of right and wrong, of the present, past and future, omniscient and omnipotent. He is fiercely resentful against the teachings of the New Testament and the Almighty, love and the brotherhood of man, of all suggestion that the weak or unfortunate should be regarded or helped by the strong or fortunate. His intellect teaches him that laws and governments are insolent, insulting impositions on the rights of the Intellectual, that each individual of us should be free to determine his, or her, own conduct, to have as many companions of the opposite sex as preference or circumstance might direct, to lie, cheat, steal, betray, refuse service and allegiance to country and community, kill troublesome or objectionable persons as inclination and intellectual processes suggest. Adoption of this theory would mean, of course, return to the most primitive barbarism and savagery, but it would be precisely logical culmination of the teachings and deductions of pure reason and intellect rejecting all control but itself.

The position of this individual may be exceptional, but it is exactly logical. He is an Intellectual with courage, or audacity, which few of them have, to follow his theory straight to its inevitable consequence. His reported protest and wrath illustrate the large humor and grim absurdity of intellect worship, which has led its votaries to deliciously ridiculous contradictions of each other, by following reason to abandonment of all reason. Through the ages our Intellectual has been the source, often the victim, too, of epidemic moral and mental diseases. We may suppose him to have been active in promoting adoration of the golden calf and demand for return to the flesh pots of Egypt—consistently materialistic manifestations. Degration of humanity invariably and inevitably attends denial of divinity. Influence of the Intellectual deprived Olympus—a high conception of untaught minds groping toward truth—of dignity and decency and changed Grecian groves from places for serene reverence of the unseen to resorts for debaucheries. Scoffing at God as a superstition, the Intellectual has been, and is, sponsor and leader in grotesque superstitions—astrology, phrenology, physiognomy, even palmistry, endless kinds of quackeries for foreseeing the future, securing fulfilment of purposes and plans. Now we have him, busy and widely distributed, deriding the soul as a fiction, but treating us to profound treatises or daily discourses, equally unintelligible, on the science of psychology. "Elaborately useless and ingeniously unprofitable." Or, perhaps, we find him as expert and instructor in sociology, ignoring the Almighty and the New Testament, trying to arrange a system of society from violent contradictions and against the actualities of life and history, to reconcile philosophies making weakness and failure crimes to be punished with ruthless extinction with those presenting success and wealth as proofs that there can be no justice, but such as brute force can bring.

Let us be very grateful to God for the many, many, thousands of men and women who are not self-styled Intellectuals—the plain, honest, unpretentious, God-fearing, God-believing, "Heroes of Faith" people everywhere and in all stations, from highest Christian rulers to the most unlettered teachers in the smallest and most remote mountain Sunday schools and the humblest Salvation Army soldier in the slums. These do not pretend to know, nor ask to know, all the purposes and meanings.

"Blind unbelief is sure to err, and scan his work in vain, God is His own interpreter and He will make it plain."

Millions of these, in pulpits, schools, homes, the daily walks of life, consecrate heart and thought to service of God and mankind, as opportunity arises, or they can find it. These apply common sense to what they see and hear and know and read of the effects of Christianity and obedience to the commandments for nations, their neighbors and themselves. Their straight, clear vision teaches them to shun the twisted paths of the vainglorious, leading to morasses of confusion and dreadful night. The believers and workers have made this country of ours, fought its battles, constructed its government, while the unbelievers, open and ambushed, shirked and sneered and obstructed, or meanly sought small advantages for themselves. The believers, the avowed and reverent servants of Jehovah, have led us onward in spiritual, mental and material progress, toward purification and elevation; while sceptic, infidel, atheist, have striven as they could and dared for retrogression, debasement and defilement.

The praying, trusting, believing people will go on, striving, hoping, doing as they can to lead and approach ever more closely to divinity and infinity, softening sorrows, mitigating miseries, cherishing and stimulating noble aspiration, carrying joy to death beds, soothing the bitterness of tears. Beautiful, noble work like this is done daily, without noise or ostentation, all about us. It is not obtruded on us, as evil and crime are; but it is being done and will continue and its power is endless and irresistible. Faith will be justified even more abundantly than now, although even now every day of every year multitudes troop from the fears and pains and defeats of this earth, triumphant and glad, along the shining, mercy lighted, road to the endless glory and peace and rest of the City Celestial, not made with hands, where all enigmas are resolved in endless Sabbath days, and where no sun is needed because God Himself is the Light thereof.

Alfred B. Williams.

TRUTH AND FREEDOM

By Bishop W. A. Candler

IT was a great word which Jesus gave to some half-believing Jews when He said, "If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free" (John 8:31 and 32).

They had taken the initial step of discipleship; they had given intellectual assent to what He had been saying to them. But their hearts were not won by Him; and the record shows the Master seeking to lead them on from mere mental belief of His words to the self-surrender of faith in Him.

But their unsettled souls were inflamed by the sound of the word "free", and thereby were fixed on a carnal notion of a type of freedom quite different from that which Jesus offered them. Resentfully, therefore, "they answered him, 'We be Abraham's seed, and were never in bondage to any man; how sayest thou, Ye shall be made free?'" (John 8:36), forgetting in their boastfulness the political bondages and captivities of their nation in the centuries behind, and their subjection to the Roman power at the moment in which they were uttering their prideful speech. How far did they thus miss the great thought of the Lord concerning real freedom!

Madam Roland is said to have cried, "O Liberty! What crimes are committed in thy name!" With equal justice one might exclaim, "O Liberty! What foolish notions are identified with thy name!"

These proud Jews thought of political freedom only; but Jesus spoke of spiritual freedom, which alone is the only real freedom. Hence, He replied to them, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, Whosoever committeth sin is the servant of sin. And the servant abideth not in the house forever; but the Son abideth forever. If the Son, therefore, shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed" (John 8:34-36).

Nevertheless, these Pharisees persisted in their misunderstanding of the Master's words, their resentment growing rapidly until at length "they took up stones to cast at him" (John 8:59).

Not less did these Jews of old misunderstand the teaching of Jesus concerning truth and freedom than do not a few men in our day.

Men of liberalistic tendencies today mistake the meaning of the Master and misapply His words in order to justify their liberalism.

They claim most Pharisaically that above all men they love the truth, and that by their speculative and changeful theories they are made free. Manifestly our Lord did not teach that freedom is attained by the perpetual pursuit of truth which never reaches finality in the attainment of it. He does not suggest even remotely that from agnostic incertitude liberty can arise.

On the other hand he declares that these imperfect believers should know the truth, if they "continued" in his word, as faithful and persevering disciples. A paralel Scripture is that in which he says, "My doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me. If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself" (John 7:16 and 17). He sets forth that obedience to truth already known is the way to apprehend all spiritual truth with that certitude of knowledge by which the moral nature of men is liberated from the thraldom of sin and doubt.

Neither Jesus nor any of His inspired Apostles ever taught that the emancipation of human souls could be achieved by the rejection of the historic revelation of God and the assumption of the agnostic attitude with which some men proudly pose, in which they seem to rejoice in the fact that they are "ever learning, and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth" (2 Timothy 3:7). On the contrary, our Lord and His early disciples claim confidently a certitude of knowledge imparted by divine revelation. The word "know" in its most positive significance sounds through all their utterances.

To the twelve Apostles Jesus said, "It is given unto you to know the mysteries of the Kingdom of Heaven" (Matt. 13:11). Again, He said to them, on the night before He was crucified, "If ye had known me, ye should have known my Father also; and from henceforth ye know him, and have seen him" (John 14:7). He chided Philip for his spiritual dullness, saying, "Have I been so long time with you, and yet hast thou not known me, Philip?" (John 14:9). A few hours later he prayed to the father that His followers might have the highest and most indispensable knowledge:—"that they might know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent" (John 17:3). To them He gave this precious promise: "When he, the Spirit of Truth, is come, He will guide you into all truth" (John 16:13).

The beloved disciple but echoes later what he heard said by his Lord and Master: "We know that we are of God and the whole world lieth in wickedness. And we know that the Son of God is come, and hath given us an understanding that we may know him that is true; and we are in him that is true, even in his Son, Jesus Christ. This is the true God, and eternal life" (1 John 5:19-20). In those words are no accents of wavering faith or timorous uncertainty.

In like manner St. Paul writes to Timothy, his son in the Gospel: "Continue thou in the things which thou hast learned and hast been assured of, knowing of whom thou hast learned them; and that from a child thou hast known the Holy Scriptures which are able to make thee wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus" (2 Timothy 3:14-15).

The great Apostle to the Gentiles claims for himself an equal certitude of faith. To the Corinthians he writes of the glorious hope which is common to him and all the faithful: "We know that if our earthly house of this Tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens" (2 Corinthians 5:1). With reference to his own personal experience of the heavenly hope he says, "I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him against that day" (2 Timothy 1:12). He thus challenges the fires of the judgment day to shake his faith or extinguish his assured knowledge of his ascended and ever living Lord.

Of course, it is spiritual truth about which such immovable certitude is declared. Jesus Christ and His Apostles never concerned themselves about scientific theories or speculative philosophies. They proclaimed the revealed truth of God, as that, and that alone, which emancipates the soul from the thraldom of sin and the fear of death.

And it is worthy of remark that they did not hold that the Christian religion is an abstruse system to be pored over by "the intellectuals", who after long efforts to understand it find it too recondite to reach a final conclusion about it. Our illuminati, who so construe it and talk about it, have utterly mistaken "the simplicity that is in Christ" (2 Corinthians 11:3).

Of His divine revelation Jesus said, "I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes. Even so, Father: for so it seemed good in thy sight" (Matthew 11:25 and 26).

The spiritual truth which brings freedom is reached through child-like docility and filial obedience far more than by intellectual strenuosity.

The liberalists who imagine they can become free by breaking away from historic Christianity and chasing every changeful theory are quite mistaken. They are really enthralling themselves in meshes of their own making.

Moreover, they, like the Pharisees of old, are coveting a sort of liberty about which Jesus taught nothing. The Pharisees coveted political freedom, and our liberalists crave the liberty of believing what they please, without regard to the divine revelation, and of changing their beliefs with every variation of modish doubt.

The freedom which the knowledge of truth assures always partakes of the nature of the truth by which it is assured.

Political freedom arises from democratic systems supported by force. Hence, it has been said that "Liberty in its last analysis is the blood of the brave."

Intellectual caprice is not liberty, nor can freedom flow from it. It is a slavery rooted in servile subjection to whims, fancies, and the transient fashions of fleeting theorizings.

Spiritual liberty issues from spiritual truth alone. It emancipates the spirit beyond the power of tyrants to terrorize or prison walls to incarcerate. It imparts a life which fears no king but God and obeys no sovereign but the Saviour of the soul.

Wherefore, the Hebrew Psalmist said of God, "I will walk at liberty; for I seek thy precepts" (Psalms 119:45). And one who was and is greater than all the psalmists and sages of all the ages, declared to the Jewish leaders, and through them to all men, "If the Son shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed" (John 8:36).

"MAN IN THE RE-MAKING"

By the Reverend William Porkess, D. D.

SELF-MADE MEN! To what extent are they made? If we could listen to their story or by some means put them under a searching analysis, we would perhaps find that they had reached a certain high and commendable mark, solely through their own efforts. They had commandeered and put to use the sum-total of the courage, patience, tenacity and determination within them. The emphasis, beyond any doubt, is what they have done for and with themselves. This type of man has included much that is praiseworthy, but excluded more that is of greater value, when appraising life at its highest and best.

How very clearly this is brought out when we face the tribunal of Christ's teaching! Yet He does not say anything that conflicts with the self-made man, but He adds considerably, by the promise He holds out to him, for the larger accomplishment—man's re-making. There is now a change of emphasis—from man making himself to that of being made by Another. It is what we might describe as the moral question, consisting of Christ plus man, with the former always in the ascendancy.

As a striking illustration we have the eighteenth and nineteenth verses of the fourth chapter of St. Matthew's Gospel. Jesus is walking by the Sea of Galilee. His eye is caught by an every-day picture—men fishing. On this particular day He saw two brothers—Peter and Andrew. The interesting thing to this keen Observer was not what they were, but what they might be. Hence the Man of Galilee's command and promise, "Follow Me, and I will make you fishers of men." The later events of these two disciples' lives revealed how wonderfully they had been re-made by the Master's touch and guidance. They did catch men with the same definiteness as they had previously caught fish. They stepped out of the smaller world of self-made men into the larger realm of men vitally influencing others. As soon as Peter and Andrew related themselves to Christ the re-making process began. Their horizon was no longer confined to toiling on the Lake of Galilee, but rather working under the impetus of a much greater outlook—an objective that did not stop short of really winning other men.

With all the cumulative evidence of human growth, since the Days of our Lord's Flesh, what are we to say of man today? Are we not compelled to acknowledge that he still must be re-made? Man, in himself, can never climb to the highest height of achievement—that which enables him to actualize the finest and noblest influence over other men—that which is essentially Christian. The old way is still the new one. The Eye of the Spirit of the Man of Galilee looks on, and with no lessening of interest. He sees us heemed in by our self-made circumference—our absorption in the fishing nets of our own plans and activities. There is such a similarity between us and Peter and Andrew, and for this reason the Master-Teacher is so much more concerned in what we might and can be than in what we are. But as then so now, it is not, fundamentally, a matter of what we in ourselves possess, as what can, through the same Divine Promise, be given to us—the re-making of our lives—"I will make you fishers of men."

The whole issue hinges upon our attitude to the Christ. The potentiality of Christian influence over others, in a growing sense, is not in us, but it is in Him—He is the very source from which we must draw. We can receive it, if we will. It is all in the willingness and determination to follow Him. It seems simple, but so many substitutes are ever knocking at life's doors for entrance, that numbers are misled. It needs a trained ear to make sure that we are listening to the authoritative voice of the Christ. If we have caught the full meaning of His command to "follow", we shall realize that it does not interfere with the well-doing of our daily work, our "fishing", but rather that it supplements—it enlarges. The follower of Jesus will be much more than a worker—a fisher in life's modern Lake of Galilee. He will be a personality that touches other men with the Christian impress. He will have, through Christ, emerged from the self-made to the re-made man.

Life and Sight Says

"Most of our prayers consists of begging for health, good looks, and riches, with a little thanksgiving thrown in for space" (Bishop Shayler, Omaha). "Jesus Christ is not likely to be found on the floor of the dance hall or at the bridge table" (Bishop Shayler). We have just read a note in the secular press that Bishop Shayler and two city parish minnsters held an open-air service at one of the city churches Sunday, June 30. This is in line with the plan of the apostles, and early century missionaries. Christ preached almost always in the open air; also St. Paul. In England, Wesley, Whitfield, and numerous others, led multitudes to Christ through their open-air preachings. This has been maintained by the Church Army and Salvation Army. Parsons now-a-days prefer an easier life, going through routine formalities performances in a comfortable building, while they treat their audiences to theological shoddy. We are acquainted with Bishop Shayler, and heartily congratulate him for his effort to observe Jesus' parting injunction: "Go, . . . preach the gospel to the whole creation." "The negative (barren) pulpit is one of the most pitiable objects in the world. Professing to have a message, such a pulpit denies it, in a world which sorely needs the redemption and guidance of the gospel. Young and old alike, are wise in refusing to follow those who know not where they are going. We like to hear the minister who can say 'I KNOW in whom I have believed'." (Christian Evangelist.)

Information.

Prayer does not in any manner, sense, or degree consist in "saying" things, whether out of a book, or extemporaneously. The word "prayer" simply means asking, and this asking may be done audibly or secretly in the mind. The Scriptures give us examples of each. Many persons imagine that "saying" certain words is praying. What nonsense, longing or desire for something that we believe will be for our, or some other person's benefit, for their well being and happiness, with the certainty that the petition will be assuredly realized. With out, or indifference, there is no response, no realization. Thus, as St. James asserts: "Let a man ask in Faith, nothing doubting. . . . Let not that (doubting) man think he shall receive anything of the Lord" (James 1:5-8). The basis of effectual prayer rests upon a profound Divine philosophy; the essential unity of the persons praying, with his Heavenly Father, in and through Jesus Christ. Jesus constantly insists upon that fact, "If ye shall ask anything of the Father in my name, He will give it you" (John 16:23: 15:16). Again, "Whatsoever ye shall ask in my name, that will I do." (John 14:13). Note the conditions of genuine, effectual prayer: "If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ask whatsoever ye will, and it shall be done unto you"

(John 15:7). (See also Matthew 18:19, 20. Also Matthew 21:22). Note the following apparent paradox: "All things whatsoever ye pray and ask for, believe that ye receive (have received) them (already) and ye shall have different from the puny, pretended "prayers" consisting in merely "saying" things; at once profance and mocking. Note again that Jesus repeatedly said prayer was to be offered in His name. More philosophy. Why? Because through His Incarnation, as God and Man, He unites both, as He expresses it, "I am the way . . . . no one comes to the Father (even in prayer) but by me" (John 14:6). How sad to read frequently in the Church press, the words "prayers" were said", also in the Prayer Book, "may be said or sung". What is such but "Honoring God with the lips, while the (unregenerate) heart is far from Him?" (Matthew 15:8).

The Gospel Catechist.

In our last paper we dealt with the derivation of the name, "Jesus", as being formed from the words, "Jah" and "Hosea"; combining both, we have "Jahosea", changed into "Joshua" and put into Greek, "Jesus!"

Now, the word, "Christ?" Answer: This word is the Greek for "The Anointed One", or Messiah, the name by which the prophet Daniel foretold the Saviour's advent to the Jews. See Daniel 9:25.

Doctrine of the Holy Spirit.

What do we learn from the Scriptures of the Holy Spirit? Very many things: First, that He is the essential life of all beings and things. In Genesis 1:2, we read that "the Spirit of God brooded over the surface of the deep," thus infusing life into matter. See also John 3:8, where the Spirit is stated to be the author of regenerative life of human beings. Secondly, we learn that the Spirit is a Person and not an Influence, as some imagine. (In a previous paper we explained what constituted a "person", as meaning an intelligent Being, whether clad in flesh or as being pure Spirit.) As a person, the Scriptures assert that He can be lied to, thus Peter stated that Ananias had "lied to the Holy Spirit. The Acts 5:3. May be "grieved; so St. Paul; Ephesians 4:30. "Grieve not the Holy Spirit of God." "May be resisted" (Acts 7:51, 53. The Nicean Creed refers to the Holy Spirit as being not only "Lord," God; but also as being the "Giver of Life." See Prayer Book, page 12.

THE PROTESTANT REFORM OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH AGAINST THE GOMORRHIADE OF THE ROMAN, GREEK AND ANGLO - CATHOLIC CORRUPTIONS, AND THEIR FALSE TEACHINGS AND LYING WONDERS

By Dr. James Cornell Biddle

THE freedom of the Protestant Churches has its source in the close adherence to the Scriptures and the rejection of vain teachings of the traditions of the Pharisees with the lying wonders—foretold to be repeated in the Christian Church by Our Lord, St. Paul, St. Peter, St. Jude and others.

These "false teachers" of "damnable heresies" (2 Peter 2), "crept in unawares", "even as Sodom and Gomorrha" (St. Jude), "whose coming is after the power of Satan with all power and signs and lying wonders" (2 Thess. 2:9), is exemplified today in the monstrous propagation in the Roman and Greek Churches, with a fatal inclination of the Anglo-Catholic Episcopal, with a vicious imitation—even their own theologians, who were sincere but duped by a false mistress, have acknowledged the universal fraud in the institution of false teachings propped up by tales of imaginary saints with false miracles, approved by Bulls and Brefs of Roman Pontiffs and other authorities, both East and West.

Revolutions often expose preexisting corruptions and falsehoods. Recent Russian writers reveal to us a state of lying wonders existing in the Orthodox Church only surpassed by the vast and multitudinous lies of manifold miracles in the worldwide famous lie of the Roman Church in the claimed, proved historically false, translation of the house at Nazareth, upborne by angels to Loretto in Italy, most puerile in its manufacture of fancied events. Read "Religion in Russia," by Julius F. Hecker, N. Y., p. 39, and other recent publications of the same kind as to this country recently edited—read where the Soviet government in 1918 in taking an inventory of the Alexander-Svisky monastery, in the Province of Olonetz, found that the monks in displaying their wonder-working relics, to attract the vast pilgrimages exhibiting the "incorruptible bodies" of some local saints, deceived their superstitious pilgrims and false worshippers by the substitution of wax images, as such miraculous bodies of flesh. Further examination elsewhere revealed also fraudulent relics of Tikhon Zadowsky and Saint Sergius, the most popular pilgrimage place in Russia. This is all but a faint reecho of similar frauds unearthed, but only repeated on a vast scale in Roman Catholic countries, since the Protestant Reformation purged itself of unscriptural teachings and corruptions. Protestants must be firm as of old, beware of the worldly leaven, lest it leaven again the whole lump of the Church—the mystery of iniquity Paul speaks of must be eliminated by Anglo-Catholics and others, or slavery will again fasten its shackles on the Church—"upon" "her forehead was a name written," "mystery, Babylon, the Great, the mother of harlots and abominations of the earth" (Rev. 17:5), "and here is the mind which hath wisdom. The seven heads are seven mountains on which the woman sitteth", "and the woman which thou sawest is that great city which reigneth over the kings of the earth." The City of Rome, its papal emperor, receiving the crown Christ refused, again is heralded by a Mussolini, in effect not only as the head of a universal Church, but State, with a deified papal ruler. Indeed, may the fervent Christian pray, not Carthage, but this kind of Rome must be destroyed, "Carthage est delenda"!

Witness how the Roman Catholic Saints and theologians expose the extensive frauds in the lives, miracles and even existence of so-called martyrs, confessors and virgins and the shams exhibited and related of ficitious miracles and relics of the same.

St. Vincent Ferrer in 1440, long after the supposed translation of the Holy House to Italy, testified he saw it still in Nazareth, and the whole Eastern Church for ages since has venerated it there still, while on the contrary a rigorous scrutiny of the superstitious historians is reduced to the authority of a single writer (!) who claims an affidavit of an ignorant peasant, that two hundred years before his grandfather's grandfather, saw angels carrying it over the sea!—maybe ship's sails were angels' wings!

We are referred to a work of the historian Horatius Tarsellinus, approved by a bull of Clement VIII, quoted by such writers as Raynaldus, Bzovius, Spondanus and many others. Theologians, one after the other, testify to the same purpose. Ludovicus Vives says the lives of saints of the Roman Church are "corrupted with lies—they thought it piety to tell lies for religions". Gerson the French doctor, says it is lawful to invent false miracles, if the falsity is not publicly known" (!) This is not merely mediaeval teachings, the writer was obliged to contradict his professor on this very point before his own priestly ordination, and Father Chinquey gives his own testimony and that of pastor of St. Anne of Beaupre in Canada, all the crutches hung up on the walls of that famous shrine were only witnesses of fake cures of pretended cripples, who gained money by deceiving the public.

Testimonials of miracles granted through the intercession of St. Joseph to be printed in a Catholic Orphan Journal of New York, were dated to have occurred at a still future (!) date at the time they were being translated for the paper into French by monks for the faithful of that tongue, by the time of printing the favors would have already been granted—in other words, they were invented for the paper.

It is idle to say the Church does not vouch for false statements. The Popes themselves set the seal of truth on falsehood. At the same period that bulls of Alexander III and Sixtus V attested the body of the Apostle Bartholomew was entire at Rome; bulls of Leo IX, Stephen IX, Benedictus XII, and other alleged the same body was still at Benevento (!)—crowds of worshippers, multitudes of miracles, from an imaginary body, while the same saint's head and other parts claimed miracles, in still other places.

It is as Lyra, their theologian says, of "frauds used by priests in the churches to make people believe miracles" (c. 14, Dan.). Gilbert (twelfth century), abbot in France, says of them, "They make God a liar" and ridicule the tooth of the Saviour and milk of the Virgin as "lying and forgery".

It is not popular now for Anglo-Catholics to read Middleton on Miracles, or our Bishop Stillingfleet on Idolatry of Church of Rome, London, 1709. The works are suppressed, out of print.

But the Anglo-Catholic press is rich in its superstitious trash in its place, but their forefathers of the British Church full shared in this corruption of truth and practice. Melchior Canus says the Venerable Bede and their Anglo-Catholic Gregory the Great, in his dialogues, accept vain fables and that the pagan Suetonius "hath with more honesty the Acts of the Caesars than Catholic Acts of Martyrs, Confessors and Virgins".

The Anglo-Catholics take pride in the ceremonies of their Salisbury breviary, but its most solemn offices are corrupted with shameful lies, of Seven Sleepers and eleven thousand Virgins, all fables. English was subject to Rome, and breviaries also. After St. Thomas, Bonaventure, and the Roman brevaries, pontificals, declaring absolute worship, due to God alone, of Latvia, must be rendered to the images, cross of Christ, not merely veneration. Tyler on Idolatry, an Anglican, shows if a man in Britain refused to perform such worship, he was passed into the fire as a heretic.

Under Mussolini, Italy is to tolerate (State in worship obedient to Church), private Protestant worship, no publicity, until suppression entirely. What a howl if we should only tolerate Roman Catholics privately here, where the press ever is their public servant! The Great Milton believed Roman Catholicism as an evil, could not even be tolerated safely by any State (General Works). In masterly language of genius, he says they make the Bible conform to vain traditions not tradition to the Bible. The early Christian writers, as "sons of the Church", are falsified as testimonials. St. Bridget even named the Pope an Anti-Christ. St. Peter Damian denounced clergy in his work, "Gomorrhiade", at once forbidden on the Index. St. Vincent Ferrer wrote, "It was hard to find a chaste bishop in Christendom". Alzog and other Catholic historians publish this.

Let Anglo-Catholics follow the pure bride of Christ, the City at Jrusalem let down from heaven, not the Babylonian Rome.

Modernism and Romanism may differently falsify and corrupt the Bible, but it is still the impregnable rock of Holy Scripture as Gladstone has said, today the greatest scientists still hold as the only true history even of the world's crust on which we live—even as a holy mother once wrote on the fly leaf of the Bible she gave her son:

"She chose for her beloved boy
The source of light and hope and joy;
. . . remember 'tis no idle toy,
A Mother's gift—remember boy!"

Topics and Men

I was held up in the City, near the Mansion House, for about an hour on Monday, by the funeral procession of General Bramwell Booth, as it passed on its way from the Salvation Army Headquarters in Queen Victoria Street to Abney Park Cemetery. It was an impressive sight to see the traffic of the greatest city in the world brought to a standstill for the burial of a great religious leader. The crowds in the streets stood bareheaded and with every sign of sympathy, as the various sections of the army passed with bands and banners. The coffin was simple, and was carried on an open vehicle. The General's cap was placed upon it, and relatives and leaders followed. The whole procession gave an impression of the strength of the Army's membership. Both old and young were represented in the long array of officers and "lasses" who preceded and followed the coffin. The band played well known hymns, and although the arrangements were of the simplest character, the effect of the passing through the city was touching. There were few comments made by the spectators where I stood, but those that were made were full of appreciation of the work of the late General.—The Record.

"Why I Go to Church

Hon. John Wannamaker.

You might just as pertinently inquire, "Why do I eat"? or "Why do I sleep"?—because I find one is just as necessary to my well-being as the other.

I could eat well and sleep well, and yet be a very miserable man without the spiritual uplift that only comes from an attendance upon the Divine ordinances.

Then again, it is a great privilege to touch shoulders with the earnest Christian men who are also interested in promoting Christ's Kingdom upon earth.

For four years, while Postmaster General under the Harrison administration, I traveled nearly 100,000 miles in order to be present each week at my own church.

I have made it the rule of my life to be in my regular place each Lord's day when in health and in the country, believing that Paul was inspired to write that we should not forsake the assembling of ourselves together.

I also believe that the temptations of every man are draw nigh to Thee from coldness of heart and wanderings of mind, that with steadfast thoughts and kindled affections we may worship Thee in spirit and in truth; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

His Hand Upon the Hils

His Hand pours beauty from a shining cup
Upon green hills and leafy mountain-ways,
That I may pause in wonder—looking up,
And worshipping throughout my length of days;
While the slim willows bend in cloudy lace,
And zephyrs voice His praises, blowing cool,
In the blue mists above I see His face;
It gleams, tree-shadowed, from some silver pool.

I read His meaning in a thousand ways:
Each slight, half-open bud, each waving strand
Of meadow-grass unfolds to my rapt gaze
Some message that I know and understand;
While in the glory of fruit-laden tree,
The magic of the rose—a ripened pod,
In fields encircled by His mystery,
I hark the vabrant murmur—here is God.

—Clare MacDermott.

—The Christian Index.

Tomorrow

He was going to be all that a mortal could be
Tomorrow.
No one should be kinder or braver than he,
Tomorrow.
A friend who was troubled and weary he knew
Who'd be glad of a laugh and who needed it, too;
On him he would call and see what he could do
Tomorrow.

Each morning he stacked up the letters he'd write
Tomorrow.
And thought of the folks he would fill with delight
Tomorrow.
It was too bad, indeed, he was busy today,
And hadn't a minute to stop on his way;
More time I will have to give others he'd say.
Tomorrow.

The greatest of workers this man would have been
Tomorrow.
The world would have known him had he ever seen
Tomorrow.
But the fact is he died and he faded from view,
And all that he left here when living was thorugh
Was a mountain of things he intended to do
Tomorrow.

—Author Unknown.

—The Canadian Churchman.

Church Bell Found in a Cellar

There is being restored to Belgium a church bell which, since 1917, has lain neglected in the cellar of a New Cross house. When the Great War was at its height a resident of New Cross acted as host to a Canadian soldier. Returning from one of his visits the soldier left behind him a parcel, which he wished should be forwarded to him at an address in Canada, which he promised to make known later. For twelve years the parcel remained in the cellar awaiting the disclosure of that address, but it never came.

Oldest Chiming Bell for Miles Around.

A few weeks ago the New Cross resident was proposing to move, and he made inquiries which led to the discovery that his Canadian friend was dead. The parcel was unwrapped and inside was found the bell, over fifty-six pounds in weight. An inscription on the bell read: "Cette cloche est donne a la Chapelle de St. Juon par nos Pietre de Conink et Marie Elizabeth Vosknouble, sa femme, 1728." The Belgian Ambassador was informed, and has written gratefully accepting the relic with a view to returning it to its rightful owner, at whose church near Ypres it is believed to have hung for nearly two centuries. As bells and other metal which the Germans took in this district were melted down for ammunition, it is thought that this bell will soon be one of the oldest chiming for miles around where the Canadian found it.—The Church of England Newspaper.

FAVORITE SCRIPTURE VERSES

(In this space each week will appear a favorite passage of Scripture as sent in by a different reader. Every one is, therefore, invited to send us their favorite verse. It is suggested that all who can, join with the rest of us in committing to memory the verse which so appears here each week, including its location in the Holy Book; and in due time your memory chest will be laden with choice eternal treasures, indeed. "Thy word have I hid in my heart, that I might not sin against thee," Ps. 119:11.)

This week the following verse was submitted by Frances E. Bartter, Moro Settlement House, Zamboanga, Philippine Islands:

> "Rest in the Lord and wait patiently for Him"—Psm. 37:7.
>
> And He shall give thee thy hearts' desire.
>
> My heart's desire and prayer is that each of the girls in my care may learn to know and love our Saviour.

Who will send one from the far-away places as well as very near us?

Book Reviews

THE WORLD'S MIRACLE: By Dr. Karl Reiland. Cloth. Pp. 193. Price, $1.75. Published by Henry Holt and Company, New York City.

THE GREAT CONJECTURE: By Winifred Kirkland. Cloth. Pp, 132. Price, $1.25. Published by Henry Holt and Company, New York City.

These two volumes blend sympathetically. Dr. Reiland taking his first essay for the title, utilizes many incidents of common life for treatment along the lines of F. W. Boreham, whom no doubt he has imbibed. Dr. Norwood calls this book in his introduction, "the distillation of a great preacher's heart". And we cordially agree. Notwithstanding, Dr. Reiland cannot resist his iconoclastic tendency to shatter what many of us reverently cherish. His ideal of truth is that the past can no longer guide us into reality; but the present, impulsive, self-generated, self-satisfied and confident of its youth resistance to venerable traditions. And with his usual safe-guarding of the possible peril of too high a claim, admits that truth is ever unfolding and must in the nature of the case surrender today's convictions for tomorrow's newer light. Some of us who have long been in the way, wonder who is to be the authority in this sepculative realm. Perhaps the Zeitgeist, of which Dr. Reiland must know.

Miss Kirkland is no less inclined towards the pathway Dr. Reiland has chosen; but her appeal is winsome (that's the female of it) and more conciliatory. She does paint a beautiful picture of our Lord as she unfolds in this book what she calls "An account of experience with the inescapable Galilean." And she stands with us at the resurrection and thrills our hearts with the confidence that it answers the universal question, "Who is this Jesus?" In her chapter, "The Jesus of Adventure," she herself does a bit of that in her creation of the fact of what really happened when Jesus preached in New York and no one saw or heard Him. We admire the ingenuity of that effort; it means but little to us who in some measure know the Lord Jesus in the fellowship of His sufferings and conformity to His death. These two splendid leaders of modern thought need yet to acquire the secret of the Apostle's urge, "Though we have known Christ after the flesh, yet now henceforth know we him no more" (2 Cor. 5:16). The weakness of very much of this new literature is the emphasis of what St. Paul depreciates and the belittlement of what he emphasizes.

Notwithstanding, these are two readable books. What we have indicated as questionable is balanced by things which in their own way are suggestive. We have no reason to condemn en toto what may have much that is helpful; and in our necessarily discriminating age, we need not accept everything a writer may say. One thing these newly presented ideals have done for us is to school us in the culture to benefit by what we may find stimulating; to kindly dismiss from our minds what may offend our settled convictions. Even our adolescents are becoming skilled in that method of appropriation or rejection.

Kenneth Mackenzie.

POWER FROM ON HIGH: By Rev. John Greenfield. Moravian Evangelist. May be obtained from the author at Warsaw, Indiana. Price, 35 cents.

After the highly speculative volume of Dean Mathews, it is refreshing to turn to such a book. Here is a description of the great Moravian revival and some of its results. The Dean would like to produce brotherhood and love by presenting a Jesus who never existed but the result from his own school is a Loeb or a Leopold—they are the logical outcome of his doctrines. Mr. Greenfield has given us—not speculative wishes, but real results; he tells us of marvels of grace that have become a matter of history.

The Moravian revival was rooted in prayer. Less than two hundred had been meeting for prayer when the Holy Spirit filled them in unusual fashion. From this little group there resulted such a movement as the world has seldom seen. Their emphasis was upon the Crucified Christ. Their victories were won in the power of His Resurrection.

The movement had important consequences beyond their own church. Among others, the Wesleys and later William Carey, were moved by these spirit-filled men. Its hymns have been sung wherever Christ is known.

The reading of the results of this movement make us wonder why such movements and their principles do not find a larger place in our history courses. God has not changed and He will answer those who obey His spiritual laws as He did then. What inspiration would come from a study of these movements in place of the uninspiring history of ecclesiastical cut-throats, or dull church politicians that often pass for Christian history. If in addition a real analysis of these awakenings could be made with a view to discover the secret of their power, plus a willingness to obey it when discovered, what results might follow!

Frank Cox.

Letters to the Editor

In this Department the Editor will at all times welcome communications expressing opinions on the various topics which are engaging the attention of the Church. But the Editor will not hold himself responsible for such opinions.

No "Letters to the Editor" will appear in our columns except those coming to us signed by writer.

CHURCHES TIGHTLY CLOSED.

Mr. Editor:

The writer having occasion on a recent week-day to spend several hours in Richmond, determined to seek out some of the well-known and historic churches and other interesting places in your attractive city—which as the capital of the old Commonwealth of Virginia, as well as the one-time seat of government of the Confederacy, holds an unfailing charm, not alone to all Southerners, but to every well-informed American.

But the churches were sealed. The doors of such important houses of worship as Grace and Holy Trinity, St. James, All Saints, and old St. Paul's were tightly closed, albeit the last named bore a placard entitled, "Closed for repairs."

Are Richmond churches so indifferent to the spiritual welfare of those who may wish to enter within their hallowed walls, perforce that they may obtain that grace with which to meet the problems that are vexing them in their daily lives? Are the portals of these temples of worship open for prayers and devotion, but one day only in seven?

I might add that the Roman Catholic Cathedral, a very beautiful edifice, was found to be the sole exception to the above observation.

Can it be that the Roman Catholic Church alone in Richmond has made provision for the occasional pilgrim who may for his soul's comfort seek to enter a place of worship on days other than Sunday?

A Carolina Churchman.

Mr. Editor:

It was a rare kindness you did me—an unexpected kindness and one that is greatly appreciated. I wrote what I considered a deserved compliment of one of the best Church papers that I have ever known. I read eight or ten church periodicals, some good, some very good, some just so. The Southern Churchman commands my highest admiration and appreciation. It is loyal in the highest sense to the Bible and the religion of Jesus Christ. No person can read it thoughtfully and prayerfully without being better. The editorials are all high class; so also are all the contributed articles. I thoroughly enjoy it. I thank you so much for your kindness.

I thank you most heartily for the little booklets on General Lee and the "Excursions" in Southern history. Barbee is a rare historian. I was surprised that Beveridge had never heard of Bledsoe, as an intellectual giant, he topped almost any man this country ever produced. His book, "Was Jeff Davis a Traitor?" left nothing for those bloodthirsty enemies to stand on. They dared not bring him to trial after that book came out. Abraham Lincoln, before his assassination, foresaw the capture of Mr. Davis, and knowing they had nothing on which to base a charge of treason he suggested that it would be good policy to "let him get away." That's a sample of Mr. Lincoln's sincerity.

J. C. Hooks.

New Market, Va.

Mr. Editor:

I enclose clipping from the Buffalo Courier Express, Sunday, July 7, 1929, which bears out my assertion that the revised Prayer Book authorizes Masses for the Dead. Please note the service held for this deceased clergyman of the Protestant Episcopal Church is specifically referred to as a "requiem mass". This is only one of numerous such items I have noticed in various papers in which the funeral service was called a "requiem" or "requiem mass". Of course that correctly describes it, for that is all that it is. In the South they will be very slow, perhaps, about accepting the title, but if you use that sort of service what difference does it make whether you call it a Mass—that is exactly what it is.

Again, the new Communion Office teaches transubstantiation as seen in a Corpus Christi Service held on Corpus Christi Day. Further, the practice of Reserving the Sacrament and of Worshipping the Wafer will certainly grow. The title Father will be used more frequently. Confession before communion will increase, and finally become obligatory. The Chief Service of the day will be High Mass or Sung Mass, the use of the Rosary will become the established order. The real victory at the General Convention was won by the Anglo-Catholics, in the changes, small and seemingly insignificant, but nevertheless of major importance in so far as they serve as a basis for teaching the full Catholic doctrine, for in all Catholic doctrine, "It is the Mass that matters."

C. B. Lucas.

Extract from the Buffalo Courier Express follows:

"An unusual honor will be accorded the late Rev. Reginald Norton Willcox, well known Episcopal clergyman of the Western New York Diocese, who died Wednesday night in the University Hospital at Ann Arbor, Mich. His body will be taken to Hendersonville, N. C., and buried in the sanctuary of St. James' Episcopal Church, of which he was rector for nearly fifteen years.

"A delegation of Episcopal clergymen from Buffalo went to Gowanda yesterday to attend the requiem mass for Father Willcox held in St. Mary's Church, of which he was priest. Among them were the Rev. Dr. Charles A. Jessup, rector emeritus of St. Paul's Cathedral, and the Rev. John L. Short, of Kenmore. The Rt. Rev. David L. Ferris, Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Western New York, presided at the services, which were conducted by the Rev. Edmund S. Sills, of Westchester, N. Y., a close personal friend of Father Willcox. The Rev. Leslie F. Chard, of Dunkirk, assisted. The body was placed in a receiving vault of the Lake View Cemetery to await later conveyance to Hendersonville."

Church Intelligence

Nurse Flies to Relieve Emergency in Alaska.

One of the interesting things about the life in the Department of Missions is that one never knows what is going to happen next!

Everything was going beautifully at the Hudson Stuck Memorial Hospital, Fort Yukon, Alaska. Two nurses had been secured to fill vacancies. They were both heart and soul in the work. One day in April a wireless came from Dr. Grafton Burke, director of the hospital, saying that one of the nurses had become suddenly ill and required a serious operation. The remaining nurse could not carry on single-handed. Somebody must hurry to Fort Yukon to help save the situation.

Fortunately we had on our available list, Miss Margaret Foster, of Montrose, Colorado. We knew all about her from careful inquiry. She had passed a satisfactory physical examination. We asked her if she would start immediately to meet the emergency. Figuratively speaking, she said she would take the next train for Seattle.

But then a new difficulty appeared. The April sun was at work breaking up the sled trails, but it had not been strong enough to open up the rivers. Miss Foster could get as far as Fairbanks, but there she might have to wait six weeks for the first boat. A telegram asked Miss Foster whether she would fly from Fairbanks to Fort Yukon. Again she agreed and was soon in Fort Yukon.

All travel is expensive in Alaska, flying particularly so. While we were wondering where the one hundred fifty dollars for the airplane trip was to come from, the unexpected happened again. This time it was a letter from the leader of the Y. P. S. L. in the Diocese of Indianapolis, asking for two projects to cost about one hundred fifty dollars each, for which the young people could make their special gifts during 1929. Miss Foster's airplane journey was suggested as one of them. Without delay, the reply came back: "The Young People of Indianapolis will take care of Miss Foster's flight." So Fort Yukon gets a nurse. Indianapolis an interesting thing for which to work, and the Secretary of the Department relief from anxiety.—The Spirit of Missions.

August Bible Conferences.

The August Bible Conferences of the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago will be held at four widely separated points. The five conferences of July have been in the eastern section of the country. The Ocean City, N. J., meetings will continue through August, closing on Labor Day, September 2. The speakers for the month will be Dr. S. E. Long, the Rev. Will H. Houghton, the Rev. H. M. Lintz, Pastor Dolman of Germany, Mr. H. A. Ironside, the Rev. James F. Harrison, Dr. Henry Ostrom and Mr. A. H. Stewart. The program is exceptionally strong, with many unusual features. At Hendersonville, N. C., from July 28 to August 11, the speakers will include Mr. H. A. Ironside, Dr. John Thomas of London, Mr. A. H. Stewart and the Rev. J. F. Harrison. In the First Presbyterian Church of Colorado Springs, Colo., August 11 to 25, will be heard Dr. J. E. Conant, Dr. John Thomas and Dr. S. E. Long. The closing conference of the summer will be at Cedar Lake, Ind., August 17 to 25. At this well-known assembly ground will be heard the Rev. Lee W. Ames, Mr. A. H. Stewart and the Rev. Henry G. Dietz.

Provision has been made for musical features of great interest at each of the conferences. Breadth and variety will mark all the programs which will include Bible expositions, inspirational addresses, and the discussion of timely topics.

Solving the Problem of the Hilarious Alumni.

The newest thing in the field of education is the "alumni college". Lafayette College is announcing what, with pardonable pride, it calls "the first session of the first alumni college in the country", to be held during the week following commencement. It is no secret that academic authorities have often found the returning alumni more or less of a nuisance. The college is glad to have them come, of course. It prizes their loyalty, it desires their continuing interest and it wants their money. But not infrequently the come apparently to prove to themselves that, though "old grads", they are just as young as they used to be. They re-enact, with rather grotesque over-emphasis, the more frivolous features of college life, make much indecorous whoopee, and set a bad example to the young. The college welcomes them—and breathes a sigh of relief when they are gone. The "alumni college" idea It seems a reasonable hypothesis. It uates may desire to be students again for a week, not merely to be rah-rah boys under a handicap of gray hairs, rheumatism, and a thickened waist line. It seems a reasonable mypothesis. It actually is true, in spite of some evidence to the contrary, that one of the principal student activities in college is study, and there are a great many graduates whose memories of college life include the fact that there the birth of permanent intellectual interests took place. To all such the alumni college appeals. There will be regular courses of lectures and round table discussions. The alumni students will be housed in the college dormitories and will eat at the college commons. The whole round of college life will be revived for them. This is a real idea. If it has the success it deserves, the example ought to be widely imitated.—Christian Century.

Cathedral Orders Stone for First Step in New $3,000,000 Building Program.

The closing of a contract, involving an expenditure of $250,000 for the purchase of the first 50,000 cubic feet of stone required to begin the building of the north and south transepts of Washington Cathedral was authorized today by the Cathedral Chapter.

This action was made public by the Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, who announced that it was the first step in a new program of construction, which it is hoped will be completed in 1932 in time for a religious commemoration of the two hundredth anniversary of George Washington's birth.

The portions of the edifice included in this new undertaking form the fifth great unit of the cathedral fabric. Other units now structurally complete, are the foundations, the crypt chapels, the apse, and the choir. It has been estimated that more than 250,000 cubic feet of stone will be used in the new work. The cost, including sufficient endowment to make the new portions effective for continuing service, is expected to exceed $3,000,000, Bishop Freeman said.

Funds for the initial order of stone were raised in a special effort conducted by the Executive Committee for Washington Cathedral, of which former U. S. Senator George Wharton Pepper is chairman. The additional amounts needed for the purchase of the remainder of the stone and for actual construction are being sought in a more general program under the leadership of General John J. Pershing as National Chairman.

In a statement issued by the Executive Committee, with a foreword signed by Bishop Freeman, General Pershing, Senator Pepper and Secretary of the Treasurer Andrew W. Mellon as campaign treasurer, it is explained that provision must be made for offerings averaging $57,000 monthly during the next thirty-two months if the transepts are to be completed in time for the Washington bicentenary and at a maximum economy in construction costs.

The statement also points out that the completion of the transepts will provide shelter within the cathedral for congregations of approximately 3,500 persons. This, it is stated, will enable the cathedral to care better for the spiritual needs of the large numbers who at present are often unable to gain access to many of the services in the small crypt chapels, and also will make possible the holding under inspiring auspices of several religious services planned in conjunction with the George Washington commemoration.

Reviewing the recent construction program, the statement reports that during the past thirty-six months more than one hundred and fifteen feet has been added to the length of the roof line of the edifice and the five great bays of the choir have been reared to join the apse in forecasting the beauty of the completed structure. During the same period, it is pointed out, more than 6,000 men and women and a host of churches, Sunday schools and even missions have responded to the cathedral appeal with gifts and pledges aggregating well over $3,800,000. Since its inception in 1893, the Cathedral Foundation has been the recipient of offerings large and small from 33,000 benefactors. The Book of Remembrance kept at the Cathedral offices shows these have come from every state, from distant territories, and even from foreign lands.

Mr. Rockefeller's Gift.

Note to the Weeklies: I may have overlooked it in your columns, but I have not noticed that any of you have mentioned a personal gift of $350,000 from Mr. Rockefeller, Jr., for St. Luke's Hospital, Tokyo. This was in the newspapers, I believe, while I was away, but I have only now learned of it. The Hospital headquarters here verify the statement and their next bulletin, in a week or so, will quote Mr. Rockefeller's letter. The Foundation has already, as you know, made provision for $400,000 to endow the College of Nursing, and ordinarily Mr. Rockefeller does not supplement gifts made by the Foundation. In this case he considers that he is reimbursing the hospital for damage done by fire. It is an unconditional gift.

G. W. B.

Door Wide Open to Missionary Physicians in China.

The China Medical Association is convinced that the mission hospitals are faced with a crisis more serious than any they ever have met before. While the work has increased, the staff of hospitals in China has scarcely increased at all, and in some places has seriously diminished. This has been owing partly to a decreased supply of physicians from the West and partly to the increasing difficulty in obtaining a supply of fully qualified Chinese doctors.

Owing to the wars and troubles of recent years, medical schools in China have had a particularly difficult time. Two of the mission medical schools have been closed and several others have barely managed to keep going. Chinese government medical schools have been in an even worse way, few of them being able to continue to function, owing to lack of finance as well as to political difficulties. The result has been that the already insufficient supply of well qualified doctors has been reduced to a small number and the future for the next few years is unpromising.

On the other hand, the revolution in China is causing an unprecedented demand for trained physicians for public health and other government appointments. Thus, from both sides the effect on the staffs of the mission hospitals have been very serious.

The Missionary Division of the China Medical Association is emphatic in expressing its opinion that "there is urgent need for the reinforcement of the medical staffs of mission hospitals, and that the door is still wide open to missionary physicians from the West, men and women well qualified in their professions and filled with the Spirit of Christ."

Guild of St. Barnabas for Nurses.

San Francisco, Chicago, New York, a far flung cry from Alma, Balaclava, Sebastopol, 1854-1927.

Musing whilst on my way to attend the Florence Nightingale Memorial services, held at Grace Cathedral, Sunday, May 29, in San Francisco, of the beautiful statue of the Lady of the Lamp, standing at Waterloo Place, London, by the side of Sidney Herbert, Secretary of War during the Crimean period, and picturing in my mind, also, the lovely and inspiring marble group in the National Museum, in Whitehall, portraying this ideal woman and nurse, ministering to her wounded soldiers, many of her personal effects, including her field glasses, in a case close by, and near the bugle which sounded the "advance", to the Light Brigade, an order obeyed implicitly, in the face of certain death, my vision and thoughts were suddenly confronted with the sight of a fleet of grey lined motor buses, marked in large letters, designating their usual route as Los Angeles, Pittsburgh, New York, but now filled with hundreds of nurses from every hospital and nursing organization, dressed in their simple beautiful uniforms, on their way to Grace Cathedral, anxious to show their appreciation, respect and reverence for the founder of their chosen profession, by participating in the services, arranged each year by the devoted band of the members of the Guild of St. Barnabas for Nurses.

The Rt. Rev. Walter T. Sumner, D. D., Bishop of Oregon, deeply interested in the nursing profession through his close activity with the hospital and its patients, gave a most eloquent and encouraging address, while Dean Wilmer Gresham, assisted by the Rev. John Collins, welcomed nurses and conducted the services, which closed with the Nightingale pledge and Guild prayer, recited in unison.—S. M. O., in The Pacific Churchman.

Hear the Hymns From St. James' in Richmond.

A most interesting annual custom is maintained by the rector and people of St. James' Church, Richmond, in the broadcasting of the music of the new Brotherhood chimes each summer. We have just received from Mr. W. Kenneth Hawkins, Director of the Brotherhood at St. James, the usual announcement.

During the months of July and August, on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays, twice daily for fifteen minutes, beginning at 11:45 A. M., and at 5:45 P. M., Eastern Standard Time, hymns will be broadcast through Station WRVA, and readers of The Cross everywhere are invited to tune in.

In previous years these two fifteen-minute periods have proved so popular that the broadcasting of the hymns has become an annual custom, many people in all parts of the country writing their appreciation.

Readers of The Cross will recall that in our issue for April, 1926, there was a description of these chimes and their erection by Colonel Henry Lee Valentine of the St. James' Chapter in gratitude for the many blessings bestowed upon him, and—"to the glory of God, and in loving memory of Saint Andrew, who brought his brother to Christ."

Will not those successful in tuning in please write Mr. Hawkins, so that the people of St. James will know in a measure of the value of the undertaking. Send your telegram, postal card, or letter to Mr. W. Kenneth Hawkins, 912 West Franklin Street, Richmond, Va. The Rev. Churchill J. Gibson, D. D., is rector of St. James.—S. Andrew's Cross.

Cross of Honor of the Order of the Sangreal.

For notable service to God and humanity, nine of the clergy and laity of the Episcopal Church throughout the world were awarded the Cross of Honor of the Order of the Sangreal at its meeting at Racine, Wis., recently. The names were confirmed by the Grand Chapter on July 4, and announcement of the awards was made by the Rev. Irwin St. John Tucker, Grand Master of the Order, at St. Stephen's Church, Chicago, birthplace of the Order, on July 7.

Of the recipients, two are bishops, four are priests, two women and one layman. One of the clergy is a Sioux Indian, one a Negro, one an Englishman, one an American. Of the bishops, one has spent more than a generation in Japan, one has spent most of his life in New York. Of the women, one is a nun, and one is paralytic, for many years confined to a wheeled chair in a hospital.

The physician serves Eskimos and miners in a lonely and desolate station in Alaska.

Each year crosses of honor varying in number from nine to twelve are awarded by the Order of the Sangreal. The word "Sangreal" signifies the Holy Grail, the chalice of the Last Supper. Awards are made in recognition of knightly service in the quest of the Holy Grail, taken as a type of sacrificial pursuit of an ideal.

The awards are: The Rt. Rev. Arthur Selden Lloyd, Bishop Suffragan of New York: "Because his long service as executive head of missionary work, his entire consecration to the Master's cause, and the unselfish humility of his life have sweetened and enriched the life of the Church."

The Rt. Rev. John McKim, missionary bishop of Tokyo, Japan: "Because by his thirty-six years of faithful toil as bishop in a difficult field, he has planted the faith of Christ deep and strong in an alien land, and has helped to bind the world together around the foot of the Cross."

The Rev. William Carlisle, priest, prebendary of St. Paul's Cathedral, London; founder of the Church Army: "Because by the organization which he created the call is preached in highways and byways, the lost are reclaimed, the fallen are raised, and the poor have the Gospel preached to them."

The Rev. Philip de Loria, priest of Lake Andes, South Dakota: "Because he heard the voice of Christ while the pagan chief of an Indian tribe, and renounced all to follow the Master, and for fifty-three years of service in the priesthood has not ceased to set forth the glory of the love of God."

The Rev. B. M. Spurr, Archdeacon of Moundsville, West Virginia: "Because in an obscure and difficult field he has called into being a Christian community, applying the Gospel to the whole of life."

The Rev. John Williams, priest of St. Philips' Church, Omaha, in the Diocese of Nebraska: "Because for thirty years he has ministered to his own Negro race with loyal devotion, and has set the example of a saintly life, men of all races are glad to acknowledge as following the footsteps of Christ."

Dora Vannix, of Moe Hospital, Sioux Falls, South Dakota: "Because, although for many years confined to a wheeled chair, she has built up in the Church League of the Isolated a link of fellowship among far-scattered souls, by her letters seeking out and saving those who might have been lost save for her devotion and untiring patient love."

Dr. Grafton Burke, physician of the missionary district of Alaska: "Because in the desolate Arctic wilderness he has saved lives in the name of Christ, sparing neither labor nor himself to protect those under his care, traveling great distances under heavy hardships to stretch out the healing hands of Christ to sufferers in desperate need."

Mary Veronica, sister of the Community of St. Mary: "Because she renounced great wealth to devote her life in perfect self-sacrifice to the Master's call, and after having attained the generalship of her order, accepted retirement into obscurity with humility as a handmaiden of the Lord."

AN APPRECIATION OF SEWANEE.

By Dr. Charles S. Slichter, Dean of the Graduate School, University of Wisconsin.

"I was very much pleased with my visit to the University of the South at Sewanee. The institution enjoys an unique position among American colleges and the future, if the necessary financial support can be commanded, will lead it to a most important position.

"Its long tradition of culture and scholarship, its control, by ownership, of its physical environment, make an uqinue base upon which to build. Its college type of organizations, fortunately instituted many years ago, will render it possible to grow in numbers and, at the same time, to lose nothing to vitality—in fact, it should serve to add strength as size increases, an outcome of the reversal in American College development.

"It occurred to me when visiting Sewanee that it was quite possible that the Church in the Southern States did not fully realize what an unique opportunity to contribute to American culture was already in its control."

The First Annual New England Conference.

The first annual New England conference of pastors and Christian workers was held at Rummey, New Hampshire, June 25-28.

The invitation was to all pastors and their wives, church officers and their wives or husbands and others who are engaged either part or full time in Christian service.

Purpose: A period of prayer, fellowship, inspiration and consultation about our common problems in Christian work. We believe a better acquaintance among the various groups to be conducive of better understanding and more desire to cooperate.

The speakers were: Dr. W. B. Riley, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Minneapolis, one of the most eminent speakers in America; Dr. F. Noel Palmer, pastor of the Gospel Tabernacle of Toronto, formerly pastor of the largest Methodist Church in Paterson, N. J.; Dr. Kenneth Mackenzie*, internationally known author, lecturer and Bible teacher, of Westport, Conn.; Mr. C. E. Gremmels, prominent Episcopal layman of New York City.

Norman Gellatly of Boston was convention pianist. A ten piece orchestra was in attendance at the evening sessions with special musical features each evening.

*Dr. Mackenzie is a contributor to The Southern Churchman, and his strong, convincing series of articles, "We Believe That Thou Shalt Come", are appearing from time to time in our columns.

Consecrating the New Dollar.

The United States government beginning July 10, issued new paper money. One can easily tell the new money, because it is much smaller in size than the old money. A suggestion comes from the Federal Council of Churches of Christ that the first bill of this new money received by any and every Church member be given of God: "Consecrating the first fruits to the service of the Lord."

What a splendid thing it would be, if all Church members, of every denomination, of the faith of Jesus Christ, the world over, would send the first new dollar bill, or five, or ten, to the cause of missions under their respective church.

This, indeed, would help reach our missionary quota of the year and would send a thrill of joy and gladness throughout the mission field. Moreover, it would be in keeping with the teaching of the Word of God and the Spirit of the Son to make known His love, His life, and His message to people whom we may never see and may not know and may not love. But He loves them and cares for them, and so in giving to missions we make the most Christ-like and unselfish offering, an offering of faith and devotion, that we will ever make in this world, because it is done solely in His name and for His sake.

Religious School at Sweet Briar Is Declared Success.

The fourteenth annual session of the Virginia Summer Conference on Religious Education closed at Sweet Briar College Friday afternoon, after being in session June 24 to July 5. There was an enrollment of two hundred students and three hundred and twenty-seven certificates were granted. These certificates are approved and accepted by the Dioceses of Virginia, Southern Virginia, Southwestern Virginia and West Virginia for credit in the National Accredited Teachers' Association.

There were two graduate and three post graduate pupils.

Last year two hundred and ninety-eight credits were given.

Quality of work this year is said to have excelled that of any other year and noteworthy proficiency was indicated in class work.

Subjects used and the credits they carried were:

The curriculum, 21; the mission text book, 18; introduction to the Bible, 32; the program of the National Church, 2; Christian ethics, 7; the primary department, 39; the junior department, 15; the junior high department, 8; introduction to the prayer book, 17; study of the pupil, 16; principles of teaching, 21; the Church School service program, 5; the Life of Christ, 61; life and letters of St. Paul, 21; principles of Christian social service, 3; church teaching, 10; organizations of young people, 39.

Swimming and other recreations were an important part of the assembly program. The young people staged stunts and pantomimes after each evening prayer service.

Instructors in the school were:

Chaplain, the Rev. W. D. Smith, of Richmond; the Reverends J. C. Wagner and E. R. Carter, Petersburg; Mr. Cannon and Mrs. J. M. Nelson, of Louisville, Ky.; the Rev. L. N. Caley, Philadelphia; the Rev. H. S. Osborn, Tappahannock; Mrs. John Lowman and Mrs. M. C. Adams, Philadelphia; Mrs. Walter Ruan, Petersburg; Miss Bessie Sims, Richmond; Miss Louise Davis, Leesburg.

The class in social service visited the State Colony for Epileptics, near Lynchburg, during the conference.

J. C. P.

The Wellesley Conference.

From June 24 to July 5, a great conference for Church Work was held at Wellesley, Massachusetts. The conference was housed in the beautiful buildings of Wellesley College and about four hundred were enrolled in the different departments, for there was not only the School for Church Workers, but the School for Church Music and the School of Religious Drama. The Rt. Rev. Jas. DeW. Perry was Director of Conference, and the Rt. Rev. H. J. Mikell, Bishop of Atlanta, acted as Chaplain. Two other Bishops of the Foundation, Bishop Rhinelander and Bishop Slattery, visited the conference. The Rev. Dr. Charles H. Boynton, of the General Seminary, was Dean of the School for Church Workers and courses were given in Evangelism and the Evangelists by the Rev. Dr. Frederick S. Fleming; in Church History by the Very Rev. Dean Ladd, of the Berkeley Divinity School; the Study of Religion and Religions, by the Rev. Dr. R. K. Yerkes, of the Philadelphia Divinity School; the Old Testament, by the Rev. Dr. Charles N. Shepherd, of the General Seminary; the New Testament, by the Rev. Dr. Burton Scott Easton, of the General Seminary; Missionary Biographies, by the Rev. J. Thayer Addison, of the Cambridge Seminary; General Introduction to the Study of the Bible, by Miss Ogden, of Wellesley College; and a Normal Mission Study Class was conducted by Miss Laura F. Boyer.

These classes were largely attended and much serious work was done. Clergy conferences were held by the Rev. Dr. Ludlow, of the National Council, and every evening there were addresses by persons prominent in the work and life of the Church.

In the School of Christian Social Service an interesting course on "Focussing Christ's Gospel upon Human Problems, was given by the Rev. Edward S. White of St. Louis.

The School of Church Music, taught by Mr. Walter Williams, rector of St. Dunstan's College of Sacred Music, Providence, R. I., and Mr. Frederick Johnson, F. A. G. O., was one of the principle features of the conference.

The Rev. Dr. Osgood conducted the School of Drama and two performances were given, "The Boy Bishop" and a beautiful Morality Play, called "A Mirror for Souls". This last was one of the most impressive and lovely things which the conference offered.

A Young People's Conference was also in session, and the young people shared all the advantages of the Adult Conferences, and also held their own meetings and enjoyed many happy activities. The Rev. Albert H. Lucas, soon to be Headmaster of St. Alban's School at the National Cathedral in Washington, was director of the Young People, and he was ably assisted by Captain Greenwood, of the Church Army.

The Conference was wonderfully planned and successfully carried out. The seriousness of the work done, and the large attendance at all religious services, the happy life lived and the spirit of real devotion which pervaded the whole conference, gave all who attended a great experience, and a spiritual uplift which made it good for them to be there.

H. J. M.

FLORIDA.

Rt. Rev. Frank A. Juhan, D. D., Bishop.

Vacation Notes.

Summer time is come in Florida and the Bishop of the Diocese, as well as clergy and other officials, are already leaving the state, or planning to leave shortly, for their vacation periods.

Bishop Juhan plans to take the Sunday services in St. John's in the Wilderness, Flat Rock, North Carolina, for the last two Sundays in July, and will go from there to Sewanee, Tennessee, where he will be the Director of the Young People's Division of the Sewanee Summer Slhool for Workers, August 15 to 29. After this period he will return to Jacksonville.

The Rev. Newton Middleton, rector of St. John's Parish, Jacksonville, will have charge of St. John's in the Wilderness, Flat Rock, North Carolina, for the first two Sundays in July and he, with his family, will occupy the rectory there for the entire month of July. During his absence from the city, the Rev. Melville E. Johnson, Student Pastor at the University of Florida, will have charge of the services at St. John's.

The Rev. Edgar L. Pennington, rector of St. Andrew's Parish, Jacksonville, will spend the month of August in New York City.

The Rev. Guy H. Frazier, minister in charge of All Saints Mission, South Jacksonville, left with his family for Connecticut during the last week in June. Mr. Frazer will have charge of a parish in Astoria, Long Island, New York, for the months of July and August.

VIRGINIA.

Rt. Rev. H. St. George Tucker, Bishop

A Service of Lights.

On the first Sunday in July, in Epiphany Church, Urbanna, Va., was held a "Service of Lights" by the rector, the Rev. A. Campbell Tucker.

The Junior choir, consisting of girls and boys from eight to fourteen years of age, made their first appearance in a church service, attired in full vestments. They marched up the aisle singing, "Stand up, Stand up, for Jesus", with the seriousness and composure of an experienced choir. They were followed by the Counselors and members of the Girls' Friendly Society, also in vestments, who took their places in the front pews, which had been reserved for them.

An address by the rector from the text, "Except ye be Converted and become as little children, ye cannot enter into the Kingdom of Heaven". In simple language, which the tiniest child could understand, he explained to them how the disciples had asked of Jesus who should be greatest in the Kingdom of Heaven. He replied to them in the words of the text, and as little children are happy and pure, so these grown men should become as little children. The offertory was then taken up, during which one of the Girls' Friendly sang very sweetly, "My Task".

There were two probationers to be admitted into full fellowship of the Girls' Friendly. So after the offertory the Counselors and other members of the Girls' Friendly gathered around the two candidates at the chancel rail and the full admission service of the G. F. S. followed, with the entire congregation standing.

After the badges of full membership had been presented to the new members, the rector took a tall lighted candle from the altar (candles had been distributed to each member of the G. F. S., the choir and congregation), and explained the symbol of "Christ the Light of the World", and how the G. F. S. is trying to carry that Light to all the world.

The church lights were all turned off and the rector lighted the ones of the G. F. S., then lighted the choir and congregation, while the organ and violin played, "Lead Kindly Light". After all the candles were lighted in the whole church the choir marched out singing lustily, "Onward Christian Soldiers".

So ended a most touching and impressive service.

The rector plans to have the Junior choir take charge of the music the first Sunday night each month.

WASHINGTON.

Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman, D. D., Bishop.

"The Many Sided Christ and His Message for Today" is the general subject of the sermons being delivered by Canon Anson Phelps Stokes, Washington Cathedral, at the people's open air Even Song around the Peace Cross, every Sunday afternoon at four P. M. The title of the sermon, on July 14, was "Christ as Healer and Saviour".

History of Epiphany Church.

Epiphany Church, celebrating its eighty-fifth anniversary on July 14, calls to mind some of the outstanding historical points of the parish, appearing in one of Washington's dailies as follows:

The church was opened July 14, 1844, with a congregation that taxed the capacity of the new edifice.

The site of land on which Epiphany now stands was that offered to the organizing committee in the fall of 1842 by Miss Louisa Harrison, but there were objections to it, being "too far uptown". These objections, however, were overruled and the plot of ground accepted.

Very little is known of the first rector, Dr. John W. French, although he is recalled as having been a fine pastor, and indications are that his mind rang along the lines of things military. This would seem to be substantiated in his resignation from Epiphany in 1856 to become chaplain of the Military Academy at West Point.

The second rector was Dr. Charles Hall, who was called from the South in 1856 and preached what was termed a trial sermon the Sunday after Christmas, 1856. It was during Dr. Hall's rectorship that Jefferson Davis, who was later to become President of the Southern Confederacy, applied to the Church for a pew, which was given him. At the outbreak of the Civil War, Mr. Davis left Washington for Richmond. His wife requested that his name plate be nailed on the pew they had occupied. When completed it was sent to the church and placed on the pew. Shortly after the keys to the church were stolen and the name plate removed from the pew. The keys were later returned, but the plate has never been located.

Civil War Incident Recalled.

Recorded in the historical collections of Epiphany is an incident of how Secretary of War Stanton came to worship at Epiphany. One day during the early part of the war a friend informed Dr. Hall that, although he could not give him his reasons for believing it, he was confident that he possessed enemies who had informed the Government that he was a Southern sympathizer. Springing to his feet he exclaimed: "Excuse me for a few minutes. I must go to the War Department immediately." This he did, sending word to Mr. Stanton that he wanted to see him for "exactly two minutes". Upon being admitted he said: "Mr. Stanton, I am a Southern man. I am a Southern sympathizer, and should be a brute if I were not. My misguided friends are being killed. I am a Christian and loyal to the Government which keeps a roof over my head. When I cannot be loyal I will ask you to put me in Fort Lafayette. Is that satisfactory?" Mr. Stanton's answer was: "Dr. Hall, have you any pews to rent in your church? If you have, you may count on me as a parishioner as long as I live in Washington." Dr. Hall was one of the officiating clergy at the funeral of Abraham Lincoln.

Rated as Pastor of Ability.

Dr. Hall's successor was Dr. Thomas A. Starkey, formerly a Methodist preacher of exceptional ability. His rectorship at Epiphany was very brief, having come to Washington in 1869 and leaving in the spring of 1872, because of ill health. Later, on restoration to health, he was elected Bishop of New Jersey.

The fourth rector was Dr. Wilbur F. Watkins, who entered upon his duties in January, 1873. He, too, was at Epiphany but a few years, but during his administration extensive repairs and alterations were completed.

Next in the line of rectors was Dr. William Paret, who took charge in October, 1876. He commenced publishing the Epiphany Parish Guide, which chronicled events of interest in the parish. He resigned to become Bishop of Maryland in 1885.

Dr. Samuel H. Giesy entered upon his duties as rector in the spring of 1885. In 1888, however, he took ill with pneumonia and died.

Dr. McKim's Long Service.

Dr. Randolph Harrison McKim, who had served during the Civil War on the Southern side, was called to the rectorship, preaching for the first time the last Sunday of the year 1888. During his, the longest rectorship in the life of the parish, many important and far-reaching changes were made. The choir was removed from the south gallery to the chancel, beautified and enlarged for that purpose.

During the latter days of his rectorship unsuccessful efforts were put forth to sell the church property and move uptown.

Dr. James Edward Freeman assumed charge of Epiphany in February, 1921, to succeed Dr. McKim, whose death occurred on July 15, 1920. Dr. Freeman came from a large parish in Minneapolis. One of his first moves was to erect a memorial to his predecessor. A set of chimes of fifteen bells was one of the memorials, and these are played daily and twice on Sundays.

Dr. Freeman Becomes Bishop.

Dr. Freeman was consecrated third Bishop of Washington in Epiphany September 29, 1923.

Dr. Z. B. Phillips, rector of the Church of Our Saviour, in the City of Philadelphia, was called May 12, 1924. He accepted and preached his first sermon July 6, 1924. Dr. Phillips was elected chaplain of the United States Senate about two years ago.

Epiphany Church is perhaps better known to all religious organizations and activities than any other Episcopal Church in the diocese, probably because of its strategic position in the heart of the business section, and also its liberal Churchmanship and fine cooperation for good. Dr. Phillips, its rector is away on a six months' leave, following a period of illness, from which he is happily recovering. He is expected to return to the parish in the fall.

M. M. W.

SOUTHWESTERN VIRGINIA.

Rt. Rev. Robert C. Jett. D. D., Bishop.

Rector's Resignation is Twice Declined.

In January, the Rev. J. A. Figg asked the vestry to work towards a full-time minister for Radford. There was much enthusiasm until Mr. Figg was asked if he would give all of his time to the Radford Church, and he declined, saying that a new man should go with the change, he having served Christiansburg and Radford for nearly nine years. The members of the vestry then expressed their reluctance in taking any steps which would take Mr. Figg from Radford.

On June 4, the Rev. Mr. Figg tendered his resignation, which the vestry declined to accept. Because of later developments he again tendered his resignation on June 21, which the vestry on July 4 declined to accept.—Roanoke Times.

A Rector Comes to Lexington.

The Rev. Vincent C. Franks, now of Grace Church, Berryville, Virginia, has accepted a call to the rectorship of R. E. Lee Momorial Church at Lexington, in the Diocese of Southwestern Virginia, and plans to take up his new work September 15.

The church at Lexington has been vacant since the resignation of the Rev. Churchill J. Gibson, D. D., in April, 1928. This is a charge of exceptional importance, not only on account of the fact that it is an especially interesting parish, historically and otherwise, but particularly because Washington and Lee University and the Virginia Military Institute are located at Lexington. Dr. Gibson "carried" on splendidly for ten years in his relations with the regular members of the congregation and with the students at the two institutions. The members of the vestry are happy in having Mr. Franks as his successor.

Born in McKellar, Ontario, Mr. Franks received his academic training at Owen Sound Collegiate Institute, Owen Sound, Ontario; and Washington University, St. Louis, with a post graduate course at Columbia University, New York. Later he attended Union Seminary in New York and Virginia Seminary; graduating from the latter. He was ordained Deacon in September, 1927, and was advanced to the Priesthood at Grace Church, Berryville, in May, 1928. He has served at Berryville since he went there as a Deacon in October, 1927.

During the World War, Mr. Franks served with the Canadian Expeditionary Forces in the Dardanelles, Egypt, Africa, France and Belgium, and was engaged for a year in Atlantic Transport duty.

Mrs. Franks was formerly Miss Adele Eames, of St. Louis, Mo., and they have a baby daughter.

The Rev. Richard S. Martin to Blacksburg.

The vestry of Christ Church, at Blacksburg, has called the Rev. Richard S. Martin, now of Brooklyn, New York, and Mr. Martin has announced his acceptance of the call, effective the middle of August.

Mr. Martin is a native of Brooklyn and graduated from Brooklyn Polytechnic Preparatory School in 1912. He then attended Princeton University, where he graduated in 1916 with the degree of Litt. B. During the war he served overseas with the One Hundred and Seventh Infantry. After engaging in business for a time, he entered New York Law School, from which he graduated in 1923 as LL. B. He practiced law until 1926, when he entered the General Seminary. He graduated there in 1928 and was appointed Fellow and Tutor for the following year.

In May 1929, the General Seminary conferred upon him the degree of S. T. B.

For the past year and a half Mr. Martin has been in charge of Trinity Mission at Astoria, Long Island; serving first as Lay Reader. He was ordained Deacon April 17, 1928, and was advanced to the Priesthood November 24, 1928. Before taking the work at Astoria, he was Lay Assistant in missions on Long Island, particularly at Westhampton Beach. He also assisted at Grace Church, New York, in the winter of 1927-08.

On June 13, 1929, Mr. Martin was married in Grace Church, New York, to Miss Jean Douglass; the rector, the Rev. Dr. W. Russell Bowie, officiating. Mrs. Martin is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Douglass, of the Presbyterian Mission Press in Shanghai, China. She is an A. B. of Wellesley and the past May received the degree of Bachelor of Religious Education at the Biblical Seminary in New York.

At Blacksburg, Mr. Martin will succeed the Rev. J. Manly Cobb, who resigned March 15, last, to accept a call to Takoma Park, D. C., after a successful and happy administration of the work there since November, 1925.

As rector of Christ Church, Mr. Martin will be the Episcopal Student pastor for the cadets at Virginia Polytechnic Institute and will also have charge of Emmanuel Chapel ("High Top"), a mission about three miles from Blacksburg.

Error Corrected.

In recent news notes from this diocese, it was erroneously stated that the Rev. James M. Dick, now rector of Christ Church at Pulaski, Va., is "an alumnus of Virginia Seminary". Mr. Dick received his ministerial training, not at Virginia Seminary, but at the Theological School at Sewanee, Tennessee, connected with the University of the South.

T. A. S.

(Continued on page 23.)

Family Department

JULY.

1. Monday.
4 Thursday.
7. Sixth Sunday after Trinity.
14. Seventh Sunday after Trinity.
21. Eighth Sunday after Trinity.
25. Thursday. S. James
28 Ninth Sunday after Trinity
31. Wednesday.

COLLECT FOR EIGHTH SUNDAY AFTER TRINITY.

O God, Whose never-failing providence ordereth all things both in heaven and earth; We humbly beseech Thee to put away from us all hurtful things, and to give us those things which are profitable for us; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

COLLECT FOR ST. JAMES THE APOSTLE.

Grant, O Merciful God, that, as Thine Holy Apostle, St. James, leaving his father and all that he had, without delay was obedient unto the calling of Thy Son, Jesus Christ, and followed Him; so we, forsaking all worldly and carnal affections, may be evermore ready to follow Thy Holy Commandments; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

For The Southern Churchman.

GLAD HEART.

David W. Cade.

Glad heart, that was you, in the dewy meadows,
Where we toiled by the grey light of dawn.
Piling hay newly mown in high windrows
While summers flushed curtains were drawn.

Gay heart, that you were, on far mornings,
When we rode the white ways in peace.
And the mist clouds were jewel-bright warnings,
Telling of brown fields and harvest increase.

While the wind through oak trees was crooning,
Love tales from spice-lands over the sea.
We spread our camp for shady, gay nooning
In a place of forest minstrelsy.

We came to a pine grove on a white shore,
Where the long waves broke under the moon.
With organ tones hinting of a deep lore
And Neptune on his ghostly sea throne.

The clean flames heaped with the driftage,
From ships that failed once to win home.
Made a beacon of fairy bright presage
Over smooth strand silvered with foam.

The songs that you sang with the choral waves,
Was music older than is the oldest star.
Gleaned from the chords and swelling staves
That sweep great aisles from a Seraph choir.

Gay heart, you are gone over the dark seas,
Where all paths are lost in dusk mystery.
But blown on the wings of a whispering breeze
Is greeting and hail from you, Glad heart, to me.

The Children Have Gone to Bed.

They are asleep, O God, and I am tired, and I want the hush of a half hour with Thee. I want to bathe my soul in the Infinite, as workers, covered with dust and sweat, plunge into the sea.

Let my hot heart feel Thy cool vastness, my muddy mind lose itself in Thy crystal wisdom, my bruised love be healed in the waters of Thy love, so pure, so calm and deep.

God, I could not bear to be a mother another day if I thought I should be called to account for all my mistakes. I would never seek Thee, unless I thought Thou wert as forbearing and love-blind as I: but because my own children never come to me without my heart leaping to meet them, so I learn to be very bold toward my Father which is in Heaven.

I am all faults. My very love trips up my wisdom, and my care breeds worry, and my sense of expediency makes me disloyal to the truth. One has to be very great and good to be a mother. No one short of God Himself could be equal to it. But I love them, God and in love I climb beside Thy seat.

Teach me Thine own wondrous skill and indirection, so that I also may learn to wait, and to suffer. and by long wisdom, to circumvent.

I know it is of no avail to tell them anything. I know their little eyes are sharp, and see my soul, and that they copy me. Therefore make me good. good in my deepest purpose, good in my very desires.

Make me all I want them to be, strong and true and great-hearted.

Save me from the irritation of little things. Give me the long vision, the sense of perspective, so that I may judge between essentials and non-essentials.

Let me be a real mother to my children, mending their souls and fancies and helping weave their dreams, as well as attending to their bodies.

Help me to learn wisdom from their dear humanities, the secret of trust in Thee from their trust in me.

And keep them from harm, and let them grow up sound and unspoiled.

And make them always love me. Frank Crane, in Delineator.

God's Way With the Fragments.

Cannot God do with the scraps and waste products of humanity what the chemist does with the waste products of commerce? Cannot God gather up the fragments so that nothing may be lost? Why are we so hopeless of the transforming power of the love of God? There are successful business men who have seen the slag piles and the waste materials of industry turn to beauty and value; and yet they believe that the best God can do is to pile up a scrap heap of wasted lives. They do not believe in a redemption that can lay hold of broken lives and re-make them. They do not believe in the missionary enterprise of the church, which merely means that they believe in a scrap-heap philosophy of life. They prefer to believe that the waste products of industry can be ironed out, washed and purified, but that humanity is only fit to be cast as rubbish to the void.

Michael Angelo found the wasted, broken block of marble in the quarry, but the genius of his artistry transformed it into a statue of immortal loveliness. Cannot God do that? Our Lord says that is what God stands ready to do. The charter of his mission reads "The Son of Man came to seek and to save that which is wasted." We cannot solve this deepest, darkest mystery of life. We cannot read the riddle of a lost and a wasted life. We do know, however, that God's love, like the Hound of Heaven, never fails, that it believes all things, hopes all things, endures all things, and that it is out in the world seeking the fugitive, tracking him down relentlessly, refusing to let him go; and that the Gospel message is always and everywhere proclaimed, "Come now, let us reason together, said the Lord. Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be white as snow."—Dr. Kerr, in Presbyterian Banner.

God's Love and Man's Sorrow.

Having recently lost her husband with tragic suddenness, a young woman who had been exceptionally happy in her marriage wonders if Christianity has any explanation to give of the sorrow which has befallen her. On the day her husband was to have started upon his holidays he had risked his life in a gallant attempt to save one of his workmen who was trapped in a tar still filled with escaping carbon monoxide gas, and although he succeeded in getting out the man he had tried to rescue he himself was overcome and died in great pain a few hours later. Looking into the lonely future, frightened too at the problems crowding round her, the young widow, constitutionally delicate and timid, cries out despairingly for a satisfactory explanation of the blow which has struck her with such apparently cruelty. Does God care, and if so, why did He not care enough to prevented this sorrow?

It is an old problem which has come to this young women, but it is a problem which is ever halting us sharply through fresh sorrows. If God be a loving Father, and if He possesses almighty power, why does He not use His power in ordering and controlling the universe, and directing the course of events within it in such a way that there will be no human suffering, at least not in instances in which a sane judgment concludes that it is totally undeserved? That, surely, we cannot help thinking, would be the method of love, and therefore, if God be love, it should be the method of God.

Of course, much of human suffering is the inevitable consequences of individual sin, although the sin is not always recognized. This unhappy result of wrong doing is, however, hardly a problem, for if God's control of the universe be based on moral principles we should expect sin to issue often in disaster; indeed, we should be puzzled were it not so.

But the sin of the individual often brings a greater distress upon friends and relatives than upon himself, and a considerable part of the suffering in our hospitals and asylums, and in the homes of the poorest people, is a consequence of the sin of some one who seems to escape with a lighter punishment than they who have been affected by his conduct. Often through the absence of love and of honor, or by some dereliction in duty man brings almost unendurable pain and distress to those who have trusted him. Why should suffering spread itself in a seemingly unfair manner embracing innocent people who are endeavoring day by day to live decently, honestly, and in accord with lofty principles?

The power of one individual to bring sorrow and suffering into the life of another is due to the solidarity of mankind by which we are all bound together in one brotherhood. To remove the power of one man to give pain or grief to another we should have to do away with the social character of life and to substantiate instead a way of living more isolated and lonely than that of the shipwrecked Robinson Crusoe. Crusoe lived without the comforts of civilization and without the inspiration of congenial friendship, yet even he, by salvaging useful articles from the wrecked ship, made use of the labor and skill of others, and even he had the companionship of Friday. When we realize that we cannot get along without the benefits which our normal relationship with our fellows brings us we must be ready to accept also the unpleasant consequences which such relation makes possible.

The solidarity of mankind works both ways—it cannot do otherwise. The power to harm is but the reverse side of the power to help. We cannot have a society in which we may assist one another and be friends with our neighbour unless in that society we are also able to do each other mischief and be unfriendly with our neighbour. There could be no fellow sympathy and no fellow love but for the solidarity of human life; yet the possibility of showing good-will to each other involves also the possibility of making each other happy. To a large extent, then, suffering is a consequence of the solidarity of mankind, and yet this social unity is so liberal in its rich gifts to man that even in spite of the suffering involved in the operation of social laws we are glad that we are bound together in a social unity.

But while the social character of life must needs afford opportunities for thoughtless and ill-disposed people to injure or distress their fellows, the purpose of this social unity is only reached, and its magnificent meaning disclosed, when we stand ready even at some cost to ourselves to help each other. This, too, will mean suffering. Suffering then is of necessity involved in the unselfish attitude which gives significance and intention to solidarity of life. We cannot know our comrades in any true fashion, as Phillips Brooks clearly perceived, nor can we be sincere in our desire to aid them, without entering into the experience of grief and trouble. All the happiness which came to Jesus as He sought occasions of relieving the distress of the sick and sorrow-laden, all the joy which lifted up His heart as He yearned and labored for their spiritual enlightenment were shot through and through with the unspeakable sorrow which His relations with man inevitably brought Him. And not to Jesus only, but to Mary also came suffering because of our Lord's devotion to the welfare of mankind. A sword pierced her heart also.

Yet if men were not willing to be true to the purpose of the social character of human life, and if they were not willing to suffer rather than to pass by an opportunity to help each other, life itself would soon become not only unendurable but impossible. It is the men and women who because of the solidarity of mankind never shirk from the duty of seeking to help all others where lives touch theirs in any way, no matter how slight, who are doing creative work in the building up of life as God intended it to be. To lose one's life if necessary in an effort to help another man, and thus unavoidably to plunge one's loved ones into sorrow is seen to be an act that is true to life and to the principle upon which life is organized. To save one's life by refusing to help is to deny life and to set in motion forces which if not counteracted will defeat all that life is meant to be. Is there not comfort in this for the young widow of whom we are thinking.

. . . . .

Moreover, Jesus by His exquisite sympathy with all forms of human distress has declared His kinship with our sorrows, with the result that in the midst of our natural weakness His strength may operate and reveal its power. Jesus who felt "the fog in the throat, the mist on the face" has borne our griefs and carried our sorrows and upon Him has fallen the chastisement of our peace. In our suffering we look upon the Cross where Jesus was crucified and we see how God's love is ever bearing our burdens. God suffers in the suffering of mankind. This sympathetic and strengthening love of God gives us the inspiration to turn our suffering into sacrifice and to make it an opportunity of Christlike victory. So in our sufferings we draw closer to Him as well as to our struggling brothers. We learn not only the inner meaning of the brotherhood of man; we learn as well the rich implications of the Fatherhood of God. Suffering turned to such glorious use may well be to us as the gates of heaven.—Canadian Churchman.

THE OLD SWEET MESSAGE.

My presence shall go with thee, and I will give thee rest.—Exodus 33:14.

Speak unto me, Lord, in this old sweet message,
Speak now while dawns the new and untried year;
Assure my soul, beyond all doubt and presage,
Thou'rt not in star-strewn depths alone, but near—
Yea, nearer than the light, or human heart—
Making Thy life my own life's counterpart.

For life has not within its mystic holding
So sure a pledge that I can claim as mine,
That every hour shall, like some bud unfolding,
Work out unerring wisdom's good design;
And thus assured, my soul shall be at rest
And mind and heart be strong to yield their best.

Though mornings break with skies of somber shading,
Through noonday light be dimmed by life's stern frown;
Thy "presence," Lord, shall be a light unfading,
Thy love a peerless sun that goes not down;
And oft life's holy joys shall spring to birth
In days made dark by outward things of earth.

—Rev. William Hay,
In Moody Monthly.

THE COMING PRINCE

By

SIR ROBERT ANDERSON, K. C. B., LL. D.

A scholarly work on the "Seventy Weeks of Daniel" characterized by strong common sense and remarkable subtlety of judgment, refreshing in its healthful and bracing common sense and faith.

Other Volumes by Sir Robt. Anderson:

Bible and Modern Criticism, The. A popular presentation of the results of an independent study of the new criticism. Eighth Edition. Crown Octavo. 3/net.

Bible or the Church, The. Which is to be the Guide? Second Edition. Demy Octavo. 3/6 net.

Coming Prince, The. The Last Great Monarch of Christendom. The Standard Work on Daniel and the Seventy Weeks. Eleventh Edition. Crown Octavo. 3/6 net.

Daniel in the Critics' Den. A Rousing Defence of the Book of Daniel against the Higher Critics. Fourth Edition. Crown Octavo. 2/ net and 3/ net.

Doubter's Doubts About Science and Religion, A. Demy Octavo. 3/6 net.

Forgotten truths relating to the Coming and Kindred Events. "A really grand book. It has not a dull line in it, or a superfluous paragraph." Second Edition. 3/ net.

Gospel and Its Ministry, The. A Handbook of Evangelical Truth. 14th Edition. Demy Octavo. 3/ net.

Hebrews Epistle, The. The Epistle viewed in the light of the Pentateuchal Types. Second Edition. Demy Octavo. 3/6 net.

Human Destiny. A Handbook of the Eschatological Controversy. Eighth Edition. Crown Octavo. 3/ net.

Silence of God, The. "A Silent Heaven is the greatest mystery of our existence." 11th Edition. Crown Octavo. 2/6 net.

Unfulfilled Prophecy, and the Hope of the Church. Second Edition. Crown Octavo. 2/6 net.

The Lord From Heaven. The main arguments for the true Deity of our Lord, marshalled by a lawyer of repute. Second Edition. 3/ net.

Postage extra: 1 Copy, 6d; 2 Copies, 9d; 3 Copies, 1 .

PICKERING & INGLIS,
Printers and Publishers.

14 Paternoster Row, London, E.C.4;
229 Bothwell St., Glasgow.

Orders Taken By
SOUTHERN CHURCHMAN CO.

For the Young Folks

THE TORCH.

"Pass on the torch, pass on the flame;
Remember whence the glory came.
The eyes are on you as you run,
Beyond the shining of the sun.
Lord Christ, we take the torch from Thee.
We must be true, we will be free;
And clean of heart and strong of soul,
To bear the glory to its goal.
Lord of our life, to Thee we kneel;
Maker of men, our purpose seal;
Sing glory, glory to Thy name—
Pass on the torch, pass on the flame.
—Allen Eastman Cross.

Zithri Finds the Figs of Judea.

If there was one thing in the world Zithri wanted to see it was the figs and pomegranates that grew in Judea. He was a little Jewish boy, born in the land of Egypt, and his mother talked to him often of the hills at home, and of the fruit and honey, the wheat and barley which grew there. "Some day," she said, "thou shalt see the land of thy ancestors."

Certainly this was not a land of happiness for Zithri and his people. Zithri, playing among the other little Jewish children, knew that he and his mother and father and all his kinsmen were strangers in a strange land. The Egyptian children were not so and they had mocked at Zithri, speaking to him insolently. Zithri had clenched his hands and longed to fight them for their words. But he did not, for if he did he would bring trouble upon his mother and already she was sad enough.

"Mother," he often asked her, "why art thou so sad?"

Then she would smile at him, but the tears were misty in her eyes.

"I grow sick for home," she told him. "I am weary of the sand and strange food and strange ways. I long for my own people. If I could eat once more of the figs and pomegranates, the grapes and wheat and barley, and taste the oil from Judean olives, I should be very happy. Thou wilt love the land—thou, too, though thou hast never seen it, having been born in our exile, and thou wilt grow tall and strong on the sweet food of home. Oh, it is sad to be exiled."

So Zithri waited and watched for the time when he and his parents and all their Jewish kinsmen and neighbors should return to their own land.

"And what wilt thou do when we come again to Judea?" his father sometimes asked, teasing him.

"I will gather figs and pomegranates and bring them to my mother that she may eat the fruit of home and be happy again," Zithri always answered.

Then one night his mother had shaken him out of slumber, and as he stretched out his arms to her she had pulled him close in her embrace for a moment. He knew by her breathing that she was deeply moved, so moved that she had to struggle for voice with which to speak to him. Then she had released him almost sternly and her command had come in a strange, exultant whisper.

"Rise, Zithri," she said, "and make haste to dress thyself. See, too, that thou be quiet and helpful, for this night we set out for the land of Judea."

To Zithri there should be one mark above all others by which he should know the land of his parents—a fig tree with ripe figs he might pluck and so bring happiness to his mother. Throughout the weeks of the long journey home, over desert and hills, Zithri was waiting for the sight of the fig trees, symbol of home and happiness. Sometimes they would stay so long in a place that Zithri feared they might never push on again. He would ask her again and again, "Do we not go on, Mother?"

"Of a surety," she answered him, "ere long thou shalt see our home land."

"And will there be figs and pomegranates?"

"Yes, lad, and much else that tastes sweet in the mouth of a Jewish boy and that builds his body strong."

"Tell me, mother, what is this beautiful land like?"

"It is a land of brooks and water,'" she explained, "'of fountains that spring out of valleys and hills; a land of wheat and barley, and vines and fig trees and pomegranates; a land of olive oil and honey; a land wherein thou shalt eat bread without scarceness.'"

Then at last the day had come when they entered the land of Judea.

"Here," said Zithri's mother, "we shall abide, for this is Judea." Her face was happy with a happiness Zithri had never seen on it before.

Already the wheat and barley were tall in the fields. On the hills the leafy olive trees stood dark against the sky and vineyards there were in plenty. Fig trees grew even along the roadsides and Zithri, seeing them heavy with figs, knew that the moment had come for which he had been waiting. Not until he had brought his mother figs and she had eaten of the fruit of home would he feel that they were in truth exiles no longer.

Therefore he sped away from his parents and climbing a tree where the fruit hung thickest he filled his cap with the soft, sweet figs. Carefully he descended lest he should crush his offering, and then he ran swiftly back to the throng of people, edging his way here and there among them until he had found his mother again. He flung himself breathlessly at her and tears fell down his cheeks. He could not keep them back, for excitement and happiness choked him with them.

"Mother," he cried in his young unsteady voice, "Mother, I have brought thee figs." And he thrust the full cap into her hands.

"Oh, my son, how didst thou know that I should never feel quite at home until I had put my teeth again into the delicate sweetness of Judean figs?"

She took a fig in her hands and pealed off the thin gray-purple skin. Then she broke the fig in two and put half into Zithri's hand.

"We will eat it together," she said.

Thus Zithri tasted the figs of which his mother had told him so often in the Egyptian land. Long past seemed that time and to Zithri the eating of the fig was as a ceremony of proof that he was no longer an exile, but had become indeed a Jewish boy eating the fruits of his own Jewish land.

"Art thou happy, Mother?" He knew that she was. He could see it in her brown eyes and about her smiling mouth.

"Yes, Zithri, I am happy. And thou, dost love the land of thy forefathers, and the hills and vineyards and wheat fields and barley fields, the pomegranates and honey and figs?"

"It is the most beautiful land in the world," said Zithri, "and the taste of its fruit seems to me sweater than any I have ever tasted before."—Presbyterian Banner.

For The Southern Churchman.

MISTAKES.

Maude F. Mumma.

I'd rather make mistakes. myself,
As on my way I go;
Than try to be perfection,
And no mistakes to know.

It is by failures heights are won,
That we ourselves must climb;
And our mistakes are stepping-stone
To reach those heights sublime.

Thoughts: By An Old Chair.

I am a little old chair, built almost a century ago for a round faced, curly haired little Southern baby. Long ago, I lost my first coat of paint and a little later, a piece of my back, but loving hands painted me again and tied a bright-colored ribbon on my back to help make me stronger.

As I sit here tonight my thoughts travel back over the years—years full of adventure, travel, luxury, poverty, gladness and sadness. One would hardly expect a little old child's chair to have such a life as I have lived.

My first little master loved me dearly and loved to sit in my lap between my protecting arms, out under the shade of the big Southern trees, while his Negro mammy sang songs to him. Soon his little yellow curly head would nod and his long lashes would slowly shut over his baby blue eyes. Mammy would gather her "Honey Lamb" in her kind old arms and tuck him into a snow white bed. I would be left to enjoy the cool breeze and perhaps a little red bird would perch upon my back and make me happy by his visit.

When dusk came, I was always carried carefully into the house to wait beside the little baby boy's bed until he should awake in the morning.

Years passed. Happy years for me. When the boy was three years old a little girl came to claim me for her own and I served her happily for awhile.

But childhood cannot last forever. It seemed but a day to me, a sturdy little chair, until my first little master went away to join the Southern forces in the Civil War.

The times were very lonely then. Our big plantation was not cheered by the happy hearted boy.

"Why, he is only sixteen—only a boy," said his mother one day, and it seems only yesterday that he sat in that little chair and kicked his bare toes in the sand!"

Yes, only a day! Truly, it seemed only a day since I had held that precious weight and now he was taking a man's place in a man's deadly game.

The years passed slowly for they were years of hardship and suffering for those who tried to "keep the home fires burning." Little food, little money and loved ones gone.

But sorrows make us more worthy of gladness and when he was back safe again, what did I care if practically all my fine furniture friends had been sold for food? Just to have him back and his mother happy was enough for me.

Some time later it was decided that the family would move to the Western country that was so promising. Furniture was gathered and put on wagons and much preparation was made for the journey.

"What shall we do with this little old chair, mother?" asked one of the girls one morning as she indicated me.

"Why, take it along. That was the first baby chair in our family and I would not part with it."

So I was reluctantly loaded into the wagon.

All the way from Alabama to Texas I rubbed elbows with far less elegant pieces of furniture, but I found that a moving wagon is no place in which to be squeamish about your associates. Why, at first, every bump we would go over seemed an excuse for the old iron on the floor to step on my foot. I became angry and used the next bump as an excuse to kick it as hard as I could. But I found out that in intentionally hurting another I got more scratches than it did, so instead of returning evil for evil, I squeezed up into a little corner where the iron could not reach me.

This was my first trip and I was very glad when they tied me onto the back of the wagon to afford more room on the inside. On the back I could see the country much better and throughly enjoyed it, in spite of much rubbing and bouncing.

Our journey's end came at last, and a tired but happy family gathered to celebrate our first night at our new home. I was almost forgotten but did not mind it, for I was so happy at having finished my first trip that I was content to be still and rest my weary legs and dislocated back.

It was not long until my first master fell in love with a beautiful red-haired girl and they were married and went away a short distance to make their home. I was very discontented, for I was stored in the attic for what seemed to be years. I almost gave up hope of ever holding any one again, when, one day, I heard the attic door open and a servant came in.

"Am dis heah the one yo' wants, Miss Ann?" asked the Negro as she gingerly picked me up and dusted me with her big apron.

"Yes, Liza. Bring it down and we'll take it right over to Master Frank's. They will be glad to met it, I'm sure."

She looked at me carefully and after much pushing and fixing seemed satisfied with my appearance.

It did not take us long to reach the house of Master Frank. And I was ushered into a gay bedroom and presented to a red-faced little boy, just one day old, who did not show much interest in me at the time.

Happy years followed. Three children came to Master Frank's house. I loved them and was loved by them all. Many happy hours we spent together. I helped them all learn how to walk by lying on my back and letting them push me across the floor. My shoulder blades are flat now instead of round, on account of this vigorous exercise.

As the children grew up, I was gradually forgotten by the two boys, but the baby girl always loved me. After she was too big to sit on my lap herself, she would put her dolls there, so that I was included in the fun.

But time does not stand still. I am very old now. Tonight I am holding another little blue-eyed boy. He has stood on me today, rubbed his sticky hands on my arms, fallen over me and playfully beaten me, but now the little blue eyes are almost hidden by drooping black lashes and experience tells me that the sand man is near. This little boy is eighty-five years younger to me than the first little boy I held, but he is just as dear, for I love him and he loves me—we mean much to each other in this play world in which we live.

I may not be able to serve much longer, but I've learned lots of things in my eighty-seven years, and the main thing is this: The more service you do for others, the more happiness life brings in return.—Baptist Standard.

The Bathtub Innovation.

It was eighty-five years ago that Adam Thompson, of Cincinnati, installed the first bathtub in this country, which met with no little ridicule and a storm of opposition.

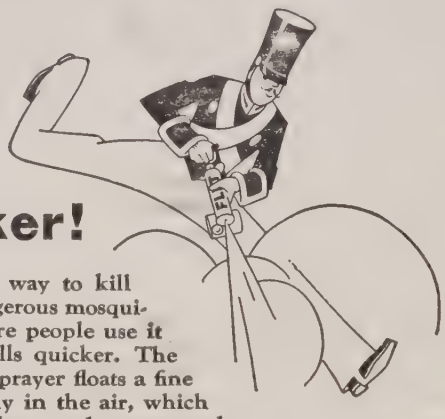
Newspapers declared that the new-fangled idea would ruin the democratic simplicity of the country. The doctors shook their heads and predicted rheumatism, inflammation of the lungs and other dire diseases by such a wholesale application of water. Wiseacres agreed that bathing in winter time would result in a decline of our robust population. Philadelphia tried to put a ban on bathing from the first of November to the first of March. Boston, the center of learning, in 1845 made bathing unlawful except on the advice of a physician. Hartford, Providence and Wilmington and other cities tried to block bathtub bathing with exorbitant water rates. The old State of Virginia put a tax of forty dollars on every bathtub brought into the state.—Selected.

Donald's Surprise.

One day Donald ran in from school and there was no one home. But that was all the better, for when a boy is planning a surprise, he doesn't want people around.

After a while sister Helen came home and called, "Don!" But he didn't answer. When mother came in later, Helen said, "I don't see a sign of Donald."

"Look in his room and see if his school clothes are on the bed. He's probably changed to his overalls and gone to play," said mother.



So Helen peeked in the door of Donald's room, but there wasn't a thing lying around.

"I can't understand it," she said when she came downstairs. "There's usually a trail of books and mittens and clothes all over the house after he's been home."

Just then Donald appeared, smiling all over his face, and Helen said, "We thought you weren't home because we didn't see any of your school clothes or books."

"Is that so?" said Donald. "Well, you see my cap is on the hook in the cloak-closet; my books are under the study-table; I hung my coat on the hanger in my own closet, and I put my rubbers down on the basement landing when I changed to my heavy play-shoes."

—Children at Work.

Mosquitoes Die Quicker!

At last a quicker way to kill bothersome dangerous mosquitoes. Flit! More people use it because it kills quicker. The handy Flit sprayer floats a fine vapor freely in the air, which is harmless to humans and stainless to finest fabrics.

"The yellow can with the black band"

FLIT

REG. U. S. PAT. OFF. © 1929, Stanco, Inc.

WHILE IN RICHMOND LET US KNOW IF YOU LIKE OUR FOOD

Mrs. Cook's Cafeteria

Near St. Paul's Parish House
Richmond, Va.

INCORPORATED 1882

Virginia Fire and Marine Insurance Company

Of Richmond, Va.

Assets - - - $3,640,152.88

Fred'k E. Nolting, President.

H. C. Lewis, Jr., Secretary — J. C. Watson, Treasurer

J. M. Leake, General Agent — Wm. P. Hill, Asst. Secretary

Behind Every Dollar

invested in our 6% Certificates

is a home

FOUR millions in resources—a record of 37 years without loss to a single investor—and first mortgages on Birmingham homes protect the funds you invest in our 6 per cent certificates.

Safety! Six per cent! Get both and with the assurance your funds are always available. Any bank in the city will be glad to substantiate these statements.

Tax Free

Dividends from these certificates (up to $300 per year) are exempt from federal icome tax. The 6 per cent yield is NET.

6% Yield

Invest any amount from $50 to $10,000 and receive 6 per cent dividends each January and July. Call or write for folder, "Safe Investments".

JEFFERSON COUNTY BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATION

F. M. JACKSON, Pres.,
Birmingham, Ala.

To the Friends of the Bible

The American Bible Society is a missionary organization. Its sole object is "to encourage a wider circulation of the Holy Scriptures without note or comment." The Society's work is threefold:

TRANSLATION—Into the common languages and dialects of the people.

PUBLICATION—In styles convenient for the people and at lowest cost.

DISTRIBUTION—By gifts and by sales without profit.

It has issued over 205,000,000 volumes of the Scriptures in more than 300 languages and dialects, and in eighteen languages and systems for the blind. It has an annual budget of approximately $1,300,000 and is supported by voluntary contributions. Gifts and legacies gratefully received.

The Society will pay a fixed annuity for life upon any sum of $100 or over. A gift on this basis is called an annuity or conditional gift, and the agreement issued by the Society is called an annuity bond agreement.

A gift on this basis is really an investment and is safe, convenient and productive. It yields an income that cannot shrink.

Write for Booklet No. 90

AMERICAN BIBLE SOCIETY

Bible House, Astor Place, New York

Classified Advertising and Notices

All notices and advertisements, excepting positions wanted, will be inserted in this department at a rate of 20 cents per agate line, each insertion. Special rates to contracts of any length. A rate of 15 cents per line is made to persons seeking positions. No advertisement accepted for less than 50 cents.

Copy for this department must be received not later than Tuesday of the week in which it is intended that the first insertion shall appear.

CONTRIBUTIONS TO LEPER MISSION—APRIL, MAY, JUNE, 1929.

Miss M. T. Bargamin, Richmond, Va.	$ 3.00
Mrs. Thos. B. Scott Richmond. Va.	25.00
First Presbyterian Sunday School Richmond Va. ($25.00 from Dr. W B. Lorraine, support Rhogu, Raniganj, India)	50.00
Mrs. Albert Roper, Norfolk, Va. (for Miss Cornwall-Legh, Japan)	5.00
Faculty and students of Gunston Hall, Washington, D. C.	30.00
Bishop James R Winchester, Little Rock, Ark. (for Leonard Wood Memorial, P. I.)	5.00
A Friend, Richmond, Va. (Pete Bank)	16.00
Mrs. R. R Harrison, Richmond, Va. (Manamadura Church, India—Pete Banks)	194.60
For Camp—E. P. M., Richmond, Va.	1.00
Mrs. C. M. Colhoun, Cumberstone, P. O., Md. (on support of child)	5.00
Mrs. R. R. Harrison, Richmond, Va. (Pete Banks)	24.21
Miss Lena Ramsetter, Richmond, Va.	.25
Miss Eileen McCausland, Richmond, Va.	7.40
W. Aux. Virginia Branches:
Alexandria, Christ	2.00
Alexandria, St Paul's	20.10
Berryville, Grace	25.00
Fairfax, Pohick	3.00
Fredericksburg, St. George's, Sec. B.	20.00
Markham Leeds	5.00
Middleburg, Emmanuel	10.00
Oak Grove, St. Peters	2.00
Richmond, St. Stephens	5.00
Richmond, St. James	5.00
The Plains, Grace	2.00
Upperville, Trinity	25.00
Sections B of Richmond	50.00
Total	$174.10
($49.10 of above amount for work in Canal Zone.)
May meeting	$ 4.00
Mrs. J. R. Clift, Richmond, Va.	1.00
Mrs. R. Powell Dunn, Richmond, Va.	5.00
Buck Mountain Church, Fredericksville Parish, Va.	10.00
Mrs. John C. Taylor, Norfolk, Va.	5.00
Mr. John Letcher, Norfolk, Va.	15.00
Mrs. Helen Thompson, Norfolk, Va.	5.00
Christ Church, Fredericksburg, Va.	15.46
St. Stephens, Yancey, Va.	1.05
Burnt Church Missionary Society, Va.	5.00
Mrs. Heath Clarke's Pete Bank, Richmond, Va.	1.25
Mrs. John Lightfoot's Circle of King's Daughters, Richmond, Va, ($5.00 to Naini Asylum, India, $25.00 to Dr. Wilson, Korea)	50.00
Woman's Auxiliary Second Presbyterian Church, Richmond, Va.	5.00
Grace Church Branch, Cismont, Va. (support of Leper)	16.02
Miss Jaquelin Smith, Rosslyn, Va.	6.00
Bible Class, Emmanuel Chapel, Boyce, Va. (For Dr. Wilson's work, Korea)	10.00
Miss Ida Whitcomb, Brooklyn, N. Y. (for package to Miss Cornwall-Legh, Japan)	1.00
Mrs. Fannie R. Coles, Manassas, Va.	5.00
A Friend, Manassas, Va.	5.00
Good Shepherd, Lynnwood, Va.	1.40
Christ Church S. S., Winchester, Va. (Leper Hospital, Philippine Islands)	5.00
Monument Methodist S. S., Richmond, Va.	2.52
Mrs. Virgie Pleasants, Richmond, Va. (Pete Banks)	2.00
Grand total	$716.26

"Wilbur is now twenty-six. Frequently people ask about Wilbur, of "Wilbur and Pete" fame. The boy of the story, "A Boy, a Pig and a Leper", is now a young business man in St. Paul, Minnesota, engaged in the engineering profession. He is a graduate of the University of Minnesota and passed his twenty-sixth birthday on March 28th. Wilbur and his mother maintain their active interest in the work for lepers, which began when "Pete No. 1" was installed in their back yard in a Kansas village. Although working his own way through school, each year Wilbur has sent the money for the support of a leper. The family of pig banks has grown more than 70,000. Not only in America but in other parts of the world they are 'rooting" for the lepers, and are conceded to be the only unselfish pigs in existence. Like the French truffle hogs, they unearth treasures not for their own consumption. The story has been translated into several foreign languages. In Japan an edition of the banks suitable to receive Japanese coins is manufactured locally. These are proving especially popular with the Japanese school children."

All contributions gratefully acknowledged by

MISS EVELYN P. MERIWETHER,
President-Treasurer Richmond Branch Leper Mission, 2346 W. Grace Street, Richmond, Virginia.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

ANTIQUES.

WE PAY THE HIGHEST CASH PRICES for old-time furniture and antiques of all kinds. H. C. Valentine, 209 East Franklin Street, Richmond, Va.

RELIGIOUS TRACTS.

GOOD RELIGIOUS TRACTS MAY BE had by writing to LEVI C. SULLIVAN, blind tract minister, P. O. Box 43, Roanoke, Va. Some excellent tracts for prison work.

—CATHEDRAL STUDIOS—
Washington London

Church Embroideries and Vestments, Silks, Fringes, Gold Thread, Stoles with crosses from $7.60, Burse and Veil from $15. Surplices and exquisite Altar Linens, Church Vestments imported for the Churches free of duty.

MISS L. V. MACKRILLE
41 W. Kirke St., Chevy Chase, Washington, D. C. Telephone Cleveland 52.

SUMMER BOARD.

IN SHENANDOAH VALLEY—LIMITED NUMBER of people desired. Large house and grounds conveniently located. M. I. $12 and $15 per week. MISS D. L. BRISCOE, Charles Town, Jefferson County, W. Va.

SITUATION WANTED.

WANTED BY SEPTEMBER 1 POSITION as housekeeper or matron in school or institution. Address "Matron" care of Southern Churchman.

A LADY WITH MANY YEARS' EXPERIence in Mission and Social Service work and practical nursing, desires position by September first. Address "X. Y.", care of Southern Churchman.

ORGANIST.

ORGANIST AND CHOIRMASTER, ENGlish trained, desires change of climate, account of wife's health. Very successful boys' voices, recitalist, director of choral societies, teacher pipe organ, vocal, piano. Excellent references. Address 'Organist", care of Southern Churchman.

Deaths

ROBINSON: Entered into rest, June 29, 1929, GEORGE ROWAN ROBINSON, beloved husband of Elsie Hewlett Robinson, aged sixty-two years.

"Blessed are they that mourn, for they shall be comforted.'

PENN: At Abingdon, Virginia, July 8, 1929, THOMAS JEFFERSON PENN, son of George Edward and Estelle Gilmore Penn, in the thirty-fourth year of his life. Funeral services were held at home, on Wednesday, July 10, at two o'clock. Interment at Marion, Virginia.

WILLIAM GARDNER PLUMMER.

Entered into life eternal, at March Field, California, June 28, 1929, in the 27th year of his age, WILLIAM GARDNER PLUMMER, Sceond Lieutenant in the U. S. Army Air Corps; fourth son of Archdeacon and Mrs. James Fitts Plummer, of Middle Tennessee. His parents and four brothers: James Minor, Charles Cazenove, Edward Armistead and Cameron McRae survive him.

A daily, constant Christian life, not without its opportunity of heroism when duty lay in flying in the Grand Canon of the Colorado in search of lost travelers, has now been rounded out by instant death in the discharge of his duty as Instructor of Cadets.

"And all the trumpets sounded for him on the other side." After a memorial service at March Field, his body brought to Christ Church, Nashville, for the burial office. Interment was in Blandford Cemetery, Petersburg, Virginia.

REV. S. EZRA NEIKIRK.

The REV. S. EZRA NEIKIRK, Rector of Epiphany Church, Glenburn, and Editor of the Bethlehem Churchman, died on Thursday, July 11, 1929, at 5:30 P. M., after more than one year's illness of cancer.

Mr Neikirk was born in Tiffin, Ohio, on November 20, 1866. His father was Samuel Neikirk and his mother Amanda Bacher Neikirk He was graduated from Heidelberg University, Tiffin, Ohio, with the degree of A. B. in 1891 and received the honorary degree of A. M. in 1900. On September 26, 1888 he married Miss Lillian M. Kreader, who survives him, and also these children, Miss Mabel Neikirk, a trained nurse of Glenburn; Mrs. Floyd S. Tindall, of Rockford, Ill.; Mrs. George W. Waterman, Providence, R. I.; and Miss Dorothy Neikirk, of New York City.

He was ordained as a Reformed Church minister and served in some churches in Ohio and later in Allentown, Pennsylvania. In 1913 he was made a Deacon of the Church and in 1914 was Priested by Bishop Ethelbert Talbot. He served St. James, Pittston, from 1913 to 1927, when he was elected as the Rector of the Church of the Epiphany, Glenburn.

Mr. Neikirk was a member of the Bishop and Executive Council of the Diocese and Chairman of the Department of Publicity. He was very active in all Community efforts for the betterment of the public. Mr. Neikirk attended the last three General Conventions and was Supervisor of the Press Reports for the House of Bishops. His special "pet" was the Bethlehem Churchman, the official paper of the Diocese. He made this a very popular and helpful paper, going into practically all the homes of the Diocese. The funeral services were conducted by the Bishop on Saturday, July 13th, at Glenburn, in the Church of the Epiphany. Interment in the family plot in the Cemetery of Block Church, near Republic, O.

H. P. W.

GEORGE ADAM WIEGAND.

Minute.

The Rector and Vestry of Grace Episcopal Church, assembled at their regular meeting on Thursday, July 11, 1929, by this MINUTE, do record their deep grief and sense of very real loss in the death of GEORGE ADAM WIEGAND, Senior Warden of Grace Parish from 1920 to 1929, who entered into Eternal life on the evening of July 7, 1929.

Mr. Wiegand had been a communicant of this Parish for more than a quarter century and had served continuously on the Vestry for that entire period. From the very beginning he exhibited a deep and vital interest in the affairs of the Church. Coming into the Parish at a time when his leadership was needed, he began and continued its staunch and loyal supporter until his passing into the life of larger service.

Mr. Wiegand was conspicuous in his services to the Parish during the period of the final acquisition and sale of the old Rampart Street property and the transfer of the church holdings to its present site on Canal Street. In the present proposed removal of the property further out Canal Street, he was a hearty approver and lived to see the plans for the new edifice come from the Architect's office. Our sorrow is that he could not live to see that new church builded.

In the Diocese also Mr. Wiegand served with loyalty and devotion, being a member of the Finance Committee at the time of his death. At various times he has served on other important committees of the Diocese.

Faithful and regular in his Church duties; helpful and just in his counsel and advice; utterly loyal to his Rectors, his brethren of the Vestry, to his Parish and Diocese; George Adam Wiegand will be sadly missed from our fellowship and communion.

We, his brethren in Christ Jesus, do pray our Heavenly Father to grant him increasing life and light with His saints in Paradise. To his family, may God give His own peace, which passeth human knowing.

Be it Resolved, That a page of the Vestry's minutes be set aside to his memory; that a copy of this minute be sent his familyy; and that a copy also be sent to the Church papers.

DONALD H. WATTLEY,
Rector.

Attest:
EMILE F. WAHLIG, Secretary.

REV. HUGH BIRCKHEAD, D. D.

The REV. DR. HUGH BIRCKHEAD, rector of Emmanuel Church, Baltimore, died at the Newport Hospital on Tuesday night, July 9th, of cerebral hemmorrhage.

Dr. Birckhead and his family had been the guests of his mother, Mrs. William H. Birckhead, at her home in Middletown. Although he had not been entirely well for a month, he was not taken seriously ill until Monday last and he was removed to the hospital early Tuesday

He is survived by his mother, his wife, two sons, Christopher Birckhead and Hugh Birckhead, Jr., and two brothers, the Rev. Malvone H. Birckhead, Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia, and James Birckhead, of New York.

Dr. Birckhead was a descendant of Christopher Birckhead, who came to Anne Arundel County, Maryland, from England in 1662. In the early days of the family in this country they were members of the Society of Friends, but by the time of the Revolutionary War, the family had turned to the Church of England. During this war Colonel Christopher Birckhead, of Talbot County, fought in the Continental Army.

Dr. Birckheads father, Dr. William H. Birckhead, was born in Brazil, but spent most of his life as a practicing physician in New England Dr. Birckhead's mother was Miss Sarah G. King, a daughter of Dr. Daniel King, of Newport, R I.

Dr. Birkhead was born September 7, 1876, at Newport. After preparatory courses in St. Pauls School, Concord, N. H., he entered Columbia University, from which he graduated in 1899. He received his degree of Doctor of Divinity from the Episcopal Theological School at Cambridge in 1902. In the same year he was ordained a Deacon in Trinity Church, Newport, and later was ordained Priest by Bishop Potter in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, New York.

In February, 1906, when he was less than thirty years of age, he was called to the pulpit of St. Georges Church, New York, succeeding the Rev. Dr. William S. Rainsford, who had held the post for more than twenty years. In 1912 he resigned to become rector of Emmanuel Church, Baltimore.

At that time Emmanuel Church was a modest structure. Through gifts from parishioners, Dr. Birckhead virtually reconstructed it. Outstanding features of this work was the erection of the Christmas Tower and the installation of the great organ.

In July, 1917, Dr. Birckhead was sent abroad as a member of a Red Cross mission to study conditions in the War Zone of Europe to enable the Red Cross to determine how it could be of greatest service. At the request of the United States Ambassador in London, he spoke in England on America under the auspices of the Foreign Office. On his return to the United States, he spoke in various sections of the country on behalf of Red Cross and Liberty Loan campaigns.

He has been very active for Prohibition and has been a leader in the civic affairs of Baltimore.

He served the Diocese of Maryland as a member of the Executive Council, Board of Cathedral Trustees and Standing Committee having for one year been President of the latter. He also represented the Diocese at one General Convention. He was one of the outstanding preachers of the Episcopal Church and was interested in everything that touched the life of the city.

Maryland and the whole Church has suffered a great loss. N. E. P.

CHURCH INTELLIGENCE.

(Continued from page 16.)

WEST MISSOURI.

Rt. Rev. S C. Partridge, D. D., Bishop.

Capt. the Rev. Oliver F. Crawford, rector of St. Mark's Church, Kansas City, West Missouri, is on military duty at Fort Crook, Nebraska, as chaplain of the Reserve Officers' Summer Training Camp. During the World War, Captain Crawford was divisional chaplain, successively of the Eighty-fifth and the Seventh Divisions of the American Expeditionary Forces.

H. N. H.

NEVADA.

Rt. Rev. Arthur W. Moulton, D. D., Bishop.

Bad News Travels Quickly.

Answering the telephone on the first of July, Bishop Jenkins, of Nevada, learned that the bank where the district keeps its funds has closed its doors and gone into the hands of the bank examiners. As the man in Mr. Drinkwater's play says, "The telephone only tells you quicker what you don't want to know at all." The Bishop says about $20,000 are tied up, including salary checks which went into the mail only the day before. The Cathedral building fund has also about $18,000 in the same bank, which will, he trusts, with the funds of the district, eventually be available. He hopes to break ground for the Cathedral the last Sunday in July.

He writes further: "Nevada is the most costly place I have ever lived in. Alaska wasn't any worse. Clergy salaries are entirely too low. We want men with families and we must strive to pay them what they need."

Bishop Jenkins is the first bishop to complain that there were too many young men in a congregation, but the congregation he referred to was one he recently addressed in the State Penitentiary, where the presence of many young men made him feel the urgent need of Church work in all Nevada's small towns.

ATLANTA.

Rt. Rev. H. J. Mikell, D. D., Bishop.

Twentieth Anniversary for Epiphany's Rector.

On Sunday, July 7, the congregation of the Church of the Epiphany in Inman Park, Atlanta, celebrated the twentieth anniversary of the rectorship of the Rev. Russell K. Smith, by a home-coming service, which was most successful.

It is recognized that July is a hard time to get people to Church, and that many people are absent, especially from the cities, on vacation. However the church was filled with earnest worshippers, many of them persons who had formerly been members or regular worshippers there.

The service was a celebration of the Holy Communion, and there was a large communion of the faithful Church people of the city.

Epiphany was started as a mission in May of 1898, in a small twenty by thirty stone church, constructed from some paving stone donated by the City of Atlanta Construction Department. The building stood on a triangular lot surrounded by three unpaved streets, in a community where there were few houses and no stores. Today, the site is occupied by a filling station, and stores have now taken the places of residences, which were built after the coming of the church, and "Little Five Points" has become an established business section of the city.

For ten years the mission held regular services, which were conducted by either temporary or regularly appointees of Bishop C. K. Nelson. In 1907 the building was made about three times its former size, and the congregation had grown to about fifty communicants, and the Sunday School to about the same number. In 1908, at the first regular Council of the New Diocese of Atlanta, Epiphany was admitted as a parish, the communicant list had now grown to eighty-six, and in July of 1909, the vestry having called the Rev. Russell K. Smith, from St. Paul's Church, Franklin, Tennessee, he accepted the charge and assumed direction of the parish. The communicants now number three hundred and eighty, the Church School two hundred and twelve. The old site was disposed of in 1922, and a fine two-acre lot was bought within a block and a half of the former site, where now there stands a commodious parish house of brick, with church auditorium, Church School rooms, a social room, with stage equipment, dining rooms and kitchen, a building one hundred and twenty-eight feet by forty-two, constructed at a cost of $42,000. The congregation has bought a pipe organ, and for many years has been purchasing a most comfortable rectory. The budget of the church has grown from $1,500 to over $12,000, and its total assets amount to $74,500.

The church is now well established in a fine residential neighborhood, with ample equipment for present needs, and with a beautiful lot upon which the congregation expects to build a church in the coming years.

During these twenty years, Mr. Smith has been twice delegate to the General Convention in 1913 and in 1922, and alternate many other years. He was for thirteen years secretary of the Diocese of Atlanta, and is now a member of the Cathedral Board of Trustees, and of the Executive Board of the Diocese.

Personal Notes

The Rev. Robert Ashton, formerly Priest-in-Charge of the Church of Our Saviour, Mandarin, Fla., and St. Paul's-by-the-Sea, Jacksonville Beach, Fla.; also Our Merciful Saviour, New Berlin, Fla., has become rector of Iron Mountain, Michigan, Holy Trinity Parish, Dio. Marquette. The Rev. Mr. Ashton was married to Miss May Dawkins, of Jacksonville, Florida, June 29, in Trinity Church, St. Augustine, by the rector, the Rev. L. Fitz-James Hindry. The Rev. and Mrs. Robert Ashton left for their home in Iron Mountain, Michigan, during the week following their marriage.

J. O. C.

Dr. Mercer P. Logan, late Dean of DuBose Memorial Church Training School Memory Honored: A son born on July 7 at Emerald Hodgson Hospital, Sewanee, Tenn., to Mr. and Mrs. George W. Goodson, is named Mercer Logan, in memory of Dr. Mercer Logan. Mr. Goodson is a graduate of the academic department of the DuBose School, and is now a theological student in the Seminary in Sewanee. Mrs. Goodson is the granddaughter of the late General Edmund Kirby-Smith of Confederate fame.

F. K. S. W.

ORDINATIONS.

Jesse K. Brennan, Jr., was ordained to the Diaconate June 26, in Trinity Church, Philadelphia, by Bishop Garland, of Pennsylvania. Mr. Brennan is a son of the Rev. Jesse K. Brennan, rector of Trinity Episcopal Church, Hannibal, Missouri, and was graduated at Kenyon College with degree of Ph. B.

Mrs. O. S.

Howard Frederick Dunn was ordained to the Diaconate by Bishop McElwain on June 24, in the Church of St. John the Evangelist, St. Paul, Minnesota. The sermon was preached by the Rev. O. G. Jackson, of Chicago, and the ordinand was presented by the Rev. F. D. Butler, rector of St. John's, St. Paul.

The Rev. Mr. Dunn will serve as locum tenens at Ascension Church, Stillwater, during the summer, and on November 1 will become assistant at St. Ann's Church, Brooklyn, New York.

The D. L. Moody Missionary Book Funds

Administered by

THE BIBLE INSTITUTE COLPORTAGE ASSOCIATION

843-845 N. Wells Street, Chicago, Ill.

A Vital Message to Lovers of the Gospel:

The mountain sections of eight Southern States present the greatest open door for Gospel work among young people in North America.

The situation is unique. Here is a vast area with several hundred thousand children and young folks who can be quickly reached with the essential salvation truths by distributing Scripture portions and Gospel books in the public schools. There is practically no Catholic or other anti-Biblical influences in these mountain sections. The door now is wide open, but there is increasing evidence that this remarkable opportunity will not be ours for long. The majority of teachers are now glad to co-operate in the use of the Scriptures and Gospel books in their schools. However, these States are raising their educational requirements so that mountain teachers are obliged to go to normal schools, where they come under the influence of modern evolutionary philosophy that is so very destructive to the Christian faith. This trend is already strongly manifest.

Now is the time to sow the seed of the Word of God in these fertile young minds. These boys and girls manifest remarkable interest in Scripture memorizing and in reading Gospel books making plain the Way of Salvation. God's Word sown in these young hearts will not return void. A great many mountain schools will open this month. Now is the time to start them off with "first things first."

The expense of this far-reaching ministry is surprisingly small. A whole school can be provided with necessary Bible portions and Gospel books for only $5.00 to $7.00.

Then, too, the books go from cabin to cabin, silently proclaiming the Good News to the older members of the families who rarely, if ever, hear a clear, simple presentation of saving truth. In this manner a school district with 150 to 200 people is given the Gospel.

How can a few dollars be made to accomplish more? Modern infidelity is rapidly permeating even the mountain districts. Prompt action is imperative. Of course your prayers are needed, too.

Yours sincerely,

A. F. GAYLORD, Treasurer.

I want the pleasure of helping, and enclose $.....

Name.....

R. F. D., Box or Street.....P. O.....State.....

DESIGNED FOR THE PROMOTION OF PRACTICAL PIETY, THE DIFFUSION OF RELIGIOUS AND GENERAL INTELLIGENCE, AND THE MAINTENANCE OF THE PRINCIPLES OF THE PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL CHURCH

Southern Churchman

DOMINUS FRUSTRA ISIN 1835

Vol. 94. RICHMOND, VA., JULY 27, 1929. No. 30.

THY BLESSING, LORD, ON ALL VACATION DAYS

Thy blessing, Lord, on all vacation days!
For weary ones who seek the quiet ways,
Fare forth beyond the thunder of the street,
The marvel of Emmaus Road repeat;
Thy comradeship so graciously bestow
Their hearts shall burn within them as they go.
Grant those who turn for healing to the sea
May find the faith that once by Galilee
Flamed brighter than the glowing fires of coals.
And when Thou hast refreshed their hungry souls,
Speak the old words again, beside the deep,
Bid all who love Thee, Master, feed Thy sheep!
Be Thou with those who bide where mountains rise,
Where yearning earth draws nearest to the skies!
Give them the peace, the courage that they ask;
New strength to face the waiting valley task;
New light to lead through shrouding valley haze!
Thy blessing, Lord, on all vacation days!

—Molly Anderson Haley, in The Canadian Churchman.

EDUCATIONAL

The Gundry Home and Training School For The Feeble Minded

Falls Church, Fairfax County, Va.

Established 1892.

For terms and information address

MISS M. GUNDRY.

The General Theological Seminary

CHELSEA SQUARE, NEW YORK.

The next Academic year egins on the last Wednesday in September.

Special students admitted and Graduate Courses for graduates of othre Theological Seminaries.

The requirements for admission and other particulars can be had from THE DEAN, 1 Chelsea Square, New York, N. Y.

The Bishop Payne Divinity School

The accredited Seminary of the Church for training colored men for the ministry. The curriculum covers the full course for Deacon's and Priest's Orders. The degree of B. D. is awarded.

For catalogue and information apply to Rev. F. G. Ribble, M. A., D. D., Dean, Petersburg, Va.

The Protestant Episcopal Theological Seminary Virginia

The One Hundred and Sixth Session Opened Wednesday, Sept. 19, 1928.

For catalogue and other information address The Dean, Rev. Berryman Green, D. D., Theological Seminary, Alexandria, Va.

Schermerhorn Home School

Located six miles north of Richmond on the Washington Highway. A Home School for Children who need Special care and Training.

SUE I. SCHERMERHORN, Box 57, West End Sta, Richmond, Va.

STUART HALL

STAUNTON, VA.

Episcopal school for girls, maintaining best Virginia traditions of refinement and culture.

Thorough College Preparation. Varied General Course. Outdoor Life.

EIGHTY-SIXTH YEAR BEGINS SEPTEMBER 18, 1929

For catalogue, address MRS. H. N. HILLS, Principal

Episcopal Theological School

Cambridge, Massachusetts.

Affiliated with Harvard University.

For catalog address The Dean.

Chatham Hall

A Church School for girls in Southern Virginia. Thorough college preparation. General and graduate courses. Art, music, expression, home economics, secretarial course. Superb location; 175 acre estate, gardens, dairy; modern, well equipped buildings. Riding, swimming, golf. Address Rev. Edmund J. Lee, M. A., D. D., Box S, Chatham, Va.

Southern Churchman

SOUTHERN CHURCHMAN COMPANY,
628 E. Main Street - - - Richmond, Va.

LANGBOURNE MEADE WILLIAMS
President
ALFRED B. WILLIAMS..Associate Editor
THE REV. FRANK COX
Associate Editor
THE REV. JAMES W. MORRIS. D. D.
Associate Editor
MRS. CONRAD H. GOODWIN.
Associate Editor
MISS SUSANNE WILLIAMS..News Editor
JOHN H. COOKE..Secretary and Manager

Entered at the Post Office in Richmond, Va., as second-class mail matter.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE.

$3.00 a year in advance. To the Clergy, $2.00. Six months, $1.50. Trial subscriptions, 3 months, 50 cents; 10 cents a copy. Foreign postage, 50 cents additional.

For the convenience of subscribers, subscriptions are continued at expiration unless otherwise ordered. Notice of renewal, discontinuance or change of address should be sent two weeks before the date they go into effect.

RECEIPT OF PAYMENT is shown in about two weeks by change of date on address label. If date is not properly extended after each payment, notify us promptly. No receipt for payment will be sent.

Notice post office address. The exact post office address to which we are directing the paper at the time of writing MUST ALWAYS BE GIVEN. Our mailing list is arranged by post offices and not alphabetically.

Make all checks and money orders payable to the Southern Churchman, and not to an individual.

ADVERTISEMENTS—Rates quoted on request. For classified see head of that department.

Representatives wanted in each Parish; liberal commissions.

News concerning the Church at large always welcome.

CONTENTS

	Page.
Thoughts for the Thoughtful	4
Editorial	5
We Believe That Thou Shalt Come—Kenneth Mackenzie	8
Favorite Scripture Verse	13
Here a Little: There a Little—Rev. C. E. Lucas	9
Old Testament Accuracy	11
War Novels—Dean Inge	11
Martin Luther Tour	12
Lee Birthplace to Become Shrine	12
The Late Gen. Bramwell Booth	13
Welfare of 300 Million at Stake	13
Starving China	13
Book Review	13
Letters to the Editor	14
Church Intelligence	15
Family Department	17
Children's Department	19
Personal Notes	22

ST. JOHN BAPTIST SCHOOL for Girls

In the Country near Morristown. Under the care of the Sisters of St. John Baptist (Episcopal).

College Preparatory and General Courses. Music and Art.

Modern Fireproof Building open September, 1929. Ample Grounds. Outdoor Life. Moderate Rates.

For Catalog address

THE SISTER SUPERIOR, St. John Baptist School, Mendham, New Jersey.

MARY BALDWIN COLLEGE

For women. Courses lead to B. A. and B. S. degrees. Music, art, spoken English, physical education. Gymnasium and field athletics. Modern equipment. In beautiful Shenandoah Valley. Founded 1842. Catalog. Staunton, Va.

Five Virginia CHURCH SCHOOLS

FOR BOYS: St. Christopher's School, Richmond; Christchurch School, Christchurch, Middlesex County.

FOR GIRLS: St. Catherine's School, Richmond; St. Anne's School, Charlottesville; St. Margaret's School, Tappahannock.

(For Catalogs, address Principals.)

LEGAL TITLE for wills: Church Schools in the Diocese of Virginia (Inc.).

(About gifts or bequests, address Central Office, 110 West Franklin Street, Richmond, Va.)

HOBART COLLEGE Geneva N. Y.

A Church College for men, founded 1828. Four year liberal arts course, leading to the degrees A. B. and B. S. High standards; faculty of thirty. For catalogue and information, address

REV. MURRAY BARTLETT, D. D., Pres.

St. Margaret's School

Tappahannock, Virginia.

A Church School for girls with modern equipment and moderate cost. Intermediate and College Preparatory. Accredited.

Country life and simplicity without isotion. Beautiful grounds on Rappahannock River. Three dormitories for different ages. Supervised Athletics.

EDITH LATANE, Headmistree.

St. Anne's,

Charlottesville, Va.

Box G.

Beautiful location in far famed Blue Ridge Mountains College preparatory and elective courses. Fully accredited. Open gymnasium allows sports in the fresh air in all weather. Sleeping porches. Riding taught by expert. Music. Art. Bishop of Virginia President of Trustees. Laura Lee Dorsey, Principal.

FISHBURNE MILITARY SCHOOL

Aim—"Not the largest, but the best"

IN EVERY class each boy recites every day. Contacts with schoolmates from all over the country. Graduates enter all colleges. Certificate privileges. Mild year 'round climate. Easily reached. Full athletic program supervised by experienced men. Modern equipment. Swimming pool. Col. M. H. Hudgins, Box , Waynesboro, Virginia.

Member Ass'n of Military Colleges and Schools of U. S.

St. Paul's Boys' School

Rogers Avenue, Mt. Washington, Md.

Boarding and Day Pupils—Fifth grade to college.

WALTER B. LAWRENCE, M A., Headmaster.

Faculty all College Graduates.

REV. ARTHUR B. KINSOLVING, D. D., President Board of Trustees.

Enrollment limited to Fifty Boarding Pupils. Tuition $450. Choir Scholarships. Next sesison begins September 11, 1929.

HAMPDEN-SYDNEY COLLEGE

Invites your careful consideration of its Faculty, Courses of Study, Wholesome Christian Atmosphere, and Physical Equipment.

For catalogue write,

REGISTRAR
Hampden-Sydney, Virginia

CHURCH EQUIPMENT SERVICE

CASSOCKS

Surplices, Stoles, Eucharistic Vestments, Choir Cassocks, Cottas, Ties and Collars, Altar Linens, Materials, Tailoring.

J. M. HALL, Inc.
174 Madison Ave.
(Bet. 33d & 34th Sts.)
New York.

SCHOOLS—CONTINUED.

SAINT MARY'S SCHOOL AND JUNIOR COLLEGE

Raleigh, North Carolina.

Rev. Warren W. Way, A. M., Rector.
An Episcopal School for Girls. Have your daughter receive her education in a Church School.
Saint Mary's offers four years' High School and two years' College work all fully accredited by the Southern Association. Also Courses in Music, Art, Expression, Home Economics and Business.
20-acre campus. Gym and Field Sports. Tennis, Indoor Tiled Swimming Pool. Horseback Riding.
For Catalogue and View Book address A. W. TUCKER, Business Manager.

DIVINITY SCHOOL

of the Protestant Episcopal Church in Philadelphia
42nd and Locust Streets.
Graduate Courses in Theology, Privileges at the University of Pennsylvania
Address: The Rev. G. G. Bartlett D. D., Dean.

MOLLER PIPE ORGAN

Endorsed by the most eminent organists. Built in the world's largest factory. Every organ a special creation for a particular use and fully guaranteed. Moller Organs lead all quest.

Booklets and specifications on re other makes for church, school and auditorium use. The Moller "Artiste" Reproducing Organ for residence use is without equal.

M. P. MOLLER
Hagerstown, Maryland.

R. GEISSLER, INC.

56 W. 8th STREET, NEW YORK, N.Y.
Church Furnishings
IN CARVED WOOD AND MARBLE · BRASS · SILVER FABRICS + WINDOWS
EST. 1877

PIPE ORGANS

HINNERS

Highest quality. Superb tone. Modern accessories. Durable construction. All sizes.

Write for catalog of Pipe Organs, Reed Organs, or Electric Blowing Outfits.

HINNERS ORGAN CO.
PEKIN, ILLINOIS

The Baylor School

A BOY'S OPPORTUNITY
Sound Scholarship and a Happy School Life
on the most beautiful campus in the South.
An accredited preparatory school for manly boys. Christian Influence. High Scholastic Standards. Unusual Equipment. Golf, Tennis, Swimming, Boating, Gymnasium, three Athletic Fields, etc. For Catalogue, Address
ALEXANDER GUERRY, Headmaster
THE BAYLOR SCHOOL, Cherokee Trail,
CHATTANOOGA, TENNESSEE

Evangelical Theological College

(Denominationally Unrelated)

PRESENT FACULTY: Lewis Sperry Chafer, D. D., President; J. T. Spangler, A. M., D. D.; Everett F. Harrison, Th. B., A. M.; W. I. Carroll, D. D.; Frederick H. Leach, Th. M.; Carl Armerding, A. B.; Rollin T. Chafer, Th. M.
VISITING FACULTY: Seriatim Bible Courses, one month each; H. A. Ironside; Herbert Mackenzie; A. C. Gaebelein, D. D.; B. B. Sutcliffe, D. D.; George E. Guille.
Comprehensive Courses leading to Th. B. and Th. M. Degrees. Special Training in Expository Preaching and Teaching. New College Building. Tuition and Room Free. Board at cost. Address:

ROLLIN T. CHAFER, Registrar, 3909 Swiss Avenue, DALLAS, TEXAS.

J. & R. Lamb

23-25-27 SIXTH AVENUE NEW YORK
MEMORIALS IN STAINED GLASS
MOSAIC · MARBLE · STONE · GRANITE
CARVED WOOD · METAL · ETC.

Woody's Art Glass Shop

Art Stained and Leaded Glass.
Church Windows a Specialty.
513 East Main Street, Richmond, Va.

BEVERLEY HEATING

The Best for Homes, Churches, Stores and Buildings for all uses.
R. C. BEVERLEY HEATING CO., INC., 308 E. Main St., Richmond, Va.
QUALITY—SERVICE.

LINEN for the CHURCH

PURE IRISH LINEN FOR ALL CHURCH USES, yard or piece lengths, at lowest import prices. New Special Number for Cottas, eighty-two and one-half cents. Samples on request.

MARY FAWCETT CO.,
350 Broadway, New York.

CHURCH VESTMENTS
Cassocks, Surplices, Stole.
EMBROIDERIES
Silks, Cloths, Fringes.
CLERICAL SUITS
Rabats, Collars, Shirts.
COX SONS & VINING,
131-133 E. 23d St., New York.

Church and Sunday School Furniture

THE SOUTHERN DESK COMPANY, Hickory, N. C.
Send for Special Catalogue.

BLYMYER CHURCH BELLS.

UNLIKE OTHER BELLS SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE. OUR FREE CATALOG TELLS WHY.
John B. Morris Foundry Co. Dept. 70 Cincinnati, O.

When in need of

MONUMENTS and TOMBSTONES

and want honest treatment see

BURNS & CAMPBELL,
Granite and Marble Works
PETERSBURG, VA.

Designs furnished on application and all orders receive prompt attention.

CHURCH FURNITURE

Pews, Pulpit and Sunday School Furniture. Catalog on request.

T. W. ALEXANDER & SON,
Box 147. Waynesboro, Va.

Washington Cathedral

A Witness for Christ in the Capital of the Nation

♦ ♦ ♦

THE CHAPTER appeals to Churchmen throughout the country for gifts, large and small, to continue the work of building now proceeding, and to maintain its work, Missionary, Education, Charitable, for the benefit of the whole Church.

Chartered under Act of Congress.

Administered by a representative Board of Trustees of leading business men, Clergymen and Bishops.

Full information will be given by the Bishop of Washington, or the Dean, Cathedral Offices, Mount St. Alban, Washington, D. C., who will receive and acknowledge all contributions.

♦ ♦ ♦

Legal Title for Use in Making Wills:
The Protestant Episcopal Cathedral Foundation of the District of Columbia

VIRGINIA TRUST CO.

Richmond, Va.

THE SAFE EXECUTOR,

Was organized in 1892 to act as Executor-Guardian and Trustee.

Many prudent men and women in every section of the State have named this Company Executor and trustee in their wills.

Inquiries cordially invited—no cost and confidential.

Capital Stock	$ 1,000,000.00
Surplus earned	$ 1,500,000.00
Held in trust.....	$45,000,000.00

LITTLE TEA ROOM

SANDWICHES

Special Prices to

Clubs, Lodges and Paties

211 N. Jefferson Ran 3958

Richmond, Va.

XANTHINE

Will hereafter be sold in the new style bottle and package. Always best for the hair. Not a dye, but restores the color, promotes growth and prevents dandruff.

Price $1.00 at druggists, or sent prepaid by us.

XANTHINE CO., Richmond, Va.

$50 TO $100 IN SPARE TIME

Write for Schwer's CHRISTMAS CARD & NOVELTIES PLAN. Popular and different from others. $50. to $100. easily made. No investment. Great for Home Effort. Write at once to CHARLEY C. SCHWER, DEPT. 185 WESTFIELD, MASS.

CARPETS for CHURCHES

We carry a large stock of Church Carpets, embracing a wide assortment of designs, colorings and qualities and at prices to meet every requirement. Write and our representative will call with a selection of patterns and give an estimate, or we will send samples, at our expense, for your consideration.

Sydnor & Hundley

700 E. Grace Street,
Richmond, Va.

Thoughts For the Thoughtful

"He is least persuasive who most seeks applause."

"Many of our pains come from plucking joys before they are ripe."

When the Master says, "Come and rest," He is sure to add, "Go and work."

It is the man who has done nothing who is certain nothing can be done.

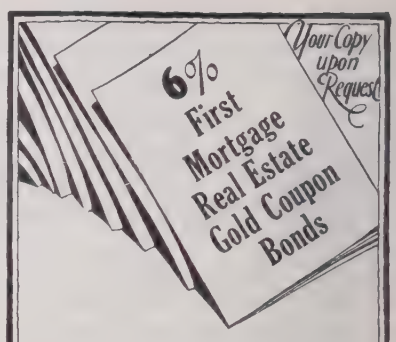
Many satisfy themselves by agreeing with conscience when obedience is what they need.

The difference between education and learning is, that you can lose the latter but never the former.

Not in the clamor of the street, not in the shouts and plaudits of the throng, but in ourselves are triumph and defeat.

The sparrows of the air of small account,
Our God doth view,
Whether they fall or mount—
He guards us too.
—Christina G. Rossetti.

A little girl who was asked what she thought God was like, said: "I think He is more like Jesus Christ than any one else I know."



No matter how hurried you may be, no time is wasted in thanksgiving."

Show by your conduct that you love and prize Sunday. Make it different from all the other days. Adorn it. Make it the jewell of the week.—Dr. C. E. Jefferson.

Whoso lives wisely, he alone is wise.
But live thou must, must mingle in the throng
Of men, with all thy heart and soul and and strength,
And bravely help them win the fight of life.
—L. Schefer.

"So, as I enter here from day to day,
And leave my burden at this minster gate,
Kneeling in prayer, and not ashamed to pray,
The tumult of the time disconsolate
To inarticulate murmurs dies away,
While the eternal ages watch and wait."

I heard a farmer say a little while ago: "There is nothing like a snow for feeding the springs. And I have known men whose souls were desert-like—who have been graciously blessed by God under the snows of some chilling sorrow or disappointment. And the genial springs have been born again. It is frequently a seasonable moment when you want help from anybody, to go after they have passed through some grave affliction. The wells of sympathy are flowing, the first step has been taken in the transformation of the desert.—J. H. Jowett.

EXCELLENT is the word used by one investor who buys American Bonds.

Issued by one of the largest financial institutions in the South with a record of "never a day's delay in payment of principal or interest," these prime First Mortgage Real Estate Gold Bonds excel as investments for those who seek safety and 6%.

Can we send you full details of current issues? Drop a postal, also mention this paper.

Investigate American Bonds before you invest.

AMERICAN
BANK AND TRUST COMPANY
Richmond, Virginia

TIDEWATER TALES

A book into which is gathered the folklore, traditions and history of Tidewater Virginia. Written in a delightful informal style by Prof. William C. Garnett.

The President of a College in South Carolina writes: "I have never read a work of this kind the style of which I have found more attractive, simple and yet elegant, interesting but never monotonous."

A prominent representative of a Publishing Co. writes: "This book will be read by our children and children's children. I could read 'A Fox Hunt 'Fo de War' every week."

A prominent attorney in Washington writes: " . . the charming description of the old homes, the history and traditions, and the true-to-life stories in local color, combined to delight me."

A professor in one of the Virginia Universities writes: "You have put posterity in your debt by presenting so skilfully to them characters that have passed to the beyond."

Price, $1.00 per copy. Order from WM. GARNETT, Dunnsville, Va.

SOUTHERN CHURCHMAN

Catholic for every truth of God; Protestant against every error of man.

EDITORIALS

Vol. 94. RICHMOND, VA., JULY 27, 1929. No. 30.

THE VOICE OF AUTHORITY

Text: "I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the ending," saith the Lord, "which is, and which was, and which is to come, the Almighty."—Rev. 1:8.

The speaker in these words makes an all-inclusive claim to divine authority. "Alpha and Omega"—all language finds its truest expression and meaning in Him, who is the speech of God. All things owe their being and existence to Him, who is the beginning and the ending. Time and eternity are meaningless without Him, who is and who was, and who is to come, the Almighty. While this absolute authority is here claimed we do not as yet see it exercised. However, we find it ascribed to Christ over and over again in the New Testament. "By Him all things consist, and are upheld by the word of His power."

To claim authority and then to have it recognized is the test and measure of such a claim. We find that many setting themselves up as leaders, realize that they need something more forceful than a claim to support their contentions and such resort to the force of arms.

The strength of Christ's claim lies in the force of His moral rectitude. Alone, He cleansed the temple of the money changers, more effectively than if he had used four quaternions of soldiers.

The authority sustained by the power of the word passes quickly to the hand possessing the strongest grip. How awesome were the laws of the Medes and Persians. Once they were enacted, all had to bow and submit to their mandates. The king who made the decree became subject to it and had no manner of means to lessen the rigour of the law. What a restless and sleepless night Darius spent when he was compelled by the "law which altereth not", to cast his friend Daniel unto the lions. How overjoyed he was, on approaching the den the next morning, to find that there existed a higher power which had closed the mouths of the lions. The authority of those unalterable laws was soon smashed and overthrown, never more to arise from the blow struck, by Alexander the Great. And, so has it been down through the ages, the waning of one power and the rising of another.

Time does not allow our looking at the changes effected by the conflict of 1914-18, in the countries of Russia, Poland, Germany and, in fact, all Europe, except to note the following. The Kaiser in his retreat at Doorn, Holland, still seems to cherish hopes of again holding the sceptre of power. To all who visit him, he asks, "Do my people desire my return?" Should the guest respond in a vague or evasive manner the attitude of the Kaiser and his servants quickly informs him that his stay has terminated. Think for a moment of the long reign enjoyed by the House of Savoy, but now its tenure is seriously threatened, by the grandiose dictator Il Duce. This man apparently claims absolute authority, and seems to brook no interference with his governmental ministrations. In Italy's "Who's Who", King Victor Immanuel has but two lines describing him, whereas Mussolini has two and a half pages setting forth his achievements. How long he will continue to rule, and how widespread shall be his power time alone can tell.

In addition to those nations and individuals who claimed secular authority, we have instances of men setting themselves up as religious and spiritual authorities. Mahomet taught his followers to believe:

> "There is but one God, Allah is his name and Mahomet is his prophet."

He inspired his disciples to make converts by the edge of the sword. Today his followers number around 70,000,000. May the awakening which appears to be taking place in the near East curb the baneful influence of this pseudo-prophet. As you are all familiar with the works of Confuscius, Buddhism and Brahmanism, we shall pass on to the subject at hand. As regards Christianity, there are those who would limit its authority, by making the final court of appeal Rome; which by the common consent of the fathers decides all controversies religious. There is a strong reason for such an attitude, as many Protestants are uncertain where to turn for a solution of their religious problems.

Many hold that the Bible is the final rule of faith and practice, in all matters concerning the Christian life; while others maintain that conscience is the sure guide. The objection raised as to the Bible being that no two agree as witnessed by the many denominations and sects. Those who hold to conscience, as their guide, state that they are the children of God who are led by the Spirit of God, who guides them into all truth. Because this savors of mysticism it is rejected by a large majority.

The Roman Catholic Church overcomes these apparent difficulties, by claiming for her head, The Pope, infallibility in matters of doctrine and church polity. He considers himself as the vicar of Christ on earth with unbroken apostolic succession. Their teaching consistently follows, because of this attitude, that they are the true and only Church and all others but rebels, children who have wandered from the fold. It is no wonder then that Rome refused to take part in any of the world conferences, held each year, to promote better understanding and cooperation among the denominations.

We find the prophets of the Old Testament exercising an authority which they taught was received from Jehovah. They prefaced their messages with a: "Thus saith the Lord," or "The Word of the Lord came unto me saying, also thou son of man, thus saith the Lord God," and so on, spake all the prophets from Samuel unto Malachi. Why did they so begin their message? No doubt to impress upon their auditors the fact that they were God's representatives, bearing a message of heavenly origin, which was to be received and obeyed.

The authority exercised by our Lord Jesus Christ differed from all these in that it was neither acquired or bestowed, as witnessed by the way He spoke and wrought, thus showing Himself as the absolute Word of God.

> "I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the ending," saith the Lord, "which is, and which was, and which is to come, the Almighty."

Some one has well said that Christ made the truth He taught. At all times He spoke only that which was true. This truth He proclaimed was attainable by all who wished ot seize hold of it. His standing challenge being:

> "If many man will do his will he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself."

The Rev. George Truett tells of a young preacher who held a two weeks' meeting at Yale University. The student body assembled each morning in the chapel, but the young preacher said that no impression was being made on the students. He look about to see why he was receiving no response, and discovered that the students were taking refuge behind one of the faculty.

This professor with all his attainments seemed to be quite content and satisfied with life, and his personality won him the admiration of the students. The minister went to him and said: "Professor Bushnell, if these things I am preaching are true, wouldn't you like to know it? If Christ is able to give eternal life, wouldn't you like to know it?" The Professor made reply by saying: "Certainly, I would like to know it, if the thing be reliable and praiseworthy." He was told that he might know by taking Christ's own challenge. Mr. Bushnell said he did not know how to start, and he was instructed to pray along this line:

> "Oh, God, if there be such a Being, give me light on this matter of religion. If Thou hast any interest in my getting light, and if Thou wilt give me light, no matter how it comes, I will follow such light wherever it leads."

He agreed to take the test. About three days later he entered the chapel and addressed the students, saying:

> "My men, I have a wonderful thing to tell you. I laughed to scorn all that this man preached, and all the rest of them, and the churches. I have found out that I was in the darkness and they were in the light. Oh, I have put God to the test, and I know that He is the Saviour, and I am henceforth His disciple and friend forever."

The text before us sets forth the fact that Christ claimed heavenly authority and power. He proved His right to the claim by many signs and wonders. When the four carried to Him one who was held in the throes of a palsy, He looked at the man and saw the source of all the invalid's misery.

> He said unto the sick of the palsy, "Son, thy sins be forgiven thee."

My, what a word is this that the most enslaving, devitalizing power in the world can be broken by a word from Him, who would have us known: "That the Son of man hath power on earth to forgive sins." Then in support of His claim He manifested His greater power by doing the lesser thing:

> He saith to the sick of the palsy, "I say unto thee, arise, and take up thy bed, and go thy way into thine house."

Standing beside a fast closed grave containing a decaying corpse, He sought faith in those words of His:

> "I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth in me though he were dead, yet shall he live: and whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die."

And, despite the doubt and hesitancy manifested, by those near the grave, Jesus lifted up His voice and cried with a loud voice, "Lazarus, come forth." And he that was dead came forth.

Never man spake like this man, and yet there are those who try to show that other teachers expressed truths similar to Christ's, attempting to prove Him but an echo of things already in circulation. However, such attempts fail to weaken His teaching and do not minimize His authority. Only the Son of God could give the sermon on the Mount, with is sublime and lofty expression: "Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God." Never has self-control been more aptly and beautifully taught than: "If one smite thee on the right cheek turn to him the left also."

Christ knew that He was true and His word true; therefore, He said for our encouragement and guidance:

> "I am the way, the truth and the life, no man cometh unto the Father, but by me."

And for the sake of the timid and such who feared to risk themselves to so seemingly uncertain plank He states:

> "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my word shall not pass away. Come unto me all ye that labour and are heavy ladened and I will you rest."

Where in this world can we encounter more forceful language so free of pretention or presumption because the truths are uttered as facts? The whole demeanor of Christ indicates that He was the truth He uttered. Look at Him standing before the representative of the world's greatest power in the person of Pontius Pilate, a Roman procurator:

> "Then saith Pilate unto Him, speakest thou not unto me? knowest thou not that I have power to crucify thee, and have power to release thee?"

Note how Christ corrects Pilate, and then exonerated him of any responsibility for His imprisonment. No quailing on His part, but instead a calm, serene dignity, reminding one of that passage of Isaiah's visions recorded in the sixth chapter of his book:

> Jesus answered, "Thou couldest have no power at all against me, except it were given thee from above: therefore He that delivered me unto thee hath the greater sin."

Jesus manifested no timidity but Pilate did; he sought to release Christ, and because of his inability to do so, and wishing to clear himself, called for water and washed his hands before the multitude, saying: "I am innocent of the blood of this just person."

The courageous attitude of Christ is seen throughout His entire three years before the public gaze. It continues with Him unto the time when He cried out with a loud voice, "It is finished."

The world has never witnessed a braver or more heroic figure than He who is called Jesus the Christ. See Him in the garden of Gethsemane. Yonder is that spotless, sinless character contemplating assuming the sin of the world, the horror of it causes a bloody sweat, and yet He resignedly prays:

> "Father, if thou be willing, remove this cup from me: nevertheless, not my will, but thine, be done."

Such courage, resignation, fortitude and determination constitute Him, as indeed He is, the Captain of our salvation.

Another thing we note about our Lord is that unlike the Scribes and Pharisees, who learned by experience, He knew all things by Divine intuition, "How knoweth this man letters never having learned?" He said to Mary, His mother, "Mine hour is not yet come." There never has been one who could look down the vista of days, weeks, months or years and say I look forward to that hour unto which my whole life converges. The majority of us are unable to tell what a day will bring forth, but Jesus looked ahead to that one thing for which He had come into the world to do. Before it was accomplished He prayed as though it was already done. "Father, I have finished the work thou gavest me to do." After He had taught the Apostles His true identity He "began to shew unto them how that He must go unto Jerusalem, and suffer many things of the elders and chief priests and scribes, and be killed, and be raised again the third day." He understood perfectly all that was prophesied concerning Him. He claimed to be the one mentioned by the prophets:

> "The woman saith unto Him, I know that Messiah cometh, which is called Christ. . . . Jesus saith unto her, I that speak unto thee am He."

He would have the disciples know what He was about to suffer, and as a willing victim in order to bear away the sin of the world:

> "Therefore doth my father love me, because I lay down my life, that I might take it again. No man taketh it from me, but I lay it down of myself. I have power to take it again, this commandment have I received from my Father."

It becomes Him to speak with authority. How blasphemous and ridiculous it would sound for any one else, but the Christ to say, "I am the resurrection and the life". Neither His friends or enemies feel that it is preposterous for Him to say:

> "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away. All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. I give eternal life unto as many as thou hast given me."

He puts Himself on an equal plane with God by saying, "I and my Father are one".

We have learned to use and harness certain laws of nature, but as yet we cannot make nature obey us. We might to some extent lessen the fury of the waves by shooting oil onto the turbulent waters, but we are unable to still the tempest. The disciples when they beheld their boat shipping water called out and said, "Master, carest thou not that we perish?" He arose, rebuked the winds and the sea and a great calm ensued. The disciples were amazed, for they perceived that even the winds and the waves obeyed His will. He not only exercises His sovereignty over the elements, but manifested His power over man's ills by cleansing the leperous, curing the diseased, relieving the afflicted, giving sight to the blind, causing the deaf to hear, the dumb to speak, the lame to walk, and the dead to rise again. But, by far the best of all, He lifts the burden of sin, by graciously saying:

> "Neither do I condemn thee, go and sin no more."

> There is a fountain fill'd with blood,
> Drawn from Immanuel's veins;
> And sinners, plung'ed beneath that flood,
> Lose all their guilty stains;
> Lose all their guilty stains.

What joy and peace enters the hearts of those who submit to Christ's authority. It is fitting that we should respect authority. I like that practice followed at law courts of rising when the Judge enters. They do not rise, to be sure, because of the man, but for what he represents. It gives me joy whenever I hear the twenty-one gun salute given for the President. Once I was in a foreign land and heard nothing but a strange tongue all about me, together with signs and symbols belonging to that people. Happening to see the flag of my country it gave me a feeling I shall not soon forget. Then for the first time I realized all that the stars and stripes meant to me what that symbol stood for. Obviously you cannot submit to any authority without experiencing within yourself the influence of that power whether it be good or ill. Those who yield their members to the power of sin and Satan are restless, sinful and free of the righteousness of God.

> "The wicked are like the troubled sea, when it cannot rest, whose waters cast up mire and dirt."

Blessed and happy is the state of those who yield and surrender to the authority of Christ. He stills the tempest of the soul; the unruly desires are quieted; the power of sin is broken, and a new urge and direction given to the life. What a tonic to the mind, and medicine to the bones it is to know that all's well with the soul. To have a purpose in life, with its destiny fixed."

> "To know Him and the power of His resurrection." Beloved, now we are the sons of God, and it does not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when He shall appear, we shall be like Him; for we shall see Him as He is."

A wealthy landowner loved to have his hired man relate to him the experiences of his conversion. It seemed that the employer never tired hearing the glowing account his servant gave concerning his salvation and hope of glory. The employer watched his man under all manner of conditions and became convinced that Christ was a real power in his life. This caused great searching of heart and led the man of wealth to state that he would be willing to give up his holdings for the contentment and peace enjoyed by the poorer man. Fancy wealth willing to exchange places with poverty! Well, it has been done and Francis de Assissi was happy that he had espoused poverty for the sake of Christ. The land-owner came to Christ as he was and the Lord saved him. The Church in our midst, composed of redeemed souls, witnesses to the power of His authority. To recognize His word and receive it is to put an end to darkness and enter into His light.

> "Being born again not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth for ever."

The voices of the redeemed will sing unto Him "worthy art thou to say:

> "I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the ending, saith the Lord, which is and which Was, and which is to come, the Almighty, for thou hast saved us and made us kings and priests unto our God." Amen.

Walter C. Cansdale.

WE BELIEVE THAT THOU SHALT COME

By Kenneth Mackenzie

XV.

WE are now prepared to consider that august phenomenon, for which the ages have waited, the advent of the King of kings and Lord of lords. Having discerned the relation of the Son of God to the Church, the Son of Man to the human race, and the Son of David to the nation which gave Him to us, we note that in this sovereign majesty all of the three classes are embraced.

The Church is to reign with Him in His glory. This is indicated by the Apostle, "Do ye not know that the saints shall judge the world? that we shall judge angels" (1 Cor. 6:2, 3)? It is to the "little flock" that the Father shall give the kingdom (Luke 12:32). To him that overcometh will I give power over the nations (Rev. 26:27). The song of the redeemed conclues with, "We shall reign on the earth" (Rev. 5:9, 10). Retrospecting, we behold that undoubtedly when the Church shall have been with Him in the heavenlies and standing before His Bema (2 Cor. 5: 10) and "the marriage of the Lamb" has been celebrated (Rev. 19:7-9), the King will come forth, as described in the rest of this section of the chapter, to be the Supreme Ruler of the world. We hold strictly to the form we have clearly set forth that the Church thus exalted is that body of believers who have accepted Him as the Son of God, by the inspiration of the Holy Spirit (Matt. 16:16, 17; 11:25-27; 1 Cor. 12:3); have resisted the powers of darkness in their fight of faith (Matt. 16:18); have willingly accepted the cross and followed Him (Matt. 16:24-27) and confessed the power of His Cross and resurrection in life and destiny (Matt. 16:21). This is the Biblical standard. We may seem dogmatic and bigotted in assuming this elective classification. But we cannot avoid the conclusion, if we stand by the Word of God. He will have His place for others, though He has not revealed it. We may trust Him. We only know that "this life is in his Son; and that he that hath the Son hath life" (1 John 5:11, 12). And we warm our hearts with the assurance that not any organized body of believers, arrogating to itself the exclusive authority to be called "The Church" is herein embraced, but "members incorporate in the mystical body of Thy Son, which is the blessed company of all faithful people".

This Glorious Reign is Introduced by a Judgment.

When reading the prophecy from Isaiah 61, in the synagogue of Nazareth, our Lord stopped upon declaring "the acceptable year of the Lord" (Luke 4:19, 20). He did not include "the day of vengeance", for it was not then due. But it has waited its time. Blessed as is the comfortable outline of the Apostle as to our being caught up to meet our Lord in the air (1 Thess. 4:13-18), we cannot hide our eyes from that other and subsequent terrible outshining of His power and majesty as defined in 2 Thess. 1:7-10. "Flaming fire," "taking vengeance," "punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord" are almost unbelievable terms to associate with Him. But the Apostle had a well-balanced view of truth, since he had received it of the Lord Himself. It were well for our gainsaying age to ponder this. Plausible may be the insistence that God must take His place where we think He should abide and stay there. But He has His own notions of holiness and justice despite our vaunted opinions. So, before our Lord on the throne of His glory (Matt. 25: 31, 32).

Shall Be Gathered All Nations

for judgment. There is a teaching that He is now on His throne and that from it, He will govern the world by the sweet influences of His grace. But we should have to reject some weighty evidence to bolster that theory. He has no throne, as we have previously noted. But sits on His Father's throne awaiting His own enthronement (Mark 16:19; Acts 2:33-35, with Ps. 110:1 and Heb. 10:12, 13; Rom. 8:34; Eph. 1:20; Col. 3:1; Heb. 1:3; 12:2; 1 Peter 3:22). We may toy with this solemn truth; but reverent faith takes it on its face value.

And we pause to remark that so far from there being a general judgment, we have ground for segregating the judgments of the New Testament into a series. We have noted that the judgment for the sins of believers was consummated on Calvary's Cross. "There is therefore now no judgment to them that are in Christ Jesus" (Rom. 8:1; John 5:24; 2 Cor. 5:21; 1 Peter 2:24; 1 John 1:7; Rev. 1:5; 5:9,10). We have also discovered that the Bema of Jesus Christ (2 Cor. 5:10) is a tribunal for the ascertainment of worthiness for place in the coming kingdom and where the crowns for service shall be awarded (1 Cor. 3:11-15; 1 Cor. 9:25-27; James 1:12; Rev. 2:10; 22 Tim. 4:7, 8; 1 Peter 5:4). So that this judgment of the living nations might be called the third judgment. And we must not forget that the word ethnos from which the term nations is taken is not at all applicable to a resurrected company. Indeed, there is no reference here to any resurrection. The first resurrection having been consummated (John 5:28, 29, first clause of 29), called by our Lord THE resurrection in Luke 20:35, deemed by the Apostle to be the out-resurrection from amongst the dead (Greek for Phil. 3:11), the rest of the dead (Rev. 20:5, 6) await a future awakening according to Rev. 20:11-15. This earthly tribunal in which our Lord justifies His embraces all nations.. The standard of judgment is not easy of fixation. It is purely ethical; there is no such touchstone as that which He sets forth in John 3:19, "This is the judgment that light is come into the world and men love darkness rather than light". The "brethren" herein described may refer to His Jewish kinsmen, who according to the Scriptural portraiture will pass through a time of dire trouble (Jer. 30:7; Zech. 14:2; Matt. 24:21; Luke 21:20-27). So it were useless to speculate as to the criterion by which the nations shall be judged. But we know that the justice of the kindly Lord Jesus will be instrict accordance with the consciences of those who come under the sentence of condemnation with which the chapter (Matt. 25) closes.

Authority to be Called the Son of Man

The throne of His glory with relation to the entire human race, becomes

The Throne of David.

when related to His kinsmen according to the flesh (Jer. 23:5. 6; Isa. 32:1, 2; Matt. 19:28). It is at this juncture that He will pour upon the house of David and the inhabitants of Jerusalem the spirit of grace and supplications (Zech. 12:10); the rejection of Him on His entry into the holy city will now be compensated in the fulfilment of His own prediction and they shall say, as did the Galileans, "Blessed is he that cometh in name of the Lord" (Matt. 23:37-39; Ps. 118:26; Luke 19:38), and cry in the prophet's ecstasy, "Lo, this our God; we have waited for him and he will save us; this is Jehovah; we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation" (Isa. 25:9).

The opinion of a few is that the promises to the Jewish race regarding the restoration to the land and the fulfilment of the prophecies regarding the exaltation of the race are entirely nullified by the Christian dispensation. To maintain this would be to overturn the very structure of both prophecy and Christian conviction as expressed in the New Testament. Evidently our Lord was dwelling upon this epoch when discoursing with His disciples during the forty days subsequent to His resurrection, for the record embraces the question, "Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel" (Acts 1:6)? He does not rebuke what would have been an utterly irrelevant interrogation, had He not held the restoration as a future event, but simply admonished them that the time was not for Him to disclose. So also St. Peter in his exhortation not long after Pentecost regards "the times of restoration of all things" as possible when Jerusalem shall repent of the crime of Calvary (Acts 3:18-21). And St. Paul, well balanced in the revelation of the Lord's mind, enjoins upon the Romans the truth that when the times of the Gentiles shall have concluded, God will turn His hand again upon Israel and from Zion the Deliverer shall come, clinching His claim by the stern injunction, "The gifts and calling of God are without repentance" (Rom. 11:25-29).

There has always been resident in the Jewish mind the hidden belief that the world is to be saved by Judah. Present-day articles and sermons are instinctive with the blazing hope. So far, the impression upon the Gentile world has been nil; yet, the intense conviction of this mission will not die out. Some day it must come to birth and the Jews arise, as they long to be, the missionaries of a world redemption. From our point of view, we can see that there can be no redemption without a redeemer (and such we have in our Lord Jesus). Now when He comes again this long pent up wish will find expression. It is admitted by the writers of the New Testament; it is vindicated by the preservation of the Jewish race, the miracle of history; it is happily in accord with the entire trend of the Word of God. The King that is to rule the world is God's anointed and chosen One (Dan. 7:13, 14; Ps. 2:6-8; 110: 1, 2; Isa. 9:6, 7), none other than the Son of God to the Church, the Son of Man to the world, the Son of David to His own brethren in the flesh.

HERE A LITTLE---THERE A LITTLE

By the Reverend C. E. Lucas

Church of the Holy Communion, Buffalo, New York.

PART II.

I NOW direct your attention to two important dangers: (1) The Canon of the Mass; (2) Prayers for the Dead. The distinctive difference between the Protestant idea of the Lord's Supper and the Catholic idea, is this:

> To the Protestant the Lord's Supper is a Communion Service in which "ye do show the Lord's death till he come" (1 Cor. 11:26).
>
> To the Catholic the Lord's Supper is a sacrifice offered for the living AND THE DEAD.

When Mass is said the people are sometimes permitted to commune and sometimes they are not. But always the underlying idea in The Mass is that it is a sacrifice offered to God. In other words, Christ is being offered again by the priest each time he says Mass—instead of being "once offered" as set forth in the ninth chapter of Hebrews.

From this conception the doctrine of "The Sacrifice of the Mass" came as a natural explanation, and later "Transubstantiation" became the metaphysical explanation of the older doctrine of "The Sacrifice of the Mass". Against both these doctrines the Thirty-Nine Articles protest.

I make this explanation because people ofttimes repudiate the doctrine of Transubstantiation and at the same time will accept a change that implies the doctrine provided it is called by some other name, or is not named at all. In like manner they will be ready to fight against Purgatory, but they will accept Prayers for the Dead which imply that there is an Intermediate State where the soul must be cleansed and it matters little whether you call it by the name or not—IF Prayers for the Dead avail then there is most certainly a Purgatory. But I want you to notice that IF.

Reverting again to The Mass. I can take the Roman Mass today, change most of the prayers; in fact, rewrite all of them, call it by a different name, and you would think it was a different service, yet it would still be The Mass so long as I retain those items essential to the idea of The Sacrifice.

On the other hand I can leave many items as they are and by a few deft changes here and there entirely eliminate the idea of The Sacrifice. I have already shown you how the change of a single word in a single hymn results in a fundamentally different interpretation of the meaning of that hymn. So with The Mass. The chief thing necessary to remove the idea of The Sacrifice is to:

> (a) substitute tables for altars
> (b) eliminate Prayers for the Departed
> (c) break up the Canon of the Mass
> (d) make such rubrical changes as may be necessary to remove The Sacrificial Aspect.

Compare the first English Prayer Book of 1549 with The Mass and you will say it is radically different. So it is, for the Reformers made a great many changes and rewrote the old prayers or inserted new ones. Yet with all the changes they made, they did not entirely destroy those things which support the Doctrines of The Sacrifice of The Mass and Transubstantiation. So three years later they put forth another book.

Comparing the Book of 1552 with that of 1549, the changes seem slight, and so they are, but they are fundamental and important. This is what the Book of 1552 accomplished:

> (a) Tables were substituted for Altars, because before one can offer a Sacrifice he must have an Altar. Sacrifices are never offered on Tables.
>
> (b) All Vestments associated definitly with The Mass were outlawed.
>
> (c) Prayers for the Departed were removed. (The Mass is never said without such prayers being included and the Doctrine of the Sacrifice of the Mass was not evolved until after such Prayers were added to the Liturgy.
>
> (d) The Canon of the Mass begins immediately after the Ter Sanctus and concludes with the Lord's Prayer. The Canon was broken up by the simple process of transposing the position of the Prayers. The Prayer of Humble Access was placed between the Ter Sanctus and the Prayer of Consecration. The Lord's Prayer was placed after the Communion of the people.

A few other "small changes" resulted in great changes of doctrine.

Now, when you come to use the Revised Prayer Book, I want you to notice that the Prayer of Humble Access is in a new position. The Lord's Prayer has been restored to its former position. Such changes mean nothing to you, but to the Anglo-Catholic "it is The Mass that matters".

And, listen—A few weeks after this "small change", the Presiding Bishop attended a Solemn Pontifical Mass which opened the Catholic Congress at Milwaukee in 1925.

The Prayer for Christ's Church Militant has been changed by eliminating the word Militant and adding a petition for the Departed.

Other Prayers for the Departed and a Communion Service at Burials have been added in other parts of the Prayer Book.

It is true these are served us in the form of sugar-coated pills in the hope that they will be easy for us to swallow. Quite naturally the prayers do not state the doctrine, doctrine is always deduced therefrom, not stated in the prayers.

All that I wish to remind you of is that such Prayers imply an intermediate state where the soul must be cleansed and purified before it can enter into the presence of God. The Anglo-Catholics call that state Purgatory.

Again I remind you that The Mass always contains Prayers for the Departed and these changes were made because "it is The Mass that matters".

Hence, today the Anglo-Catholics

> (a) Advertise their Communion Services as "The Mass".
>
> (b) They speak of > Low Mass
> High Mass or Sung Mass
> Requiems, Requiem Masses or > Masses for the Dead.
>
> (c) They have non-communicating Masses, when the people are not permitted to receive the Sacrament.
>
> (d) Some of them have another Roman Service called "The Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament" or "The Benediction".
>
> (e) Hours for Confession are named in their advertisements or Church Notices.
>
> (f) In fact, the whole Catholic faith is taught and practiced in those parishes where the perfect work of this movement is in evidence.

I want to again enumerate those things which are included in the Anglo-Catholic's conception of "the whole Catholic faith",

> c The Mass
> c (a) confession (you must confess your sins to the priest and receive absolution before you can receive communion)
> c (b) prayers for the dead
> c (b) invocation of Saints (i e., prayers to the departed)
> c (b) the Hail Mary
> c (b) Transubstantiation
> (c) Purgatory
> the use of the rosary
> the use of Holy Water
> the use of the Crucifix
> the Sign of the Cross
> the Reservation of the Sacrament.

The items marked c are associated with the Catholic conception of the Mass:

(a) before you can receive communion at Mass you must go to Confession.

(b) at Mass the Catholic always prays for the departed, and prayers are always said to the departed, i. e., the Saints and the Virgin.

(c) The Mass is offered as a Sacrifice for the repose of souls in Purgatory.

Do you now understand WHY these "small changes" were made in the Communion Service???

Do you now realize WHY Prayers for the Departed were included in the Revised Prayer Book????

About the time Prayers for the Departed were approved a friend sent me a copy of the New Orleans "Times-Picayune," dated October 25, 1925. The article she marked bore this caption:

"Summary of Convention Show Victories for Catholic Wing of Episcopal Church."

Shortly thereafter I went to an Anglo-Catholic friend. I said to him: "Please recommend to me the best and most authoritative publication setting forth the doctrines of the Anglo-Catholics."

My friend recommended that I read the articles in "The (Roman) Catholic Encyclopedia" on:

Prayers for the Departed
Invocation of Saints
Purgatory,

and other related doctrines. I did so. If that Church was right and the Episcopal Church had been wrong for three hundred and seventy-three years, as the Anglo-Catholics taught, then I wanted to know it. If my Church was going to embrace Anglo-Catholicism, then I was going to be an Anglo-Catholic, provided I could convince myself in all good conscience that they were right and the Thirty-Nine Articles wrong.

In passing I want to say that the articles which I read in the Roman Catholic Encyclopedia are conservative statements of their position.

I approached my study of this subject with an open mind. I read everything I possibly could locate by proponents of such prayers. I read nothing by their opponents. It was not until after I went to the Bible that I read others to check my own thinking against theirs. And I did not go to the Bible until I had read all the arguments for such prayers. When I did finally turn to the Bible I did not do as so many are prone to do, examine a few texts here and there. I examined hundreds of texts bearing upon the future life, the condition of salvation, the subject of prayer, the subject of death, hell, heaven, the judgment, etc., etc.

Anything that might even remotely throw light upon the general subject of Prayers for the Departed, the need therefor, the efficacy thereof—I searched diligently for.

I am now fully persuaded that the doctrine is a snare and a delusion and without any certain warrant in Scripture.

I will now give you as briefly as possible the result of my study.

Prayers for the Departed.

As the proponents of such Prayers based their arguments therefore preferentially on The Traditions of the Church instead of the Holy Scriptures, I will give that first attention.

The Traditions which they cite as authority are:

(1) The writings of the Fathers
(2) The evidence of the Catacombs
(3) Ancient Prayers and Liturgies.

These Traditions they assert prove that the custom prevailed in Apostolic Times, that it was certainly a very ancient practice, and being Apostolic or ancient that per se is conclusive evidence that it is right.

Concerning this assertion that the practice is ancient, possibly Apostolic, and the deduction made therefrom that it must therefore be right—I simply submit this thought for your intelligent consideration:

(a) It was an ancient, primitive practice among the Hebrews to worship idols. Although they had a plain commandment from God, they persistently violated it. So we see that a practice may be ancient, primitive, date from the earliest days and still be erroneous.

(b) In the New Testament we read of practices and doctrines taught in Apostolic Churches, while the Apostles were still living, yet the same Scriptures which record these practices likewise make clear the fact that they were contrary to the will of God—so again we see that a practice may be ancient, may be primitive and still be erroneous.

Now, as to the use of that word "ancient". I would remind you that anything that happened 500, 1,000, or 1,500 years ago, can correctly be classed as "ancient". Yet, it would not carry us back to the times of the Apostles. I want you to bear that in mind while I consider the first source of Tradition, viz.:

The Writings of the Fathers.

Speaking of Traditions Christ said "by your Traditions ye make the Word of God of none effect". The Traditions to which Christ referred to were the uninspired writings of ancient Rabbis or Fathers of the Hebrew Church.

The Writings of the Fathers to which I now refer are the uninspired writings of the early Fathers of the Christian Church.

The first authority quoted by any author, including the author of the Holy Cross Tracts, in support of this practice of Praying for the Departed, is Tertullian, who died A. D. 220—in the third century.

In passing it might be well to note that on other doctrines held by the Order of the Holy Cross, Tertullian would hardly be called orthodox—in fact, some writers call him a heretic.

Other Fathers are cited, but they are all of later date than Tertullian.

No Apostle or Father living in the first century is ever quoted in support of this practice of Praying for the Departed. Why?????

Polycarp knew the Apostles—there were other Fathers who knew them or were ordained by men who knew them. Yet these men are never quoted as authority for this practice. WHY?????

Because there is no historical evidence that this custom prevailed in the Apostolic Church.

Next, let us consider the second source of these Traditions, viz.:

The Evidence of the Catacombs.

Thousands of inscriptions from the tombstones in the catacombs have been carefully catalogued.

These inscriptions cover several centuries. The later inscriptions do include pious ejaculations which can be used to support the claim that this is an ancient custom.

BUT there is no evidence that it was a custom of the primitive or Apostolic Church.

On the contrary the evidence shows that it was not. NOT ONE Prayer for the Departed is found among the inscriptions of the first, second and third century. This is very significant.

Neither the

Writings of the Fathers
nor The Evidence of the Catacombs will support the allegation that this custom dates back to the Apostolic Church.

(3) Ancient Prayers and Liturgies.

One of the latest publications, a book just off the press, states on its title page that it contains Prayers for the Living, Dying and Departed, "compiled from ancient and modern sources".

I naturally thought I would find some historical evidence in this compilation that would help me determine the question under consideration. I examined every Prayer for the Departed.

Three are from the sixth century;
Forty-nine are from the eighth century;

a period when the ignorance of the Masses was appalling, when superstition was rampant. "Nuf ced".

In my studies the thing that struck be most forcibly was this:

Not one single Prayer
from the first century from Polycarp who knew the Apostles from the Apostles is ever offered in evidence. If this was an Apostolic Custom, why is it the Apostles left no Prayers or Writings on the subject?

Some authors allege that this practice had the approval of Jesus as well as His Apostles. If that be true, then WHY IS IT that there is no command from Jesus or His Apostles on the subject????

Remember this: IF Prayers for the Departed avail to help them beyond the veil, we are dealing with a subject of supreme importance, one affecting the plan of salvation, purification and justification.

There is a Command to Baptize, that touches Salvation, yet there is no command to Pray for the Departed—WHY???

There is a command to teach, to preach, to continue the celebration of the Lord's Supper. Are these things more important than future welfare of an immortal soul through endless eternity. Yet, there is no command to Pray for the Departed—WHY???

There is a command to "forsake not the assembling of yourselves together as the manner of some is". IF Prayers for the Departed avail to help them in the future life are not such Prayers of more importance than church-going, or at least of as much importance. Yet there is no command to Pray for the Departed—Why??? You are thinking men and women—WHY?????

There is even a command to give of your substance for the relief of the poor and for the support of the Ministry. YET there is no command to Pray for the Departed. WHY??

IF your prayers will aid those beyond the veil, then it is far more important to pray for them than to pay the preacher or to give alms to the poor.

The Scriptures tell us to pray for the sick

the sinners
the church-members the government ourselves

and for many other things we are told to pray, BUT there is not one single Scripture that tells us to Pray for the Departed. IF your prayers will aid them then this is a matter of vital importance affecting the well-being of an immortal soul through all eternity. WHY??? are the Scriptures so full of instructions about other things and so silent about this matter. WHY??? You are thinking men and women. Do you think the Scriptures would deal with less important matters and omit the more important??

Brethren, where anything is necessary for our salvation or welfare, for our souls or bodies, God has fully revealed it in His Holy Word. His Word contains a multitude of instructions for our direction and guidance in everything that is important, necessary or essential to our well-being, either in this life or the life to come.

The Scriptures are silent upon this subject for very good reason that God has made every provision for the welfare of those who are separated from us. And He has plainly indicated in His Holy Word that He does not want us to interfere with, talk with, the Departed, or in any way to attempt to pry into the secrets that lie beyond. We are to Trust Him, to believe His Promises, and to walk by faith, leaving those who have gone before in His hands, confident that they are safe in His everlasting arms.

(To be continued.)

Old Testament Accuracy

Certain Egyptian inscriptions on clay vases have been deciphered by Hunt Tethe and found to give a list of districts, towns and people in Palestine about 2000 B. C. Mr. Jack in the "Expository Times" explains that there is a correspondence here to certain peoples and towns of this early period mentioned in the Bible. Thus Ivyk is identified with Anak, a people whom various premature critics have held to be fabulous. These Theban texts oblige us to correct this view and to establish the Anakim in their proper place as an historical people. These texts speak of them as being ruled by three princes, that is, spread over three principal cities, each with its ruling prince. This accords with Joshua 11:21, where three cities are given, Hebron (Kirjath Arba), Debin (Kirjath-Lepher), and Anak. This new information accords also with Joshua 15:14, where the Anakim are mentioned as having three princes—Theshai, Ahiman and Talmai, descendants of Anak. The towns mentioned by Mut-Baal in the Tel-el-Amarna letters, announcing to Egypt the success of the Habiri in their initial movement from the South, Num. 21:1-3, and Judges 1:1-21, occur in the Anad District, Judges 1:16, directly between Seis and Hebron. Seven of the nine have already been located. Mut-Baal's letters then gives us the Canaanite version of the first advance of Israel from Kadesh-Barnea northward. So, when Abdi-Hiba, in the same tablets writes in alarm of the southern invasion as apparently dangerously near Jerusalem, he says: "Behold the land of Leir as far as the city of Gath-Carmel; its princess are wholly lost and hostility prevails against me." This recalls Deborah's song and Judges 1:10.—Sunday School Times.

War Novels; Their Influence For Good

By Dean Inge.

The return of Peace Sunday finds the friends of disarmament in a hopeful mood. A Labor Ministry may be able to take a step forward in the cause of peace, if only because they will be less reluctant than other parties to take the real risks which a policy of pacifism is likely to involve for the nation which adopts it. Such risks are sometimes justifiable when the welfare of humanity at large is at stake; and no one will grudge any success which the new Prime Minister may win at Geneva. The Unionist Party is really as anxious for peace as the Socialists; but I am afraid its members have been rather slack in supporting the League of Nations Union, the meetings of which are in many places attended mainly by Labor men and Quakers. The presence of General Dawes in London may be a very great help to the Prime Ministers. The Prayers of Churchmen will be heartily offered that through their efforts "the course of this world may henceforth be peaceably ordered". The risks are not to be denied. There are other nations in which there is at least a minority who cannot be entirely depended on.

* * * * *

The Germans seem to be quite sincere in abjuring their militarist traditions; their attitude has won the respect of their former enemies. But we have no right to count on their unanimity, for they are smarting under unjust and vindictive terms of peace, such as ought never to have been imposed upon them. A wiser, as well as a more Christian, policy would have been to show unexpected magnanimity at the end of 1918. We should have lost nothing by doing this. When a successful player has raked in a large stake, and then declares, "Now we will play for love for the rest of the evening", we cannot expect the loser to acquiesce with a very good grace.

There is, I believe, no war party in France. But the French are not good Europeans. With all their shining qualities, they are a hard and ungenerous nation, who are determined above all things to make their position secure; and national security can hardly be won without threatening the security of other nations.

* * * * *

Italy is having a bad attack of sacro egoismo. The Italians do not threaten us, but in their present temper they may be a menace to the tranquility of Central Europe. Nor can we view with entire satisfaction the state of opinion in the United States. No one who knows the Americans can doubt that there is a great deal of generosity and idealism in their nature. But the Great War left them unscathed, and taught them nothing. They are in the position of a man who has come gorged out of a business adventure which ruined all his partners. Many Americans still look on war as a possibly profitable speculation. Anatole France satirised this attitude with deadly pungency in the Isle of the Penquins. It would be easy to find in American books and newspapers cold-blooded discussions as to whether it would pay America to fight Japan, to capture the trade with China. I have before me a book called We Fight for Oil, in which the author weighs the pros and cons of picking a quarrel with Great Britain, in order to seize the enormously lucrative monopoly of the world's oil trade. Such cynicism as these discussions disclose is absolutely unknown in Europe; it is to be accounted for, I think, by the fact that America has not yet learned what modern war means. I am not suggesting that these writers represent the weight of public opinion in America; but I do not think that they can be safely disregarded.

How can we bring home to the minds of men and women, and especially of the young who were not yet grown up ten years ago, the unspeakable horror and wickedness of war? The men who fought in the Great War will not talk about it; the memories of it are too frightful; they try to forget what they saw in those dreadful years. There is a real danger that the rising generation may grow up in ignorance of the inferno which yawns beneath their feet. How can they best be taught?

* * * * *

The answer seems to be, by the war novels. It is strange that the most arresting of these have appeared so many years after the peace; but so it is. I can only mention a few of the most remarkable books. H. G. Wells' Mr. Britling Sees It Through was written during the war. It is a brilliant picture of the psychology of the English people before and during the struggle, and the author is an ardent believer in internationalism. Blunden's Undertones of War is extremely well written, and draws, we are told, a very true picture of life in the trenches. But the two most vivid and terrible books comes from Germany. The Case of Sergeant Grischa is a poignant tragedy, intended to exhibit in the blackest colors the hard, machine-like inhumanity of military discipline, the temper which was specially characteristic of Prussia under the monarchy, and which made itself odious by the execution of Nurse Cavell. After reading it, I felt that no more crushing indictment of war and militarism could be penned. But Erich Maria Remarque's All Quiet on the Western Front is still more horribly corrosive. I feel some hesitation in saying that all young people ought to read it, for it is full of such beastliness as I have seldom before seen in print. But the beastliness is all calculated, and it is only unsavory, not salacious. The writer wishes to brand upon our imaginations a picture of the most foul, revolting, and abominable conditions to which human beings can ever be exposed, and to make us feel, "This is the fate to which you are condemning your husbands, sons, and brothers, when you consent to a war."

* * * * *

I sincerely trust that these books, which are being read by millions in every part of the world, will sink into the hearts of men and women, and will strengthen their determination that never again shall such a bankruptcy of religion, humanity, and common sense be allowed to disgrace the world.—The Church of England Newspaper.

Martin Luther Tour

"Here I stand. I cannot do otherwise. God help me. Amen."—Luther, at the Diet of Worms, 1521.

Captain R. M. Stephens, of Exbury, Cooden Drive, Bexhill, has sent me particulars of the "Martin Luther" tour he is organizing for the first half of August in celebration of the four hundredth anniversary of the Diet of Spires. It was from hence that the term "Protestant" originated in connection with the Reformers, and it must be remembered that the Princes and deputies who signed the Protest of Spires were more concerned with witnessing "for" the truth, than with protesting against error. Besides a visit to this cathedral town, where a Sunday is to be spent, the tour will include most of the principal places associated with Luther. The program is excellently planned; and the tourist who has but a slight acquaintance with the history of the peasant monk, and supposes that two or three days will give ample time for seeing the places in which he lived or visited, will be surprised to find that the fortnight allotted to this tour will be none too long. The local reminiscences of Shakespeare and Milton, even put together, are not many, and only cluster round a metropolis, provincial town, and two or three country villages. But the cities, castles and homes where the reformer has left traces of his footsteps are scattered far and wide, and though guide books call attention to some fortress or tenement which gave him shelter, or some church in which he preached, there are many unrecorded sites and scenes over which the spell of his memory still lingers. And he occupies, too, an unparalleled place in the thoughts not only of his own people, but indeed of the whole of Christendom—no King can vie with him, and not one of our own Reformers has laid hold of the national mind and heart so entirely as this son of humble parentage.

It is strange that Martin's mother, who recollected perfectly the day and hour of his birth, should have been uncertain of the year, but the date usually assigned is 1483. His birthplace, too, has been challenged, but in Eisleben a house is shown which is accepted as the one in which he was born, and is one of the places included in the program. In the small city of Wittenburg, most closely associated with the Reformer's name, are Luther's and Melancthon's houses, and one of the most thrilling sights is to see the very doors on which the ninety-five theses were nailed, and to look on the site where the Papal bull was burned.

At Eisenach—the home of his mother's people—is the house which has become famous, not because of the noble and benevolent people who lived there, but because it befriended a poor singing boy, for now it is known as "The Luther House". We all remember the story of Frau Ursula Cotta; how attracted she was to a boy in the church choir, his voice was so sweet and his manner so reverent, and one night hearing singing outside her house she opened the door and discovered that one of the lads was the sweet-voiced chorister. Great lady though she was, she invited him into her own snug fireside and gave him food, and from that kindly action started a wonderful friendship which turned out to be a great blessing to both patroness and the humble boy who became so famous.

In the same neighborhood is the Wartburg, the most beautiful of Germany's many beautiful castles, set high up above enchanting country. The walk through the wooded lanes and up to the romantic castle on a moonlight night is one of almost indescribable loveliness. It was in the Wartburg, where he was confined for some months, that Luther, after seeing more and more into the depths of Popery and evils of Monasticism, ceased to be a monk.

Luther's marriage is still asailed, but we may be glad that he had the courage to outface convention and prejudice and to translate his principles into practice. There is no happier picture than that of Luther in his home. His bride was one of nine nuns who had escaped from the Convent at Nimtschen at Easter, 1523. Catherine von Bora had previously made an impression upon a Wittenburg student of noble family, but his devotion had cooled by the time his student days were over, much to Luther's disappointment, who hoped his friend would marry her. He then tried to bring off a match between her and another friend, but it transpired that the maiden was more ambitious—she would only marry either Amdorf or Luther himself! Finally, influenced by his father's continual importunity that he should marry, he made up his mind quickly and, the decision once made, was as quickly executed. Although Luther was much older than Catherine, and there was apparently no strong attachment at the beginning, the marriage turned out a very happy one. She was a devoted wife and mother, and her excellent administrative abilities enabled her gradually to make a comfortable home, and relieve her husband of financial anxiety, for she started housekeeping on very straitened means.

Those in charge of children should study Luther's ideas of Education. He was very clear on the duties of parents, and considered that they should give their children the best education attainable. He said that parents who excuse themselves upon the plea that they will teach their children at home, as a rule, make a great blunder, since this important work requires teachers with special gifts and training. Luther did almost as much to raise the standard of general popular education as he did for the religious life, and there could hardly be a more interesting way of reviving our acquaintance with him than a visit to the places and scenes in which he lived and worked.—Elorton, in The Record, London, England.

Lee's Birthplace to Become Shrine

Stratford Hall in Westmoreland County, birthplace of General Robert E. Lee, of Lighthorse Harry Lee and other Vir-ginians prominent in the history of the country, became a national shrine on July 19, when the tentative ownership was transferred from the members of William Alexander, Jr., Chapter, U. D. C., to the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation. At this time the first payment of $50,000 on account of the full purchase price of $240,000 was made.

Representatives of the William Alexander Chapter, U. D. C., of Greenwich, Conn., and of the nineteen states who have been instrumental in raising the money for the purchase were present, as was Major Giles B. Cooke, C. S. A., last surviving member of General Lee' staff, Governor Byrd and other notables.

The program was as follows:

Invocation by the Rev. Giles B. Cooke; address of welcome and the story of the origin of the plan to dedicate the birthplace of Robert E. Lee and his colonial forebears to the nation, by Mrs. Charles D. Lanier, chairman; financial statement, Mrs. Emerson Root Newell, acting chairman of finance; signing of the title, message, Charles E. Stuart.

Historical survey of Stratford Hall, (1) the patriots of old Westmoreland—The Sons of Thomas Lee, builder of Stratford, S. O. Bland, U. S. representative First District of Virginia; (2) Lighthorse Harry Lee, host of Stratford, H. C. Sears, of Virginia; (3) "General Lee speaks of his birthplace," reading from "Stratford on the Potomac", by Mrs. Cooper D. Winn.

Miss Ethel Armes, campaign director of the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation, Inc., gave a survey of the progress of the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation and presented plans for the future. Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson, chairman of the foundation, gave a message of greeting.

The following leaders in the campaign to raise the first payment, also spoke, Mrs. Horace Van Deventer, of Tennessee; Mrs. Thomas Floyd Smith, of Kentucky; Mrs. N. V. Livermore, of California; Mrs. Granville Valentine, of Richmond; Mrs. Marion Willis, of Fredericksburg, and Mrs. Emerson Root Newell, of Connecticut.

Special mention was made of the service of the counsel, William Fain, and of the members of William Alexander, Jr., Chapter, who have materially contributed in the work. Messages from other states organized under the foundation with special mention of the City of Fredericksburg, was made by Mrs. Ambrose C. Ford, director from Virginia. The Rt. Rev. St. George Tucker, D. D., pronounced the benediction.—News Leader.

Tne Late General Bramwell Booth

An Appreciation.

"The Queen and I have heard with great regret of the death of General Bramwell Booth, and we offer you our sincere sympathy in your bereavement. With his father he will always be gratefully remembered as the promoter of the widespread and benficent activities of the Salvation Army. George R. I." His Majesty telegraphed his appreciation of the work of Bramwell Booth, on reaching his seventieth birthday, and a few months ago conferred on him the title of "Companion of Honour"—an incident that brought joy to the old man weak with sickness and distrought with anxiety. He considered the honour a tribute to the Army of which he alone thought in the active and inactive days of his life.

Bramwell Booth was educated at the City of London School and at the age of eighteen he became assistant of his father, who in those days struggled with a small staff to do the work that would have killed a less strenuous and whole-hearted leader. In 1880, at the age of twenty-four, he became Chief of Staff, and the duty of giving practical effect to the ideals of his father became the passion of his life. He was specially devoted to the social side of the work of the Army, and to the duty of the organization which made a body of men and women, drawn for the most part from the working classes, the best disciplined and united body of Christian workers in the Protestant world. Behind the literature of the Army, its network of Citadels for religious propaganda, with centres for salving the submerged truth, Rescue Homes for Fallen Women, emigration schemes and other enterprises was the clear thinking and indomitable brain and mind of the Chief of Staff. He knew what he wanted and managed to find circumstances to his need. Every branch of the work was familiar to him, when he became General in 1912, and it was no surprise to those behind the scenes, although it was a revelation to others, that the Army, instead of going back, went forward. His deafness enabled him to concentrate without distraction, and the defect, shared by other great organizers, became a positive advantage. He was equally at home on the revival platform, the office stool and the business man's conference.

During the Great War the Army was called upon to help and its Ambulances and Huts are gratefully remembered by many thousands of our soldiers. It is indeed a striking proof of the power of consecrated zeal to find an institution once described as "Corybantic Christianity" today respected in the highest ecclesiastical and state circles. It is unnecessary to dwell on the controversy of the last year. It was bound to come. As the world has changed and autocracy has had to give place to democratic methods. Whatever may be the outcome of the change, all who know what Bramwell Booth has accomplished will give him a high place among the religious and philanthropic leaders of the last sixty years. He gave of his best to the service of God and God blessed his offering.—The Record, London, England.

Welfare of More Than Three Hundred Million People at Stake

Lord Irwin has left India for England, where he will consult the Government on the future of India. Stating thus boldly; it may seem that the Viceroy has temporarily ceased to govern, in order that under a new Government fresh administrative methods may be devised. Much more is at stake, for the Simon Commission will report during his stay, and he will be engaged in advising what best may be done to meet the conflicting claims of races and creeds, of those who have representation and those who have no representation, and of the Native Princes who are outside the normal rule of the Indian Government. The task is colossal, and the welfare of more than three hundred million people is at stake. We are thankful that the Viceroy is a man of wide sympathies, high personal character, and great experience, for the problem needs something more than political acumen and a nice balancing of probabilities. Whatever the changes may be they cannot fail to affect the environment in which missionary work is maintained, and we ask for the prayers of all who are interested in the growing spread of the Kingdom of God, in a land where the conflict between Christianity and Secularism is more acute than in any other great Mission Field.—The Record.

Starving China

Stressing the appalling plight of China's starving millions and voicing an appeal for immediate help, the Rev. Stephen C. Peabody of the American Board Mission in Shensi Province, China, has sent a vivid picture of famine conditions to Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, National Chairman of China Famine Relief, U. S. A., with headquarters at 205 East Forty-Second Street, New York City.

Mr. Peabody says in part:

"There has been no rain to speak of for over a year. There are no railroads—mule and camel transportation is growing increasingly difficult because of the difficulty in securing fodder. In many regions all of the animals have been killed for food. Winter plantings of grain are witherings without even heading out. Whole families are committing suicide, due to their utter helplessness. Others roam as refugees, vainly hoping that any other little place will be better than the place where they are. Little daughters are being sold.

"During the coming months, this can only get worse. I was in the Near East Relief at Samsoun, Turkey, for a year, and there was nothing there of greater suffering or intensity even during the worst periods. Here the areas affected are vastly greater and the numbers of people in this extreme condition many times more numerous. We need help, and we need it speedily!

"I look into the hunger-pinched faces of these people; little children dressed in only an abbreviated shirt that shrunk in the wash it never got till it is little more than a collar, innocent sufferers and awfully appealing little tikes; mothers with tragedy and love of their little brood cut deeply into their faces; men, mere skeletons of their former selves, patiently and painfully nursing their withering crops on hillsides that no American farmer would bother to cultivate. No rain, and still no rain. They look at me and stretch out their hands to me.

"We've got to go through with this thing and go through with it in a large Christian way. Do help us!"

Contributions for the relief of the famine sufferers are being received and forwarded to China with all possible dispatch by James A. Thomas, Treasurer, China Famine Relief, 205 East Forty-second Street, New York City.

FAVORITE SCRIPTURE VERSES

(In this space each week will appear a favorite passage of Scripture as sent in by a different reader. Every one is, therefore, invited to send us their favorite verse. It is suggested that all who can, join with the rest of us in committing to memory the verse which so appears here each week, including its location in the Holy Book; and in due time your memory chest will be laden with choice eternal treasures, indeed. "Thy word have I hid in my heart, that I might not sin against thee," Ps. 119:11.)

This week the following verse was submitted by L. P. Adamson, Pensacola, Florida:

> By humility and the fear of the Lord are riches and Honor and Life (Prov. 22:4).

Who will send one from the far-away places as well as very near us?

Book Reviews

HE HEALED THEM ALL: By Georgiana Home. The Nazarene Press, Mountain Lakes, New Jersey.

A book on spiritual healing, or rather an account of some of Our Lord's miracles of healing. There is very little added material and the book is mainly an attempt to tell the stories of the healings. With all due respect to the faith of the authoress, we believe that more could be gained by a direct study of the New Testament accounts, as she has added very little to what is told us there.

Frank Cox.

THE CERTAINTY OF GOD: By the Rev. J. G. Gilkey, D. D. Cloth. Pp. 220. Price, $1.75. Published by the Macmillan Company, 60 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

The author avows his purpose to interpret liberal Christianity to the thoughtful people of our time. In doing this, he must abandon the revelation of God as found in the Scriptures and resolve the riddle by speculative philosophy.

And he has done it well. Every page has a winsome appeal. The challenge is particularly strong in the chapters, "Do We Really Know There is a God?" "Can We Reconcile the Love of God and the World's Pain?" "How Does God Speak to Us?" "Does God Have a Purpose for Individuals?" and "How Much Can God do to Help Us?"

As we recall Prof. Leuba's dictim, "And God, whether the God of Mahomet, the Jehovah of the Jews, or the Christ of Christianity, can be but a subjective reality", and consider the effect of college training upon Harry Emerson Fosdick, who, while a student, wrote his mother that he was "going to sweep God out of the universe", we must cordially allow that this contribution to the all-absorbing problem will bear heavily with those who have been infected with skepticism.

The book is punctuated with sundry practical references and illustrations, which relieve it of the possible tedium of argumentation, though the method is far from being severely dialectic. We are stimulated and warmed as we read "God is forever making advances towards us—through beauty, through the powers working for right, through the strength and kindness constantly emerging within our heart, and through secret inner experiences we can never reveal"; "We believe that God is forever striving to use us to help other people." And our commendation is evoked as he clearly and logically establishes the truth that God, to be God, in the light of the order of the universe; the ever-appealing approach that God makes to the heart of man, calling for his love trust and loyalty, must be a Person, not a Principle. So much in our day goes for Christianity which is but the pagan idea of a Force, devoid of mind, will or affection. Hence this book, written by a liberal, for liberals, squarely meets the burning question.

But with the Word of God in our hands and hearts, with the incontrovertible testimony born of innumerable evidences of our dear Father's care, the rest of us need not the clarifying vision of speculative philosophy, save as it confirms to us the already established witness of its vital verity. We do find God in Nature, in humanity, in the devious paths of advancing civilization; and every student of the Word of God will hail such an adjunct to his Christian faith. But we did not, we do not now, seek God by those means. We know Whom we have believed, through the Cross and all that flows from Calvary's tragedy. There, "the tender mercy of our God visited us" with redemption and life. From Him who came to reveal the Father, to meet our desperate need, who rose from the dead to prove His authority "over all flesh" there now comes to us His Holy Spirit that we may "know the things that are freely given us of God" (1 Cor. 2:12).

We do not have to excuse God in the unfathomable mystery of the world's pain. What our author cannot define, in the nature of the case as he treats it, we have—the sense that there is a compensation for every trial, a vindication of every wrong, the over-balancing of every pang, the restoration of every loss. This, we know, not by subtle argument. We look not at the things that are seen, but at those which are not seen; for "our light affliction which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory" (2 Cor. 4:16-18).

So we may commend the book to those who can go only as far as the writer is able to take them. We more seriously esteem the Book that takes the searching soul all the way into the very heart of God.

Kenneth Mackenzie.

INTOLERANCE.

Across the way my neighbor's windows shine;
His roof-tree shields him from the storms that frown;
He toiled and saved to build it, staunch and brown;
And though my neighbor's house is not like mine,
I would not pull it down!

With patient care my neighbor, too, had built
A house of faith, wherein his soul might stay,
A haven from the winds that sweep life's way.
It differed from my own—I felt no guilt—
I burned it yesterday.

—Molly Anderson Haley.

CARITAS.

He who hath sinned can feel another's shame;
The cripple brings true comfort to the lame;
Who hath known torment comprehendeth fears
Whose eyes are tear-stained will dry others' tears.
Whose heart is broken hath a gentleness
That prideful rectitude can never guess.
And that is why, from rain and wind and storm,
God's hurt things creep together to be warm.

—Katherine Burton.

Letters to the Editor

In this Department the Editor will at all times welcome communications expressing opinions on the various topics which are engaging the attention of the Church. But the Editor will not hold himself responsible for such opinions.

No "Letters to the Editor" will appear in our columns except those coming to us signed by writer.

THE VANDERBILT SCHOOL FOR RURAL PASTORS.

Mr. Editor:

The following communication recently appeared in The Western Recorder, Louisville, Kentucky, which is perhaps the leading Southern Baptist journal. Its editor is Dr. Victor I. Masters.

My Dear Dr. Masters:

I have just returned from the School of Religion held at Vanderbilt University, and I must confess that it was about as —— as anything I have seen in a life time. But I want to be fair to the School and say that there were some good things that a rural minister must be able to use, for which I am thinkful.

But the whole emphasis was placed upon social religion. Never did I hear the blood of Jesus Christ mentioned all the time I was there. All the references to Him were to the effect that He was a good man along with Lincoln, Jackson, Grant and Lee. Then there was the plea for Church union.

And they realized that the greatest snag they had struck and the greatest snag that they will strike was in the Baptist denomination. Every time the instructor would mention Church union he would look directly at the Baptist brethren in the class and from them he would always find opposition. By the way, the teacher happened to be secretary to Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, and of course one did not have to debate as to where he stood. The man became so raw that I could refrain no longer and I felt compelled to make this statement, which I did before the class:

"I want to say for myself—and I am also sure that I speak for my denomination—that history will prove that Southern Baptists have always stood for a whole gospel. We are not willing and will never be willing to cooperate with any cult or any denomination, that does not accept the Virgin Birth, and Atonement, and the Supernatural in Religion. In fact, we will not cooperate with any one who proposes to accept the things that suit him in the Bible and to discard the balance.

G. C. Billups.

New Liberty, Ky.

Mr. Editor:

I am glad to know that the Southern Churchman makes material progress. It is a strong, influential force in the defense of "the faith once for all delivered to the saints", and the present-day perils call for such an able and sound periodical.

With sentiments of high esteem,

W. A. Candler.

Mr. Editor:

Since reading the grand editorials in the Southern Churchman, and the firm stand your paper has taken, I wanted you to have this sermon. The Rev. Mr. Cansdale was brought up a Roman Catholic, but is now a Presbyterian minister.

If you can, I should like so much for you to publish it, for it seems to, in a measure, combat some of the tenets of modernists.

I have been a reader of the Southern Churchman ever since I could remember. I read it now with much interest, and feel that under its present management, it is more far-reaching for good than it ever was. As I see it week by week giving "no uncertain sound" in regard to the faith once delivered to the saints, I am thankful that God has raised up such men to so fearlessly and faithfully defend the faith. May God bless you.

Annie L. Smith.

Stoneville, North Carolina.

Church Intelligence

Historic Old St. Peter's Church, Scene of Worship for Over Two Centuries.

Historic old St. Peter's Church in New Kent County, was the scene of an all-day service Sunday, July 21, when the annual meeting of the St. Peter's Church Restoration Association was held. The Rev. G. MacLaren Brydon, D. D., of Richmond, Secretary of the Association, preached at the eleven o'clock service and there was an afternoon service at three o'clock, with a sermon by the Rev. Churchill J. Gibson, D. D., rector of St. James' Church, Richmond, and music by the choir of St. James. The business meeting of the Association was held at twelve-fifteen o'clock, immediately following the morning service.

A picnic dinner was served in the churchyard at one-thirty o'clock.

St. Peter's Church, New Kent County, Virginia.

St. Peter 's is one of the oldest churches in Virginia, having been erected in 1703, and its history is indissolubly linked with the most interesting events of bygone days in the old Commonwealth. It was here that George Washington married Martha Custis in 1759. It was here that some of Virginia's most prominent families worshipped from colonial times to the dark days of the Civil War, when it fell into the hands of Federal soldiers, who used it for a stable and otherwise defaced it.

St. Peter's Parish was founded in 1684, and the present church was built from the spring of 1701 to July, 1703, at a cost of 146,000 pounds of tobacco, raised by the parish, according to the old records. There is a very complete and interesting vestry book and register, dating from 1684 to 1857. These have been published by the Colonial Dames. The first mention made of the present St. Peter's is in the record of the vestry meeting, August 13, 1700, when the building of the new church was authorized.

In its first appearance it was a plain, rectangular brick structure sixty feet long by twenty-four feet wide. In 1719 a wall of brick was built around the churchyard, in 1722 a belfry was erected at the west end of the church, and in 1740 a steeple, vestry room and porch were added, all paid for with tobacco. Since then nothing has been done to change the outward appearance of the church.

In the years just preceding the Civil War a flourishing and prosperous congregation worshipped at the old church, and after the war, "despite their poverty and general discouragement," they lovingly repaired their church, desecrated and defaced by the Union soldiers; and in 1872 it had been restored, as nearly as possible to its former state.

For two hunderd and twenty-six years, this month, services have been held, more or less regularly in St. Peter's. In July, 1922, friends of the old church, from Richmond and New Kent, met and formed the St. Peter's Church Restoration Association for the purpose of caring for the church and improving the grounds and the road leading to the church, as well as aiding in the establishment of a church organization and the providing of regular services. David L. Pulliam, of Richmond, was elected president of the Association.—Richmond Times Dispatch.

Fore.

In golf language this means "Beware!" "Look out!"

It appears at the head of our July 1 statement to remind us to be watchful lest the summer season with its alluring trout streams, tennis courts, golf courses, automobile trips and vacations and its sunburn and mosquitoes, drive from our minds all remembrance that throughout this summer season the Church is at work.

In the brief summer warmth of Alaska and the winter days of Southern Brazil our emissaries are ever busy doing the work that is ours as well as theirs. While we are taking it easy don't let us forget to send the money for their support.

July 1 finds us $74,220 behind last year, a loss of $23,347 in June. Some dioceses are becoming weary of the effort to stay in the 100 per cent column. The record of 100 per cent dioceses as of July 1 is as follows:

1927	44
1928	34
1929	26

Not so god!

A happy summer to you all,

Faithfully,

Lewis B. Franklin,
Treasurer.

Texas-Mexico Exchange.

The Texas Legislature has passed a bill, which the Governor has signed, creating the E. D. Farmer International Scholarship Fund. By the terms of the bill, the Regents of the University of Texas are made trustees of the fund, whose purpose is to provide exchange scholarship, so that Mexican students may study in the University of Texas, and American students in the National University in Mexico. It is hoped that eventually the fund will grow to sufficient size to permit an exchange of professors. Bishop Creighton and Dr. H. Y. Benedict, president of the University of Texas, have been appointed a committee to select beneficiaries of the Scholarship Fund in Mexico and the United States.

Mexico City.

There was a splendid service in Christ Church Cathedral, Mexico City, on July 7, on the same day as the service in Westminster Abbey, to give thanks for King George's recovery. The Cathedral was crowded with a congregation which included representatives from the embassies and legations of seventeen nations. Dean Golden-Howes officiated; Bishop Creighton preached. The leading newspaper gave five columns to a spirited personal article written by an Englishman describing the service, quoting much of the Bishop's sermon, and referring to "his usual masterly style".

Anvik, Alaska.

Bishop Rowe, writing from Anvik on June 13, informs the Department of Missions that the Rev. Dr. John W. Chapman and Mrs. Chapman will remain in Anvik during the winter of 1929-30.

The Bishop is greatly troubled about the necessity for a new dormitory at Anvik to cost approximately $18,000, while he has on hand only $6,000. He says: "We shall go ahead with a foundation, a basement of concrete, and when the funds run out, stop. But this is discouraging. A new building before another winter is imperative. There are now twenty-eight children. Some provision should be made to care for any tubercular sick children, so as to separate them from the healthy ones."

Bishop Rowe reports every one well at Anvik and eagerly awaiting the run of salmon that had not yet begun. After leaving Anvik, he expected to visit Tanana and then go on to St. John's in the Wilderness, where a new mission house is to be built to replace the original log house erected twenty-two years ago.

Szechuan, China.

According to a cable, received from Bishop Roots in Chengtu, two more Chinese bishops were consecrated in June, Archdeacon Ku Has-lin and the Rev. T. C. Soong, to be assistant bishops of that most interesting but unpronounceable diocese, Szechuan, or Western China. "Szechuan," which is also the name of the province, means, "Four Streams", which flow into the Yangtse. The English bishop is the Rt. Rev. H. W. Mowll. The province covers about 166,000 square miles, with a population variously estimated at forty to seventy million, an easy leeway. The American mission stations of Shasi and Ichang seem far inland to us, but this remote diocese begins far beyond them. It begins with the mountain range through which the Yangtse cuts its way in world-famous gorges, and extends westward through mountainous country to the borders of Tibet and Wokonor.

In 1922, the latest year for which figures are available, there were reported twenty-five mission stations and one hundred and twenty out-stations, nearly 4,000 communicants, 2,500 catechumens and about 10,000 more "hearers"; a foreign staff of forty men and fifty women, seven Chinese clergy and many Chinese lay workers. A diocesan training school and a hostel for students at Chentu, the capital, were a part of the work.

From the Dominican Republic, the Church School at Puerto Plata, sends its Easter offering of thirty dollars, gold, the second offering sent from there within three months, for the general work of the Church.

China.

Writing on June 10, Bishops Graves reports that "On May 25 I ordained Mr. Ni Nen-ch'en to the diaconate, and the Rev. Ma Tao-yuan to the priesthood in St. John's Pro-Cathedral. Mr. Ma will be serving at Nsiakwan and Mr. Ni will continue in his work in Tsao-ka-tu. On Sunday I confirmed thirty-two at St. Paul's, Shanghai, which brings the number up to two hundred and eighty-two."

T. W. W.

"The World Mission of Christianity"—G. F. S. Study for Coming Winter.

Africa, as the mission study for this past year, has proved to be a fascinating and thrilling country to study. The branches of the Girls' Friendly Society have already sent to the national office $4,169.22—just $830.78 less than the pledge of $1,000,000 for the woman's division of St. Mark's Hospital, Cape Palmas, Liberia. The G. F. S. will continue this as the money object until the goal is reached, when a new money object will be selected.

Just as Africa has been the mission study for all Protestant churches for 1928-1929, so the Episcopal Church, along with the other churches, has chosen a common mission study for the coming winter; it is "The World Mission of Christianity." Because this is a huge subject, The Girls' Friendly Society is choosing "Our World at Work", the section or part of this larger subject which has to do with "field, factor and workshop."

This is the same subject as that chosen by the Department of Religious Education for the Lenten study. The G. F. S., appreciating this opportunity to cooperate with the Department of Religious Education, plans to publish material such as discussion questions, games, and plays, which will be supplementary to the stories, posters, and worship services put out by this department. This means that a G. F. S. branch will be able to join with the parish church school in this study of world friendship. At their weekly meetings the branch will carry on with the material given to the children in church.

This material, prepared by the Department of Religious Education, is for children. The G. F. S. will, therefore, publish, along with the supplements for candidates (children from five to twelve), program suggestions for teen age and older girls on this same topic.

All of these suggestions for the study of "Our World at Work" will first be published in The Record, the magazine of the society; reprints may be secured from the national office.

WASHINGTON.

Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman, D. D., Bishop.

St. John's Church, Olney, Md., through its Ladies Guild, made a delightful contribution to the happiness of the guests of the Episcopal Church Home on Friday, July 19, by entertaining them at luncheon at Cedarstone, the country home of Mrs. Catherine Alvord. Situated on the Brookville road, it is one of the most beautiful homes in Maryland, set in spacious grounds and containing many beautiful flowers, shrubs and trees. The rector of the church, the Rev. Phillips Dales, arranged for the transportation of the ladies to and from the Home, and all will count it an outstanding event in the life of the Home. Mrs. William Channing Johnson, of Epiphany Church is Chairman of the Board of the Home and is responsible for the many delightful affairs which the guests of the home enjoy.

The joint services of St. John's Church and Christ Church, Georgetown, will begin with the last Sunday in July and continue through the first Sunday in September. The minister-in-charge will be the Rev. Edwin B. Niver, D. D., who will minister to the needs of both parishes and preach the sermons at all services. Each Sunday, the early celebration will be at one church and the wide mission of the whole Church. In versing the order on alternate Sundays. The Rev. E. Pinkney Wroth, rector of Christ Church and the Rev. F. Bland Tucker, rector of St. John's Church, will take their vacations during this period. The address of Dr. Niver will be 1607 Thirty-First Street, N. W.

M. M. W.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Rt. Rev. J. B. Cheshire, D. D., Bishop.
Rt. Rev. E. A. Penick, D. D., Coadjutor.
Rt Rev. H. B. Delaney, D. D., Suffragan

Parish News Items.

Emmanuel Church, Warrenton, has recently had one of the most inspiring and helpful services rendered, when under the direction of Mrs. C. E. Finch, a devoted Churchwoman of unusual talent and power, a pageant entitled, "Go Ye", was presented one Sunday night and repeated, by request the following week, on account of so many being unable to gain access to the building. One week later the pageant was taken to South Hill, Va., where it met with unqualified and enthusiastic success. It is impossible to describe the beauty and reverence of the spiritual rendition of this sacred pageant, which portrays most effectively and convincingly the world-wide mission o fthe whole Church. In writing this pageant, Mrs. Finch achieved a remarkable degree of truthful artistry and in proportion to the number of places in which this is shown, will it be valuable to the Church, as a stimulating message to Christian service. It has already been given in Chicago, New York and other important centres. Warrenton was indeed fortunate in having the privilege of this pageant and of the presence of Mrs. Finch in training those who so splendidly took their parts. Many urgent requests have been made for her return to this and other neighboring dioceses to give other parishes the good Warrenton enjoyed.

The new parish house of Emmanuel Parish was formally opened and dedicated on Tuesday, July 9, by the Rt. Rev. E. A. Penick, D. D. The following clergymen were seated with him on the stage, Dr. Barber and Mr. Cox, of Raleigh; Mr. Hughes of Henderson, who brought greetings from the adjoining parishes, and Mr. Christian, of South Hill, Va. The rector, the Rev. B. N. de Foe Wagner, presided and a literary and musical program was given, the first number of which was a piano selection by Mrs. H. B. Arrington, in her ninetieth year. After that part of the program a motion picture comedy was thrown on the screen and the guests were invited to make an inspection of the new building. This hall is the gift of Mr. W. K. Williams, of Grand Rapids, and Warrenton, in memory of his father and mother, and is fully equipped for use, completing an up-to-date plant, with the recently rebuilt church and new rectory, all in architectural harmony. The church property has undergone a transformation during the past two years.

B. N. De F. W.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

Rt. Rev. Albert S. Thomas, Bishop.

Convocation.

The forty-fifth annual convocation of the Missionary District of South Dakota met in Sioux Falls June 16-19. The clergy and delegates lived together in All Saints' School. The opening service on Sunday morning was held in the Cathedral, the Rev. Chauncey E. Snowden, Executive Secretary of the Field Department of the National Council, preaching the sermon. At this time the two banners for the Sunday-school offering were presented. The Bishop's Banner for the largest per capita offering was won by Christ Church School, Yankton, with an average of $3.55. A delegation from the school was present to receive it. The second banner, for the largest increase in offerings, went to the school of the Church of the Good Samaritan, Parker. The first business session of convocation was in the Music Studio of All Saints' School Sunday afternoon, when the Bishops' annual addresses were delivered, followed by an address by the Rev. Dr. Paton..

Sessions of convocation and of the Church Service League were held on Monday morning, being given to the transactions of business and the afternoon to group conferences on important problems. In the evening a convocation dinner was held in the ballroom

(Continued on page 23.)

Family Department

JULY.

1. Monday.
4 Thursday.
7. Sixth Sunday after Trinity.
14. Seventh Sunday after Trinity.
21. Eighth Sunday after Trinity.
25. Thursday. S. James
28 Ninth Sunday after Trinity
31. Wednesday.

COLLECT FOR NINTH SUNDAY AFTER TRINITY.

Grant to us, Lord, we beseech Thee, the spirit to think and do always such things as are right, that we, who cannot do anything that is good without Thee, may by Thee be enabled to live according to Thy will; through Jesus Christ Our Lord. Amen.

LOST SINGERS.

On some calm sacred night each year
I kneel within the nave of eventide,
And wait for music I can never hear
Because the singers died.

I wish that Alan Seeger could arise,
Transcendent over sorrow after strife,
And sing with longing in his soldier eyes:
"I have a rendezvous with life!"

I wish that John McCrae could come from death
And chant in mellow challenging rondeu—
Singing with dawn and sunset in each breath:
"Take up our friendship with the foe!"

Time new trees to battle-woods will bring,
But Kilmer God Himself cannot restore;—
I vainly wish that Rupert Brooke could sing
Great love of life once more.

I wonder what becomes of golden notes
That should be calling like cathedral bells—
Choked back in exquisite impassioned throats,
By gas and shells!
—Earl Bigelow Brown in the Chronicle.

The Power and the Witness.

Although in no previous generation has there been as clear and steady light for the vision of God as there is today, most of us through the blunting of our spiritual faculties by our absorption in material affairs, have entered upon a period of spiritual twilight. It is not that we are in utter darkness: if we were we might more readily perceive that we are going in the wrong direction, but the light which falls upon us is dim and grey, and it is only by difficult straining that our eyes can penetrate the gloom and see things in their right proportion. Flashes of brilliant light from prophetic minds occasionally light up the semi-darkness, but when this happens most of us are unmoved, and indifferent, and prefer to conceal ourselves, partially at least, within the dullness of the twilight. So it comes to pass that the words which were spoken many years ago are specially applicable to us, that "while many more than formerly know God a little, fewer know Him very much."

If we are to obey our Lord's command to go into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature we must first become Christian in an utter abandonment of ourselves to Jesus. In spite of our efforts to make Christianity an easy Gospel, the truth is that it is no easy thing to be a follower of Jesus of Nazareth. Only strong, red-blooded men and women can be His disciples, and most of us are too weak. We do not dare to live as Jesus taught His disciples to live. We have an uneasy feeling that it will make too great a change in the way we want to live; it will do away with all our selfish attitudes, all our self-seeking at the expense of others, all our injustices to our employees or to our employers, to our relatives, to our friends, to foreigners and to our own countrymen. We are willing to go a little way towards Jesus but we hesitate about going all the way. We do not feel equal to it.

No wonder, then, that we lack the spiritual power to be victoriously happy day by day, even when we have to give up some of the things to which we cling so pathetically now. No wonder either that we are unable to win others to Jesus through the adventurous darings of our surrender to Him. As our Lord's first disciples could not begin their world ministry until after Pentecost, so the need of our day is for a fresh outpouring of the Holy Spirit. "Ye shall receive power," said Jesus, "after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you; and ye shall be witnesses to me, both in Jerusalem and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth." Since we have not opened our hearts to full tide of the Holy Spirit, we do not possess power to become adventurers for Jesus.

. . . . .

True, the Christian is confronted with the difficulty of living in two worlds at once, the world of ideals and the world of practical affairs, the realm of eternity and the realm of time. In olden days hermits and monks tried to solve the difficulty by withdrawing from the realm of time and concentrating upon the salvation of their souls in solitude, thereby taking into their retreats the spirit of selfish concern which is the very heart of the worldly attitude. In our day the tendency is to be indifferent to the realm of eternity and to live almost exclusively in the realm of time, allowing ourselves to be dominated by worldly concerns. But to be a Christian one must live in both worlds at once. The Christian is not to be taken out of the world, but he is to be preserved from the evil in the world, and through the spiritual power which comes to him from his companionship with God he is to serve not God only but mankind as well. In his home city among those who know him best, among his own countrymen in neighboring cities, and among strangers in the uttermost parts of the earth he is to be a witness to God and an upholder of the reality and of the paramount importance of the spiritual life.

But although we must live in the world of time and sometimes carry heavy responsibilities in it, if we are to recover the poise and balance of soul which will enable us to make the world of time serve the world of eternity we must plan daily periods of leisure which we shall spend in contemplation and adoration of God. We lack power because we have not been practicing the companionship of God. Our private prayers, when we say them, are so hurried and so occupied with the endeavor to win the support of God to our personal aims that we have lost all sense of awe, which is a proof that we have lost all true sense of God. Yet until we have within us the consciously felt presence of the Holy Spirit, God's gift to those who spend much time with Him in regular, reverent converse, we shall make little advancement in the Christian life, and the Church shall make little advancement in extending the Kingdom of God. Only by the conversion of the individual, only by the deepening of his spiritual life, only by complete absorption in one compelling purpose, the discovery and the service of God, will the Church through the outpouring of the Holy Spirit receive power to be God's witness unto the ends of the earth.—Canadian Churchman.

The Praying Highland Soldier.

The late Hugh Miller, in one of his sketches, relates an account of a Scotch Highlander, who served in the first disastrous war with the American colonies, and who was brought before the commanding officer one evening charged with the capital offence of being in communication with the enemy. The charge could not well have been preferred at a more dangerous time. Only a few weeks had elapsed since the execution of Major Andre, and the indignation of the British, exasperated almost to madness by this event, had not yet cooled down. There was, however, no direct proof against the Highlander. He had been seen in the gray of the twilight stealing out from a clump of underwood that bordered on the forests which at that period covered the greater part of the United Provinces, and which, in the immediate neighborhood of the British, swarmed with the troops of Washington. All the rest was mere inference and conjecture. The poor man's defense was summed up in a very few words. He had stolen away from his fellows, he said, to spend an hour or two in secret prayer.

"Have you been in the habit of spending hours in secret prayer?" sternly asked the officer, himself a Scotchman.

The Highlander replied in the affirmative.

"Then," said the officer, drawing out his watch, "never in all your life had you more need for prayer than now; kneel down, sir, and pray aloud, that we may hear you."

The Highlander, in the expectation of instant death, knelt down. His prayer was that of one long acquainted with the appropriate language in which the Christian addresses his God. It breathed an imminent peril, and earnestly implored the divine interposition in the threatening danger—the help of Him who in times of extremity is strong to deliver. It exhibited, in short a man who was thoroughly conversant with the scheme of redemption and fully impressed with the necessity of personal interest in the advantages it secures, had made the business of supplication the work of many a solitary hour, and in consequence acquired much fluency in expressing all his various wants as they occurred, and his thoughts and wishes as they arose.

"You may go, sir," said the officer, when he had concluded; "you have not, I dare-say, been in correspondence with the enemy tonight."

"His statement," he continued, addressing himself to the officers, "is undoubtedly correct. No one could have prayed so without a long apprenticeship; fellows who never attend a drill always get on ill at review."—Common People.

For The Southern Churchman.

DE REVEREND SAYIN' DE GRACE.

Floride Lee Calhoun.

"De Reverend's comin' to suppah,"
Our Mammy would say wid a laff,
"Now all ob you chillens go jump in de crick
Kaze I ain't time to gib you a baff.

An' mine, w'en you sets at de table
Put you' hands up in front ob yo' face,
An' try to be quiet an' don't raise no riot
W'ile de Reverend's sayin' de grace."

An' den what a hustle an' bustle,
An' beatin' up aigs fo' de cake,
An' guinea hen pie, an' chicken to fry,
An' candied potatoes to bake,

An' den, w'en de company's ready,
An' eb'ry one's sot in dey place—
W'y she like to ob die ef you batted yo' eye
W'ile de Reverend's sayin' de grace!

I 'bin to de wah wid de Army,
In France I has etten my fill,
In Germany too w'en I useter feel blue
I has et enuc vittles to kill,

But all ob deir high season' cookin'
Hit ain't got no stren' an' no tas'e,
An' I nebber has heard sich a comfortin' word
As de Reverind sayin' de grace!

The Blessing of Poverty.

Prof. William James, the famous philosopher, once declared that "the prevalent fear of poverty among the educated classes is the worst moral disease from which our civilization suffers." His sentences in this connection have iron in them. He says: "We have grown literally afraid to be poor. We have lost the power of even imagining what the ancient idealization of poverty could have meant: the liberation from material attachments, the unbribed soul, the manlier indifference, the paying our way by what we are, or do, and not by what we have—the more athletic trim, in short, the moral fighting shape."

This reminds us of the great men of the Bible, who were all poor men. Our Lord Himself had no place to lay His head. He and His disciples were poor, "poor, yet making many rich." Paul earned his way by making tents. The Bible from end to end shines with glorified poverty.

And yet, as Prof. James says, most of us are terribly afraid to be poor. We forget that choice and august company to which poverty, nobly born, admits us. Ignoble poverty, the poverty of sloth, is of course a shameful thing; but there is, as Isaiah says, a poverty which rejoices in the Holy One of Israel.—Christian Sun.

"He Said It."

A story of the first Napoelon, who was one day reviewing his army, and was in danger of being hurled from his horse, when a young private leaped from the ranks, and checked the animal. "Thank you, captain," said the emperor. "Of what regiment, sire?" inquired the soldier with a smile. "Of my guards," answered his master, who dashed down the lines. The private laid his gun upon the ground, and proceeded to join a group of staff officers. "What is this insolent fellow doing here?" remarked one of them. "This insolent fellow," was the reply, "is a captain of the guards." "You rascal," thundered the officer, "you are crazy; why do you put on such airs?" The young soldier, pointing to the distant emperor, quietly responded, "He said it." "I beg your pardon, captain," the officer politely rejoined, "I was not aware of your promotion."

The private did not feel that he was a captain. He did not wear the epaulettes nor sword of a captain, nor did a star flash upon his breast, but for all that he knew that he was a captain, because the emperor said it. So let the believer turn to the evil within him, and to the world that tempts him, and to the devil that assails him, and to every accuser, with the triumphant answer, as he looks to Christ his Saviour, "He said it."—Selected.

OUR HOME.

Our home's a very pleasant place
For any one to be,
And our sweet mother's smiling face
Is best of all to me.

When we come in from school to play,
Our mother's always there,
And she has such a pleasant way
To show her love and care.

She'll have a lunch set out somewhere
For all of us to eat.
We're always "hungry as a bear"
And ready for a treat.

And when our father's steps we hear,
We're all so glad and gay
And tell him things he likes to hear
Of what we've done all day.

However far away you go,
It's fine to have a home,
Where your good "folks" you love and know
Are glad to see you come.
—Frances McKinnon Morton, in The Christian Advocate.

The Man Who Made a Universe.

An incident is related of an eminent astronomer which shows how men, in the name of reason, are guilty often of the most irrational conduct.

The great scientists had a friend who strenuously denied the existence and power of God. The astronomer had with much care constructed a concave in miniature, upon which he represented all the planets and stars in their places, together with their evolutions and courses. One day this friend came to see him, and noticing the ingenious piece of work asked, "Who made that?"

"Who made it?" repeated the astronomer. "Why, nobody; it came by chance."

"Nonsense!" said his friend. "Really, who made it?"

"Nobody," came the reply again. "It came by chance, I tell you."

"Don't be absurd," was now the response in irritation. "Some one must have made it. Why don't you tell me who it was?"

Then the astronomer, turning to his friend, said: "This poor miniature which I have made to represent what God has created in the universe you say cannot have arisen from an irresponsible cause; and yet you tell me that the wonderful and mighty works around and above us are a mere fortuitous combination of atoms. How do you explain your inconsistency?"—Bishop Fiske, in The Faith by Which We Live.

Why Don't We Help?

I sat at my window one cold winter day, watching a flock of tiny brown birds hunting their dinner—or very likely it was breakfast—for food was pretty scare then.

The little fellows flew from one tall weed to another, from one bush to another, hunting for some tiny seed or dry red berry that might have been left from some former breakfasts.

Sometimes a berry was found, dropped in the snow, and it was greedily picked up, and I shivered as I thought of the icy morsel going down the little warm throats. My own breakfast had been warm, still I grumbled a bit because the coffee was not quite hot enough. But the tiny feathered luncher never grumbled—just twittered his thanks for every seed, every berry found.

At last there seemed to be not a seed or berry left, and away they all flew to see what could be found elsewhere. Such a scanty meal divided among so many was not very satisfying, you know.

I felt a throb of pity as I watched them in their search, then something said to me, "Why didn't you help them, instead of wasting your time pitying them? Why didn't you?"

"Help them? But what can I do to help?" was my first thought. Then I knew. I decided that every day I would save the crumbs that always gather on table and dishes—every meat scrap, everything that a bird can eat with a relish.

This I did, and with it I served a nice piece of suet for desert, hanging it by a stout string to a limb of a tree near by. Another day I hung a small bone with a good serving of meat on it, and it is a question as to whether the birds that found it or I who had given it to them, enjoyed it the most.

Such a twittering, such a scrambling from one side to the other as there was! I wished with all my heart that I could understand bird language so I could know just what they were saying. From crumbs to meat, from meat to crumbs they flew, until at last the meal was consumed and away they flew with happy twitters.

The next morning there was a surprise for me. For there were not only the birds who came for breakfast yesterday, but nearly as many again, and as I watched, they still came from all directions. I held my breath in amazement.

Where did the others come from? How did they know about the food put out for them? Surely, surely there must have been some way of communication between them, for it just did not happen, but how can they tell one another of such things?

Well, I really got myself into deep waters, for as I increased my food allowance, just so often did the little diners come for it. And sometimes it puzzled me how to feed so many, but at last I dipped down into my corn chops, my kaffir corn, which they seemed to like very much, and more bones had to be kept ready. And now I know what I am going to do next year.

I am going to save all the melon seeds that we have, dry them thoroughly and put them away for the birds' dinners and breakfasts. Many kinds of seed can be used this way.

Lets' all do it. Let's all save seeds, crumbs, scraps of bread, meat, from our tables, and scatter them, like seeds of kindness, where they will do good. I am going to—will you?—Florence Jones Hadley, in Our Dumb Animals.

For the Young Folks

For The Southern Churchman.

GIVE ME THYSELF, O GOD, I PRAY!

W. W. McIver, Jr., age 13.

Give me strength, O God, I pray,
Increase my strength more every day;
Give me a heart that's kind and true,
Give me a heart that thinks of you.

Give me a mind that's full of light,
Give me a mind to make me bright;
Make me the man I want to be,
Make me a man of liberty.

Make me a man that's kind and true,
Make me a help to many, not few,
Give me strength of strong men, I pray,
Make me a hero of the day.

Make me kind, brave, and good,
Take my sins from where they stood,
Cast my burdens from oc of me,
So I will have more time with Thee.

The Habit of Kindness.

The game started, when Mother overheard Alice and Tommy discussing how fervently they disliked Johnny Randall.

"He's a bad boy," Tommy said. "He comes over to play with me and breaks my toys."

"Let's chase him home next time," volunteered Alice.

Right here Mother stepped in. "Why, children," she said, "what makes you say such unkind things? You know Johnny is very fond of you both and that he loves to come over. And I'm sure you'd miss him, if he stopped coming. He is a bit rough, but if you asked him to be more careful, I think he'd try to be more careful. He is a brave little fellow. You have both noticed it and told me about it. You cry sometimes when you hurt yourselves, but I've never seen Johnny whine or cry about anything. Have you? He's always smiling and always cheerful. I'm glad he comes to play with you, and I think it would be a fine thing, if you're talking about him, to think of all the nice things you can say of him and forget the bad ones. We all have faults, but it isn't kind to talk of them."

So it started. That was several years ago. Whenever Tommy and Alice talked about any one they thought of the nice things to say. "If you can't say something pleasant," Mother counseled, "don't say anything."

The habit has grown. The two children really look for the pleasant side of every one and it is a long time since they have said unfavorable things about anybody, old or young, thoughtlessly or as a pastime. And since they are looking for pleasant things in people, they always find them, while every one remarks what sweet children they have grown to be. This does not mean, however, that the attitude of critical-mindedness so necessary for personal growth and right choice of associates has been neglected. Historical and ficitious characters have been discussed freely, but always with charity and an attempt to get more than one point of view. This helps them to see their neighbors and friends in their true characters and to say about them only those things which are worth saying.

Not long ago a new boy joined Tommy's class at school.

"Gee, he looks like a siss!" growled one of the children.

"Let's haze him a bit," suggested another.

"I think he looks all right," promptly offered Tommy. "I bet he's just a regular guy feeling terribly shy and lost here, and he's all dressed up 'cause they've just moved here and his mother wants him to make a good impression. Let's be nice to him and see."

They followed Tommy's advice and found he was right. Charlie was a "regular fellow" and soon was a favorite. He was spared many unhappy moments owing to one mothers' thoughtful method of training her children always to think the best of the other fellow.—Ruth L. Frankel.

The Wheelbarrow Ride.

There was going to be a party for the class at the home of Miss Harper, the Sunday-school teacher. Every one was going to be there. That is, all but Peter. He had to stay home with his lame brother, Gordon.

"Can't you bring him with you?" asked Miss Harper. "We'd be very happy to have him."

For years Gordon had been too lame to walk. As the family was too poor to buy a wheel chair, the lad had been forced to stay at home, where he sat beside the window watching the other children pass by.

As he went into the front door, Peter had a sudden idea. He would take Gordon in the old wheelbarrow which stood in the back yard. It might be funny-looking, but at least it would get him to Miss Harper's house.

That night when Peter arrived, pushing the rickety old wheelbarrow with his brother inside, the other boys in the class tried to hide the laugh they could not keep from their faces.

"Well, Peter!" said Miss Harper, "I am very glad to see that you managed to bring Gordon with you. I know that all of the boys will enjoy their party more since they can share it with you."

"It's his first party, too," smiled Peter, proudly. "That's why I tried so hard to find a way of getting him here."

The laughs disappeared from the faces of the other boys. Peter's earnestness made them feel ashamed of themselves. They knew that it had not been a pleasant task for the lad to wheel his brother along through the streets in the shabby wheelbarrow. But they also knew that he had been brave enough to face their lauhgter for the sake of giving Gordon his unexpected happiness.

Miss Harper had a comfortable place for the cripple to sit, and his bright face was beaming with joy as he watched the other boys playing games in which he could not join. His cheery smile was thanks enough.

When the party was over, Peter and Gordon left first. The others stayed behind to talk over a plan they had decided upon.

"We've agreed to get enough money to buy Gordon a wheelchair," said Tommy Truitt, when the two boys had gone. "We're all going to earn the money ourselves."

"How splendid!" exclaimed Miss Harper. "I'll start with the first dollar. What joy it will bring into these two boys' lives."

And when the shiny wheelchair was left at the home of Gordon and Peter, it was hard to say who was the happiest —Gordon, Peter, or the lads who had given the gift.—The Sunbeam.

The Pig That Was Always a Pig.

Over in China there was a very rich man who loved to have all kinds of pets. He had pet dogs, pet cats, pet peacocks. He even had pet camels and pet elephants. He used to show his pets to all his friends, and he liked to have his friends see him put his hands upon them and feed them. He liked also to go out walking and have his pets with him, at his side or following him. People would stand at the edge of the road and watch him go by. It was a pretty sight, for all his pets had been trained to keep in their places and they made a strange and interesting procession. They were dressed up in every sort of coats of every sort of color.

The rich man was always wondering what new pet he could get, and the thought came to him, I will have a pet pig. He did not want a red pig, nor a black pig, nor a spotted pig, but he wanted a white pig, one without a single spot of any kind upon him. And he wanted the pig to be young—about two months old.

Whenever I see a pig, I think of a story my father used to tell about himself. One night when he was ten years old he went in a boat with some men who were fishing in a wide stream. They put a torch in the end of the boat, and moved the boat very slowly and quietly and when they saw a fish asleep on the bottom of the stream they pierced him with a sharp stick and so caught the fish. After a while my father became tired and thought he would like to be put ashore so as to go home. It was very dark and he started across a rough field. He was frightened anyway because it was so dark and because he was alone. As he was going in one direction, feeling his way with his feet, suddenly something rose up right between his legs, going in the opposite direction, and dumped him over. He had no idea at first what it was; but it was a pig. He never forget that night and its fright.

The pig that the rich man in China wanted was not a full grown pig—but a little pig. A little pig wnen two months old is really quite attractive. He runs and jumps and frisks about merrily. There even seems to be laughter in his eyes. He is a merry sort of creature. Everybody enjoys watching him as he capers around.

So a pig was bought and brought to the rich man's house. Everybody said it will be hard to get that pig to keep clean. "A pig," they said, "has a pig's nature." They said, "It is the nature of an apple tree to bear apples, it is the nature of a cow to give milk, it is nature of a bird to fly." "Then," they said, "it is the nature of a pig to love muddy places and to lie down in them and get himself terribly dirty." And they also said, "Some day when the pig has a chance you will find that the pig will show his nature—for he will jump right into a muddy puddle if he sees it."

But the rich man did not believe what these people said. He answered, "I will give that pig a clean room, and I will have clean dishes for him to drink out of and eat out of—and I will see that he has clean straw to lie down upon —and you may be sure that he will never want to soil himself in the mud,"

So he gave the pig a clean room and everything in the room and about the pig was spotlessly clean.

When the day came for the next procession, the pig was dressed in a soft velvet coat—of a bright blue color—around his body—and he had a soft leather collar about his neck—and they even put anklets, little bracelets, of silver on his legs. So the rich man started out for his walk with all his pets, having the little pig at his side. Once I saw a picture of the procession. The rich man was dressed in silk clothes, which came down to his feet. He wore white shoes, and he carried a bright red parasol, and he looked very happy and every one was admiring him and his pets. The camel was there, and the elephant was there and a long-necked giraffe was there. But the people especially were admiring the pig in all his fine clothes and with his good behavior as he trotted along at the side of his master so quietly, at the very head of the procession. But as they went along, the pig saw a pool of dirty water at the side of the road, and without waiting an instant, before the rich man could stop him, he sprang from the procession, ran as fast as his little legs could carry him, and plunged into the dirty pool—and there he was with all his costly clothes—a pig wallowing in the mire!

The look on the rich man's face as he saw all this was very sad—he was so surprised and so disappointed. He had thought that if he should give the pig nice, clean things the pig would always wish to be clean. But he had forgotten the pig's "nature"—the pig's love for the mud. When he reached home that afternoon he gathered his friends around him and he said, "I have made a mistake. I forgot that one of the things I must always look out for is the 'nature' of my pets—I forgot that putting clothes on them and giving them good things to eat is not enough; somehow their nature must be good. You were correct, a pig is a pig unless you change his 'nature'!" "But," he added, as all listened in their sympathy with his disappointment in his pet pig, "there is this about it, we ourselves are not pigs. We can change our nature—we can stop loving to do wrong things—and we can start to do right things—and I for one have learned from my pet pig that it is not clothes or food or room, or anything else, that will make me what I ought to be; I need to have in me a 'nature'—a heart—that loves what is good and wants to do the good."

No soon had rich man finished this this sort of lecture than one fihs friends burst out and said: "I have a story to tell you. It is about Li Chi. He was a boy who lived in the very worst part of Canton, where everything was as dirty as you can imagine. Li Chi's clothes were all rags. He was so dirty that the boys called him "Piggy". No one wanted to have anything to do with Piggy. But one day there was an English woman who took pity on him, had him washed, bought some neat clothes for him, and sent him to school, and he became the hero of the school, he was such a good scholar and was such a good ball player. A Pig will always be a Pig—but a Piggy boy may become a splendid man.—James McClure, in Presbyterian Banner.

PEABODY
BALTIMORE, MD.
The Leading Endowed Musical Conservatory in the Country.
Scholarships, Diplomas, Tuition in all grades and branches. Circulars mailed

Kill All Flies! THEY SPREAD DISEASE
Placed anywhere, DAISY FLY KILLER attracts and kills all flies. Neat, clean, ornamental, convenient and cheap. Lasts all season. Made of metal, can't spill or tip over; will not soil or injure anything. Guaranteed.
Insist upon DAISY FLY KILLER from your dealer.
HAROLD SOMERS, Brooklyn N. Y.

CANADIAN
KESWICK CONFERFNCE
July 14th to August 11th, 1929
At Ferndale, Muskoka Lakes
Motto: "All One in Christ Jesus."
Business Office: 366 BAY STREET, TORONTO, CANADA.

WHILE IN RICHMOND LET US KNOW IF YOU LIKE OUR FOOD
Mrs. Cook's Cafeteria
Near St. Paul's Parish House
Richmond, Va.

INCORPORATED 1882
Virginia Fire and Marine Insurance Company
Of Richmond, Va.
Assets - - - $3,640,152.88
Fred'k E. Nolting, President.
B. C. Lewis, Jr., Secretary — J. C. Watson, Treasurer
J. M Leake, General Agent — Wm. P. Hill, Asst. Secretary

THREE DOORS.

Three doors there are in the temple
  Where men go up to pray,
And they that wait at the outer gate
  May enter by either way.

There are some that pray by asking;
  They lie on the Master's breast,
And shunning the strife of the lower life,
  They utter their cry for rest.

There are some that pray by seeking;
  They doubt where their reason fails;
But their mind's despair is the ancient prayer
  To touch the print of the nails.

There are some that pray by knocking;
  They put their strength to the wheel,
For they have no time for thoughts sublime;
  They can only act what they feel.

Father, give each his answer,
  Each in his kindred way;
Adapt Thy light to his form of night,
  And grant him his needed day.
—William Watson.

Mayn't I be a preacher when I grow up?" asked the small boy.

"Of course you may, my pet, if you want to," his mother replied.

"Yes, I do. I s'pose I've got to go to church all my life, anyway, and it's a good deal harder to sit still than to stand up and holler."—Boyland.

All about you are discouraged people. Many a man showing a brave front to the world, is only practicing that holy hypocrisy which Christ speaks of when He tells men to anoint their heads and appear not unto men to fast. They are bearing heavy loads bravely, but they need a word of encouragement.—Maltbie D. Babcock.

THE GRAY LINE MOTOR TOURS SIGHTSEEING TOURS
Parlor Coaches and Packard Sedans For Special Occasions
Office Phone, Randolph 3846; Home, Boulevard 9116
Office: Murphy's Hotel Lobby
P. B. Burnett Owner and Manager RICHMOND, VA

Behind Every Dollar

invested in our 6% Certificates

is a home

FOUR millions in resources—a record of 37 years without loss to a single investor—and first mortgages on Birmingham homes protect the funds you invest in our 6 per cent certificates.

Safety! Six per cent! Get both and with the assurance your funds are always available. Any bank in the city will be glad to substantiate these statements.

Tax Free

Dividends from these certificates (up to $300 per year) are exempt from federal icome tax. The 6 per cent yield is NET.

6% Yield

Invest any amount from $50 to $10,000 and receive 6 per cent dividends each January and July. Call or write for folder, "Safe Investments".

JEFFERSON COUNTY BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATION

F. M. JACKSON, Pres.,
Birmingham, Ala.

COME TO MOUNT GRETNA

AUGUST 26th TO SEPTEMBER 2nd, 1929

Plan to Spend Eight Joyous Days

THIRD SUMMER BIBLE CONFERENCE

Philadelphia School of the Bible

FOUR ADDRESSES DAILY

Afternoons wholly free for rest and recreation. Bathing, boating, tennis. Rambles everywhere. Glorious surroundings.

HAPPY FELLOWSHIP COME!

All sessions will be held in the outdoor auditorium on the Chautauqua Association grounds at Mount Gretna.

Visitors will find unusually attractive accommodations at the Chautauqua Inn, with reasonable rates prevailing. Write Mrs. K. C. Anthony for illustrated folder.

SPEAKERS

WILLIAM R. NEWELL
Of De Land, Florida, Widely Known Evangelist, Expositor and Author

ALBERT V. HUGHES, B. A.,
Of Toronto, Canada, Home Director of the Sundan Interior Mission

WILLIAM ALLAN DEAN,
Aldan, Pa.

WILLIAM CULBERTSON, III,
Collingdale, Pa.

THE LOCATION:

Mount Gretna, Pennsylvania, is delightfully situated about 700 feet above the sea level in the Blue Ridge Mountains of the State, about 75 miles northwest of Philadelphia. Easily reached by good paved roads from all large points, and is also located on the Pennsylvania Railroad with bus connections to and from Conewago Junction. Also one may reach Mount Gretna via the Reading Railroad to Lebanon and private bus line from that city.

Send for Complete Program to The Extension Department

PHILADELPHIA SCHOOL OF THE BIBLE

1721-27 Spring Garden Street

Philadelphia

Classified Advertising and Notices

All notices and advertisements, excepting positions wanted, will be inserted in this department at a rate of 20 cents per agate line, each insertion. Special rates on contracts of any length. A rate of 15 cents per line is made to persons seeking positions. No advertisement accepted for less than 50 cents.

Copy for this department must be received not later than Tuesday of the week in which it is intended that the first insertion shall appear.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

ANTIQUES.

WE PAY THE HIGHEST CASH PRICES for old-time furniture and antiques of all kinds. H. C. Valentine, 209 East Franklin Street, Richmond, Va.

RELIGIOUS TRACTS.

GOOD RELIGIOUS TRACTS MAY BE had by writing to LEVI C. SULLIVAN, blind tract minister, P. O. Box 43, Roanoke, Va. Some excellent tracts for prison work.

SUMMER BOARD.

IN SHENANDOAH VALLEY—LIMITED NUMBER of people desired. Large house and grounds conveniently located. M. I. $12 and $15 per week. MISS D. L. BRISCOE, Charles Town, Jefferson County, W. Va.

SITUATION WANTED.

A LADY WITH MANY YEARS' EXPERIence in Mission and Social Service work and practical nursing, desires position by September first. Address "X. Y.", care of Southern Churchman.

ORGANIST.

ORGANIST AND CHOIRMASTER, ENGlish trained, desires change of climate, account of wife's health. Very successful boys' voices, recitalist, director of choral societies, teacher pipe organ, vocal, piano. Excellent references. Address 'Organist", care of Southern Churchman.

CHURCH INTELLIGENCE.

(Continued from page 16.)

of one of the local hotels. The speeches were by the two visitors from New York and a South Dakota layman, Mr. Walter Stover, of Watertown. The general subject was "The Christian Man's Business", the sub-topics being "The Size of the Job," "The Men Who Must Do It," and "The Results to be Expected."

A ten-day summer conference began its sessions at All Saints' School, following the convocation.

Among other interesting features of convocation was the passage of an appropriate resolution upon the death of Dr. Robert L. Slagle, President of the State University, whose devoted service and humble discipleship in the church was an outstanding example. Also upon the death of the Rev. William Holmes, Indian presbyter of pre-eminence and worth, who died at the wheel of his car while about his Master's business. Convocation also presented to Miss Mary B. Peabody, the last of the three sisters who created and have conducted All Saints' School since its inception, a resolution which was as follows:

"This month marks the close of a remarkable period of service in the District of South Dakota by Miss Mary Peabody, which has extended through the episcopate of all of its bishops, and has been interwoven with all the official and educational enterprises and every department of the varied interests in which they and the District have been engaged; and as biographer of Bishop Hare, secretary to the bishops, teacher in All Saints' School and the friend of all our people, white and Indian, in every nook and corner of the state, she has endeared herself through her accurate and trustworthy knowledge in almost every department of learning, so that the phrase, "Ask Miss Mary", is a commonplace with all of us, united with steadfast loyalty and genius for friendship; such unique record of unfailing energy and accomplishment deserves a permanent place in the records of this District:

Therefore be it Resolved: That this convocation of the Missionary District appreciation of this distinguished life of South Dakota herein expresses its of unselfishness, its regret that Miss Mary's term of official connection has ended, and its prayer that many years of prosperity, peace and happiness may be granted her in which to enjoy the deserved fruits of inspiring usefulness."

Personal Notes

Mr. Randolph R. Claiborne, Jr., a candidate for Holy Orders is in charge of St. James' Church, Cedartown, Ga., for the vacation period.

ORDINATIONS.

The Rev. Arthur Le Baron Ribble was advanced to the priesthood by the Rt. Rev. William G. McDowell, D. D., on Sunday, June 30, in St. Paul's Church, Greensboro, Alabama.

Bishop McDowell himself preached the sermon. The candidate was presented by his father, the Rev. Dr. G. Wallace Ribble, rector of Trinity Church, Bessemer, Alabama. The Rev E. W. Gamble, rector of St. Paul's Church, Selma, Alabama, was present, and took part in the service.

Mr. Ribble has served St. Paul's, Greensboro, for about sixteen months; four months as lay reader, and a full year as deacon in charge. He will continue as rector of this church and of the Church of the Holy Cross, Uniontown.

The Rev. Arthur R. P. Heyes was ordained to the priesthood by the Rt. Rev. Robert L. Harris, D. D., Bishop of Marquette, on Wednesday, July 10, in St. Stephen's Church, De Tour, Michigan. The Very Rev. Maynard S. Ablewhite, Dean of St. Paul's Cathedral, Marquette, preached the sermon. The Litany was said by the Rev. William Blomquist, rector of Bethel Swedish Episcopal Church, Iron Mountain; the Ven. Archdeacon Poyseor read the Gospel, and the Rev. R. G. Kirkbride, rector Church of the Good Shepherd, St. Ignace, read the Epistle. The Preface to the Ordinal was read by the Rev. Marcus Brown, rector of St. Mark's Church, Crystal Falls. The candidate was presented by the Rev. George S. Walton, General Missionary, who also served as master of ceremonies. The Rev. Mr. Heyes will continue in charge of St. Stephen's Church, De Tour, and the other missions in Chippewa County.

Marcus Botsford Hitchcock, David John Zimmerman and Donald Von Carey were ordained to the diaconate by the Rt. Rev. William A. Leonard, D. D., in the College Church of the Holy Spirit, Gambier, Ohio, Sunday, June 16. The ordination followed their graduation at Bexley Hall, Gambier, and these deacons are now licensed to preach in the Diocese of Ohio.

The Rev. Herbert Ralph Higgins was advanced to the priesthood on May 29, in St. John's Church, Youngstown, by the Rt. Rev. Warren L. Rogers, D. D., Bishop Coadjutor of Ohio. The Preface to the Ordinal was read by Dr. E. J. Owen, the Rev. Leonard W. S. Stryker presented the candidate and read the Litany. Canon Orville E. Watson preached the sermon, the Rev. Mr. Waldren read the Epistle and the Rev. I. F. Jones the Gospel.

The Rev. Dorsey Maxfield Dowell was advanced to the Priesthood on May 27, in the Church of the Incarnation, Cleveland, by the Rt. Rev. Warren L. Rogers, D. D., Bishop Coadjutor of Ohio. The Rev. Harold C. Zeis read the Preface, the Rev. Charles C. Jatho presented the candidate. The Rev. Creetus Dowell preached the sermon, and the Ven. G. F. Patterson and the Rev. J. E. Carhartt read the Litany, Gospel and Epistle.

The Rev. Oran C. Zaebst was advanced to the Priesthood on June 4, in St. Thomas' Church, Berea, Ohio, by the Rt. Rev. Warren L. Rogers, D. D., Bishop Coadjutor of Ohio. The Rev. J. P. Brereton read the Preface. The Rev. Kirk B. O'Farrall preached the sermon. The Rev. Maxfield Dowell presented the candidate and the Litany, Epistle and Gospel were read by the Ven. G. C. Patterson, the Rev. Roy Duer and the Rev. Ian Robertson.

The Rev. William Gerow Christian, Deacon, was advanced to the Priesthood in All Saints' Church by the Rt. Rev. A. C. Thomson, D. D., Bishop Coadjutor of Southern Virginia, on June 26. The Rev. Churchill J. Gibson, rector of St. James, Richmond, Va., preached the sermon, and the candidate was presented by the Rev. David C. George, of St. James' Parish, Mecklenburg County. Other of the clergy taking part in the service were the Very Rev. H. D. Peacock, the Rev. J. M. B. Gill and the Rev. Norman E. Taylor. A large number of clergy from adjoining parishes were in the chancel.

Mr. Christian, who has served St. Mark's Parish, Mecklenburg County, for the past year will continue in charge as rector.

The Rev. John Boyd Bentley was ordained to the Priesthood by the Bishop of Southern Virginia on Tuesday, June 25. The service was in St. John's Church, Hampton. The candidate was presented by the Rev. George O. Watts, rector of St. John's and the sermon was preached by the Rev. W. A. R. Goodwin, D. D., of Bruton Parish.

Mr. Bentley becomes assistant rector of Bruton Parish.

Mr. William R. Rush was ordained as a deacon on St. Peter's Day, 1929, by Bishop McElwain in Christ Church, Austin, Minn. The Rev. Rodney F. Cobb, rector of Christ Church, Austin, preached the sermon, and the ordinand was presented by the Rev. G. H. Ten Broeck, a former rector of the parish.

After acting as locum tenens in his own parish during the month of August, the Rev. Mr. Rush will go to Malta, Montana, to be minister-in-charge of St. Mary's Church and of some nearby missionary work.

The Rev. Arland C. Blage was advanced to the Priesthood on Friday, June 28, 1929, by Bishop McElwain in Trinity Church, Anoka, Minn. The Bishop preached the sermon and the ordinand was presented by Archdeacon E. W. Couper.

The Rev. Mr. Blage continues as rector of Trinity Church, Anoka, and in charge of missions at Elk River and Zimmerman.

The Rev. Lester Manning Morse was ordained to the Priesthood Sunday, June 30, in the Church of the Holy Comforter, Kenilworth, Ill., Diocese of Chicago.

The Rt. Rev. Frank E. Wilson, D. D., Bishop of Eau Claire, officiated for the Bishop of Chicago, and preached the sermon. The candidate was presented by the Rev. Leland H. Danforth, rector of the Church of the Holy Comforter.

During the World War the Rev. Mr. Morse served as an artillery officer in the Eighty-sixth Division, of which Bishop Wilson was Senior Chaplain. He graduated in May from Nashotah House and becomes rector of Grace Church, Rice Lake, Wis., Diocese of Eau Claire, on July 1.

RURAL LIFE BETTERMENT.

From the office of the Virginia Council of Religious Education copies of the bulletin, "Religious Education in Relation to Rural Life in Virginia," are being sent to interested persons.

This bulletin was prepared for the Council by Professor C. H. Hamilton, of the Department of Rural Sociology, Virginia Polytechnic Institute. It tells its own story and on the second and third cover pages you will see that its publication has been endorsed by many of the most prominent Churchmen in Virginia.

The Council is undertaking vigorously to extend its program of conventions, training schools, institutes, and young people's conferences in those counties which show greatest need. More than three-fourths of our support comes from the counties, but we do need more support from the cities.

The goal in Richmond is to secure one hundred $10.000 contributions. After you have looked over this bulletin you will want to have a part in helping to forward a work which is so vital in the production of character and citizenship in our beloved state. Your contribution may be sent to

Wm. T. Sanger
Medical College of Virginia
Richmond, Va.

DIABOLISM OF LINCOLNITES.

(Continued from page 24.)

ginia, his son Edmund, who later married Miss Jane Ruffin, Fred. Nash, and myself. The phenomenon was the appearance in the heavens of three suns, one at the West, one towards the North and one towards the South. It was a most remarkable sight. A few days later the War broke out.

After four years of warfare, April 18, 1865, Peace was at hand when Mr. Lincoln passed away. He had been killed four days before—April 14, by some fanatic who regarded him as a bloody tyrant. Certainly, all the blood shed after the Hampton Roads Conference was on President Lincoln's head: in addition to all that he was responsible for prior to that time. And on March 4, 1865, he had pronounced sentence on himself in his inaugural addres. "The Judgments of the Lord are true and righteous altogether." But nothing justifies assassination, and John Brown and John Wilkes Booth are both to be condemned—the only difference being that while John Brown killed many people, Booth killed but one.

Now turn to First Chronicles, Twenty-second Chapter, Eighth Verse: "But the word of the Lord came to me—saying—Thou hast shed blood abundantly and hast made great wars; thou shalt not build an house unto my name because thou hast shed much blood upon the earth in my sight." Lincoln was killed April 14. He did not live to see the end of his bloodshed.

Perhaps had President Lincoln been more humane, that fanatic might not have foully murdered him. Certainly, his assassination was in several ways a deplorable event for the Southern people.

Thirty-Fifth Annual World's Greatest Bible Conference Winona Lake, Indiana—August 16-25

The Program Speaks for Itself—There is Nothing Like It Elsewhere

Foremost Preachers and Bible Teachers of the World will speak. Sergeant Alvin C. York, Bishop Ernest L. Daldorf, Dr. Robert G. Lee, Dr. J. C. Massee, Dr. Herbert W. Bieber, Dr. Arcturus Z. Conrad, Dr. Robert Watson, Dr. William B. Crowe, Dr. A. T. Robertson. EVANGELISTS—Dr. M. B. Williams, Dr. Oliver E. Williams, Dr. Charles R. Scoville, Dr. O. A. Newlin, Dr. J. Wesley Oborn. MISSIONARIES—William Danner, Rev. E. L. Gunasekers, Rev. Martyn Greet, and many others. MISSION BOYS—Eberhardt, Soerheide, Blackmore, Ingersol, Becker, Asher, and others. JEWISH SPEAKERS—Dr. Max I. Reich, Dr. Jacob Peltz, Dr. Elias Newman. GIDEONS—Mr. Samuel R. Boggs, Mr. Samuel A. Fulton, Mr. Will J. Green, Mr. A. B. T. Moore.

REV. W. E. BIEDERWOLF, Director
—Address Bible Conference for Program.

Net Rates For Clergymen and Lay Workers

The facilities of this Corporation are cordially extended to clergymen and their families and to lay-workers and their families, to assist them in building up insurance protection at the lowest possible cost. The rates are, in themselves, net rates; which means that they contain none of the usual "loading." In addition, Annual Refunds have been paid to policyholders. The present rate of Annual Refund is slightly more than $4.00 per $1,000 of insurance. This reduces the cost still further and helps to solve your insurance problems.

Inquiries should be addressed to the Corporation and will have immediate attention.

THE CHURCH LIFE INSURANCE CORPORATION

14 Wall Street, New York

(Operated under the supervision of the Trustees of The Church Pension Fund)

DIABOLISM OF LINCOLNITES
VS.
ONE OF AMERICA'S GREATEST CHRISTIAN STATESMEN, JEFFERSON DAVIS

THE ASSASSINATION OF PRESIDENT LINCOLN

By Captain S. A. Ashe, Raleigh, North Carolina

The Conspiracy to Implicate President Davis and Other Confederates in the Assassination of President Lincoln

Immediately after the assassination of President Lincoln, a number of persons made affidavits before Judge Holt implicating President Davis and others in that crime. In April, 1866, Representative Boutwell, of Massachusetts, had the House of Representatives to direct the Judiciary Committee to examine into the charges against President Davis of complicity in the murder of President Lincoln. Col. L. C. Turner, of the Bureau of Military Justice, was detailed to aid the Committee. Col. Turner addressed himself to this with intelligence. Those who had made affidavits before Judge Advocate General Holt which sustained this charge were a man named Sanford Conover, and others named John H. Patton, Joseph Snevel, F. B. Wright, John N. Gill, William Campbell, and two women, Miss Mary Knapp and Mrs. Sarah Douglass. Col. Turner first went to work to search into the character of these witnesses. Lo and behold! he found that every one of them had made his affidavit under an assumed name: and that it was a concocted scheme of those people to make out a case against President Davis and the others for the purpose of getting money from the Government.

How much money they got is not stated, and it is an open question as to whether Judge Advocate General Holt knew that it was a false charge against President Davis or not. If I recollect aright he soon after came to some unnatural death. Colonel Turner's investigation showed that Sanford Conover's real name was Dunham, that he was a lawyer, living in Brooklyn. William Campbell's real name was John A. Hoare, a gas fixer, living in New York State. Joseph Snevel's true name was William H. Roberts, kept a tavern at Yonkers. Wright's true name was John Waters, worked on a brick yard on Long Island. John H. Patton's real name was Peter Stevens, and he was a Justice of the Peace, lived at Nyack on North River. Mrs. Sarah Douglass was Mrs. Dunham. She was the wife of "Conover," and Miss Knight was Mrs. Chas. Smythe, and she was the sister of "Conover"—"Dunham," the sharp lawyer who was the originator of the plot; and he had his wife and sister and the other actors in the plot well drilled to perform their respective parts.

A year had elapsed since the Northern people had been informed by these affidavits that Jefferson Davis and Judah Benjamin had been in the conspiracy of Surrat to kill President Lincoln, and naturally, the Northern heart was warm with rage against the perpetrators of foul murder. Thus the death of Lincoln imputed to President Davis was of horrible consequences to the South. But now through the manhood of Colonel Turner the curtain was raised. The assassination of the President involved only those who were guilty of it. What the motive was that led to this horrid crime, no one in the South had any information, why the Ruler of Events permitted it can be only a matter of conjecture.

But let us take a view of events. The country was at peace on March 4, 1861. There was no thought of war. There was no occasion for war. While the Cotton States had withdrawn from the Union for certain reasons, Congress had set on foot a measure that was intended to lead to their return. Mr. Lincoln said in his inaugural all profess to be content in the Union, if all constitutional rights can be maintained, and even as late of July, after three months of war, he said to Congress there was much reason to believe that except in South Carolina the Union men were in the majority. There was no military movement that indicated that the Cotton States expected war. Mr. Lincoln and his cabinet had announced that there was to be peace. Unnecessarily he brought on war and he persisted in it with great vigor. He disregarded the established rules of civilized warfare and waged war with great barbarity. He brought death to hundreds of thousands of men and waged it against women and children.

Many of the Northern people were sick of the war, but on his re-election in November, 1864, he redoubled his efforts and the new forces achieved results, so that Mr. Frank Blair came to see President Davis in the interest of peace. Mr. Davis proposed a conference to bring about peace. Mr. Lincoln attended the conference. But he rejected all propositions for peace, insisting on unconditional submission to his own views. Had he presented any reasonable terms, they would have been accepted, there is no doubt.

The opening sentence in the historical account of the siege of Chichester mentions that when that fatal year opened quiet reigned throughout England. Then one day there appeared in the heavens three suns, a phenominon that, according to ancient traditions, betokened some great occurrence. Because of the king's action civil war broke out afresh. The king, Charles the First, was arrested and was beheaded. At the Hampton Roads Peace Conference Vice-President Stephens says in his history that when he urged that after the restoration there was general amnesty, President Lincoln said: "Talk to Seward about that, all I know is that Charles lost his head."

Now, in the early days of April, 1861, at Haw River, Alamance County, North Carolina, the household of Chief Justice Ruffin were called out into the yard to see a remarkable spectacle. Among the number was not only the Chief Justice and his family, but the distinguished and eminent Edmund Ruffin of Vir-

(Continued on page 23)

DESIGNED FOR THE PROMOTION OF PRACTICAL PIETY, THE DIFFUSION OF RELIGIOUS AND GENERAL INTELLIGENCE, AND THE MAINTENANCE OF THE PRINCIPLES OF THE PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL CHURCH

Southern Churchman

Vol. 94. RICHMOND, VA., AUGUST 3, 1929. No. 31.

AMERICAN HOME BUILDERS

FIRST AID

FAMILY PRAYERS

Let us begin to solve national problems in our own homes. Let us begin by setting up a family altar. Yes, some of us may discover that we are not fit to serve in the place of high priest of our own homes, and that discovery will in itself be a great gain. The lack is quickly met. In your first prayer confess your failure, and before you have asked, God will supply your need.

The family altar did as much to make America free and great as any influence of our life, and the family altar will do more to restore our lost or obscured ideals than any other institution. One of the most distinguished citizens of New York, a great editor and publicist, speaking at a notable dinner of the American Bible Society, of which an elder of my church is the honored president, drew from his pocket a small Bible, given to him when he was a lad half a century ago, bearing his name written upon the fly leaf, worn and yellow with age. As he fingered its pages and spoke reminiscently of its associations, I saw him, and whence he came. If you cannot give your son an estate, do not worry; give your child a Bible. Give him the example of daily prayer. Fix upon him or her the habit of higher thought.

—Daniel A. Poling, D. D.

EDUCATIONAL

The Gundry Home and Training School For The Feeble Minded

Falls Church, Fairfax County, Va.

Established 1892.

For terms and information address

MISS M. GUNDRY.

The General Theological Seminary

CHELSEA SQUARE, NEW YORK.

The next Academic year egins on the last Wednesday in September.

Special students admitted and Graduate Courses for graduates of othre Theological Seminaries.

The requirements for admission and other particulars can be had from THE DEAN, 1 Chelsea Square, New York, N. Y.

The Bishop Payne Divinity School

The accredited Seminary of the Church for training colored men for the ministry. The curriculum covers the full course for Deacon's and Priest's Orders. The degree of B. D. is awarded.

For catalogue and information apply to Rev. F. G. Ribble, M. A., D. D., Dean, Petersburg, Va.

The Protestant Episcopal Theological Seminary Virginia

The One Hundred and Sixth Session Opened Wednesday, Sept. 19, 1928.

For catalogue and other information address The Dean, Rev. Berryman Green, D. D., Theological Seminary, Alexandria, Va.

Schermerhorn Home School

Located six miles north of Richmond on the Washington Highway. A Home School for Children who need Special care and Training.

SUE I. SCHERMERHORN,
Box 57, West End Sta,
Richmond, Va.

STUART HALL

STAUNTON, VA.

Episcopal school for girls, maintaining best Virginia traditions of refinement and culture.

Thorough College Preparation. Varied General Course. Outdoor Life.

EIGHTY-SIXTH YEAR BEGINS SEPTEMBER 18, 1929

For catalogue, address
MRS. H. N. HILLS, Principal

Episcopal Theological School

Cambridge, Massachusetts.
Affiliated with Harvard University.
For catalog address
The Dean.

Chatham Hall

A Church School for girls in Southern Virginia. Thorough college preparation. General and graduate courses. Art, music, expression, home economics, secretarial course. Superb location; 175 acre estate, gardens, dairy; modern, well equipped buildings. Riding, swimming, golf. Address Rev. Edmund J. Lee, M. A., D. D., Box S, Chatham, Va.

Southern Churchman

SOUTHERN CHURCHMAN COMPANY,
628 E. Main Street - - - Richmond, Va.

LANGBOURNE MEADE WILLIAMS, President
ALFRED B. WILLIAMS..Associate Editor
THE REV. FRANK COX, Associate Editor
THE REV. JAMES W. MORRIS. D. D. Associate Editor
MRS. CONRAD H. GOODWIN, Associate Editor
MISS SUSANNE WILLIAMS..News Editor
JOHN H. COOKE..Secretary and Manager

Entered at the Post Office in Richmond, Va., as second-class mail matter.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE.

$3.00 a year in advance. To the Clergy, $2.00. Six months, $1.50. Trial subscriptions, 3 months, 50 cents; 10 cents a copy. Foreign postage, 50 cents additional.

For the convenience of subscribers, subscriptions are continued at expiration unless otherwise ordered. Notice of renewal, discontinuance or change of address should be sent two weeks before the date they go into effect.

RECEIPT OF PAYMENT is shown in about two weeks by change of date on address label. If date is not properly extended after each payment, notify us promptly. No receipt for payment will be sent.

Notice post office address. The exact post office address to which we are directing the paper at the time of writing MUST ALWAYS BE GIVEN. Our mailing list is arranged by post offices and not alphabetically.

Make all checks and money orders payable to the Southern Churchman, and not to an individual.

ADVERTISEMENTS—Rates quoted on request. For classified see head of that department.

Representatives wanted in each Parish; liberal commissions.

News concerning the Church at large always welcome.

CONTENTS

	Page.
Thoughts for the Thoughtful	4
Editorial—DeCourcy W. Thom	5
Here a Little—Rev. C. E. Lucas	7
The Bridge, An Allegory—W. C. Irvine	9
The Church Went Security for Him	9
In Times of Trouble	9
The Christian's Vacation—Rev. K. J. Hammond	10
A Church That Draws the Masses	11
The Knights—and Stratford Hall—William Allen Dromgoole	11
Cleanse the Lepers	11
Book Reviews	12
Letters to the Editor	13
Church Intelligence	13
Family Department	17
Children's Department	19
Personal Notes	23

St. Christopher's

A Church Boarding and Day School

Richmond, Virginia

Healthful, beautiful and historic surroundings. Boarding Department limited to 50 boys.

Rate $750.

Reduction to sons of clergymen and missionaries. Illustrated catalogue on request.

REV. C. G. CHAMBERLAYNE, Ph. D., LL.D., Headmaster.

MARY BALDWIN COLLEGE

For women. Courses lead to B. A. and B. S. degrees. Music, art, spoken English, physical education. Gymnasium and field athletics. Modern equipment. In beautiful Shenandoah Valley. Founded 1842. Catalog. Staunton, Va.

Five Virginia CHURCH SCHOOLS

FOR BOYS: St. Christopher's School, Richmond; Christchurch School, Christchurch, Middlesex County.

FOR GIRLS: St. Catherine's School, Richmond; St. Anne's School, Charlottesville; St. Margaret's School, Tappahannock.

(For Catalogs, address Principals.)

LEGAL TITLE for wills: Church Schools in the Diocese of Virginia (Inc.).

(About gifts or bequests, address Central Office, 110 West Franklin Street, Richmond, Va.)

HOBART COLLEGE Geneva N. Y.

A Church College for men, founded 1828. Four year liberal arts course, leading to the degrees A. B. and B. S. High standards; faculty of thirty. For catalogue and information, address
REV. MURRAY BARTLETT, D. D., Pres.

St. Margaret's School

Tappahannock, Virginia.

A Church School for girls with modern equipment and moderate cost. Intermediate and College Preparatory. Accredited.

Country life and simplicity without isolation. Beautiful grounds on Rappahannock River. Three dormitories for different ages. Supervised Athletics.

EDITH LATANE, Headmistree.

St. Anne's,

Charlottesville, Va.
Box G.

Beautiful location in far famed Blue Ridge Mountains College preparatory and elective courses. Fully accredited. Open gymnasium allows sports in the fresh air in all weather. Sleeping porches. Riding taught by expert. Music. Art. Bishop of Virginia President of Trustees. Laura Lee Dorsey, Principal.

THE HANNAH MORE ACADEMY

The Diocesan School of Maryland. Founded 1832. A Country School for Girls—fifteen miles from Baltimore. College, Preparatory and General Courses. Music, Art, Supervised Athletics.

Principal, LAURA FOWLER, A. B., Reistertown, Maryland.

National Cathedral School

A Home and Day School for Girls
The Bishop of Washington, President Board of Trustees. Mrs. Marvin Bristol Rosenberry, Acting Principal. Mount St. Alban, Washington, D. C.

St. Paul's Boys' School

Rogers Avenue, Mt. Washington, Md.
Boarding and Day Pupils—Fifth grade to college.

WALTER B. LAWRENCE, M A., Headmaster.

Faculty all College Graduates.

REV. ARTHUR B. KINSOLVING, D. D., President Board of Trustees.

Enrollment limited to Fifty Boarding Pupils. Tuition $450. Choir Scholarships. Next sesison begins September 11, 1929.

HAMPDEN-SYDNEY COLLEGE

Invites your careful consideration of its Faculty, Courses of Study, Wholesome Christian Atmosphere, and Physical Equipment.

For catalogue write,

REGISTRAR
Hampden-Sydney, Virginia

CHURCH EQUIPMENT SERVICE

SUBSTANCE
and SHADOW

By GEORGE C. NEEDHAM
With Introduction by
James M. Gray, D. D.,

President The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.

SHADOW AND SUBSTANCE was written by George C. Needham, so well-known in the field of Bible teaching and evangelism in the days of D. L. Moody. But SHADOW AND SUBSTANCE meets the unrest and confusion of today as well. It gives "blessed assurance". Moreover, SHADOW AND SUBSTANCE is for every Christian. It will enrich and enlarge.

THE BIBLE INSTITUTE COLPORTAGE ASSOCIATION
843-845 North Wells Street
Chicago, Illinois.

Prayer is so necessary, and the source of so many blessings, that he who has discovered the treasure cannot be prevented from having recourse to it whenever he has an opportunity.—Fereton.

"Failure is sometimes more creditable than success. Professor Sheiber Matthews says it is far better to fail being a Christian, than to succeed in being a Pharisee."

EMBROIDERED ALTAR LINENS, SILK ALTAR HANGINGS.

Burses, Veils, Stoles, Markers, Chasubles, Damasks, Fringes, Altar Laces, Embroidery Supplies. Materials stamped for embroidering. MISS M. C. ANDOLIN (formerly with Cox Sons & Vining), 45 West 39th Street, New York. Hours 9 to 1.

GUNSTON HALL

School for girls. Kindergarten, primary, academic, collegiate. Art, music, expression, domestic science courses. Small classes. All the refinements of a beautiful Washington home. Three handsome residences near Dupont Circle. Instructors with highest standards and ideals, with personality and experience. Riding, swimming, golf, tennis, dancing, fencing. Estab. 1892. Catalog. Mary L. Gildersleeve, Mary B. Kerr, M. A., Principals.
Richard N. Mason, Business Manager, 1930 Florida Avenue, Washington, D. C.

EFFECT OF CIGARETTE SMOKING.

"You smoke thirty cigarettes a day?"

"Yes, in the average."

"You don't blame them for your run-down condition?"

"Not in the least. I blame my hard work."

The physician shook his head. He smiled in a vexed way. Then he took a leech out of a glass jar.

"Let me show you something," he said. "Bare your arm."

The cigarette smoker bared his pale arm, and the other laid the lean, black leech upon it. The leech fell to work busily. Its body began to swell. Then all of a sudden a kind of a shudder convulsed it, and it fell to the floor dead.

"That's what your blood did to that leech," said the physician. He took up the little corpse between his finger and thumb. "Look at it," he said. "Quite dead, you see. You poisoned it."

"I guess it wasn't a healthy leech in the first place," said the cigarette smoker, sullenly.

"Wasn't healthy, eh? Well, we'll try again."

And the physician clapped two leeches on the young man's thin arm.

"If they both die," said the patient, "I'll swear off—or at least, I'll cut down my daily allowance from thirty to ten."

Even as he spoke the smaller leech shivered and dropped on his knee dead, and a moment later the larger one fell beside it.

"This is ghastly," said the young man; "I am worse than the pestilence to these leeches."

"It is the empyreumatic oil in your blood," said the medical man. "All cigarette smokers have it."

"Doctor," said the young man, regarding the three dead leeches thoughtfully, "I half believe you're right."—New Zealand Outlook.

R. GEISSLER, INC.
56 W. 8th STREET, NEW YORK, N.Y.
Church Furnishings
IN CARVED WOOD AND MARBLE · BRASS · SILVER FABRICS + WINDOWS

CHURCH FURNISHINGS
Gold, Silver and Brass
Church and Chancel Furniture
Write for Catalogue for Episcopal Churches.
W. & E. SCHMIDT CO.

Church Furniture
Pews, Pulpits, Chancel Furniture
Sunday School Seating
American Seating Company
1029 Lytton Bldg., Chicago

J. R. Lamb
23-25-27 SIXTH AVENUE NEW YORK
MEMORIALS IN STAINED GLASS
MOSAIC · MARBLE · STONE · GRANITE
CARVED · WOOD · METAL · ETC.

Woody's Art Glass Shop
Art Stained and Leaded Glass.
Church Windows a Specialty.
513 East Main Street, Richmond, Va.

BEVERLEY HEATING
The Best for Homes, Churches, Stores and Buildings for all uses.
R. C. BEVERLEY HEATING CO., INC.,
308 E. Main St., Richmond, Va.
QUALITY—SERVICE.

LINEN for the CHURCH
PURE IRISH LINEN FOR ALL CHURCH USES, yard or piece lengths, at lowest import prices. New Special Number for Cottas, eighty-two and one-half cents. Samples on request.
MARY FAWCETT CO.,
350 Broadway, New York.

CHURCH VESTMENTS
Cassocks, Surplices, Stole.
EMBROIDERIES
Silks, Cloths, Fringes.
CLERICAL SUITS
Rabats, Collars, Shirts.
COX SONS & VINING,
131-133 E. 23d St., New York.

Church and Sunday School Furniture
THE SOUTHERN DESK COMPANY,
Hickory, N. C.
Send for Special Catalogue.

COMPOSERS Verse or Music
Sacred or secular. Brilliant opportunity. Write at once. Burrell Van Buren, 1873 McClurg Bldg., Chicago.

When in need of
MONUMENTS and TOMBSTONES
and want honest treatment see
BURNS & CAMPBELL,
Granite and Marble Works
PETERSBURG, VA.
Designs furnished on application and all orders receive prompt attention.

CHURCH FURNITURE
Pews, Pulpit and Sunday School Furniture. Catalog on request.
T. W. ALEXANDER & SON,
Box 147. Waynesboro, Va.

Washington Cathedral

A Witness for Christ in the Capital of the Nation

THE CHAPTER appeals to Churchmen throughout the country for gifts, large and small, to continue the work of building now proceeding, and to maintain its work, Missionary, Education, Charitable, for the benefit of the whole Church.

Chartered under Act of Congress.

Administered by a representative Board of Trustees of leading business men, Clergymen and Bishops.

Full information will be given by the Bishop of Washington, or the Dean, Cathedral Offices, Mount St. Alban, Washington, D. C., who will receive and acknowledge all contributions.

Legal Title for Use in Making Wills:
The Protestant Episcopal Cathedral Foundation of the District of Columbia

VIRGINIA TRUST CO.

Richmond, Va.

THE SAFE EXECUTOR,

Was organized in 1892 to act as Executor-Guardian and Trustee.

Many prudent men and women in every section of the State have named this Company Executor and trustee in their wills.

Inquiries cordially invited—no cost and confidential.

Capital Stock .....$ 1,000,000.00
Surplus earned .....$ 1,500,000.00
Held in trust.....$45,000,000.00

LITTLE TEA ROOM

SANDWICHES

Special Prices to

Clubs, Lodges and Paties

211 N. Jefferson Ran 3958
Richmond, Va.

XANTHINE

Will hereafter be sold in the new style bottle and package. Always best for the hair. Not a dye, but restores the color, promotes growth and prevents dandruff.

Price $1.00 at druggists, or sent prepaid by us.

XANTHINE CO., Richmond, Va.

CARPETS for CHURCHES

We carry a large stock of Church Carpets, embracing a wide assortment of designs, colorings and qualities and at prices to meet every requirement. Write and our representative will call with a selection of patterns and give an estimate, or we will send samples, at our expense, for your consideration.

Sydnor & Hundley

700 E. Grace Street,
Richmond, Va.

Thoughts For the Thoughtful

Reflecting on God leads to reflecting Him.

"Life is a measure to be filled—not a cup to be drained."

It is a greater thing to make another strong than to lift his load.

"Ignorance is a crime these days. But the ignorance of the heathen is our crime."

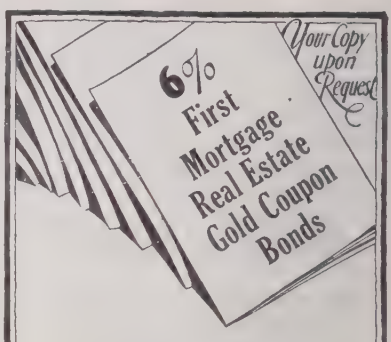
Courage and kindness seem the elemental virtues, for between them they include all that is real in any of the others, alone make human life worth while and bring us inner happiness.—John Galsworthy.

All worldly joys go less
To the one joy of doing kindness.
—R. L. Stevenson.

A skylark wounded on the wing
Doth make a cherub cease to sing.
—Wm. Blake.

I believe that Luther was right when one day in an hour of discouragement he dipped his pen in some spilled ink and wrote down, "Vivet"—"He lives." If He lives anything can happen.—Dr. H. A. Porter.

It is always fatally easy to forget God's benefits. The first rush of gratitude for deliverance, for answered prayer, and for every blessing, is oft to be soon over. Therefore it is of value to stimulate memory in every way possible.—J. Stuart Holden.



Our best prayers are intercessions. To think of others, of our friends, our relations, our enemies, and the whole world is to follow the Master's example. —Floyd W. Tomkins.

They on the heights are not souls
Who never erred nor went astray;
Who trod unswerving toward their goals
Along a smooth rose-bordered way.
Nay—those who stand, where first comes dawn.
Are those who stumbled, but went on.

The men whom I have seen succeed best in life have always been cheerful and hopeful men, who went about their business with a smile on their faces, and took the changes and chances of this mortal life like men, facing rough and smooth alike as it came.—Charles Kingsley.

The dear Christ dwells afar,
The King of some remoter star,
Listening, at times, with flattered ear,
To homage wrung from selfish fear,
But here, amidst the poor and blind,
The bound and suffering our kind.

Would you look across the plains of Time and see where earth and heavens meet? Broaden your horizon by standing on higher ground. Stand upon the high ground of great thoughts; stand sometimes upon the mountain tops of faith where all the forests, rivers, lakes and plains of experience meet and mingle in pictures of moral beauty; stand there and God will speak to you, and you shall know the mystery of the Transfiguration.—Perin.

EXCELLENT is the word used by one investor who buys American Bonds.

Issued by one of the largest financial institutions in the South with a record of "never a day's delay in payment of principal or interest," these prime First Mortgage Real Estate Gold Bonds excel as investments for those who seek safety and 6%.

Can we send you full details of current issues? Drop a postal, also mention this paper.

Investigate American Bonds before you invest.

AMERICAN
BANK AND TRUST COMPANY
Richmond, Virginia

TIDEWATER TALES

A book into which is gathered the folklore, traditions and history of Tidewater Virginia. Written in a delightful informal style by Prof. William C. Garnett.

The President of a College in South Carolina writes: "I have never read a work of this kind the style of which I have found more attractive, simple and yet elegant, interesting but never monotonous."

A prominent representative of a Publishing Co. writes: "This book will be read by our children and children's children. I could read 'A Fox Hunt 'Fo de War' every week."

A prominent attorney in Washington writes: " . . the charming description of the old homes, the history and traditions, and the true-to-life stories in local color, combined to delight me."

A professor in one of the Virginia Universities writes: "You have put posterity in your debt by presenting so skilfully to them characters that have passed to the beyond."

Price, $4.00 per copy. Order from WM. GARNETT, Dunnsville, Va.

SOUTHERN CHURCHMAN

Catholic for every truth of God; Protestant against every error of man.

EDITORIALS

Vol. 94. RICHMOND, VA., AUGUST 3, 1929. No. 31.

"LEST WE FORGET"

The Pastoral Letter of the recent General Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States of America refers to the present mutineers and to their opponents in that denomination as follows:

"One group seeks a fuller measure of what it counts Catholic. Another group is sick at heart lest some of those great values which we gained at the Reformation be lost. One prays hopefully for reunion with the Church of Rome; the other seeks continually closer relations with Protestantism."

But it is God Himself who in the person of Jesus Christ tells us in the first three Gospels "that every Kingdom divided against itself is brought to desolation, and every city and house divided against itself shall not stand."

I pray God that He will use me against such injury to His redemptive plans which under Christ's Sacrifice for mankind open, I believe, as many paths to Heaven as there are human beings on Earth trying to live their lives according to the highest principles available to them. Therefore, without disparaging any personal or denominational religious belief so long as it is moral, I ask what members of our church are producing desolation in it? Are they those who keep its laws, or are they those others who break its laws though they have solemnly pledged to the contrary? Surely the principles that Christ taught on Earth are alone necessary to sufficiently unify all moral religious Faiths. But so long as each human being is different from every other human being it must persist that no absolute unification of religious denominational forms is either requisite or practicable.

Each one of our total Church membership of 1,877,813 is intrinsically as much an owner of our denomination as is any other member and has in person or by proxy been pledged in baptism to support the laws of our denomination which pledge every confirmed member of it has ratified. And that pledge has yet again been reiterated in his Ordination Vows by each one of our total of 6,093 Presbyters and Deacons and by each one of our 144 Bishops. Our constitution (of which the Thirty-nine Articles have remained a part since the year 1801) our canons and our rurbics point out those laws. What are they?

Among them are Articles of Religion 22, 25, 28, 31, 34 and 35, legislating, respectively, against "the Romish doctrine concerning purgatory, pardons, worshipping and adoration of images and relics and invoking of saints; "against there being more than two sacraments;" "against transubstantiation (or the change of the substance of bread and wine) in the Supper of the Lord * * *;" and "its reservation, carrying about, lifting up, or worshipping reservations from it;" against * * * the Sacrifice of Masses in the which it was commonly said the Priest did offer Christ for the quick and the dead to have remission of pain or guilt" as being blasphemous fables and dangerous deceits; against "whosoever through his private judgment willingly and purposely doth openly break the traditions and ceremonies of the Church which be not repugnant to the word of God and be ordained and approved by common authority ought to be rebuked openly that others may fear to do the like * * * and against peril of idolatry.

Clearly our Church members who break those laws are mutineers and in thus breaking their vows are helping to divide and desolate our church. And just as true it is that those who keep its laws are upbuilding our Church and so far as it is concerned are preventing the desolation that follows the breaking of principles and of pledges. The inclusive total of our 6,093 Presbyters and Deacons constituting only .03.2 of 1 per cent, that is, thirty-two one-thousandths of 1 per cent of our total church membership seem as a body unable or unwilling to practice the constitution, canons and rubrics of our church.

Our 144 Bishops constituting only .0077 of 1 per cent, that is, seventy-seven ten-thousandths of 1 per cent of our total church membership, though especially charged by their ordination vows to practice and enforce the constitution, canons and rubrics of our church and thus maintain its stipulated Doctrine, Discipline and Worship, seem as a body unable or unwilling to fulfill that sacred obligation. It remains, then, for the 1,852,841 lay members of our church constituting more than 99 2-3 per cent of its total membership to devise a means by which the principles of their church denomination shall be maintained. Frankly, the rank and file of us must concert some means of cooperating with the body of Bishops to enforce the constitution, canons and rubrics of our church in order to prevent their infringement.

In which one of our 115 Dioceses and Missionary Distrists is there not open or concealed violation of the principles of our church and generally unrebuked by the local Bishop and furthered by the profuse and open circulation of literature teaching the abolition of each of the principles which our church in due course has adopted as stating our relationship with the great Protestant Reformation of the Sixteenth Century? Amongst the religious organizations ascribed to our denomination in this country is one functioning within the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of Maryland. Its requirements demand that each member shall undertake to pray daily for reunion with the "Holy See" and to offer daily a prayer for the "Holy Father" and that "Priests" in addition shall say each week a "mass of reunion." And in another of its articles is this requirement: "I believe in the primacy not only of honor but of jurisdiction of the Roman Pontiff, Successor to St. Peter, Prince of the Apostles, Vicar of Jesus Christ, etc., etc." Here in this Diocese of Maryland, whose Bishop has been elected to serve for seven years as the Presiding Bishop of our church in this country, is a branch church of one of the largest Protestant Episcopal churches in the Dioces of Maryland. In that branch church the simple and time honored form of managing it generally and as to service and ritual has been devastatingly changed so as to transform it into anti-Reformation practices. The beginning of that change occurred about two years ago when the sign containing the words "Protestant Episcopal" and the name of the Church was removed and there was announcement from the Pulpit that the branch church in question was to be operated as Anglo-Catholic. Not long subsequently there was announcement, also, from the Pulpit, that the said church would be operated as a Catholic Church. Amongst the practices there, according to a letter to me are the teaching of seven sacraments as supported by the Roman Church but contrary to the Thirty-nine Articles of Religion which are part of the constitution of our church to which Protestant Episcopal Church the Clergy in charge have sworn allegiance; the reservation of the bread left from the communion service and the keeping of it in a receptacle of "the Altar"—so called—with a light burning above it when the reservation is there; the having of special service following the regular evening service and holding aloft there at that service of the reserved bread to be then worshipped; the maintenance of a shrine to the Virgin Mary, and the collecting of money to erect a statue of her upon that shrine; the urging and practice of auricular confession; and the placing in the vestibule of the church of literature advocating the principles of the great Roman Church, opposition to which principles brought about the great Protestant Reformation. These beliefs are honest and orthodox to every good member of the great Roman Church, I believe, but if, as in this case, they are in flat opposition to the constitution, canons and rubrics of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States of America how can any member of that Protestant Episcopal Church consent to countenance them. And, oh! with what sorrowing regret am I forced to realize that for some reason or other the Episcopal Office in the Diocese of Maryland which has long known of these mutinous religious practices and teachings at this branch church has not controlled them. It is not true "that the end justifies the means" nor need there be any fear of creating any martyr-like reaction against forcing a minister of the Gospel or anybody else to keep faith especially when there is open and pervasive assault upon the sanctity of such a precious thing as the principles pledged to in an ordination vow. No shifty or traitorous or stupid violator of a plain duty undertaken under oath will ever receive punishment that will make of such mutineer a producer of other members of a foresworn faction. It is only the blood of the faithful "martyr" which can be termed the seed of the Church. Very many divergently placed Presbyters and Deacons violate the constitution, canons and rubrics of our Church and very many of their local Bishops fail to extirpate such disloyal and desolating practices. There is only one course left open to our general Church membership in order to maintain the principles of our denomination and that is to concert some method by which in cooperation with the Bishops an ingenuous and obedient keeping of the principles of the great Protestant Reformation as adopted by our Church in this country can be made steadily enforcible.

How can we protect and reinvigorate the character of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States of America according to the basic principles which gave it birth? We must utilize the eternal truth that just laws have their foundation in the consent of the governed. Therefore, the 1,870,720 lay members who constitute ninety-nine and two-third per cent of the total membership of our denomination in the United States of America seems to me forced to preserve the integrity of our Church through the exercise of certain Church Courts which shall be constituted to try any violation of the constitution, canons or rubrics of our Church when such violations are duly presented in writing to the appropriate Court by any ten adult baptized members of the parish in question, or by twenty per cent of the total adult baptized membership of said parish, if that percentage be less than the number ten. Such Courts to be of three classes to function as follows: (1) the trial or fact finding Court; (2) the Court of Review; (3) the Court of Appeals, to deal solely with questions of Doctrine, Faith and Worship. Class first—the trial or fact finding Court—to deal respectively under Canon 27, providing for the trial of a minister by his local Bishop; under Canon 29, providing for the trial of a Bishop by the standing Court constituted by the General Convention*; under Article IX of the constitution providing for the trial in each respective Diocese or Missionary District of Presbyter or Deacon canonically resident therein by each Diocesan Convention or by the Bishop and Convocation thereof in each Missionary Diocese as the case may be. Class second—the Courts of Review—to deal respectively by Canon 32, providing for the review by a standing Court* constituted by the General Convention of the trial of a Bishop. (This Court to be final on all questions except Doctrine, Faith and Worship); and by Canon 34, providing respectively for a standing Provincial Court of Review of the trial of Presbyter or Deacon, said Court to be constituted by each Provincial Synod. These Courts to be final on all questions except Doctrine, Faith and Worship. Class third—the Court of Appeals—to deal, under Canon 41, Solely with reviewing questions of Doctrine, Faith and Worship and constituted as a standing Court by the General Convention.

The use of such Courts will strengthen the strict observance by Bishop, Presbyter, Deacon and lay member of the constitution (including the Thirty-nine Articles of Religion) canons and rubrics of our Church to every one of which each baptized member of our Church has by proxy or in person undertaken allegiance which allegiance our clergy have reiterated through their Ordination Vows.

DeCourcy W. Thom.

---

*Note—Each of the Courts constituted respectively under either Canon 29 or Article IX of the Constitution, or Canons 32, 34 or 41, would be elected at the General Convention, or by the Diocesan or Missionary District or Provincial Convocation, as the case may be. In the case of the three Courts to be constituted by the General Convention, the House of Bishops would choose one member, the clerical delegates of the House of Deputies would choose one member, and the lay delegates of the House of Deputies would choose as many members as the figure 250,000 goes fully into the total number of the baptized membership of our Church.

In the case of the two classes of Courts to be constituted by the regular Diocesan Convention, or the regular Missionary District Convention, or the regular Provincial Convocation, the Bishop and clerical delegates acting as one body would choose two members and the lay delegates would choose seven members.

FAVORITE SCRIPTURE VERSES

(In this space each week will appear a favorite passage of Scripture as sent in by a different reader. Every one is, therefore, invited to send us their favorite verse. It is suggested that all who can, join with the rest of us in committing to memory the verse which so appears here each week, including its location in the Holy Book; and in due time your memory chest will be laden with choice eternal treasures, indeed. "Thy word have I hid in my heart, that I might not sin against thee," Ps. 119:11.)

This week the following verse was submitted by Miss Cornelia Packard, Washington, D. C.:

> "The blood of Jesus Christ His Son cleanseth us from all sin" (1 John 1:7).

Who will send one from the far-away places as well as very near us?

HERE A LITTLE---THERE A LITTLE

By the Reverend C. E. Lucas

Church of the Holy Communion, Buffalo, New York.

PART III.

BUT let us consider another source of evidence, viz.: the Prayers of Jesus. You will find some of them in the New Testament. We use one of these every time we assemble for public worship—The Lord's Prayer.

Is there any petition for the Departed in that prayer??? WHY NOT??? One day a disciple said to Jesus, "Lord, teach us to pray—and the Lord's Prayer was given in response to that request. You are thinking men and women, do you think that Jesus would in teaching His disciples how to pray omit the most important thing of all, viz.: a petition for the welfare of Departed souls—for it would be the most important IF such prayers were efficacious, were needed by the Departed.

In that prayer we are told to pray for our daily bread. Is bread to sustain physical life of more importance in the eyes of Jesus than the welfare of souls beyond the veil. OF COURSE NOT—and Jesus omits all petitions for the Departed for the very good reason that He does not want you to pray for them—for the very good reason that your prayers are not needed. If you pray for those for whom Jesus instructed you to, directly, or through the Apostles you will have to spend more time in prayer than you are now doing and you will have no time for foolish, unnecessary, useless prayers.

We have another Prayer of Jesus in John's Gospel. It is quite a lengthy prayer. Do not take my word for it—examine it carefully. When you do you will find there is not one single petition for Departed Souls. WHY???

On the Cross Jesus said to John, "Son, behold thy Mother". Near Him a thief—two of them—both dying. Did Jesus say to John, "When these two die, pray for their souls that they may 'rest in peace and light perpetual may shine upon them' "? Did He say that??? And WHY NOT??

He did command John to take care of His Mother. Was the physical well-being of His Mother of more importance than the spiritual well-being of an immortal soul? NO, but, and this is the important thing, one thief had already been forgiven, had already passed from condemnation to life eternal. He made that passage when he accepted Jesus as his Saviour there on the cross while he was still alive. The other was condemned already because he refused to accept Jesus as Saviour. No prayers were necessary, one did not need them, the other could not profit by them. One was saved through faith in Christ—the other was condemned because he did not, would not believe.

Parable of the Rich Man.

In the parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus, Jesus gives us a picture of two who have entered into the life beyond. Some proponents of these Prayers lay great emphasis upon this Scripture to bolster up their doctrine.

Let's see. Lazarus died, he was not buried, there was no service, no prayers offered for the repose of his soul. YET the angels came and carried him to Abraham's Bosom where he was comforted. If Lazarus was comforted without any prayers do you not believe that God will comfort your loved ones too?? God is no respecter of persons. In His sight, the high, the low, the rich, the poor—all are on equality. He does not require prayers from one and no prayers from another. If it took prayers to aid a Departed soul, Lazarus would have been in one awful fix. But it does not—he had no one to pray for him—and YET he was comforted. And so I believe that my loved ones and your loved are comforted too. God has made every provision necessary. Read this parable and see for yourself.

Now let's see about the Rich Man. He died and was buried. He had a funeral service, no doubt an elaborate one. The proponents say that in the time of Jesus Prayers for the Departed were regularly said by the Jews. All right, grant that for just a moment—DID THOSE PRAYERS HELP THE RICH MAN????? Read the parable yourself. Don't take my word for it.

IF Prayers for the Departed were being said in the time of Jesus then this parable is convincing proof that such prayers were not needed, were not efficacious, because Lazarus who had no funeral was comforted and the Rich Man who had a funeral was tormented.

BUT—there is no evidence that any prayers were said for him—nor is there any evidence that such prayers were said in the time of Jesus, except by the Pagans who prayed both to and for the departed, being Ancestor Worshippers.

Any way you take it, this parable is proof that Prayers for the Departed do not help them. In the case of Lazarus he was comforted without any help from the earth. In the case of the Rich Man no one could help him, neither those beyond the veil nor those on this side, because between him and the place of peace and joy there was "a great gulf fixed".

But say the proponents of Prayers for the Departed, "There is evidence of spiritual growth".

Well, let's see. I would say that repentance and a spirit of unselfishness would be signs of such growth. Do we find them?

The Rich Man makes two requests—call them prayers, if you wish. Both are denied.

Examine that parable yourself—does the Rich Man repent?? Does he says, "I am sorry I did not help Lazarus"? NO. In fact, he does not seem to realize that he had been selfish in his attitude toward Lazarus until Abraham says, "Remember". He has no consciousness of sin. He does not repent. So there is no spiritual growth in that direction.

Back home he left friends, relatives, fellow-countrymen galore. With him, then, there must have been others in the place of torment. An unselfish prayer would have been one for those with him in torment, would have been one for his friends, for his fellow-countrymen, for all men everywhere.

You find two prayers—the first is for himself—not repentance—not a prayer for forgiveness, but for relief. The second is for his five brothers.

Perhaps you have heard this prayer before—

> "Bless me and my wife,
> My son John and his wife,
> Us four and no more."

That is the acme of selfishness in Prayer—and the Rich Man does not pray for those in torment with him, does not pray for even his friends, does not pray for his nation—he prays for himself and five brethren—us six and no more. Selfish to the nth degree.

BUT—and this is the most significant point of all—both prayers are answered in the negative. They do not help him or his brethren in even the slightest degree.

Now, do not take my word for it. Go home and read the parable and see for yourself there is not one ray of hope in that passage of Scripture for the belief that Prayers for the Departed will avail to help them.

As you read that Scripture, also notice this—"They have Moses and the Prophets"—in other words, God has made every possible provision for the Salvation of the human soul during its earthly pilgrimage—and if they refuse to hear, will not heed, will not turn unto the Lord their God and be saved, then it is their fault, not God's.

State of the Departed.

At this point I want to draw a distinction between the Protestant conception of the State of the Departed and the Catholic conception.

Briefly—The Protestant believes

(a) with Paul that "absent from the body at home with the Lord".
(b) "Blessed are the Dead who die in the Lord."

In other words, the Righteous Man, that is, the Man who is Saved, goes to be with God in a state of joy, in peace, in happiness—and is "at rest". No more pain, no more suffering, no more struggling—all that is past—"all his sins are blotted out". His soul is washed in the Blood of the Lamb and he is cleansed—for the Blood of Jesus is sufficient to cleanse from all unrighteousness. In other words, our standing before God is not on our own merits, but on the merits of Jesus, our Saviour, our Elder Brother.

Briefly—The Catholic believes that the righteous Dead, i. e., the Man who is SAVED, goes not to be with Jesus in a state of joy, peace, happiness, but first he enters an Intermediate State, or place of cleansing, purification and purging. In other words, his days of suffering, of pain, are not yet ended—the Blood of Jesus does not cleanse entirely but the process of cleansing is prolonged for an indeterminate period in this Intermediate State, which both Roman Catholics and Anglo-Catholics call Purgatory. After the soul has been thoroughly cleansed by this period of suffering in the Intermediate State it then passes to the place of joy, peace, rest, in the presence of God.

Further, both Protestants and Catholics teach that this life is the period of Probation—that death ends that Probationary period—and the soul which is LOST at death is LOST through all eternity. While the Catholic Prays for the Departed and offers The Sacrifice of the Mass as a propitiary Sacrifice for the sins of the Departed he prays only for the Righteous Dead, i. e., The SAVED Man. He does not Pray for or offer Masses for the LOST.

The Protestant does not Pray for the Departed because he believes they are with the Lord already, where no harm can touch them, where they have no need for further help or aid from this earth. He denies that there is a Purgatory or Intermediate State of cleansing, purification and purging—but believes that God has made every necessary provision for the care of the soul, both in this life and the life beyond the veil—and that He has given us a full revelation in His Holy Word of what is required, what is necessary, what is essential—and that where the Scriptures are silent the Christian should not substitute the speculations or theories of men, but rest content to walk by faith, neither doubting nor fearing, but trusting and unafraid.

In thus drawing a contrast between the Catholic and Protestant viewpoint, I am dealing in simple language with the historic position of the past, the official position, not the opinion of individuals, or even large groups of individuals, but the great bulk of the two branches of thought.

Now, this Revised Prayer Book repudiates the Fundamental position of Protestantism and accepts the Catholic position. Those who accept the Revised Book, by their very act of acceptance, necessarily assert that this Church has been wrong all those years in which we neglected to Pray for the Departed.

I want to ask you to face that question squarely—HAS THIS CHURCH BEEN WRONG ALL THAT TIME??

Are you willing to say that??? Those who use the Revised Book, by so much as actions speak louder than words, will make that very admission.

Again—IF we have been wrong about Prayers for the Departed—what about Masses for the Dead?? We must have been wrong about that also. There is just as much evidence in support of Masses for the Dead as there is in support of Prayers for them. The same Fathers who taught the one taught the other. Said one of these Fathers, "If our Prayers suffice to help the Dead, how much more will the Sacrifice of the Altar".

Whenever you use the Revised Book remember this—for three hundred and seventy-three years, from 1552 to 1925, the official Book of Worship did not contain any authority to say a Requiem or Masses for the Dead.

I have shown you that such Masses are now provided for. Of course, many will avoid the use of the term. Call things by new names and you can get many things across. Thus it was that Caesar Augustus in a single reign transformed the Roman Government from a Republic to an Autocracy—simply by carefully avoiding those terms that were obnoxious to the people. But the result was identical—the people lost their liberty.

So it matters little by what name you call it—"Communions," "Requiems," "Requiem Masses," "Memorials" or "Masses"—the underlying idea of this revised service at Burials when the Communion is used is that which inheres in the "Sacrifice of the Mass".

For three hundred and seventy-three years this Church officially denied that by failing to provide any "Communion for the Departed" and by protesting most emphatically against the doctrine.

Bear in mind that this Revised Book is one more step in the ever-onward march to Anglo-Catholicism whose definite aim and purpose is to destroy the Protestant character of the Episcopal Church. And the Anglo-Catholics teach that the "Sacrifice of the Altar" will benefit and therefore condition the state of the Departed.

If Prayers, Communions, Requiems or Masses are necessary and essential to the well-being of the Departed today, then were they not just as essential during the three hundred and seventy-three years when there was no Requiem provided in the Prayer Book??? AND WHAT BECAME OF THOSE MILLIONS OF SOULS WHO DIED IN THE MEANTIME????

This is a serious question I have asked you. I ask it because I know you are thinking men and women.

Millions of souls have died in the faith of this Church for whom not one single Prayer or one single Mass was ever said after they departed this life—do you believe that those souls suffered because of that neglect. If so, then you can say with the Anglo-Catholics, that you believe that this Church has been wrong for three hundred and seventy-three years.

This Church.

As for me, I believe that those souls went to be with God—that they dwell in that place where there is neither grief nor sorrow, neither pain nor suffering, but where joy, peace, happiness reign supreme. I believe they are there in the land of Glory where they need no sun nor moon nor stars, for God Himself giveth them LIGHT and LIFE. Do you?? Then you ought to stand with me in refusing to use this Revised Book.

The Scriptures state that Lazarus was "comforted", yet no Requiem was said for Lazarus, no one prayed for the repose of his soul. Believest thou the Scriptures?? If you do, then you should refuse to use the Revised Book.

On the other hand, if you stand with the Anglo-Catholics and accept this Revised Book with its admission that we have been wrong all these years in regards to Prayers and Masses for the Departed, are you also willing to admit that we have been wrong about Purgatory???

Purgatory.

The same traditions of the Church, the same Fathers who can be used to bolster the Prayers and the Masses, can be used to support the doctrine of Purgatory.

Remember, this Revised Book is one more step in the ever onward march of Anglo-Catholicism and that sect teaches that there is a Purgatory.

It is true—and I wish to emphasize this—the new Prayers do not use the term Purgatory. In fact, they are rather indefinite and may be, are, and will be variously interpreted by those who advocate them.

Using those Prayers as a basis one can teach some of the tenets of Russellism or Mohammedanism, provided he is careful not to use the terms.

But the Anglo-Catholics will teach the doctrine of Purgatory. A year after these prayers were first authorized, the Rev. S. C. Hughson, Order of the Holy Cross, wrote this:

> "The Church teaches that in the next world the Blessed Dead are cleansed. . . . The Church has ever taught the existence of an Intermediate State into which only the souls which pass out of this world in a condition of grace, can enter, and in which they are purged. This state is called Purgatory from the fact that it is a place of purging . . . Purgatory might be called the ante-room of Heaven. . . . . The Church teaches that the process of purgation involves suffering . . . . Our prayers bring soothing relief from these inevitable pains and hasten the time when the soul, perfectly restored in Christ will cease to suffer the disciplinary process of conformity to Him. . .
>
> The Church teaches that the souls of the Faithful Departed, when cleansed of all imperfection, pass immediately into Heaven, and enjoy the Beatific vision."

Some who pray for the Departed will deny that they believe in a Purgatory. Some will say that they are in a place of growth, not a place of suffering.

All growth involves struggle and all struggle involves some kind of suffering. It matters little by what name you call it, whether an Intermediate State of growth, or an Intermediate State of Suffering, of Purgation, of Purgatory, the underlying thought is one and the same. The Scriptures say that Christ saves to the uttermost, but those who hold this doctrine say something else is necessary—something beside this life of probation here—we must continue to suffer over there. They deny that we enter into joy, rest, peace, until after passing through another place of purgation, purification, cleansing.

Turn again to the parable of Lazarus. What saith the Scriptures?? Lazarus died. Did he go to a Purgatory?? Did he need any prayers to soothe him, to comfort him, to aid his growth in the life beyond??? Is that what the Scriptures say???

Nay, the Scriptures say Lazarus died, the angels came and received him and carried him to Abraham's Bosom and he was "comforted". Not a Prayer for him, not even a funeral service—and Yet he was "comforted". Believest thou the Scriptures?? If so, then you know that God is no respecter of persons, and that what He did for Lazarus He has already done for your loved ones who have passed beyond the veil.

The Anglo-Catholics further say that this Church has been wrong for three hundred and seventy-three years in refusing to pray to the Departed. I quote again from the Rev. C. S. Hughson, O. H. C.:

> "We ask the prayers of the Dead whether they be in Purgatory or reigning with Christ in Heaven."

Invocations of Saints and Mariolatry.

I want to again emphasize the fact that there are no prayers to the Saints or the Virgin in the Revised Book. But I again remind you that the Revised Book is merely one additional step in the ever onward march of Anglo-Catholicism.

And you will see from the above quotation that the Rev. S. C. Hughson teaches that we should pray to the Departed—so those who accept this Revised Book should be prepared for an increasing amount of teaching along that line. The only way to keep it out is to refuse to use the Revised Book.

Remember this—the same Fathers whose writings are used to support Prayers and Masses or Communions for the Departed, also believed and taught the doctrines of Invocation of Saints and the Worship of the Virgin. And in this twentieth century the Order of the Holy Cross teaches openly in our own Church, and General Convention and the House of Bishops has never rebuked them for so doing, all catholic doctrines, including those which I have several times named in this address.

If we erred in one or two matters as this Revised Book admits then we must have erred in all the rest as the Anglo-Catholics assert. Exactly the same evidence that supports one supports them all. They stand and fall together. They are associated doctrines. For that reason our forefathers repudiated them all. For that reason the Anglo-Catholics, whose definite aim and purpose is to destroy the Protestant character of the Episcopal Church, teach all these doctrines. They stand or fall together.

Of course, they do not expect to get them across all at one time, in every parish in the land, they are content for the present to have you accept the Revised Book, but they will not rest there—and any Church that accepts that revised Book should not be content to rest there. They should go on—they will go on—but always on the plan of "here a little and there a little" until the Church is completely transformed.

In conclusion, I would like to say this. Perhaps from what I have already said you may conclude that I am devoid of sentiment concerning the Departed. On the contrary, I am one of the most sentimental in his devotion and attachment to the memory of my loved ones.

In the red clay hills of Georgia there sleeps today one whom "I loved long since and lost awhile". Her memory is still as fragrant, as vivid, as though it were but yesterday she left me.

Less than a month ago I made a special trip to the place where she lies to place with my own hands a floral offering upon the slab which marks her resting place. This I have done regularly since she left me.

Yes, brethren, I have sentiment, more than the average—but my religion, my faith is not based upon sentiment, but upon the sure foundation of the Word of God.

God says that He is able to keep that which we have committed into His hands.

Before the end came—I committed into His keeping my beloved, with the firm conviction, the abiding faith, that when I go hence and am seen no more, I will find her safe, at peace. at rest. Safe in His everlasting, almighty, arms, where no harm can possibly come to her I believe that when God called her, the angels came and carried her, not to a place of suffering, but to land of perpetual joy and peace and felicity; to a place where grief, suffering, tears have no place; to a place where happiness reigns supreme, where she stands perpetually in the light; to the place where God, the Blessed Father, who doeth all things well, giveth LIGHT and LIFE to all forevermore.

There she is. There I leave her. I long for nothing more for her except that which God hath promised. I am content to walk by faith, trusting, believing, confident that His precious promises can be relied upon. He has seen fit to draw the veil—shall I be so presumptuous, so lacking in faith, trust and confidence in Him that I would seek to pierce behind the veil until in His own time, His own way, He bids me come and join her???

The Scriptures say, "Blessed are the Dead who died in the Lord". "Believest thou the Scriptures?" I DO.

And so believing I cannot accept this Revised Book which incorporates practices that the Word of God do not authorize, practices that are based upon the Traditions of the Church, the Writings of the Fathers. To do so would be to place these Traditions on a parity with the Word of God. That I cannot, will not do.

My position is this:

Others may base their religion on Sentiment. I base mine on the Holy Scriptures.

Others may base their religion on the Writings of the Fathers. I base mine upon the Bible.

Others may accept the evidence of the Catacombs as a basis for their religion. I base mine upon the pure Word of God—that and that only.

Others may repudiate the faith for which Latimer, Ridley and Cranmer laid down their lives. But I will not.

Others may accept this Revised Book, and by so doing tacitly admit that this Church has been wrong for many years. I will never admit that.

Others may sit idly by, may remain silent, while Anglo-Catholicism goes marching on, but this Revised Book is going one step too far. I must, I will, I do protest.

With profound conviction that this Church did not err when she removed such prayers from her liturgy—with a firm determination to remain true to the faith as set forth in the Prayer Book now in your pews I refuse to use this Revised Book.

Neither by silent acquiescence or meek submission will I make the admission that this Church has been wrong in the past—therefore, I refuse to use a Book, the use of which involves such an admission.

True to the Word of God, true to the Faith of the Fathers—on that rock I stand. Amen.

Who will stand with me???

THE BRIDGE.

An Allegory.

W. C. Irvine.

In my dream I came to the banks of a great river. Craft of different character and size were constantly crossing towards the other shore; some seemed to be a particular make and always crossed in safety, but many, very many, failed to reach the further side.

In process of time a great bridge was built at tremendous cost which spanned the river, and over it day and night passed a constantly increasing stream of people, old and young, rich and poor, without fear of the treacherous waters beneath. Despite this, and the fact that many crossing the bridge did so with joy and singing, tens of thousands kept trooping to the banks of the river and with infinite pains and great expense built their small craft and set sail for the further shore—but alas, with no success. The boats which formerly had crossed with safety were now absent, not one of them set sail, all others were, as formerly, lost.

Desiring to learn the meaning of all this, I approached a watcher in white, who kindly instructed me. Said he: "This is the river of death; every moment some are leaving their earth-home for the Great Beyond: but, alas, the great majority refuse the safe passage across the well-built bridge, preferring to trust in their own efforts for safety. Their small craft speedily are shipwrecked and they are lost."

"But," said I, "before the bridge was built many succeeded in reaching the other shore, but none do so now!"

"Ah," replied the watcher, "before Christ came, some obedient to God's law, putting their trust in Him, brought the appointed sacrifice, and on account of the efficacy of Christ's work on Calvary, were safely ferried over. Now no such provision is made; in Christ, and Christ alone, is safety. The bridge is Christ."

"But," cried I, "why do not all cross by the bridge? Are such conditions laid down which make it impossible for most to use it?"

"Nay, nay," he replied, "herein to us who watch lies the mystery of the ages. The bridge is free to all who in simple faith accept the Christ of God as their Lord and Saviour."

"But," I ventured to enquire, "is this made known to the dwellers on earth?"

"Yea, indeed, incredible though it may seem, the Maker of heaven and earth has been proclaiming this blessed fact for nigh 1,900 years; and yet—"

AND YET MANY WHO READ THIS ARE TRYING TO GET TO HEAVEN BY THEIR OWN GOOD WORKS!

ARE YOU?

"Not by works of righteousness which we have done, but ACCORDING TO HIS MERCY HE SAVED US."—Titus 3:5.—The Indian Christian.

THE CHURCH WENT SECURITY FOR HIM.

Texas has taught the rest of the country many things, but we have just learned of something new from that great State. A man was convicted of some crime and sent to the State prison under a long-time sentence. In order that the prisoner might return home and make provision for his family, the Governor of the State granted him a sixty-day furlough. This was done because the church to which his mother belongs and its pastor went security for him. The Dallas Morning News, commenting on this matter, says:

"The interest of Churchmen in those undergoing penal sentence is always commendable, although it is not always exercised in so intelligent and helpful a fashion as in the case under consideration. Sympathy is always easier than usefulness. And yet there is plenty of room for both in handling those out of prison either by executive clemency or by completion of their term of incarceration.

"But the idea that a church can afford to stand good for a convict is worth turning over. It is something of an adventure in practical Christianity of that sort that appeals instantly even to the man on the outside of the church. If churches could go a bit farther and stand good for their own members, the last arrow in the quiver of the unchurched would lose its barbs. Suppose that church life progressed to the point where the debts of a member were guaranteed by the congregation and his character underwritten by his brethren in the faith. In that case, of course, it would be a bit harder to get into the church—but getting in would mean more, wouldn't it?"—Presbyterian of the South.

THE CHRISTIAN'S VACATION

By the Reverend Kensey Johns Hammond

Now Jacob's well was there. Jesus therefore, being wearied with His journey, sat thus on the well" (John 4:6).

AN old-time traveler left the Jordan Valley one day to walk northward. The country was not just like the highlands of Galilee. But for miles he had been ascending, and, "wearied with his journey", he chose to rest awhile, near the base of Mount Gerezin, and at Jacob's well. It was "one of those heavenly days that cannot die". Gustav Doré represents Christ as seated near the well's mouth. A sculptured column, half-hidden by a luxuriant vine, supports the rude pulley whose rope overhangs the water. Behind rises Mount Gerezim, its rugged, bold masses of rock with bare, precipitous faces, rise grandly above "green pastures". Eastward are forests of noble trees. Nearer are growths of almond, pomegranate, olive, pear and plum trees. The air is melodious with song birds. Brooks of clear water from mountain springs flow by. Thousands of bright flowers adorn the ground. "The blessings of Joseph reach their height in the Vale of Shechem" (C. Geikie).

We have an interesting picture of our Lord's humanity, reminding of another day when he slept clamly in the stern of a fishing-boat. How good of God to tell us Christ could be what we so often are. It matters not so much with what men are "wearied"; business or busyness, hard work or ennui. We know men joke about being "born tired", and some "weary themselves to commit iniquity". Habakuk knew of those who "wearied themselves for very vanity". Beside this picture of our Lord, such tired souls may find just rebuke. Yet the Saviour's compassion can reach even these in the weariness of an empty, sinful life. While to all weary ones, He lovingly calls: "Come unto Me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

Remember, then, there can be a weariness through well-doing our Lord could experience. We gaze with love for Him at infirmity which kept Him at rest while disciples went on needed errand. We seek a lesson for tired disciples today, tired through, not with, well-doing. (a) It is not unnatural. Obedience is not an intermittent thing. Sometimes it even requires strenuous and continued effort, and then we become just what our Lord was. (b) Nor is it wrong to be tired. Zeal and love call forth our best efforts, "doing with our might what our hands find to do". Even willing hearts grow weary. This is not wrong. It is inevitable. The tired worker needs one look at this picture of a tired Master, and then—

To follow the Lord's example and rest. But how did He rest? There are many methods for this: (1) Complete inactivity, one will say. Use "tired nature's sweet restorer". Sometimes this is the remedy to begin the cure, if there be sickness. "Come ye yourselves apart into a desert place and rest awhile," our Lord advised, and He did so. It is the rest of the unstrung bow: of "the fetterless mind wandering free". It is of real value, and will not be abused by the devoted servant. To such a one idleness would form punishment. Rest means provision for new, consecrated service. (2) Our Lord rested using the true principle of varied occupation. A weary Elijah cast himself under a juniper tree and wished to die. Immediate relief was divinely given for physical needs, then for forty days and nights, he rested in meditation, instead of bearing witness. In his picture of our Lord, Doré has painted a Samaritan woman standing beside Him at the well. Her water jar rests on its stone coping. One hand grasps a light rope, encircling the jar's neck, the other rests lightly upon the jar. She poses in an attitude natural for one whose attention was arrested, when about to draw water to fill her jar. She gazes upon Him with steady interest. He, with animated expression and appropriate gesture, rejoices to teach her heavenly truth about Himself. Read the pen-picture of St. John. See Christ here both human and divine, seeking in new activity the "rest" He needed. Ah! He "must needs go through Samaria", and it is His "meat and drink to do the will of his Father".

Test this principle in the very homely way of walking over a perfectly level road or a hilly one, where different muscles are used or the same used differently. The housekeeper can rest, caring awhile for flowers in her garden. One may read, while resting a tired body. So the old motto "without haste, without rest" becomes a possible experience. So the Christian can be "not weary in well doing". Secular work may be varied with doing spiritual duty. We should do all for God, but in this alternation of duties, each may be the better done. When another principle is experienced—"Unto him that hath shall be given," and opportunities multiply, duties divinely sent will not be beyond the servant's strength. The Master knows its measure, and just how tired you are. Expect to find in varied service for him true rest.

His Day of rest comes. You put your wearied self to bed Saturday night (not Sunday morning). You waken perhaps not entirely rested. How can you make it a Sabbath day? Stay home all day? Read, eat, converse, sleep? Or associate with comrades of every day, keeping mind and heart intent on what has constantly occupied these for six days past, in both thought and conversation, though no other activity? Or you enter the Lord's House and heartily share in public worship of Him. You listen to "duty with honest heart", and to words of our Lord in their precious teaching. You kneel at the Table of the Lord, and feast your soul unto Life eternal. You crowd aside the life earthly for a few hours, in an entire change of thought and sympathies. You experience all this in the company of dear relatives and friends. Have you tried either of these three forms of "resting", or all of them? In which was there truest re-creation of your self? Through which did you become stronger for Monday's business and Tuesday's trials? Which rested your soul and body?

Summer time brings vacations to many and needed rest period. Visions of green grass and foliage, of running brooks and mountains, or ocean breezes across the steamer, or seashore, all appear to us. You escape from city heat and brick walls and sidewalks. You sit down by a well and rest. You are refreshed daily. Even here is idleness most satisfactory? If you went as an invalid, possibly, yes. If you were only "worn out", rest brought strength soon and desire to use it. How while away the remaining days pleasantly? Learn how and do it. Then forget not your soul. As Christ sat and gazed on the lovely landscape before Him, no doubt His thought became communings with His Father. We know Elijah made his forty days' meditations devotional. There were real duties yet before him. Thousands of Christians today are busy men and women, lamenting often their lack of time in a day's routine for quiet thought about God, or learning more of His Truth, or prayer to Him. Their daily devotions must be brief. The summer vacation and rest in God's nature-temples bring possible opportunities when one gives preference to these spiritual privileges for awhile each day, over the idle life of the hotel or springs' resort. A small reference Bible, or favorite book of devotion may be slipped in when the suitcase is packed, and used, greatly help in improvement of precious summer time. You will come home refreshed in soul as well as body.

Be not surprised if God gives you influence over some friendly soul you meet in vacation-time. On acquaintance you find an appetite for God's Truth you can out of your own knowledge gratify. Of course, you were busy for God at home, and this is your rest time. Yet, where the Master has led a soul into your life-path who needs you, He who sent you this duty knew just how tired you were, and yet He chooses to send it. Therefore, do it. It is not beyond your present power from Him. Be not weary in well doing. Follow your Master's kindly tact, and bring living water to a thirsty Samaritan, seeking a lesser benefit from earthly well.

These principles have daily application in the life of Christ's servants. Follow His footsteps. See your duty in the life of the home, the dearest and hardest place in which to serve faithfully. Christ's name should be oftener on our lips here, and our witness for Him more definite. Use the hours of the Lord's Day. The morning hour you need to promote by your participation, the public worship of God in the community, and this is a primary obligation. But the afternoon remains for the Christian visit to a sick friend or neighbor, to the prisoner or the poor. God gives you the talent, and in His opportunities you may develop it obediently by exercise. The celebrated Dr. Chalmers met and talked with a stranger in a hotel in the Scottish Highlands, who was inclined to skepticism. A gentleness of manner in him impressed the minister. He felt strangely moved to go to the man's room after they parted, and ask for further conversation. He resisted the impulse and retired. The next morning, asking what some stir and confusion in the house meant, he learned the stranger died during the night. "Oh! the bitterness of heart I felt," said the minister, "that I had failed to use God-given opportunity." We are privileged to sow the seed of God's Word "in season, out of season". It is not wrong to be tired even through well-doing. It is wrong, lacking faithfulness to our Lord, to "mistake the weariness of inaction for the weariness of over-exertion". It is grand to learn from our Lord's example in varied service, God-given, to seek refreshment of soul. It is grand to be privileged to sow where later a harvest will be reaped to the glory of our Lord, who lovingly served us.

A Church that Draws the Masses

Into the business office of a public stenographer, a consecrated Christian woman, there came from time to time a keen-minded young mechanic. He never went to Church. His interest in "religion" was nil. But tactful conversation was not fruitless. One Monday morning he made this surprising remark, "Well, I went to Church last night".

The young woman was delighted and frankly said so. Quickly he interrupted, with grim determination and bitterness in his voice as he declared, "But I shall never go again!"

Pressed for the reason, he gave this explanation: "For years I have been antagonistic toward the Church. But lately I have wondered if, perhaps, I was not missing something because of my hostile attitude. I talked it over with my wife, and we decided to bury the old resentment, take our child, and go to Church.

"Last night we went with open minds to Dr. Blank's Church (naming one of the most popular in the city). We enjoyed the music. We were prepared to hear an authoritative voice. But what do you suppose that preacher did? He spent his time trying to prove to us that about half the Bible is not true. I tell you, we working people have no appetite for that kind of negative stuff! If a man does not believe his own Book, why should we waste time listening to him?"

A positive message! The masses crave it. Preachers and laymen alike who believe the Bible as the inspired Word of the Living God can speak with Divine finality. On the other hand (and reverently), if the Bible is not the Word of God, what authority have we to speak at all? The only message that will grip individual hearts, that will carry with it evangelizing power for the masses, must find its keynote in "thus saith the Lord".—Missionary Review of the World.

THE KNIGHTS—AND STRATFORD HALL.

By Will Allen Dromgoole.

We call to the blood of Knights!
  Wherever shall knighthood be;
We call with the clarion call
  Of an ancient chivalry.
We call to the quick and the dead—"Come forth!"
  We're Knights who rode with Lee.

We're the Knights who rode with Lee,
  When our Chieftain bade "Fall in"!
Oh, we fought as a Southron should,
  And our spurs are as bright as then;
For the blood of Knights is a deathless thing
  In the loyal hearts of men.

We heard when a great cry rose;
  In our silent graves we heard;
And the soft sod over us sighed,
  And we in our still graves stirred.
O, clear as a bugle-call it came,
  And sweet as a homing bird.

From Stratford the cry went forth,
  From the proud Potomac's shore;
It called to the sleeping Knights to rouse
  And ride as they rode of yore;
"O, rally and ride, to the rescue, Knights,
  Ride for the Chief once more."

And the dumb grave bade—"Come forth!"
  And, a gallant cavalry,
We ride the wind and we ride the tide,
  From the Chesapeake to the sea;
We conjured the dead from their peaceful graves
  With the deathless slogan—"Lee"!

To Atlanta's stricken heart,
  And to Nashville's wounded side,
To Shiloh's broken and bleeding breast
  We called to the Knights to ride;
And the dead came forth in their blood-stained gray,
  And their stainless lofty pride.

Came Age from the pleasant vales;
  Came Youth from the mountain's slope;
Came one with a laurel crown,
  And around his neck a rope;
And we ride the wind, to the rescue ride,
  With the flaming sword of Hope.

We call in the cause of pride;
  We call in the cause of fame;
We call in the cause of deathless love
  For our dauntless leader's name;
That it need not suffer nor lack nor loss,
  That it shall not suffer shame.

We call to the blood of Knights;
  Wherever shall knighthood be;
We call with the clarion call
  To a new-born chivalry.
We call to the quick and the dead—"Come ride,
  With the Knights who ride for Lee"!

IN TIMES OF TROUBLE, GOD'S TRUSTING CHILD MAY SAY:

FIRST: He brought me here; it is by His will I am in this straight place: in that will I rest.

NEXT: He will keep me here in His love, and give me grace in this trial to behave as His child.

THEN: He will make the trial a blessing, teaching me lessons He intends me to learn, and working in me the grace He means to bestow.

LAST: In His good time He can bring me out again—how and when He knows.

Say: I am here—

(1) By God's appointment.
(2) In His keeping.
(3) Under His training.
(4) For His time.

"And call upon me in the day of trouble: I will deliver thee, and thou shalt glorify me."—Ps. 50:15.—Andrew Murray.

Clense the Lepers

Laura B. McKean, the author of this true story, is the wife of Dr. James W. McKean, who, in addition to his regular medical Mission work for the Presbyterian Board, directs the Chiengmai Leper Colony. The story of its founding is as follows:

Elephants are greatly prized by the Siamese; in fact, their flag used to bear the emblem of a white elephant. Nothing was more natural than that the King should give his son a birthday present of a baby elephant. He was a light-colored elephant and therefore especially admired, and he had a short piece of trunk like a few feet of rubber hose which was splendid for giving himself shower baths or handing up sticks of sugar cane to his wide pink mouth. As the elephant grew older he got so sulky and bad-tempered that he was banished to an island in the middle of a river. But that didn't improve either his disposition or his manners. He trampled the gardens and stole rice from the graneries and when he put his trunk through the window of a little bamboo house and didn't find just what he wanted, he leaned his great weight against the little house and overturned it. And because he was the King's elephant nobody could hurt him. Finally everybody moved away and left him to live alone on the island until he died.

Then Dr. McKean went to the King and asked for the island to build a Home for the Siamese leper people. The King agreed to this, but declined to pay for any of the buildings. Dr. McKean came to America and, aided by the Mission to Lepers, raised a fund to commence work on the Chiengmai Leper Colony. The King loaned his working elephants to pile the logs and help with the building. Princes and officials became interested too, and eventually the government was led to give an annual grant in aid. The Chiengmai Colony later influenced the Siamese Red Cross Society to recondition an old fort near Bangkok and establish there a Leper Colony. Thus a beginning has been made in controlling leprosy in Northern and Central Siam. South Siam's lepers still patiently await attention.

In the five hundred miles south of Bangkok there is only one work for lepers and that very small. It is located at Sri Tamarat under Dr. McDaniel. At Trang also there is a small clinic where Dr. Bulkley gives weekly treatments, but there are no hospital accommodations for lepers. It is heart-breaking to be forced to refuse them even a place to sleep on the ground. South Siam is a garden spot where flowers, fruits, cocoanuts and rubber grow luxuriously through every month of the year. Even leprosy grows so luxuriously that the region has its full quota of the 20,000 lepers said to be in Siam. The government has offered cooperation in buying the land for a Hospital where lepers may not only be treated, but their physical condition watched over day by day. A gift of necessary funds from friends in America will set this plan in motion.

The lepers of Siam are desperately in need of this healing touch. Without the Gospel of a loving Christ they have no hope for the life to come, since their religion teaches that in a future existence their leprosy will be the measure of the magnitude of their sin. Without the medical skill and healing they have no hope in this life but of dying, perhaps under a tree in the rain, or alone in a dirty hut covered with a torn blanket.

Christ said "Cleanse the Lepers". A short ten years ago we could only feed and comfort them. Now the means of literally obeying the Master's command are within our reach.

You can aid the American Mission to Lepers to extend relief to the suffering lepers of Siam and twenty other countries by sending a contribution to Fleming H. Revell, Treasurer, The American Mission to Lepers, Inc., 156 Fifth Avenue, New York.

Letters to the Editor

In this Department the Editor will at all times welcome communications expressing opinions on the various topics which are engaging the attention of the Church. But the Editor will not hold himself responsible for such opinions.

No "Letters to the Editor" will appear in our columns except those coming to us signed by writer.

Mr. Editor:

Any effort to restore to the churches the element of physical healing is always welcomed by Christian Scientists, and the article in your issue of June 29 on "Spiritual Healing" is an indication that this subject is receiving serious consideration. But while the author quite evidently meant to be kindly, his statement that "Christian Science and various other methods of mental healing, all use suggestion", is incorrect so far as it applies to Christian Science, and therefore requires correction.

Christian Scientists heal the sick through prayer, as we are taught in the Scriptures, and the prayer of faith which heals the sick has nothing in common with any form of mental suggestion.

RICHARD E. PRINCE,
Christian Science Committee on Publication.

Norfolk, Va.

FIFTEENTH CENTURY PRACTICES REVISED.

Mr. Editor:

I read on page 12 of the Southern Churchman of this week a "requiem mass for Father Wilcox held in St. Mary's Church".

What I enclose shows whither the Anglo-Catholic movement is going. One who prays for the "blessed dead" will soon learn to pray for the unblessed dead, who sorely need our prayers much more.

B. MINOR.

Charlottesville, Va.

Enclosure follows:

Quentin Durward.

(Sir Walter Scott, Chapter V.)

"Untying his gold chain from his neck, Balafré twisted off with his strong set, firm teeth about four inches from one end of it, and gave it to his attendant. "Here, Andrew, carry this to my gossip, jolly Father Boniface, the monk of St. Martin's. Greet him well from me, by the same token that he could not say, "God save ye", when we last parted at midnight. Tell my gossip that my brother and sister and some other of my house are all dead and gone, and I pray him to say masses for their souls as far as the value of these links will carry him, and to do on trust what else may be necessary to free them from purgatory. And, hark ye, as they were just living people, and free from all heresy, it may be that they are well-nigh out of limbo already, so that a little matter may break them free of the fetlocks; and in that case, look ye, ye will say I desire to take out the balance of the gold upon curses upon a generation called the Ogilvies of Angushire, in what way soever the Church may best come at them. You understand all this, Andrew?

(In fifteenth century, time of Louis XI.)

Berkeley Minor.

Mr. Editor:

I want to thank you for the address by Mr. Bell on General Lee—it's great. I am enjoying the Southern Churchman as I do but few papers——there is a candidness—a loyalty to the dear old Bible—a spiritual force about it that scarcely any other paper possesses.

J. C. HOOKS.

New Market, Va.

AN ACKNOWLEDGMENT.

The article published on page 24 of the July 27 issue of Southern Churchman, "The Assassination of President Lincoln", by Captain S. A. Ashe, was reproduced from Dr. Lyon G. Tyler's Quarterly, to which credit should have been given.

Book Reviews

EMERGENT EVOLUTION AND THE INCARNATION. By William C. Woods, Ph. D. Cloth. Pp. 109. Published by the Morehouse Publishing Co., Milwaukee, Wis. Price $1.

An admirable contribution to the field of Creative Evolution. Reverently stated and convincingly appealing, it should be in the hands of all who hold that hypotheses. The author summarizes his thesis as follows: "We believe, then, that the human body was a mediate creation in the sense that it was formed from pre-existing materials by the natural generation of a protoplasm which had behind it a very evolutionary history; that its creation was immediate in the sense that the infusion of an immediately created soul constituted its humanity; and that what was true of our first parents is likewise (as regarding our relation to sin) true of ourselves."

But we must not ignore the fact that ultra evolutionists will have none of this. Mr. Charles Smith, president of the American Association for the Advancement of Atheism, in his debate with Dr. W. B. Riley, insists: "Reconcilers strive desperately to save God, with laughable results. Words are twisted out of their meaning, facts are ignored and logic is forgotten. 'Creation by Evolution' is their latest jargon. The history of hypocrisy has no blacker page than the record of the attempts to reconcile science and religion. The defeated theologians now declare that Evolution is a higher, nobler method than the Special Creation described in Genesis. If God's purpose was to create a perfect being, why a multitude of experiments? It is a silly belief that a slow-making of the world by the hit or miss of Evolution is a higher method than instantaneous creation. Reconcilers are contemptible." (Dr. Riley, be it known, is not a reconciler.)

We hold no brief for this rabid infidel; but there is a warning in these caustic words that evolutionists are true to form; they disdainfully contend that the imposed fellowship of Christian apologetes is not agreeable to them. They despise the preferred companionship of Christian theologians who would humor their atheistic attitude by a condescending and accommodating acknowledgment of the evolutionary hypothesis. Perhaps Professor Henry B. Smith, of the University of Chicago, is nearer right than our reconcilers of Christianity with Evolution may have thought when he declares, "One thing is certain, that infidel science will rout everything except thorough-going Christian Orthodoxy. All false theories will go overboard. The fight will be between a stiff thorough-going orthodoxy and stiff thorough-going infidelity."

When will our timid scholars, fearful of the ravages of Evolution, cease offering to shake hands with a foe who will have no association of the two irreconcilable forces now at work in the religious world? Darwin confessed that he was about to shake the foundations of Christianity in his Origin of Species; and he kept his word. All who follow his method end in the same pocket of unbelief regarding those essential articles of confidence which have been the bulwark of the historic Christian Church. Have we not come to the turn in the road; and must we not honestly face the challenge to hold to "the faith once for all delivered to the saints"? Is there anything to gloss over in the acceptance of the Genesis story? It has as true ground for history as it has for folklore; it completely accords with the plan of redemption and the Word of God. It has always satisfied the spiritually reverent mind, however cultured in worldly learning.

Yet, if we must apologize for God, this book is a masterly treatise to qualify us to do it; and to that end it deserves commendation, which this reviewer heartily allows.

Kenneth Mackenzie.

MORALITY IN THE MAKING. By Roy E. Whitney. The Macmillan Company, New York. Price $1.50.

This is a thorough analytical study of the subject indicated.

It tells us that we are all striving for self-approval and the approval of others. Whatever there be in us that is moral is really the product of these "approvals".

It is a pleasant sensation to feel that we are approved; and it is rather uncomfortable to know that we are disapproved by others. When our conduct is governed by the knowledge of the sum of these two "approvals", THAT is our conscience.

So a tremendous difference it makes as to the standards of those whose approvals we seek. The child wants the parents' approval: the pupil the teacher; the employee the employer's approval; and in community life one desires the aproval of friends and neighbors. And BY their approvals they help to create his standards of right and wrong.

Eventually the things that pleases us and makes us happy will be the 'right" thing to us. So it behooves those who have the privilege to see that doing the "right" thing brings happiness, and doing the "wrong" thing brings unhappiness.

Whatever reaction we cause in others by our action is our influence. So our influence is not in what we do, or what we desire others to do, but it is that which others really do as a response to our own action.

By seeing to our actions we can make our influence what we will. By the use of desire-satisfiers wisely we may induce emotion and action. Knowing the many desires of a child, the parent has it in his power to mould him as he will. Likewise the "mate" becomes amenable to the "mate". But IF the mate holds no desire-satisfiers, or refuses to utilize them, then influence becomes nil.

The author has made a serious study of the subject; and it will repay a careful reading.

R. R. C.

BY WAY OF ILLUSTRATION. A collection of stories, illustrations and analogies for preachers. By C. A. Ault. Cloth. Pp. 164. Published by the Morehouse Publishing Co., Milwaukee, Wis. Price $1.40.

Always room fo rone more. We have Arvine, Baxendale, Bertram, Mackey, Ketchum, McCook, Hugh Macmillan, Douglas, Chaplin and Banks. Yet a new messenger of light for the windows of the sermons we would effectively preach is welcome.

Many of the illustrations are taken from recent events which brings freshness into the realm of enlightenment. A good book, though you may have all the others.

Kenneth Mackenzie.

Church Intelligence

Old Ware Church, Gloucester County, Virginia.

This church, built in 1690, lies in historic Gloucester County about eight miles from Old Abingdon Church. "Twelve large and impressive arched windows light the simple and dignified interior, and the highly glazed brick ends in the wall, on the outside, form a pattern of soft color tones, as though wrought in a weaver's loom. During Colonial days there seems to have been in all churches the same general absence of provision for heating them in cold weather, but certain well-to-do families, no doubt, brought heating boxes, charcoal braziers, hot bricks and abundant wraps."

Why I Go To Church In Hot Weather.

I attend church in hot weather because:

God has "blessed the Lord's day and hallowed it," making no exceptions for hot or cold or stormy days.

I expect the clergyman to be there. I should be surprised were he to stay at home on account of the weather.

If his hands fail through weakness I shall have great reason to blame myself, unless I sustain him by my prayers and presence.

Whatever station I have in the church my example must influence others. If I stay away, why not others?

My faith is to be shown by my Christian life and not by the rise and fall of the thermometer.—The Harrisburg Churchman.

Piedmont-Carolina Assembly.

Fourteen dioceses were represented by eighty-two men at the Laymen's Conference on Personal Evangelism, held under the auspices of the Piedmont-Carolina Assembly of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, at Kanuga Lake, Hendersonville, North Carolina, July 19-21. After an opening informal session of fellowship Friday evening, the conference opened Saturday morning with a celebration of the Holy Communion by the Rt. Rev. Edwin A. Penick, D. D., Bishop of North Carolina. Leon C. Palmer, of Philadelphia, General Secretary of the National Brotherhood of St. Andrew, spoke on "Why We Are Here", and was followed by Larkin W. Glazebrook, M. D., of Washington, D. C., field worker of the National Commission on Evangelism, speaking on "Personal Evangelism.

The Rev. Elmer N. Schmuck, representing the Field Department of the National Council, spoke on "The Church's Program as a Channel of Persona l Evangelism, and was followed by Dr. W. J. Loaring Clark. H. Lawrence Choate, President of the Brotherhood, spoke on "Training Boys for Christian Leadership" in the afternoon, and on "Opportunities and Methods of Personal Evangelism" in the evening. The Rt. Rev. K. G. Finlay, D. D., conducted a preparation service for the Corporate Communion, which was celebrated by the Rt. Rev. J. M. Horner, D. D., Sunday morning.

After addresses by S. Bartow Strang, of Chattanooga, and others, the conference closed Sunday afternoon, with announcement that similar conferences would be held annually in future.

L. C. P.

Blue Ridge Association.

Guests at Blue Ridge, N. C., this summer are finding ideal conditions prevailing. The weather has been delightful, and the conferences, the lectures of which are available to the other guests, are having exceptionally strong leaders and speakers.

Blue Ridge is the home of twelve important summer conferences, of the summer session of the Y. M. C. A. Graduate School, of S. C. Y. Camp, Boys' Summer Camp of the Y. M. C. A., and during the fall and winter months of Lee School for Boys. These and other activities are under the supervision of the Blue Ridge Association, of which Dr. W. D. Weatherford is Executive Secretary.

Workers with boys and girls are attracted by the new course in play leadership, and other practical classes that have been added. Churches and other institutions are sending some of their leaders here to refresh their minds on work with young people and to learn the newest methods and thought on the subject.

Once a person gets the sod of Blue Ridge on his shoes he invariably comes back again and again, and sends others here. From the first glimpse of stately, Colonial Lee Hall, which overlooks the Seven Sisters of the Craggie ranges, until he leaves the beautiful hospitable grounds, his time is filled with pleasant, profitable moments. The arrangements both for study and for play, so ideally worked out, have been found to be pleasing to a great many people.

The other conferences which will meet here before the Blue Ridge season closes, September 3, are: The Industrial Conference of Y. M. C. A., August 1-4; Travelers' Aid Conference, August 19-25; Conference of Men's Evangelistic Bands, August 9-11; Institute of Recreation and Play Leadership, July 18-August 8; and the Conference of Social Workers, August 25-31.

Christian Unity in the Philippines.

The formation of "The United Evangelical Church of the Philippines" by the union of the Presbyterians, Congregationalists, and United Brethren is in line with the tradition of cooperation and comity which was established soon after American religious forces began work in the islands. It was there and then, for the first time on any considerable scale or under any carefully drawn plan, that denominations agreed upon an allocation of missionary fields. Efforts to promote a more perfect union have occurred intermittently during the last fifteen years. One fruit of these efforts has been the Union Theological Seminary in Manila. The fact that the work of the three denominations which are now entering into a union is in different fields simplifies the actual process of unification. The Congregationalists of Mindanao become "the Mindanao conference of the United Evangelical Church in the Philippines"; the Presbyterian mission becomes "the Manila conference of the United Evangelical Church"; the United Brethren in Northern Luzon are "the Northern Luzon Conference of the United Evangelical Church". The forms of organization will be gradually assimilated to a pattern agreed upon as meeting the actual needs of the situation and sacrificing nothing that any of the cooperating bodies regard as essential. With such a nucleus, a still more comprehensive united Church in the Philippines may be an achievement of the not distant future.—From The Christian Century, Chicago.

Convention of Junior Brotherhood of St. Andrew.

Leadership training and spiritual growth are central aims of the first national convention of the Junior Brotherhood of St. Andrew, to be held at Hobart College, Geneva, N. Y., September 5-8, according to plans announced by Mr. Leon C. Palmer, General Secretary of the Brotherhood.

The conference will be limited to one hundred and fifty boys and young men, and fifty adult leaders.

Growth for boys of today, youth's leadership, social growth, vitalizing our prayer life, the athlete's need of Christ, place of Christ in education, vocational growth, personal work and the college Christian of today—these are some of the topics listed for consideration on the program. Each topic will be discussed by well-known Church leaders. Among the speakers will be: The Rt. Rev. David L. Ferris, D. D., Bishop of Western New York; Hon. Charles H. Tuttle, U. S. District Attorney for New York; Douglas C. Turnbull, Jr., of Baltimore; the Rev. Charles N. Lathrop, D. D., of the Department of Christian Social Service of the National Church; Dr. John R. Hart, of the University of Pennsylvania; the Rev. C. Leslie Glenn, in charge of college work of the Church nationally; the Rt. Rev. Campbell Gray, D. D., Bishop of Northern Indiana; the Rev. Ernest V. R. Stires, of St. Thomas' Church, Bellerose, L. I.; the Rev. Gordon M. Reese, of Vicksburg, and I. C. Johnson, of Detroit.

This is the first time that the Junior Brotherhood has met separately from the Senior organization. It is part of a program which has been undertaken by the Brotherhood leaders to develop a stronger junior department of the organization and to build up in the Church a corps of able leaders among young men.

Those attending the convention will be housed in Hobart College dormitories at a nominal cost. The main item of cost will be traveling expenses. Every junior chapter is urged to send two delegates to the convention and to make definite plans for such before summer vacation.

Because of the limited number that can be accommodated it is urged that all expecting to attend send in their registrations at once. Applications for registration will be numbered in the order received. The convention is not limited to Brotherhood members, but is for all boys of the Church.

Full information can be obtained by addressing the national headquarters of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, 202 South Nineteenth Street, Philadelphia.

Church of England Flouts Parliament.

London, July 11.—(A. P.)—The convocations of Canterbury and York today approved by large majorities the resolution of the Archbishop of Canterbury permitting the use of the Revised Church of England Prayer Book where congregations give their consent through their councils.

The vote in the Upper House of the convocation of Canterbury was 23 to 4 and in the Lower House 96 to 54. The Upper House of the convocation of York approved the resolution without opposition, although one bishop abstained from voting. The Lower House also approved the resolution.

This decision, although fully expected, has brought about an anomalous position where the State Church has virtually flouted the decision of Parliament which rejected the revised Prayer Book.

The actual situation is that the bishops, having asked Parliament's consent to use the Prayer Book last year and having been refused, now proceed to use it without paying attention to the Parliamentary refusal.—Virginian-Pilot.

What Price Pioneering?

Dr. Teusler is on his way back to Japan, cheered by the knowledge that the crest has been reached and confident that those who understand the meaning and value of the Medical Centre will establish it.

In a way that is almost unique, St. Luke's is the expression of the personality behind it. Only real courage and perseverance, coupled with the vision of what modern medicine as we know and apply it might mean to the people of Japan, could have brought St. Luke's from its almost negligible beginning to what is today—generally acknowledged as the most influential institution of its kind in the Orient.

That the spirit of its founder pervades the Hospital is demonstrated by the fact that through the contagion of his own example, the staff of Japanese physicians and surgeons choose to receive for their devoted service the modest stipends provided by the Hospital while they pour into the treasury the earnings from their private practice.

It is a matter of common knowledge that St. Luke's has been a pioneer in establishing the first College of Nursing in Japan, in blazing the way in public health work and preventive medicine, in carrying on the first "well-baby" clinic, the first tuberculosis clinic, the first public nurse service in the Empire. What perhaps is not so generally known is that almost every nurse who has been graduated from St. Luke's has gone to her work as a Christian woman; that every woman in the first class in the College of Nursing asked for baptism; that so Christian is the atmosphere of the Hospital, with its daily services in the chapel and the constant ministrations of its chaplain, that year after year St. Luke's presents as many candidates for confirmation as any parish in the diocese.

These facts are almost details in the daily round of the Hospital; yet nothing could more surely indicate that while he has given his life to the practical application of scientific medicine for the benefit of the people of Japan, Dr. Teusler has never himself lost sight of, nor allowed those working with him to lose sight of, the very purpose which makes it all worth while.

That the people of Japan appreciate what St. Luke's has done and will do for them is proved by the steady pressure upon Dr. Teusler to inaugurate additional undertakings of a public health character; by the contributions of the Japanese themselves; most of all by the gift from the Emperor's private purse.

Surely it is an investment offering unquestionable security in its record of past accomplishment and of waiting opportunities for usefulness. Why is it that some one to whom has been given the ability to invest large sums without seeking dividends in dollars, has not appeared who will covet the privilege of saying to Dr. Teusler, "Stay in Japan. Give to St. Luke's as only you can the leadership and supervision and inspiration needed at no time more than in the day of transition from hospital to modern medical centre. Here are the funds. Make perfect the demonstration of that to which you have given your life."—A. S. L.

The Brazilian Missionary Society.

This Society, with a foreign as well as national outlook, aimed at employing a tenth of the Church's receipts for missionary work. While this goal was not attained, yet through the Society our apportionment to the National Council was paid and help given towards the support of the seminary. It has been decided to hold before the Church for still another year the same ideal of the dedication of a tenth of the total income to extra-parochial work.

With such a spirit of sacrifice, added to the zeal shown each year in extending the work beyond the limits of parish and state and even country, plus a steady progress in every field whether of finance or numbers or faith, one can believe in the final outcome of the Church's work under the Southern Cross.

The report shows twenty-two native priests, one native deacon, six foreign priests and the bishop; seven candidates for orders; 6,262 baptized persons; 3,129 communicants; eighty-three mission stations.—From the report of the Rt. Rev. M. M. Thomas, of Southern Brazil for the year 1928.

Elementary Training For Doctors' Helpers.

The University of Virginia, Charlottesville, Va., will hold its fifth Institute for Doctors' Helpers in Washington Hall, for the five days, August 5-9, inclusive. This Institute, as well as one to be given for colored women at the Virginia Normal and Industrial School at Petersburg, from August 12 to August 16, inclusive, is to be conducted by trained lecturers from the State Department of Health.

The purpose of the course is to teach women such elementary principles of nursing as may qualify them to act as bedside helpers when trained nurses are neither available nor absolutely necessary. The courses are designed so they may be particularly helpful in training women to act in confinement cases.

There are many hundreds of women in Virginia who have some leisure that might profitably be occupied in helpful ways. It is certain that these Institutes show one way to occupy spare time; and it is hoped that some of the women trained at these Institutes may eventually be so impressed with the possibilities of the work that they may go far toward supplanting the ignorant midwives upon whom so many of the rural women have to depend at childbirth.

World Conference on Adult Education.

Mr. Spencer Miller, Jr., of South Orange, N. J., on the staff of the Social Service Department as Secretary for Industrial Relations, and for some years Secretary of the Workers' Education Bureau, has been selected as one of twelve official delegates to attend and address the World Conference on Adult Education, which is to be held at Cambridge University, England, August 22-29. This conference, which is the first of its kind, will bring together men and women all over the world who are taking part in adult education "for the purpose of explaining and discussing the operation of basic principles in the light of the knowledge gained from actual work and experience."

Mr. Miller will address one of the general sessions on Adult Education and the Industrial Worker. With him at this session will be Dr. Richard Sandler from Sweden, Dr. Henry DeMan from Belgium, and Mr. G. D. H. Cole from England.

The American delegation to Cambridge includes, among others: Newton T. Baker, former Secretary of War; James E. Russell, Dean-Emeritus, and William Kilpatrick, of Teachers' College, Columbia University; Kenyon Butterfield, formerly President of Michigan State College; Dr. Leon T. Richardson, director of University Extension of the University of California, and John Willard and Morse Cartwright, of the American Association for Adult Education.

Mr. Miller has also been invited to address the World Conference on Progressive Education at Elsinore, Denmark, on August 12, on adult education.

Mr. Miller gave two evening lectures at the Wellesley Conference, on the Church and Industry.

China Inland Mission: Appeal For 200 New Workers.

The annual meetings of the China Inland Mission, held in the Queen's Hall, were made notable by the formal launching of the mission's appeal for two hundred new workers to be sent forth within two years for the evangelization of the yet unreached millions within the sphere allotted to the C. I. M.

At the afternoon meeting the chair was taken by the new Home Director, the Rev. W. H. Aldis. Mr. Aldis drew attention to the summary report of the past year's work prepared by the Rev. Frank Houghton, bearing the title, "Taking the Offensive". He recalled that at the beginning of 1928 dark clouds of uncertainty still hung over China. Foreign consuls and Chinese officials alike said "No" to the return of the missionaries to their stations. In the autumn, while doors were still apparently closed, the executive of the mission in China met to face the situation and wait upon God. It was decided to authorize the booking of passages by the home bases. The missionaries set sail, and by the time they had reached their destination the whole situation had changed and doors had once more swung open. "The position today is that the spiritual offensive is going on on the whole front: the forces are going forward not only to the old trenches but to new centres." Mr. Aldis went on to say that the C. I. M. was now to give itself more firmly to the setting up of a self-governing and self-supporting Chinese Church. The foreign missionaries, set free from administration, would be able to give themselves more fully to evangelistic and teaching work. "The fighting forces of our missionaries have been added to the extent of sixty-nine recruits. In regard to finance, once again it is our joy to bear witness to God's faithfulness. God has supplied all our needs during the past year £170,500 has been sent in—some £8,500 more than last year." Turning to the future, the Home Director referred to the call for definite advance. The C. I. M. desired to be true to its purposes and to its history, and to be always advancing. "The call is one of the greatest and most challenging the mission has ever issued, and coming as it does so soon after the upheaval in China, with its consequent evacuation of nearly all the stations, it is the more impressive in its vision and daring."—The Record, London, England.

WASHINGTON.

Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman, D. D., Bishop

Commander C. T. Jewell, U. S. N., retired, died on July 22 in Emergency Hospital, after an illness of some length but one which was not considered serious until the last. His death marks a distinct loss to the Diocese of Washington, which will be felt in almost every department of its work.

Commander Jewell, as he was always known, was at the time of his death, Secretary of the Provincial and Diocesan Commissions of Religious Education, a member of the Publicity Department of the Diocesan Council, Secretary of the Laymen's Service Association and Superintendent of St. Margaret's Church School. He had always held important offices in the several organizations of men for the Church's work in the diocese and gave unsparingly of his means, time and effort for the Church. He founded the diocesan paper known as "The Church Militant" and assumed the financial responsibility of its publication, as well as its editorship.

Commander Jewell was always keenly interested in any work for young people and did much to advance the work of Religious Education in the diocese. He was also interested in drama and pageantry as a medium of religious education and served as chairman of the Diocesan Pageant and Drama Council.

Funeral services were conducted by the Rev. Calvert E. Buck and the Rev. Robert Shores, and interment was in Arlington Cemetery on Wednesday, July 24.

Though closely associated with the Church in its many branches of activity, Commander Jewell had also many outside interests, some of which are quoted in the following sketch taken from the daily papers of Washington:

He was a member of the Chevy Chase Club and the Kalorama Citizens' Association, and took a prominent part in the social life of the Capital also.

Commander Jewell was a veteran of the Spanish-American and World Wars, returning to active duty for the period of the latter after being retired in 1909.

Born at Annapolis, Md., Commander Jewell received his early education at Coddington School, Newport, R. I., and later attended the Rogers School at Newport. He was graduated from the United States Naval Academy in 1892. He was promoted to lieutenant, junior grade, in 1899, and to lieutenant in 1902. He reached the grade of lieutenant commander in 1907 and was placed on the retired list with the grade of commander two years later. He taught physics at the Navay Academy from 1902 to 1904.

During the World War, Commander Jewell specialized in signals and other staff duty, including extensive study of navigational instruments for aircraft, aeronautical photography, aerology and carried prison supplies.

M. M. W.

A new Episcopal Church has been organized at Silver Springs, Md., in the Diocese of Washington, the Rev. Dr. Alfred Cheetham, rector. This congregation formerly was part of the parish of Woodside. Dr. Cheetham is an Englishman, and formerly was rector of St. Mary's Church, Maryland.

VIRGINIA.

Rt. Rev. H. St. George Tucker, Bishop.

Services at Old St. John's Church, King William County.

Regular monthly services are being held at old St. John's Church, King William County, on Sundays, at 3 P. M. The last service was conducted by the Rev. Hugh W. Sublett, D. D., rector of St. John's Church, Richmond, and the choir of St. John's Church, West Point, was in charge of the Umusic. St. John's Church was recently restored.

The annual Home Coming Day at old Yeocomico Church in Cople Parish, Westmoreland County, the Rev. F. D. Goodwin, D. D., rector, was held on the third Sunday in July. Services were held in the morning and evening and the annual meeting of the Yeocomico Church Restoration Association was held. A tremendous crowd was present from the adjoining counties of Virginia and Maryland and from the nearby cities so that the old church could not hold the crowd.

The Rt. Rev. H. St. George Tucker, D. D., the Bishop of the Diocese, was present and preached in the morning and later on confirmed twelve persons at Yeocomico and at other churches in the parish.

In the afternoon an address was made by Mr. Rosewell Page to a crowded congregation on The Christian Ministry. It is a most noteworthy fact that there are few parishes in Virginia or elsewhere who have sent more men into the ministry than this old parish. The present Rt. Rev. John Poyntz Tyler, Bishop of North Dakota and the late Rt. Rev. John B. Newton, former Bishop Coadjutor of Virginia, among the number.

Yeocomico Church is among the oldest church buildings in the State of Virginia, having been erected in 1706, though the parish far antidates the erection of this church, being the second or third building on the same site or in the neighborhood. The building, then in a state of abandonment, was used by the county militia as a camping ground during the raid of the British Admiral Cockburn up Potomac River to Washington in the War of 1812 and was badly damaged by the soldiers. Restored later it has been in service almost ever since.

The Yecomico Church Restoration Association was established by Bishops Gibson and Tyler in 1906 on the two hundredth anniversary of the building of the present edifice and is still raising funds for its care and upkeep. Large repairs and further restoration have been undertaken in the past year, $6,000 having already been spent in necessary repair and improvement and $1,500 more is needed to complete the work.

G. M. B.

LONG ISLAND.

Rt. Rev. E. M. Stires, D. D., Bishop.

Vacation Bible Schools.

Bishop Larned, as acting President of the World Association of Daily Vacation Bible Schools, has opportunity to reach thousands of children in this diocese, and in some degree many thousands more throughout the world, during this vacation period. In Brooklyn there are seventy-five of the Vacation Schools, a good proportion of them in our own churches. Bishop Larned has sent the following message to them: "I would be particularly happy if the schools could make an offering this summer toward the wonderful new venture we have started this year in some twenty new schools in the Holy Land, including three in Jerusalem, two in Bethlehem of Judea, and one in Nazareth of Galilee. Another of these schools is to be located near Jaob's Well, where the children will have ample opportunity to refresh themselves during the summer season; and five more will be located beyond Jordan in the Land of Moab. About forty schools will be opened in Egypt. In China, it is expected that 1,000 schools will be opened in fourteen provinces; in Korea, on July 1, five hundred schools were opened, and in India we expect to open two hundred, to say nothing of a host of others being thought of, but for which the plans are not yet ripe. Any offering of this kind that the children could make, could be sent directly to me, and I can assure you that I will see that it is well invested. Indeed, I will promise to match personally or through friends of mine, every gift that is made by a child in these schools, in other words, their offering will be doubled, and therefore do twice as much for the little children in the Far East." Certainly it must grip the imagination of children, to have a chance to ally themselves with similar work being done in Bethlehem and in Nazareth!

Outdoor Summer Preaching.

Under the auspices of the Brooklyn Federation of Churches, a noon-day outdoor service is being held daily in front of Holy Trinity Church, Clinton and Montague Streets, Brooklyn. A platform has been built against the building, and a number of chairs have been placed on the lawn inside the fence. Two trumpeters and a small organ provide the music, and "gospel" hymns are sung. The speakers, who are secured by the Federation, have so far included only one of our clergy, the Rev. L. Bradford Young, assistant at Holy Trinity. A typical attendance is said to be about a hundred and fifty, some seated inside the fence, others standing on both the near and the far sides of the street.

Combined Services For the Summer.

Three neighboring Brooklyn parishes, St. Luke's, the Messiah and the Incarnation, have combined Sunday services for the summer months. During July and August the Rev. Clifford W. French until lately rector of St. Gabriel's, Hollis, is in charge of the combined parishes.

New Rector at Nativity.

The Rev. C. P. Holbrook, who is acting as locum tenens at the Church of the Nativity, Brooklyn, during July and August, has been elected rector of that parish, and has accepted, to take office September 1.

C. H. W.

ATLANTA.

Rt. Rev. H. J. Mikell, D. D., Bishop.

Surplice Choir of Trinity Church, Columbus, One of the Outstanding Church Musical Organizations of Georgia.

By Fred G. Storey.

Page the world's keeper of records! Columbus hereby makes claim to two world's records that we believe will stand against all comers.

The first justly boasted claim is that Columbus has a singer who has been for seventy-two years a volunteer member of one local choir.

The second is that Columbus has a choir, one of the choristers of which has been a member of it for seventy-two years.

Both records, we believe, will go unequaled and unchallenged throughout the world.

From 1857 to 1929, and still going strong, is the proud record of Mr. E. L. Wells, who has been a volunteer member of Trinity Church choir of Columbus.

An incident occurred at choir practice which impressed those present with the long and faithful church service of Mr. Wells. The choir was rehearsing Chappell's Easter Anthem. It is a ten-page composition.

"Wait a minute," Mr. Wells is reported to have said. "We prepared this same composition for the Easter music program, April 16, 1865. The choir practiced it but did not carry out the program. The men of the choir were in the trenches on the Alabama side of the Chattahoochee River, facing General Wilson's cavalry raid which captured Columbus at the close of the day."

That was sixty-four years ago. Fifty years later Mr. Wells remembers Chappell's Easter Anthem as being included in the Easter program of Trinity. Mr. Wells was then the only survivor of the choir of 1865.

This distinguished chorister has been a member of the Trinity choir continuously since 1857, with the exception of the time between August, 1861, to February, 1863, when he was in the army of the Potomac in the War Between the States. From the latter date until April, 1865, he was adjutant of Jaques battalion, stationed at Columbus, and during which time he resumed his place in Trinity choir.

During these later years the augmented choir has had the training a number of capable choirmasters, under whose instruction the organization has become increasingly efficient, rendering, at times, full choral services, cantatas and selections from oratorios.

Trinity choir is pronounced by competent judges, who know a good thing when they see and hear it, to be one of the best choirs in this region.

Today, as it has been for seventy-two years, Mr. Wells' bass voice is an enrichening factor in the quality of the choir's music.

If a stranger were to meet Mr. Wells on his way to Sunday morning service and was informed that he had been a member of the same choir for nearly three-quarters of a century, the statement would seem unbelievable, for Mr. Wells' singing has kept him young in spirit and heart—much younger, I think, than he might appear had he never given this service. He is in his ninetieth year—and still singing.

But Mr. Wells has been more than a faithful, long-service chorister. He has been longer a good citizen. We sometimes mentally sort a lot of folks to find an ideal citizen. We think of some one who is active in this or prominent in that work, but there is generally something, when it comes right down to real citizenship, that checks most of them out. Oftener we pin the ribbon on some man who lives quietly, honorably, godly whose neighbors speak well of him, and is fair with himself and the world. Mr. Wells would score high for such a citizenship ribbon.

Columbus citizens generally and Trinity parishioners especially, hope Mr. Wells' voice may be heard rendering its rich musical service for many years to come.

FLORIDA.

Rt. Rev. Frank A. Johan, D. D., Bishop.

Church of the Good Shepherd, Jacksonville.

Wednesday, July 24, was held the first service in the little chapel, set up in Worsham Hall, in a side room, to be known as "Bicknell Chapel" in honor of the Rev. Jesse R. Bicknell, the first rector of the little mission, from which the Church of the Good Shepherd, Jacksonville, grew. Mr. Bicknell is yet in the ministry living now in Atlanta. The chapel will contain furnishings which have an association with the parish. The cross is one made by the rector after the fire which destroyed the church some years ago, and was improvised for the first services afterwards. The vases are a memorial to Lawrence Maxwell Cook, and were partly burned in this fire, but can be used. The candlesticks were on the altar when services were held in what is now the gym. The altar was made of a hanging over the desal in the old chapel and the altar rail was used there. The reredos picture was in the Sunday School in mission days of the parish. Other pictures and pieces have like connection with the history of the parish. The chapel will be used for small week-day services, and especially in winter, rendering unnecessary the heating of the new church. The large organ being installed in the new church will be ready for use in a few weeks. It is a memorial to the late Rev. Milton R. Worsham, given by St. Helena's Guild. There will be two side organs and an echo. It will be one of the finest organs in the city. A full Communion set of seven pieces, made by Gorham, will be in use shortly as a memorial to the late Rev. J. Lindsay Patton. Both Messrs. Worsham and Patton being former rectors. The clergy sedilia have been ordered likewise a memorial, given by Mr. Ben F. Trenary, a former senior warden of the parish. In a short time,

(Continued on page 22.)

Family Department

AUGUST.

1. Thursday
4. Tenth Sunday after Trinity.
6. Tuesday, Transfiguration.
11. Eleventh Sunday after Trinity.
18. Twelfth Sunday after Trinity.
24. Saturday, S. Bartholomew.
25. Thirteenth Sunday after Trinity.
31. Saturday.

COLLECT FOR TENTH SUNDAY AFTER TRINITY.

Let Thy merciful ears O Lord, be open to the prayers of Thy humble servants, and, that they may obtain their petitions; make them to ask such things as shall please Thee; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

COLLECT FOR THE TRANSFIGURATION OF CHRIST

O God, who on the Mount didst reveal to chosen witnesses Thine Only Begotten Son wonderfully transfigured in raiment white and glistening: Mercifully grant that we, being delivered from the disquietude of this world, may be permitted to behold the King in His Beauty, Who with Thee, O Father and Thee, O Holy Ghost, liveth and reigneth, one God, world without end. Amen.

HYMN.

Thy mighty love, O God, constraineth me,
As some strong tide it presseth on its way,
Seeking a channel in my self-bound soul,
Yearning to sweep all barriers away.

Shall I not yield to that constraining power?
Shall I not say, O tide of Love, flow in?
My God, Thy gentleness hath conquered me,
Life cannot be as it hath hither been

Break through my nature, mighty, heavenly Love,
Clear every avenue of thought and brain,
Flood my affections, purify my will,
Let nothing but Thine pure life remain.

Thus wholly mastered and possessed by God,
Forth from my life, spontaneous and free,
Shall flow a stream of tenderness and grace—
Loving, because God loved, eternally.

—Selected.

What Is the Value of the Letters of Paul?

Letters are of especial value to the historian as they are usually written without the conscious purpose of proving anything and are the unpremeditated and spontaneous expression of the author's knowledge and mind. We have thirteen letters ascribed to Paul, and they are from his hand by clear internal and external evidence and by the general agreement of scholars. They fit into their proper place in Luke's narrative in the Acts, and we are as reasonably sure of Paul's authorship of these letters as we are that Cicero wrote those that bear his name.

An important question in this connection is, How did Paul know the facts as to the life and resurrection of Jesus? He does not leave us in doubt on this point. At first he was a powerful opponent of Jesus and his followers, but on the way to Damascus experienced the epochal conversion that revolutionized his life and had such far-reaching effect upon the history of Christianity. In the first chapter of Galatians he tells us that three years after his conversion, time spent in retirement and meditation, he went up to Jerusalem and spent fifteen days with Peter and James the Lord's brother. What did Paul and this disciple and brother of Jesus talk about during those eventful days? About the ministry and work of Christ, but especially about his resurrection. In fact, we may say that Paul, a trained lawyer, spent these two weeks investigating this case on the ground where it happened, examining the eyewitnesses and getting first-hand knowledge of it. He says that he went up to visit Cephas" (Gal. 1:18),a word which means "to know by inquiry and personal examination" and "implies a careful and searching inquiry." In I Cor. 15:5-7 Paul tells us that the risen Christ was seen by Peter and James. He must have gotten this information from these men themselves during this memorable visit with them. We are thus brought into contact with these two important witnesses through Paul, and we also know on what solid ground Paul's own knowledge was based.

We are not to suppose that these thirteen Epistles are all the letters Paul wrote, and in fact we know they are not. They are only a selection from his larger correspondence which have been preserved and incorporated in the New Testament. Neither are we to suppose that Paul wrote these letters with any knowledge or thought that he was composing divinely inspired letters that would be preserved and read and studied through the ages as Holy Scriptures. He wrote them as one writes letters in his correspondence with friends, all unconsciously of the divine Providence that was guiding him and caring for these letters for our instruction and edification. They are all addressed to churches and individuals for practical purposes. Every one of them was occasioned by some special cause or condition that called for instruction and correction or advice from Paul. Their contents were thus adapted and addressed to local conditions and personal needs and are written in the free and direct and incidental method and style of personal correspoence. They almost wholly lack the structure and style of a systmatic treatise or formal history, or of writings intended for general publication.

Yet they are none the less but rather all the more valuable on this account. They illustrate abstract principles in their concrete application, and this is one of the best ways of imparting such truth. They touch a large range and variety of topics both doctrinal and practical as they deal with the peculiar conditions of these first Christian churches while they were yet plastic and involved in all the difficulties and dangers, factions and corruptions of their day, when Christianity was new and had not yet developed forms and creeds and was especially subject to the environment of heathen customs and morals, temptations and persecutions. And all the way through Paul is the uncomprising defender and bold champion of the liberty of the gospel and the universality of the Christian faith against the claims and struggles of Judaism to constrict Christnanity with its bondage and doom it as a Jewish sect.

Paul was a born thinker and theologian and while dealing with these local and temporary conditions was all unconsciously forging his own Christian ideas and experience into shape and use and working out the fundamental principles and doctrines of the new faith and thus laying the foundations of our Christian creeds and polities. Without imposing on us fixed and final forms he yet furnished us with the materials that are the substance of our formal faith today

These letters are characterized by Paul's intellectual and emotional temper and spirit of independent thought and bold solution of problems and brave action. His pages are often so charged with thought and feeling that the words come tumbling from his pen in a tumultuous torrent, sometimes as broken and chaotic sentences that defy the rules of logic and grammar and give infiinte trouble to the commentators. Yet Paul the philospher and theologian was also Paul the poet and mystic and his imagination could utter winged words and soar into rhythmic melody and beauty that are the praise and charm of the ages, such as the immortal prose-poem in the thirteenth chapter of First Corinthians. Paul was the first and greatest theologian of the Christian church. He forged the simple Gospel into a logical system that roots it in the brain as well as in the heart; he put bones in its flesh and rocks under its flowers and fruits. Such work was necessary to give system and stability to the Gospel, without which "the sweet Galilean vision" might have evaporated into myth and mist and long since have faded away. Such is the value of the letters of this great Apostle, Hebrew university graduate, Greek scholar and Roman citizen, he was one of the great men of his age and of all the ages and has helped to shape all the Christian centuries. His letters are links of logic that bind Christianity into an historical and theological system that stands as a bulwark of Christian faith today.—Presbyterian Banner.

A Poet and His Dog.

Walter Savage Landor, the great poet and critic, loved animals, especially dogs and cats, and in his home they became the best of friends. He had one dog, named "Pomero," whom he especially loved. One day a lady asked him if he would sell Pomero. "I would not sell him for a million," was his reply.

"Are you serious?" she asked him.

"Entirely so," he said. "A million dollars would not make me any happier than I am now, while to lose Pomero would make me miserable. Do you understand?"

Pomero and his master were inseparable, and had one little habit, or accomplishment, that is not usual. He could laugh! and when his master would laugh, then Pomero would burst out laughing too, and so loudly that sometimes the pair could be heard clear down the street. They also used to attend concerts together, Pomero often being much affected by the music.

Landor once wrote to a friend: "Pomero is now sitting on my head, superintending all I write and telling me to give you his love."

The time came when little Pomero had to go, and his master was inconsolable. But he did not grieve alone, for (we will let his master tell it):

"Everybody in the house grieves for Pomero. The cat lies day and night upon his grave, and I will not disturb him, though I want to plant some violets upon it, and have his epitaph placed around his little urn: Cor intus est fidele, nam cor est canis" (which means the heart within is faithful for that heart is a dog's).—Raja-Yoga Messenger.

For the Southern Churchman.

I BELIEVE!

William Olney

My soul craves a firm foundation
For the sure hope of Salvation;
Since her many foes are seeking to deceive:
She must still for this be praying,
Until confidently saying:
"I believe! I believe! I BELIEVE!

Such unquestioned faith obtaining,
Greater wealth there is no gaining;
A sure faith will from all doubt and fear relieve:
The soul tastes a bliss from Heaven
When she cries, with sin forgiven:
"I believe! I believe! I BELIEVE!

The foundation God has granted;
Meeting all the sinner wanted;
Blood-bought pardon for the souls, o'er sin that grieve:
And none such need fear exemption,
Who can say of Christ's Redemption:
"I believe! I believe! I BELIEVE!

Think of a diamond-mines possessing;
Or the sum of earthly blessing;
Thought is still behind the power to conceive
Bliss which comes from Faith declaring
Trust in Christ's Atonement sharing:
"I believe! I believe! I BELIEVE!

Then the soul scarce feels Time's losses
And can smile at all her crosses:
Life, wasted once, Grace help her to retrieve:
To her faith the song is given
As she travels on to Heaven:
"I believe! I believe! I BELIEVE!

Now strength takes the place of weakness
And through Grace, with holy meekness,
By the Spirit she can victories achieve:
Her war-cry, while battle rages,
And she daily conflict wages:
"I believe! I believe! I BELIEVE!

Relief From Anxiety.

If to disobey Jesus is sin, then worry is sin. Is there anything that breaks life more frequently or more fatally than worry? No one can live and worry. Is there any advice more frequently handed out than "don't worry?" As if it were possibly through force of will not to worry. One can as easily lift himself by his boot straps as quit worrying according to orders.

Worry is anti-Christian. It is the opposite of peace. It is our privilege to have peace, a quiet mind, tranquility of spirit. How can we attain it? When we fix our gaze upon things and ourselves we can easily fall into worry. If we look at God and things God through Jesus, we can be easy in mind.

Jesus mentions the things that cause worry. The constant need of food, we must have something to eat and drink. The need of clothes, we must have something to put on. The problem of a living is securing these things. Jesus assures us that God knows that we have need of these things. God made us and the world in which we live and he made us to live in the world and the world for us to live in. We and the world are suited to each other. God made us not to die, but to live, not to be in want but to enjoy.

Before Jesus a saint of experience said: "The Lord is my Shepherd." "I shall not want." "I will not fear." Jesus tells us the fact is better than that God is our Father. Shall we who live in "the Father's house" come to want? Will we who are children of God—not merely sheep of a shepherd—fear?

Look at the birds and the flowers, Jesus says. The birds need to eat and they do eat and they do sing. The flowers are not drab things but beautiful. Are not the children more to God than birds and the grass? Then why is ther any lack among men? Because they do not live as children of God. "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and his righeousness and all these things shall be added unto you." Live like children and the children's portion will be yours.

But "tomorrow?" Most worries are concerned with tomorrow. So many things may happen tomorrow. Yes; but no tomorrow can come in without God. Our Father in heaven does not die nor go on long journeys nor forget. We live in his home and are his children. If we are prodigals who turn from Father and home and go our own way to a far country doubtless there will be want; but if we listen and learn and rejoice in obedience we shall have no place for anxiety. God is the cure for worry. God is the only cure. The God of Jesus Christ.—Exchange.

How Does Christ Reach Us?

How does He break in upon our consciousness? In many and various ways. The Rev. Sam Chadwick says, "The Lord never goes the same way twice."

He sometimes reaches usc through our senses, as He did Elijah when in the grip of a self-absorbing despair, so that even God was forgotten. He reached him through the earthquake, wind and fire. So He reached Moses through the burning bush, and later through the smoking, flaming mountain. He reached the sleeping shepherds on Bethlehem's plains by heaven's Salvation Army Band which appeared in the sky. God has first to excite and quicken those He seeks to bless. If I am told that this savours of the sensational, I reply with John Ruskin, "I am not afraid of the word 'sensation,' still less of the thing."

Then Christ reaches us through the Consvcience. He had been busy with Saul's conscience long before He felled him to earth on the Damascus road. "It is hard," He said, "for thee to kick against the goads." Jesus reached Bunyon through his conscience years before He filled his heart with light and peace at the cross.

At other times He breaks in upon us through the intellect, as He did upon Dr. R. W. Dale in his study at Birmingham, as he was writing his Easter sermon, coming upon him in a burst ot sudden glory in the truth "Christ is really alive! Christ is living."

Again, he makes a direct appeal to the heart. He came to bring grace and truth, and while truth is a term of the intellect, grace is a term for the heart. He often brings grace first and truth afterwards. It was not at first a new truth that He brought to Wesley as he sat in the Meeting House at Aldersbate Street. Wesley found his heart strangely warmed; the eyes of his heart were enlightened first. His new theology sprang out of his new experience.—The United Methodist.

For the Southern Churchman.

INFLUENCE

Martha Shepard Lippincott

To eat to drink be merry,
Tomorrow we may die
Is this the highest aiming
For which we mortals try?
Ah! surely there are better
And nobler aims in life
Which lead our souls up farther
Above all evil strife

We do not die in spirit,
When we have passed away,
So that our thoughts and actions,
No more, on earth, may stay;
For they have been implanted
In many other hearts
Our influence, to others,
Much good or ill, imparts

And like the widening circles
From pebbles thrown in streams,
E'er flowing farther outward,
Lifes' influence, thus seems.
One follows our example,
And then another too,
While we're not realizing
What good or harm we do

Then let us live forever
With just life's highest aim
So that, for wrongs of others,
We ne'er can be to blame;
But let us e'er be leading
All erring souls to God,
And teaching them the beauty
Of paths that Jesus trod.

The Lost Purpose.

The normal condition of every church and every preacher is evangelistic. The bane of many a church strong in numbers, intelligence, wealth, indeed in every element of strength but one, is that it has lost the seeking role. Congregations meet, preachers preach, the forms of worship are decorously observed, but all without any purpose to reach the lost. This brings deadness, and in this atmosphere of death, wordliness increases, sound doctrine decays, congregations disintegrate and in time the desolation of Zion is complete.—George W. Truett.

The Cross Today.

"I see the Cross set up in every slum, in very filthy over-crowded quarter, in every vulgar flaring street that speaks of luxury and waste of life. I see Him staring up at me from the pages of the newspaper that tells of a tortured, lost, bewildered world.

"Ever and always I see set up above this world of ours, a huge and towering Cross with great arms stretched out East and West from the rising to the setting sun, and on that Cross my God still hangs and calls on all brave men and women to come out and share His sorrow and help to save the world."—Stoddert-Kennedy.

Men followed where the Highest led
For common gifts of daily bread,
And gross of ear, of vision dim,
Owned not the Godlike power of Him.
Vain as a dreamer's words to them
His wail above Jerusalem,
And meaningless the watch He kept
Through which His weak disciples slept.
—Whittier.

For the Young Folks

For the Southern Churchman

A MORNING PRAYER.

Maude F Mumma.

Dear Lord, I lift my eyes to pray,
And ask Thy blessing on the day;
Ask Thee to guide my feet aright,
And keep me safely until night.

I pray Thee for my loved ones, too,
Hearts that love Thee, loyal, true;
How kind, how good, Thy precepts are.

I pray Thee for the stranger here
Thou far removed from loved ones
Though far removed from loved ones dear;
Help him to feel Thy guiding hand,
Though traveling in a distant land.

These mercies I of Thee implore,
Keep Thou the well, the sick restore;
Until the day of life be past,
And we are safely moored at last

The Old Woman, Her Pig, and The Stile.

A Modern Version.

On one of our large mission compounds in Assam there lived and labored a young woman whose troubles were many and all her own. One day, for Hindoo girls, she had a house built. It was a wonderful hostel. There were screens all around to keep the mosquitoes and insects out. There were locks on the doors. There were iron beds in the rooms. Also there were cookhouses. All was in readiness so that the girls might be moved by Saturday night, only the fence was not built.

So she went to the Mali and said: "Please, Mali, build me a bamboo screen so that I can move Hindoo girls into new hostel by Saturday night. Mosquitoes are humming and they'll all get malaria." But the Mali said: "Go to yonder Coolie and get him to stretch the wire fence, then I will put up the bamboo screen."

So she went to yonder Coolie and said: "Please, Coolie, stretch wire fence so Mali can put up bamboo screen, so I can move Hindoo girls into new hostel by Saturday night. Mosquitoes are humming and they'll all get malaria." But the Coolie would not.

She went a little further and she met the Driver. "Please, driver, drive Coolie. Coolie will not stretch wire; Mali will not put up bamboo screen, and I can not move Hindoo girls into new hostel by Saturday night. Mosquitoes are humming and they'll all get malaria." The Driver would not, but said: "Go to yonder house and say to yonder Sahib, 'Come, and show me how to build the fence,' then I will drive Coolie."

So she went to the Sahib and said: "Please, Sahib, come; show Driver how build fence, for Driver will not drive Coolie; Coolie will not stretch wire; Mali will not move Hindoo girls into new hostel by Saturday night. Mosquitoes are humming and they'll all get malaria.

But the Sahib said: "Go to yonder Debtor. He owes me; get him to oversee your fence."

So she went to yonder Debtor and said: "Please Debtor, come and oversee the building of fence. Sahib will not show Driver how to build fence; Driver will not drive Coolie; Coolie will not stretch wire; Mali will not put up bamboo screen, and I can not move Hindoo girls into new hostel by Saturday night. Mosquitoes are humming and they'll all get malaria." But Debtor would not.

"Then," said the young woman, "I shall call the Judge." So she went to the Judge and said: "Please, Judge, arrest Debtor. Debtor will not oversee; Sahib will not tell how; Driver will not drive Coolie; Coolie will not stretch wire; Mali will not put up bamboo screen and I can not move Hindoo girls into new hostel by Saturday night. Mosquitoes are humming and they'll all get malaria."

The Judge arrested Debtor. All at once Debtor began to oversee; Sahib began to tell how; Driver began to drive Coolie; Coolie began to stretch wire; Mali began to put up bamboo screen, and the Hindoo girls moved into the hostel by Saturday before they got malaria.—Children's Leader.

WHO LIKES THE RAIN.

"I," said the duck; "I call it fun,
For I have my little red rubbers on;
They make a cunning tree toad track
In the soft, cool mud. Quack! Quack!"

"I," cried the dandelion; "I;
My roots are thirsty, my buds are dry."
And she lifted her little yellow head
Out of her grassy bed.

"I hope 'twill pour! I hope 'twill pour!"
Croaked the tree toad at his gray bark door;

"For with a broad leaf for a roof
I am perfectly weather-proof."

Sang the brook: "I laugh at every drop,
And wish they never need to stop
Till a big river I grow to be,
And could find my way to the sea."

—Our Young People.

The Young Samaritan.

One hot afternoon, just after one of those heavy summer rains had drenched the streets of a prominent New England city, a small boy of nine years found a half dead little bird which had apparently fallen from a nest. The little creature was feebly hopping about the middle of the road in the very path of an approaching horse and buggy. The boy made an attempt to draw the driver's attention, but not before the unfortunate little bird had been struck by one of the horse's hoofs and knocked into the gutter.

With a mingled feeling of pity and indignation, the boy darted into the road and tenderly took the little feathered creature from the wet mud and placed it in his cap. He then made his way to his home, where his kind mother received the little bird and made it as comfortable as possible.

A shoe box was fitted up as a sort of nest and home; some soft rags were placed inside, and, as the storm was past, the box paced on an outside window sill. The developments were interesting. In fact, hardly a half hour had elapsed before two pretty birds with tufted heads appeared on the electric wires near the window and were causing a regular commotion in bird language. They were parents of the little bird and were seeking their lost baby.

The little Samaritan watched the birds with interest, not making a sound or motion for fear of scaring away the visitors.

But the baby bird was already struggling to get out of the box. It had heard the call of its parents. Suddenly one of the larger birds timidly flew to the window-sill and, glancing about hurriedly, crushing some red berries into the hungry little mouth of the baby, then flew off again. But the young bird seemed to want to go with its mother and father.

About an hour later, the older birds returned with more food and both flew to the window sill. After a series of chirpings and hoppings about, there was a flutter of wings and the three birds were gone. The tiny bird had finally mangaed to extricate himself from a large hole in the box cover.

I distinctly remember the foregoing incident as I was the nine-year-old boy who had made the rescue, and although many years have since passed, I still feel proud of my act.—Joseph R. Schadel, in Our Dumb Animals.

Delight's Snow Fairy.

Delight was tucked away in bed, while her little friends were playing Snowman in the garden, for a belated snowstorm had come even in March.

"It is such fun to play Snowman, too," Delight thought as she cuddled close under the covers. "There's nothing more fun in all the world than playing Snowman." And although her name meant Happiness, she was not quite happy now. Her throat was very, very sore, and she was lonely lying in her bed when her friends were having fun.

But Delight never remained lonely long. Her eyes were too bright for that. She always saw something that would keep her company. This time it was the snowflakes, falling gently aginst the window.

"What pretty, pretty shapes they are," Delight said half aloud. "They all have pretty, pretty points."

"These are just our dresses," said a little voice quite near. "I'm a snow fairy. If you will come with me, I'll take you to the room where our dresses are made. Do you want to come?"

Delight's throat felt quite well now, as she answered, "Oh, yes, please," and followed the Snowflake Fairy.

The wind blew them up high, until they were behind a big, big cloud. Then it blew away and left them there.

At first everything seemed so bright that Delight could see nothing at all.

"It's all pitch black," she said, "I think I like it best at home."

"Just wait a minute and you'll see," said the Snowflake Fairy.

Then in just a minute Delight found that she could see quite well. She was in a dazzling blue room with little fairies flying all about. Their wings shone just like diamonds. Their bodies were like transparent ice, a sort of blue also. Delight thought that she had never in her life seen anything so lovely.

"They seem to be very busy," she said to Snowflake Fairy who had brought her.

"Yes, they are cutting out the dresses," said Snowflake.

There above the big, big table made of glittering ice flew the little fairies with their diamond shears. They were dropping tiny shapes that looked like paper patterns to the table. Another little fairy, in the middle of the table picked them up and put them into baskets as they fell.

Delight ran and picked up some of Good-bye, Flies and Mosquitoes!

Unless you're a Flit user, you have no idea how soon you can rid your home of every fly and mosquito. Flit kills quicker, and is easier to use, in the handy Flit sprayer. Spray into cracks and crannies to kill roaches, bed bugs, ants. Flit vapor does not stain. Try the quicker Flit method today!

"The yellow can with the black band"

FLIT

REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

© 1929 Stanco Inc.

PLANNING AHEAD!

Working—saving—slowly, perhaps, but surely moving forward to your goal. There's a real thrill in it nothing can equal.

Keep your savings account with us. Let us help you succeed.

State-Planters Bank and Trust Co.

RICHMOND, VIRGINIA

A Bank of Strength and Character

CARTER N. WILLIAMS, President — ROBERT W. DANIEL, Chairman of Board

RICHMOND TRUST COMPANY

7th and Main — 211 West Broad

WHILE IN RICHMOND LET US KNOW IF YOU LIKE OUR FOOD

Mrs. Cook's Cafeteria

Near St. Paul's Parish House
Richmond, Va.

INCORPORATED 1882

Virginia Fire and Marine Insurance Company

Of Richmond, Va.

Assets - - - $3,640,152.88

Fred'k E. Nolting, President.

B. O. Lewis, Jr., Secretary — J. O. Watson, Treasurer
J. M. Leake, General Agent — Wm. P. Hill, Asst. Secretary

the patterns to see what they looked like.

"They're gone," she cried as she opened her hand.

"Yes, they are snowkake patterns for the clouds to use in making snowflake dresses. They are very frail. As soon as you breathe on them they melt."

"Who's here? Who's here?" said a boy's voice suddenly.

"It's just a little girl to see our patterns," said the Snowflake Fairy.

"And who are you?" asked Delight, not the least bit afraid. Her eyes looked straight into the boy fairy's eyes and she could feel her hand turn cold.

"I'm Jack Frost," laughed the boy fairy. Since you have looked at me, see if you cannot pick up a handful of patterns without having them melt."

This time when Delight picked up the patterns they did not melt at all. She could see their lovely, glistening, pointed shapes quite well. There were at least a dozen different shapes and all were as lovely as the star she had so often seen on her window at home.

"Come," said Jack Frost then. And he led them down a long, long passage made of ice, till they came to the Palace of Winds and Clouds.

Just as they entered the palace, Delight turned around, and saw that all the little fairies had followed them. Each fairy had a basket full of patterns hanging from her wings. There was lovely music, made by the Winds. Each fairy as she entered the palace danced up to a Cloud and emptied her basket of patterns right into his lap. Some of the clouds were so popular that two or three of the fairies went to the same cloud. When all the little baskets were quite empty, the fairies had a dance with the winds and the clouds. Even Jack Frost and Delight's Fairy friend joined in the final dance.

In a moment, however, Delight's Snow Fairy came up and whispered:

"If you want to be in time to see the snowstorm, you'd better hop right back into your bed."

"One of the winds may escort you home," said Jack Frost grandly. And as she shook hands with Delight, he added:

"If you're very, very careful not to breathe on them, you may look at the snowflake dresses quite closely after this. Lay a bit of black velvet on your window sill and you can see the patterns quite plainly."

Delight never forgot his words. She reached home very quickly and the nicest wind of all to help her. She was in time to see the snowflakes with their pretty dresses coming down in millions with the winds behind.

When Delight's tea tray came with mother that cold winter day, the little girl's face was covered with smiles.

"Having a lovely game all by yourself?" asked mother.

"Far lovlier than making Snowmen," said Delight. "I've been to the Fairy Palace where they make the snowflakes, mother."—The Presbyterian.

God's Presence.

All Love, all Beauty,, are of Him
Who gave them to His world, nor can
Be less than they. However dim
The light that lights the soul of man,
It was His love that lit the spark,
An altar candle in the dark.
The token of His perfect plan
The meteors blaze, the thunder rolls,
And worlds dissolve; but He is nigh,
To see our tears and hear our cry,
Not from some watch-tower of the sky,
But in the temple of our souls.

Ledge vs. Boulder Granite

The purpose of a monument is to perpetuate the memory of the dead. An all-important factor, therefore is its permanence.

Beautiful Winnsboro Granite is a true granite unaffected by the processes that disintegrate rock because of its protection from the elements, due to being deep in the earth in vast ledge formation. It has retained all of the strength and durability accomplished by the union of its beautiful crystals while molten millions of years ago.

Winnsboro Granite

"The Silk of the Trade"

therefore, will last many, many years longer than monuments cut from other granite. Its flawless beauty, stalwart strength, and great durability make it the ideal memorial granite. It possesses wonderful contrasts in shades and shadows. Thus, inscriptions cut on Winnsboro Granite Memorials can be read with greatest ease.

Beware of Boulder Granite.

A boulder is a piece of granite which has become detached from the earth stones, ages ago, and has been left on the surface exposed to the elements. The smooth round edges of boulders show that the stone has begun to disintegrate. Such stone is inferior, having partially lost its vitality, becoming more brittle and tending to crumble though having a fair appearance. It naturally sells at a lower price, but if you get a monument of boulder stone, you have a stone which has already started to rot. It is well to remember, "The sweetness of low prices never equals the bitterness of poor quality."

Typical Granite Boulder.

Be sure that "Winnsboro Granite" is specified in your contract for monuments. Like other high quality materials, there are many inferior substitutes, which resemble this granite on causual examination, but do not possess its lasting qualities and permanent beauty.

Have your monument dealer furnish you with a personal guarantee from the quarries that the monument you purchase is cut in genuine Winnsboro Granite.

The certificate of the quarries is signed by B. H. Heyward, Treasurer and General Manager, whose signature insures genuine Winnsboro Granite. A facsimile of this signature is reproduced below.

Write for Free Descriptive Literature

Winnsboro Granite Corporation, Rion, S. C.

B. H. Heyward Treas. & Gen. Mgr.

Classified Advertising and Notices

All notices and advertisements, excepting positions wanted, will be inserted in this department at a rate of 20 cents per agate line, each insertion. Special rates in contracts of any length. A rate of 15 cents per line is made to persons seeking positions. No advertisement accepted for less than 50 cents.
Copy for this department must be received not later than Tuesday of the week in which it is intended that the first insertion shall appear.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

ANTIQUES.

WE PAY THE HIGHEST CASH PRICES for old-time furniture and antiques of all kinds. H. C. Valentine, 209 East Franklin Street, Richmond, Va.

RELIGIOUS TRACTS.

GOOD RELIGIOUS TRACTS MAY BE had by writing to LEVI C. SULLIVAN, blind tract minister, P. O. Box 43, Roanoke, Va. Some excellent tracts for prison work.

—CATHEDRAL STUDIOS—
Washington London

Church Embroideries and Vestments, Silks, Fringes, Gold Thread, Stoles with crosses from $7.60, Burse and Veil from $15. Surplices and exquisite Altar Linens. Church Vestments imported for the Churches free of duty.
MISS L. V. MACKRILLE.
11 W. Kirke St., Chevy Chase, Washington, D. C. D. C. Telephone Cleveland 52.

FOR RENT—VIRGINIA BEACH, VA.

TWO LOVELY ROOMS WITH PRIVATE BATH in attractive bungalow; best location Virginia Beach. Address "Box 5", Virginia Beach, Va.

SITUATION WANTED.

A LADY WITH MANY YEARS' EXPERIence in Mission and Social Service work and practical nursing, desires position by September first. Address "X. Y.", care of Southern Churchman.

ORGANIST.

ORGANIST AND CHOIRMASTER, English trained, desires change of climate, account of wife's health. Very successful boys' voices, recitalist, director of choral societies, teacher pipe organ, vocal, piano. Excellent references. Address 'Organist", care of Southern Churchman.

WANTED, POSITION AS TEACHER, Academical or Industrial department in home, or institution. Experienced. Address Miss Leislie L. Rucker, Pedlar Mills, Va.

A GOOD READER DESIRES POSITION as companion, housekeeper or matron in institution. Address "Miss Page", care of Southern Churchman.

Deaths

ATKINSON: Died, suddenly, July 20, 1929, in Baltimore, Maryland, REVEREND THOMAS ATKINSON, son of the late Dr. Robert Atkinson, and grandson of the late Rt. Rev. Thomas Atkinson, Bishop of North Carolina.

MILLS: Entered into life eternal, July 26, 1929, in St. Luke's Hospital, New York City, MISS MARY MILLS, younger daughter of the late Rev. W. H. and Mrs. Nannie Alvey Mills, and sister of Mrs. Percy T. Fenn.
"Blessed are the pure in heart."

MISS NELLIE SMITH.

On July 18, 1929, after prolonged illness, heroically borne, MISS NELLIE SMITH entered the joys of eternal rest.
Her family and friends will remember with gratitude her rounded, bright, unselfish, useful life, fringed not by a dark cloud of suffering, but by the imperishable glories of a sunset of peace.
She is survived by two brothers and three sisters, Mr. Conway Smith, of Delaplane, Va.; Rev. Carroll N. Smith, of Erie Diocese, Pa., and Misses Minnie Tenyse and Olive Smith, of the Plains, Va.
Burial in Sharon Cemetery, Rev. D. C. Mayers officiating.

REV. DR. HUGH BIRCKHEAD.

A Tribute.

Died, at 53, in the midst of a signally able and growing ministry. That when the Church is finding it so hard to fill her responsible positions makes this loss peculiarly keen and sad.
This man did not figure largely in the news reports.
not figure largely in the news reports.
He was innocent of the arts of the office seeker and some of his brethren doubtless thought him aloof. Surely because he was so wholly concentrated upon his own God-given job in a parish which grew in power, beauty and effectiveness each year. Dr. Birckhead was first a strong, dramatic, outspoken preacher. He had a firm grip upon Christ and His Cross. He won and held large congregations. He was also a good undershepherd of the flock of Christ, systematic and diligent to the end. In resourcefulness as an administrator he had few superiors He set people to work, inspired them with a zeal for missions and service. Starting out as a rather typical Broad Churchman he grew steadily in his feeling for the nobility of the life of worship and the sacramental element in the Church's life. His sympathies widened. He had invited last spring the Rev. Fr. Shirley C Hughson to hold a mission in Emmanuel Church this autumn, and few men would have more faithfully prepared for it. And then he stood by his diocese nobly through all. More often than any other his parish was "the host of the whole Church" in Maryland. They did it handsomely and well. His fine figure and leadership will be missed and those who knew him best will most sadly mourn him.
"Eternal rest grant unto him, O Lord, and may light perpetual shine upon him."
ARTHUR B. KINSOLVING.
July 25 1929.

CHURCH INTELLIGENCE.
(Continued from page 16.)

the large and handsome new church, opened for its first service last Easter, will be appropriately and fully furnished having received many memorials and gifts to this end. The swimming pool of the parish is one of the most popular places in Riverside section during the summer. The old chapel, which with balcony, seats about 700, has been dismantled and is now "Worsham Hall", will be used for the junior and senior departments of the school and as a place for plays, moving pictures and other activities of the church, requiring an auditorium. Eighty-one have been confirmed in the parish since Easter. Renovation of the seven large department halls are being made this summer, to be ready for the fall opening of the school. The Rev. C. A. Ashby is rector of the parish. Union services with the Riverside Baptist and Presbyterian churches with Good Shepherd on Sunday nights are proving most popular.
J. O. P.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

Rt. Rev. Albert S. Thomas, Bishop.

Vacation Bible School.

Exceeding by over one hundred the enrollment of last year, the Daily Vacation Bible School under auspices of the Episcopal churches of Charleston, S. C., opened for a session of five weeks with two hundred and eighty-nine pupils. Mrs. C. J. Shuler is principal, the Rev. Dr. H. W. Starr, rector of the Church of the Holy Communion, is director, and John A. Pinckney assistant. The faculty includes thirty-four teachers from Episcopal, Lutheran, Methodist and Baptist churches.

Bishop Thomas, of South Carolina, has dedicated the Kanuga Lake property, near Hendersonville, N. C., as a Summer Conference Centre and Camp of Religious Training for the four dioceses in South and North Carolina.

The Diocesan Home for Aged Women of the two dioceses of South Carolina, has moved into its new quarters at Charleston, the fine old Gilchrist mansion, three stories, Ashley Avenue and Bee Street. The building, which was given the church by the late W. King McDowell, has been remodeled and thoroughly renovated. The Home was established in Charleston seventy years ago and has been long at Ashley and Spring Streets.

A new organ was installed at St. John's Church, Charleston, S. C., June 23. The congregation is thoroughly pleased with the instrument.

MARYLAND.

Rt. Rev. J. G. Murray, D. D., Bishop.
Rt. Rev. E. T. Helfenstein, D. D., Coadjutor

Blue Mountain Conference.

The Blue Mountain Conference of the Protestant Episcopal Church adjourned July 30, after having been in session at Hood College, Frederick, Md., two weeks. It was the most largely attended of the sixty-five Church conferences in the United States. A new feature was the children's department, conducted by Deaconess Frances Edwards, of the National Department of Religious Instruction, assisted by Miss Helen C. Washburn, of Philadelphia. Former Bishop Overs, of the Missionary Diocese of Liberia, now of Jamestown, N. Y., was president of the conference, and the Rev. John W. Suter, Jr., Secretary.

MILWAUKEE.

Rt. Rev. W. W. Webb, D. D., Bishop.
Rt. Rev. B. F. P. Irvins, D. D., Coadjutor.

Rural Workers' Conference.

With the largest attendance in its eight consecutive years, the Rural Workers' Conference of the Episcopal Church met at Madison, Wisconsin, July 6-12.
The church group met in connection with the Annual Rural Leadership Summer School of the University of Wisconsin. Men and women in attendance took courses at the University on such subjects as Sociology of Community Life, Adult Education in Rural Communities, Farm Relief Programs and Problems, Personality and Social Adjustment, and kindred topics, taught by members of the University faculty, among them Professors Colbert, Kolb, Muyskens, and a dozen others.
The church group conducted its own conferences, one at noon, and one each evening, affording the opportunity of the general University courses, with a varied series of addresses, conferences and discussions of the rural problems of this church. Other denomination groups conducted similar specialized conferences.
One of the largest groups, the Episcopal Church was represented by forty-five men, mostly rural clergy; twenty-eight women, leaders in various kinds of rural church work; and three bishops, the Rt. Rev. Frank E. Wilson, D. D., of Eau Claire, the Rt. Rev. H. H. H. Fox, D. D., Coadjutor of Montana, and the Rt. Rev. William Green,, Coadjutor of Mississippi.
Delegates came from twenty-five states of the union, and twenty-nine dioceses of the Church.
The women's group was housed in Delta Sigma Pi House, and conducted its own noon-day conferences, including a presentation of organization. Miss Sanford of the Church Mission of Help; Miss Alice Alexander, representing the

G. F. S., and Miss Elizabeth Beck, of Austin, Minn., for the Daughters of the King; sessions on the Woman's Auxiliary, led by Mrs. Benjamin Brown, diocesan president in Western Missouri; Social Service in relation to rural work, under direction of Mrs. William Marsh, Dean of Rural Women in the Diocese of Tennessee. The women's program continued with an address by Mrs. Edward Ashley, about Indian work, especially with young people in South Dakota; Miss Jansen, of Richlands, Va., discussed Mountain Work. Miss Anna Clark, of the National Council of the Y. W. C. A., presented that organization's program for rural activity, and various clergy presented to the women their particular methods and problems.

The men followed a similarly varied program. The Rev. C. E. Edinger, of East Tawas, Mich., led a discussion of Diocesan Vocational Camps and Conferences for Country Boys. The Rev. H. W. Foreman, Secretary for Rural Work, Department of Christian Social Service, of the National Council, conducted a general discussion of the Church's rural work, program and problems.

From various parts of the Church came information about methods used. Among them discussion of motion pictures, showing how the Church is carried into the country districts of Western Massachusetts. Archdeacon Bulkey, of Utah, explained the Mormon situation. The Rev. John W. Irwin, of the National Council's Department of Publicity, had two sessions on practical methods of using publicity for the rural Church. The men lived and met in Zeta Psi Fraternity House.

On Sunday the entire conference was entertained by Grace Church, Madison, at breakfast, following the early celebration of Holy Communion. Bishop Fox was celebrant and preacher at the late service.

J. W. I.

MISSISSIPPI.

Rt. Rev. T. DuB. Bratton, D. D., Bishop.
Rt. Rev. W. M. Green, D. D., Coadjutor.

Parish Has Doubled Membership in Ten Years.

On Sunday morning, June 16, Saint Andrew's Parish, Jackson, celebrated with special services the tenth anniversary of the rector, the Rev. Walter B. Capers, D. D. Bishop Bratton presided, and speaking for the diocese and himself, bore fitting testimony to Dr. Capers, and praised his notable work, both in the diocese and in the parish. Judge Lyell spoke in behalf of the Men's Bible Class, which is one of the conspicuous evidences of the rector's success. Mr. Marcellus Green, Senior Warden, of the parish, discussed the "work behind the scenes" that every wearer of the cloth must carry on in the church, and told of the diplomacy, tact, and wisdom of Dr. Capers in solving every problem his parish brought to him." Mr. Green told how since Dr. Capers came to Jackson from Trinity Church, New Orleans, in June, 1919, the parish had doubled its members, and more than trebled in the amount of money raised and in the amounts given to missionary and educational work. The beautiful parish house has been built, said he, at a cost for edifice and furnishings of $60,000—all of which amount has been paid, and a $20,000 rectory has been purchased and paid for. Pledges to parish and general Church support have increased from $150 in 1919 to $500 in 1929.

There are nine hundred communicants and 1,150 baptized persons in the parish.

As one of the evidences of the parish's appreciation of the rector and Mrs. Capers, a substantial check was placed on the plate for them.

Dr. Capers has represented the Dioceses of Tennessee and Mississippi in a number of the General Conventions of the Church, and at present is the president of the Standing Committee of this diocese. He is vice-president of the local Community Welfare Association, director of the Mississippi Child's Finding Society, a Lion, a Mason, and a member of the Sigma Alpha Epsilon College fraternity.

M. W.

ARKANSAS.

Rt. Rev. Jas. R. Winchester, D. D., Bishop
Rt. Rev. E. W. Saphore, D. D., Suffragan
Rt. Rev. E. T. Demby, D. D., Suffragan

St. Mary's Church, El Dorado, has been without a minister and without a supply for ten months. Three other parishes in Arkansas are without ministers and have been so for months. And that is the reason for the weakness of the church, not only in Arkansas, but everywhere that such conditions exist.

Bishop Winchester is in Chicago to remain until the autumn. His health does not permit him to do any visiting for confirmation or other purposes.

Mr. Paul Newell, a candidate for Holy Orders from Little Rock, is in charge of the parish of St. Paul's at Newport.

Dean John M. Williamson, of Trinity Cathedral, Little Rock, is spending a two months' vacation in England, traveling with his family. The Dean furnished a supply for one month; and lay readers are holding services the second month.

Personal Notes

The Rev. Richard Bland Mitchell, D. D., for many years executive secretary of the field department of the National Council, and since 1928 field secretary for the University of Sewanee, has accepted the call to St. Mary's-in-the-Highlands, Birmingham, Alabama. Dr. Mitchell will enter upon his new work the first of September.

Dr. Mitchell graduated from the Divinity School of the University of Sewanee in 1912, with the degree of Bachelor of Divinity. He was ordained by Bishop Bratton of Mississippi. His first charge was in Aberdeen, Mississippi. He spent one year in China and other far east countries, in the interests of the Church's missions. From 1917 to 1920 he was corresponding secretary of the Board of Missions of the General Church. He is the brother of the Rt. Rev. Walter Mitchell, Bishop of Arizona.

St. Mary's has been vacant since the resignation of the Rev. Oscar de Wolf Randolph, about a year ago. The congregation is happy in securing so able a success to Mr. Randolph.

ORDINATIONS.

Mr. Durrie B. Hardin and Mr. Edward G. Mullen were made Deacons on St. John's Day, June 24, in Trinity Church, Houston, by the Rt. Rev. Clinton S. Quin, D. D., Bishop of Texas.

Mr. Hardin was presented by the Rev. Claude W. Sprouse and Mr. Mullen by the Rev. Charles W. Sheerin. The sermon was preached by the Rev. Charles Sumners and the Litany was read by the Rev. Lyle S. Barnett.

Mr. Hardin is to be in charge of the work in Orange and Goosecreek, Texas, and Mr. Mullen is to be assistant at St. Paul's Church, Waco.

The Rev. Ralph B. Putney was advanced to the Priesthood at Trinity Church, Detroit, Mich., by the Rt. Rev. Herman Page, Bishop of Michigan, on Sunday, June 23. Mr. Putnam is a recent graduate of the Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, Mass. He will become the rector of Trinity Church, Munroe, Mich.

Mr. Putney was presented for ordination by the Rev. Malcolm J. Van Zandt, and the ordination sermon was preached by the Rev. Lewis B. Whittemore, rector of Grace Church, Grand Rapids, Mich.

Mr. Horace B. Waters was ordained to the Diaconate by the Rt. Rev. Herman Page, in St. John's Church, Detroit, Sunday, June 23. Mr. Waters was ordained in the sign language of deaf mutes, and will work in connection with the Ephphatha Mission, which has been conducted in St. John's Church for many years. The candidate was presented by the Rev. R. W. Woodroofe, D. D., rector of St. John's Church. The service was attended by eight deaf mute clergymen from the Middle Western and Eastern States, and by many members of the mission congregation.

The Rev. George Ridgeway was ordained Priest at the Church of the Messiah, Detroit, by the Rt. Rev. Campbell Gray, Bishop of Northern Indiana. Mr. Ridgeway has been studying at the University of the South. He is engaged to marry Miss Virginia Gray, daughter of the Bishop who ordained him. Mr. Ridgeway will serve on the staff of the Detroit City Mission, and also will have charge of the Church of the Messiah during the absence of the newly appointed rector, the Rev. Harry J. Pearson, who has left for a short vacation in England.

The Rev. Albert S. Longley, rector of St. Paul's, Glen Cove, died suddenly at his rectory on Wednesday, April 24. The funeral was in his church on Saturday, the twenty-seventh, at 3 P. M. He was a brother of Bishop Longley, of Iowa.

DEATHS.

Baltimore, Md., July 22.—While returning from a professional and social call on Dr. George H. Hocking, the Rev. Dr. Thomas Atkinson, prominent clergyman of the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of Maryland, dropped dead Saturday night on Thirty-third Street.

A grandson of a Protestant Episcopal bishop of North Carolina and a son of the later Dr. Robert Atkinson of this city, Dr. Atkinson was born in Baltimore April 1, 1860.

In 1883 he became the deacon of the Cape Charles of the Holy Evangelist, Baltimore, and the following year was an instructor at the Ravenscroft Training School, Asheville. He was ordained a priest in 1884 and the next year returned to his first charge.

He was appointed curate of St. John's Protestant Episcopal Church, Fayetteville, N. C., in 1887, and the next year was named rector of the church, filling the pulpit until 1893, when he returned to Baltimore to become the rector of St. Barnabas' Protestant Episcopal Church.

"This poor man cried, and the Lord heard him, and saved him out of all his troubles." Psalm 34.6.

STEFFAN PRISON ASSOCIATION

Incorporated

WITHERSPOON BUILDING, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

INTRODUCTION

I do not believe that I ever saw a more marvelous example of the power of God's redeeming grace than Vincent J. Steffan; to me a brother beloved in Christ. And no story that I have ever read in secular literature or sacred is to me more thrilling than the testimony of this soul that has come up from the immeasureable depths of sin. It is a very modest account of those experiences that this young man has passed through of which I have been an interested observer from the time of his incarceration in the State Prison at San Quentin. The simple truth in this case will seem like some fairy tale of the most fervid fancy. And it is for the glory of God that the story is told. That thousands and even millions may read it is my hope and prayer.

A. C. SHEPHERD,
Formerly Chaplain of the State Prison at San Quentin, Cal.

PLACES OF MINISTRY

A record of the Association's activities from January to March 31, 1929, is shown below.

Penal Institutions Visited	Location
1. State Penitentiary	Philadelphia, Pa.
2. State Penitentiary	Pittsburgh, Pa.
3. State Penitentiary	Montgomery, Ala.
5. State Penitentiary	Joliet, Ill.
6. State Penitentiary	Baltimore, Md.
7. State Penitentiary	Jefferson City, Mo.
8. State Penitentiary	Columbus, Ohio
9. State Penitentiary	Richmond, Va.
10. State Penitentiary	Bellefonte, Pa.
11. State Reformatory	Huntingdon, Pa.
12. Boys' Training School	Milledgeville, Ga.
13. Sing Sing Prison	Ossining, N. Y.
14. Industrial School	Maidens, Va.
16. City Work House	St. Louis, Mo.
17. Municipal Jail	St. Louis, Mo.
18. Allegheny County Jail	Pittsburgh, Pa.
19. National Training School	Washington, D. C.
20. U. S. Penitentiary	Atlanta, Ga.
21. U. S. Disciplinary Barracks	Fort Leavenworth, Kans.
58. Various others, including churches.

SUMMARY FOR THREE MONTHS

Total institutions visited	79
Total services conducted	60
Total prisoners addressed	13,500
Total decisions manifested	970

The Association is grateful to all who have contributed in any way toward making this ministry possible. All interested are invited to list their names with us and receive these quarterly reports. Correspondence is invited for opportunity to serve in penal institutions, and elsewhere.

THE STEFFAN PRISON ASSOCIATION

418 Crozer Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

MY THANK OFFERING

I am sending you the sum of.....
as my thank offering gift for the spreading of the Gospel among the prisoners in penal and correctional institutions.

Name.....

Address.....

Date..... .....

DESIGNED FOR THE PROMOTION OF PRACTICAL PIETY, THE DIFFUSION OF RELIGIOUS AND GENERAL INTELLIGENCE, AND THE MAINTENANCE OF THE PRINCIPLES OF THE PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL CHURCH

Southern Churchman

1835

Vol. 94. RICHMOND, VA., AUGUST 10, 1929. No. 32.

MORE PRECIOUS THAN GOLD

Ours is the richest nation on the globe. With 6.5 per cent of the world's land area and 7 per cent of the world's population, this country produces and consumes a far greater proportion of the material requirements of modern man than does the rest of the world. Each year our factories, mines and farms combined turn out products valued in excess of $80,000,000,000.

We are expending billions each year on the development of material things. In the South alone there is annually invested more than $1,000,000,000 in new construction—new industries, new buildings, highways, railways, airways and water transportation facilities. But of what avail is this enormous wealth and creative power if we do not aid in the fullest development of our greatest asset, the youth of the land? They are more precious than gold.

The school boy and girl of to-day, and the generations yet unborn, are to be the future stewards of the legacy we leave. Are we making it possible to carry on, to conserve and to add to what we have by the provision of educational advantages in keeping with our colossal wealth and power among the nations of the earth? We have made a beginning in private educational endowments. We have laid the groundwork for a great public school system, but what a pittance are our annual educational expenditures compared with our responsibility to build a sound foundation and to furnish adequate facilities whereby those of school age may acquire knowledge and develop character!

Our higher institutions of learning are crowded. Never before have our young people been so eager to equip themselves for life's work. Then let us not be niggardly in supplying the physical equipment, in paying teachers and educators an amount sufficient to draw into our schools and colleges the ablest minds of the country, for upon these teachers rests the all-important duty of guiding the coming generations to greater achievements in material matters as well as in spiritual.—Manufacturers Record.

"The fear of God is the beginning of wisdom," hence one of our greatest needs in the world to-day is: teaching the Bible in our public schools. We are launching ships without anchors or compasses.—Southern Churchman.

EDUCATIONAL

The Gundry Home and Training School For The Feeble Minded

Falls Church, Fairfax County, Va.

Established 1892.

For terms and information address

MISS M. GUNDRY.

The General Theological Seminary

CHELSEA SQUARE, NEW YORK.

The next Academic year egins on the last Wednesday in September.

Special students admitted and Graduate Courses for graduates of othre Theological Seminaries.

The requirements for admission and other particulars can be had from THE DEAN, 1 Chelsea Square, New York, N. Y.

The Bishop Payne Divinity School

The accredited Seminary of the Church for training colored men for the ministry. The curriculum covers the full course for Deacon's and Priest's Orders. The degree of B. D. is awarded.

For catalogue and information apply to Rev. F. G. Ribble, M. A., D. D., Dean, Petersburg, Va.

The Protestant Episcopal Theological Seminary Virginia

The One Hundred and Sixth Session Opened Wednesday, Sept. 19, 1928.

For catalogue and other information address The Dean, Rev. Berryman Green, D. D., Theological Seminary, Alexandria, Va.

Schermerhorn Home School

Located six miles north of Richmond on the Washington Highway. A Home School for Children who need Special care and Training.

SUE I. SCHERMERHORN,
Box 57, West End Sta,
Richmond, Va.

STUART HALL

STAUNTON, VA.

Episcopal school for girls, maintaining best Virginia traditions of refinement and culture.

Thorough College Preparation. Varied General Course. Outdoor Life.

EIGHTY-SIXTH YEAR BEGINS SEPTEMBER 18, 1929

For catalogue, address
MRS. H. N. HILLS, Principal

Episcopal Theological School

Cambridge, Massachusetts.

Affiliated with Harvard University.

For catalog address
The Dean.

Chatham Hall

A Church School for girls in Southern Virginia. Thorough college preparation. General and graduate courses. Art, music, expression, home economics, secretarial course. Superb location; 175 acre estate, gardens, dairy; modern, well equipped buildings. Riding, swimming, golf. Address Rev. Edmund J. Lee, M. A., D. D., Box S, Chatham, Va.

Southern Churchman

SOUTHERN CHURCHMAN COMPANY,
628 E. Main Street - - - Richmond, Va.

LANGBOURNE MEADE WILLIAMS
President
ALFRED B. WILLIAMS..Associate Editor
THE REV. FRANK COX
Associate Editor
THE REV. JAMES W. MORRIS, D. D.
Associate Editor
MRS. CONRAD H. GOODWIN,
Associate Editor
MISS SUSANNE WILLIAMS..News Editor
JOHN H. COOKE..Secretary and Manager

Entered at the Post Office in Richmond, Va., as second-class mail matter.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE.

$3.00 a year in advance. To the Clergy, $2.00. Six months, $1.50. Trial subscriptions, 3 months, 50 cents; 10 cents a copy. Foreign postage, 50 cents additional.

For the convenience of subscribers, subscriptions are continued at expiration unless otherwise ordered. Notice of renewal, discontinuance or change of address should be sent two weeks before the date they go into effect.

RECEIPT OF PAYMENT is shown in about two weeks by change of date on address label. If date is not properly extended after each payment, notify us promptly. No receipt for payment will be sent.

Notice post office address. The exact post office address to which we are directing the paper at the time of writing MUST ALWAYS BE GIVEN. Our mailing list is arranged by post offices and not alphabetically.

Make all checks and money orders payable to the Southern Churchman, and not to an individual.

ADVERTISEMENTS—Rates quoted on request. For classified see head of that department.

Representatives wanted in each Parish; liberal commissions.

News concerning the Church at large always welcome.

CONTENTS

	Page.
Thoughts for the Thoughtful	4
Editorial	5
The Inspired Bible and Human Opinion—W. Bell Dawson	6
Creedless, but Religious, Eh?	10
The Value of Creeds	10
Well Stated	10
An Appeal and Warning to the Bishops—Lord Brentford	9
Liberal Episcopalians—Archbishop Whately	11
Devilish Submarines	12
Extract From the Will of J. Pierpont Morgan	10
Book Reviews	12
Letters to Editor	13
Church Intelligence	15
Family Department	17
Children's Department	17
Personal Notes	23

DIVINITY SCHOOL

of the Protestant Episcopal Church in Philadelphia

42nd and Locust Streets.

Graduate Courses in Theology, Privileges at the University of Pennsylvania.

Address: The Rev. G. G. Bartlett, D. D., Dean.

SAINT MARY'S SCHOOL AND JUNIOR COLLEGE

Raleigh, North Carolina.

Rev. Warren W. Way, A. M., Rector.

An Episcopal School for Girls. Have your daughter receive her education in a Church School.

Saint Mary's offers four years' High School and two years' College work all fully accredited by the Southern Association. Also Courses in Music, Art, Expression, Home Economics and Business.

20-acre campus. Gym and Field Sports. Tennis, Indoor Tiled Swimming Pool. Horseback Riding.

For Catalogue and View Book address A. W. TUCKER, Business Manager.

Five Virginia CHURCH SCHOOLS

FOR BOYS: St. Christopher's School, Richmond; Christchurch School, Christchurch, Middlesex County.

FOR GIRLS: St. Catherine's School, Richmond; St. Anne's School, Charlottesville; St. Margaret's School, Tappahannock.

(For Catalogs, address Principals.)

LEGAL TITLE for wills: Church Schools in the Diocese of Virginia (Inc.).

(About gifts or bequests, address Central Office, 110 West Franklin Street, Richmond, Va.)

HOBART COLLEGE Geneva N. Y.

A Church College for men, founded 1828. Four year liberal arts course, leading to the degrees A. B. and B. S. High standards; faculty of thirty. For catalogue and information, address

REV. MURRAY BARTLETT, D. D., Pres.

St. Margaret's School

Tappahannock, Virginia.

A Church School for girls with modern equipment and moderate cost. Intermediate and College Preparatory. Accredited.

Country life and simplicity without isotion. Beautiful grounds on Rappahannock River. Three dormitories for different ages. Supervised Athletics.

EDITH LATANE, Headmistree.

St. Anne's,

Charlottesville, Va.
Box G.

Beautiful location in far famed Blue Ridge Mountains College preparatory and elective courses. Fully accredited. Open gymnasium allows sports in the fresh air in all weather. Sleeping porches. Riding taught by expert. Music. Art. Bishop of Virginia President of Trustees. Margaret L. Porter, M. A., Principal.

FISHBURNE MILITARY SCHOOL

Aim—"Not the largest, but the best"

IN EVERY class each boy recites every day. Contacts with schoolmates from all over the country. Graduates enter all colleges. Certificate privileges. Mild year 'round climate. Easily reached. Full athletic program supervised by experienced men. Modern equipment. Swimming pool. Col. M. H. Hudgins, Box , Waynesboro, Virginia.

Member Ass'n of Military Colleges and Schools of U. S.

St. Paul's Boys' School

Rogers Avenue, Mt. Washington, Md.

Boarding and Day Pupils—Fifth grade to college.

WALTER B. LAWRENCE, M A., Headmaster.

Faculty all College Graduates.

REV. ARTHUR B. KINSOLVING, D. D., President Board of Trustees.

Enrollment limited to Fifty Boarding Pupils. Tuition $450. Choir Scholarships. Next sesison begins September 11, 1929.

HAMPDEN-SYDNEY COLLEGE

Invites your careful consideration of its Faculty, Courses of Study, Wholesome Christian Atmosphere, and Physical Equipment.

For catalogue write,

REGISTRAR
Hampden-Sydney, Virginia

CHURCH EQUIPMENT SERVICE

CASSOCKS

Surplices, Stoles, Eucharistic Vestments, Choir Cassocks, Cottas, Ties and Collars, Altar Linens, Materials, Tailoring.

J. M. HALL, Inc.
174 Madison Ave.
(Bet. 33d & 34th Sts.)
New York.

MOLLER PIPE ORGAN

Endorsed by the most eminent organists. Built in the world's largest factory. Every organ a special creation for a particular use and fully guaranteed. Moller Organs lead all quest.

Booklets and specifications on reother makes for church, school and auditorium use. The Moller "Artiste" Reproducing Organ for residence use is without equal.

M. P. MOLLER
Hagerstown, Maryland.

Kill All Flies! THEY SPREAD DISEASE

Placed anywhere, DAISY FLY KILLER attracts and kills all flies. Neat, clean, ornamental, convenient and cheap. Lasts all season. Made of metal, can't spill or tip over; will not soil or injure anything. Guaranteed.

Insist upon
DAISY FLY KILLER
from your dealer.

HAROLD SOMERS, Brooklyn N. Y.

Girls' Problems of Today

Discussed by Mother Ruth.

Actual letters from girls to Mother Ruth. Some inquire as to Sunday picnics, school and class plays, studying on Sunday and as to the right kind of social affairs.

Others confess they are in love, each letter being followed by Mother Ruth's advice.

Home perplexities are reflected in letters on corporal punishment, training children to obey, and on friction and unhappiness in the home.

Every girl will be helped by reading the letters and answers on dancing, cards, slang, and on the choice of companions.

Finding time for Bible study, heeding calls for the mission fields, giving one's testimony, getting an education —these problems have perplexed many.

Many write that they are discouraged, dissatisfied, and tired of living. Life is "just a treadmill." College girls, stenographers, department store clerks, sound this note of defeat. But Mother Ruth's answers infuse the reader with a new courage and the true philosophy of life—turn dark defeat into shining victory—into peace and joy.

Cloth bound, $1.50.
Postage, 10c.

The Bible Institute Colportage Ass'n.
843-845 N Wells St. Chicago, Ill.

For The Southern Churchman.

SORROW.

William Allen Ward.

Sorrow
Is an old man
Who leans on the Walking cane of Hope.

PIPE ORGANS

Highest quality. Superb tone. Modern accessories. Durable construction. All sizes.

Write for catalog of Pipe Organs, Reed Organs, or Electric Blowing Outfits.

HINNERS ORGAN CO.
PEKIN, ILLINOIS

PEABODY

BALTIMORE, MD.

The Leading Endowed Musical Conservatory in the Country.

Scholarships, Diplomas, Tuition in all grades and branches. Circulars mailed

WHILE IN RICHMOND LET US KNOW IF YOU LIKE OUR FOOD

Mrs. Cook's Cafeteria

Near St. Paul's Parish House
Richmond, Va.

INCORPORATED 1882

Virginia Fire and Marine Insurance Company

Of Richmond, Va.

Assets - - - $3,640,152.88

Fred'k E. Nolting, President.

B. C. Lewis, Jr., Secretary — J. C. Watson, Treasurer
J. M. Leake, General Agent — Wm. P. Hill, Asst. Secretary

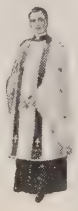
J. & R. Lamb
23-25-27 SIXTH AVENUE NEW YORK
MEMORIALS IN STAINED GLASS
MOSAIC · MARBLE · STONE · GRANITE
CARVED WOOD · METAL · ETC.

Woody's Art Glass Shop

Art Stained and Leaded Glass.

Church Windows a Specialty.

513 East Main Street, Richmond, Va.



BEVERLEY HEATING

The Best for Homes, Churches, Stores and Buildings for all uses.
R. C. BEVERLEY HEATING CO., INC.,
308 E. Main St., Richmond, Va.
QUALITY—SERVICE.

LINEN for the CHURCH

PURE IRISH LINEN FOR ALL CHURCH USES, yard or piece lengths, at lowest import prices. New Special Number for Cottas, eighty-two and one-half cents. Samples on request.

MARY FAWCETT CO.,
350 Broadway, New York.

CHURCH VESTMENTS
Cassocks, Surplices, Stole.
EMBROIDERIES
Silks, Cloths, Fringes.
CLERICAL SUITS
Rabats, Collars, Shirts.
COX SONS & VINING,
131-133 E. 23d St., New York.

Church and Sunday School Furniture

THE SOUTHERN DESK COMPANY,
Hickory, N. C.
Send for Special Catalogue.

$50 TO $100 IN SPARE TIME

Write for Schwer's CHRISTMAS CARD & NOVELTIES PLAN. Popular and different from others. $50. to $100. easily made. No investment. Great for Home Effort. Write at once to CHARLEY C. SCHWER, DEPT. 186 WESTFIELD, MASS.

When in need of

MONUMENTS and TOMBSTONES

and want honest treatment see

BURNS & CAMPBELL,
Granite and Marble Works
PETERSBURG, VA.

Designs furnished on application and all orders receive prompt attention.

CHURCH FURNITURE

Pews, Pulpit and Sunday School Furniture. Catalog on request.

T. W. ALEXANDER & SON,
Box 147. Waynesboro, Va.

Washington Cathedral

A Witness for Christ in the Capital of the Nation

♦ ♦ ♦

THE CHAPTER appeals to Churchmen throughout the country for gifts, large and small, to continue the work of building now proceeding, and to maintain its work, Missionary, Education, Charitable, for the benefit of the whole Church.

Chartered under Act of Congress.

Administered by a representative Board of Trustees of leading business men, Clergymen and Bishops.

Full information will be given by the Bishop of Washington, or the Dean, Cathedral Offices, Mount St. Alban, Washington, D. C., who will receive and acknowledge all contributions.

♦ ♦ ♦

Legal Title for Use in Making Wills:
The Protestant Episcopal Cathedral Foundation of the District of Columbia

VIRGINIA TRUST CO.

Richmond, Va.

THE SAFE EXECUTOR,

Was organized in 1892 to act as Executor-Guardian and Trustee.

Many prudent men and women in every section of the State have named this Company Executor and trustee in their wills.

Inquiries cordially invited—no cost and confidential.

Capital Stock .....$ 1,000,000.00
Surplus earned .....$ 1,500,000.00
Held in trust.....$45,000,000.00

LITTLE TEA ROOM

SANDWICHES

Special Prices to
Clubs, Lodges and Paties

211 N. Jefferson Ran 3958
Richmond, Va.

XANTHINE

Will hereafter be sold in the new style bottle and package. Always best for the hair. Not a dye, but restores the color, promotes growth and prevents dandruff.

Price $1.00 at druggists, or sent prepaid by us.

XANTHINE CO., Richmond, Va.

CARPETS for CHURCHES

We carry a large stock of Church Carpets, embracing a wide assortment of designs, colorings and qualities and at prices to meet every requirement. Write and our representative will call with a selection of patterns and give an estimate, or we will send samples, at our expense, for your consideration.

Sydnor & Hundley

700 E. Grace Street,
Richmond, Va.

Thoughts For the Thoughtful

"We may grow tired in His work, but we never grow tired of it."

Nothing but the consciousness of your own weakness can make you indulgent and pitiful to that of others.

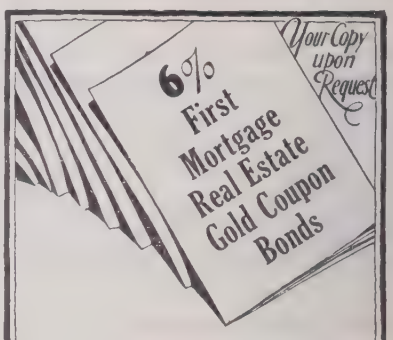
Do not lose your inward peace for anything whatsoever, even if your whole world seems upset. Commend all to God, and then lie still and be at rest in His bosom.—Frances De Sales.

I prayed—and wondered if God heard.
After long waiting, it has all come true;
And strange as the fulfillment of the word,
Is the half-joy, half-fear,
To find that all the time He was so near.
—Selected.

Why are you going around with your head down, talking about your poverty? The weakest, poorest child of God has more riches than the richest of Earth's millions, because he is an heir of God, joint-heir with Christ—Adapted.

When the Spirit of God touches a soul it begins to glow, and from it the blessed spark may pass from heart to heart and from church to church until an entire continent may blaze with heavenly fire.

No man can live wisely, deeply, truly, until he has got out of the notion that he is his own property. Herein is the great mystery of the Christian faith.—Joseph Parker.



What coolness, what quietness, what a delicate wind from the hills of God steals over us, when, by the mystery of faith and prayer, we draw to the soul of Jesus! What a rebuke to all that is evil within us! What a scattering of all unholy embers! How our backslidings are stayed and turned back again under that mild reproach! And how sure we become of God!—John A. Hutton.

Love God, and you will be humble; love God, and you will throw off the love of self; love God, and you will love all that He gives you to love for love of Him.—Fenelon.

Truth broadens o'er the world, old heights grow cold,
Old lights fade one by one.
Nay fear not! Though our eyes may not behold,
Our children shall have sun."

All that I have taught of art, everything that I have written, every greatness that has been in any thought of mine, whatever I have done in my life, has simply been due to the fact that when I was a child my mother daily read with me a part of the Bible, and daily made me learn a part of it by heart.—John Ruskin.

It is not the multitude or the earnestness of your words in which prayer has its power, but in the living faith that God Himself is taking you and your prayer into His loving heart. He Himself will give you the assurance that in His time your prayer will be heard.—Andrew Murray.

BONDS offered by The American —one of the largest financial institutions in the South — are always the highest grade of investments.

Never a day's delay in the prompt payment of principal or interest on an American Bond.

If you are one of those conservative investors who seek employment of funds with security and a liberal yield, write for details of current issues of American Bonds.

Mention this paper.

Investigate American Bonds before you invest.

AMERICAN
BANK AND TRUST COMPANY
Richmond, Virginia

TIDEWATER TALES

A book into which is gathered the folklore, traditions and history of Tidewater Virginia. Written in a delightful informal style by Prof. William C. Garnett.

The President of a College in South Carolina writes: "I have never read a work of this kind the style of which I have found more attractive, simple and yet elegant, interesting but never monotonous."

A prominent representative of a Publishing Co. writes: "This book will be read by our children and children's children. I could read 'A Fox Hunt 'Fo de War' every week."

A prominent attorney in Washington writes: ". . . the charming description of the old homes, the history and traditions, and the true-to-life stories in local color, combined to delight me."

A professor in one of the Virginia Universities writes: "You have put posterity in your debt by presenting so skilfully to them characters that have passed to the beyond."

Price, $4.00 per copy. Order from WM. GARNETT, Dunnsville, Va.

SOUTHERN CHURCHMAN

Catholic for every truth of God; Protestant against every error of man.

EDITORIALS

Vol. 94. RICHMOND, VA., AUGUST 10, 1929. No. 32.

ESTRAYS

On page 218 of "The Living Church Annual", under the title, "Organizations for Devotional Purposes", apparently recognized as properly affiliated, or operating with the consent of the Church, appears the notice of "The Living Rosary of Our Lady and St. Dominic", the rules of which are there stated as follows:

> "To say daily the decade of the Rosary as appointed by the quarterly intention card. To receive Holy Communion on the Feast of the Most Holy Rosary, October 7. To hear Mass on St. Dominic's Day, August 4. It is the duty of Rosarians to conform to the practices of the Universal Church especially in regard to Fasting Communion and Sacramental Confession, and to attendance at Mass on all Sundays of the year and Holy Days of Obligation."

"The living Rosary of Our Lady and St. Dominic" is distributing broadcast in the Protestant Episcopal Church a leaflet, which reads as follows:

"The Rosaries of S. Sabina

The beads which form the Rosaries of S. Sabina are taken from the fruit of the plant commonly called the Thorn of Christ, 'Spina Christi'.

Enclosed in the Cross is a little piece of the wood of the orange tree, which, a pious tradition says, was planted by S. Dominic in the Convent garden of S. Sabina.

These Rosaries when sold or ordered are blessed and enriched with the Indulgences of the Rosary Confraternity, with those called des Peres Crioseriers, with the Papal Indulgences and S. Brigida. To the Crucifix are attached the Indulgences for a happy death and those of the Via Crucis for sick who cannot practice this devotion otherwise. When blessed, the Rosaries may be distributed, but, if resold, they lose all the Indulgences.

The true Rosaries known as the 'Thorn of Christ' are sold only at the Church of S. Sabina. (With ecclesiastical approbation.) The Chaplain-General of this organization is Rev. W. Jusserand DeForest, of Brooklyn, N. Y., a Clergyman ordained in the Protestant Episcopal Church, Rector of St. James' Parish, in that City."

Righteous and entirely natural indignation among loyal and stalwart members of the Protestant Episcopal Church is caused by the publicity and literary activities of "The Living Rosary of Our Lady and St. Dominic." This organization purports to be connected with the Church and its chaplain-general is said to be rector of St. James' Church, Brooklyn. It claims for its outgivings "ecclesiastical authority". Reference to the "Living Rosary" found in the Living Church Annual and a leaflet distributed by the "Rosary", sent to The Southern Churchman by the kindness and vigilance of the Protestant Episcopal Church League, are published elsewhere.

The League does useful work by exposing for condemnation the absurd ventures and approaches toward doctrines and practices of the Roman Catholic Church by persons nominally members and officials of the Protestant Episcopal Church. Indignation and repudiation need not, however, be attended by alarm. The "Living Rosary" will not beguile or coax or lead or persuade any considerable number of real Episcopalians to accept its guidance or obey its suggestions. Brave, strong, glorious, men and women have died and faced and endured frightful tortures protesting against and resisting the heresies, errors and betrayals the "Rosary" expounds and represents. We have in this country a good many hundreds of thousands of Protestants of the same breed and faith as those who died and suffered and these cannot be swayed by feeble exhalations of folly.

Such enunciations and manifestations as those of the "Rosary" are not new. Our Church always has been troubled, more or less and at longer or shorter intervals, by elements hankering for relapse toward Rome, on one side and, on the other side elements incited by fanatical hate of Rome and everything pertaining to it or associated with it, including the beautiful and saintly characters and the wonderful work it has given the world. Attempts to eliminate the word "Protestant" from the name of our Church have been made at general conventions through many years and there have been sporadic efforts to take "Holy Catholic" from the Creed. In religion, politics and society always have been the opposing types of extreme radicalism and extreme conservatism, of reckless retrogression and equally reckless demand for what was called "progress". The Church yet has at one edge the coarse, noisy, materialistic preachers, writers and teachers, denying the divinity of the Saviour and the validity of the Holy Scriptures; at the other edge those who extend their worship to the saints and proclaim indulgences, special blessings and miracles as within the power of the Church and its ministers and advocate the confessional. So in politics we have those screaming for anarchy and abolition of all government and those continually seeking centralization of power. In society the loud and pretentious, blatantly defying decent conventions, the ultra-refined and exclusive, those hurrying to excesses in every new fad and fashion and those making a virtue of rejecting all innovation, however, necessary, are in sharp contrast. These differences and the dangers developed by them are inevitable on what Mr. Jefferson called "the tempestuous sea of democracy".

The Protestant Episcopal Church is one of the most democratic of institutions. The Church of Rome is a religious despotism and by persistence in that policy and disregard of evidence and argument lost supremacy, while retaining vast strength and internal peace. It views with hardly veiled contempt and derision those Protestants who long for its spectacular attractions and its laxity in requirements in some respects, while shirking its discipline and restrictions. Such Protestants are like little boys perched at the bank of a stream, longing to plunge, but deterred by dread of cold and depth and timidly and wistfully dabbling. Trying to talk the language of the Roman Catholic Church and inculcate its methods and system, they prattle as children do trying to imitate their elders. There is special absurdity in the spectacle of smug rectors of the Protestant Episcopal Church, with comfortably established families and snug incomes and disregarding the rules and authorities of their own Church and their superiors in it, yet exhorting for the following of St. Dominic, founder of the stern order of Black Friars, vowed to poverty, homelessness, celibacy and obedience.

The Church League deserves thanks and cordial cooperation for putting before us, for observation, consideration and cachinnation officers of the Church who would breathe the atmosphere of Rome to satisfy their supposed spiritual and aesthetic cravings, while clinging to the name of Protestant for practical pecuniary purposes and the usual pleasures of life, gathering the fruits of both without allegiance to either. These hesitant deserters from the Protestant camp frequently are, as they heretofore have been, of two types. Some are of the exquisitely delicate, superfine temperament, ready to die of a rose in aromatic pain, for whose sensibilities the plain, straightforward, doctrines and ritual easy for the common herd of us to grasp, are agonizing. Others yearn for the pretty and pompous in ceremonial. Their mental processes adjusted to millinery, external and internal, they revel in it, find no ease without it.

These never have ruled the Church nor misled many of its people and never will. The great body of Episcopalians will stand staunch, steadfast and true to the Church for which real men and women, faithful soldiers of the Cross, died and which they left to us. To clear thought and common sense the Creed, the Lord's Prayer and the commandments, the instructions of the catechism and the Book of Common Prayer are guides sufficient and satisfying. With these clergy and laity are content and their hearts will not be troubled much by the shriekings or babblings, vociferous or insidious heresies of one extreme or the other. Pulpit and pew will go right onward together, building the Church, continuing to new strength and usefulness, laboring patiently and unostentatiously to make it an instrument ever more powerful for advancing the kingdom of God and for cleansing and saving the souls and increasing the welfare and happiness of God's children.

Langbourne M. Williams.

THE INSPIRED BIBLE AND HUMAN OPINION

By W. Bell Dawson, M. D., D. Sc,

A VITAL INQUIRY.

A GREAT controversey has arisen in regard to the Bible, which does not abate as time goes on; although those who disparage the Bible are often obliged to change their ground. In the old days of a century or two ago, the attacks on the Bible came from infidels and scoffers who repudiated it entirely and opposed it. But during the last half century, the disparagement of the Scriptures has come in a more subtle way, from critics within the Church. The difference between these two methods of opposition is much the same as between the two sons in the parable who were told by their father to work in his vineyard. The one says bluntly: I will not have the Bible; the other, though very polite and respectful, explains away the most vital truths of the Bible so that they become meaningless. It is a question, as in the parable, whether the open opponent of Scripture is not more likely to repent than the other.

The reason for this critical attitude towards the Bible must be looked for in the general trend of thought during the last fifty or sixty years. During these years, the doctrine of Evolution has become amazingly widespread, with its theory that man has gradually developed from the lower animals and will continue to improve by his own efforts. This is much more palatable and congenial to men's minds than the teaching of Scripture, that in the sight of God we are sinful and wilful; desiring to take our own way and to please ourselves, rather than seeking to do the will of God.

In harmony with this theory of the gradual development of human intelligence, the Higher Critics explain the Bible as the endeavor of men to seek after God; and by pursuing this search to arrive at some measure of truth regarding the character of God, and His attitude towards mankind. Yet even in the non-Christian religions, some desire is shown to seek after God, if haply they may feel after Him and find Him. The moral teaching in their sacred books represents the highest levels that human effort can attain, with the help of such primitive truth as still remains unobscured in the conscience. The whole tendency of the Higher Criticism of the Scriptures is to reduce them to this heathen level of uncertain inquiry; for the Modernist view is that the Bible-story depicts the gradual endeavor of the best of men to arrive at some knowledge of God.

The outcome to which such a view leads is very serious. For if the Bible has thus the same character as the sacred books of other religions, it may be superior to them, but it is not essentially different. This undermines the whole basis of Christian Missions to the non-Christian world. The Mohammedans recognize this distinctly; and they are now quoting from the writings of Modernists to show that since the Christian Scriptures are discredited, the opportunity to spread their own Moslem faith has arrived. Modernism therefore brings the spread of vital Christianity to a standstill.

These views are also in direct contradiction to the teaching of Scripture that man by his own wisdom and intelligence cannot reach a true knowledge of God. This must come by way of revelation from God Himself. It is thus made clear that the source of spiritual truth is in God, and not the outcome of human research. If then the Bible is a revelation from God, we have a sure and certain foundation on which to build; and a definite message of truth to bring before the non-Christian. But if the Scriptures must be placed for judgment before the tribunal of the human mind, that we may decide for ourselves in the light of our superior knowledge, what is worthy of acceptance and what is not, it is evident that we will always be in uncertainty and at the mercy of every change of opinion regarding the Bible, as scholarship advances and we deem ourselves more intellectual and capable of reaching conclusions.

Many endeavors have been made to reconcile Modernist views with Christian belief; by holding, for example, that even if large parts of the Bible are untrustworthy, this need not subvert faith in Christ. But when the Bible is examined fairly, it is found to be a consistent whole, with its various parts inter-dependent upon each other. As discussions go forward, and as the Bible is more carefully looked into, it is therefore becoming more evident that compromise is not possible; and a choice must be made between accepting the Bible as it stands, or rejecting and disbelieving it. It will be our endeavor to point out some aspects of Bible truth which make such a choice plainly necessary.

The Need of a Revelation.

To any candid and well-informed mind, with a desire to know about God, there are two things which must be clear: (1) It is eminently reasonable to suppose that God should be able in some way to communicate with intelligent beings whom He has made; and (2) that if we have any such revelation from God, it is contained in the Bible. In considering these points, which ought in themselves to be evident, we have further to inquire why it is that there is so much antipathy to the Scriptures, and so great a desire to explain away the doctrines which they teach and their claim to authority over our belief and our conduct.

In the world generally and throughout history there is evidence of a seeking after God, for in all nations we find a religion of some kind. There is very little real atheism anywhere, that is, any blank denial of the existence of God. Even the most strenuous opponents of Christianity, such as Voltaire, were not properly speaking atheists. The attempt made in the French Revolution to wipe out religion and establish atheism in its place was a failure; and no such attempt can succeed. If then we believe in a Creator, it is surely unreasonable to think of Him as incapable of finding means to communicate with the begings He has created, or that they on their side should be entirely cut off from the one Who made them.

In the Scriptures, we are told that even the humbler creatures have some access to their Maker. For He hears the young ravens when they cry unto God; this inarticulate cry He accepts as an appeal to Himself. It is said regarding the animals in general: "These wait all upon thee, that Thou mayest give them their meat in due season." Their mute appeal is answered. As Christ reminds us, the Heavenly Father feedeth them.

If the need for some access to God is acknowledged, which even the creatures make evident, the first question that arises is: What is God's attitude towards man; favorable or unfavorable? This question is at the basis of all religion, and all worship must be governed by it. But it is a question that man cannot answer, or reason out for himself; more especially as his conscience reproves him for evil, which adds to his uncertainty. It is thus essential that there should be a revelation from God; for it must be He Who Himself informs us, if we are to know. Any worship of God is quite as likely to be offensive as pleasing to Him, unless we know His wishes. The worship that man devises, however cermonious and artistic in his own eyes, may quite possibly be an abomination in the sight of God.

To such questionings, we find an answer in the Bible and nowhere else. In a word, the Bible sets forth the concern of God for man and His interest in man's highest welfare. This desire of God to uplift man by cleansing him and delivering him from evil, is clear, transparent and consistent throughout the Scriptures. It may broadly be termed the Love of God.

What the Scriptures tell us about ourselves is equally a revelation from God; for we find it unpleasant and distasteful. They place a mirror before us, to show what we really are in the sight of God; and what we see we do not like. The light from the Word of God penetrates to the thoughts and intents of the heart. We are shown to be incapable of overcoming evil by ourselves and helpless without help from on high. Surely this is proof that the Bible is of Divine origin, because no human writings would so represent mankind. In contrast with this, we are assured by Modernists that we have everything to our credit; we have already made most admirable progress. What is called sin, they tell us to be only a taint which comes down from our animal ancestors; and as we develop further, we will soon make the world a most agreeable place for every one. This is the contrast between Divine revelation and the views with which it pleases men to flatter themselves.

The root of the antipathy to Scripture doctrine and teaching, which stands in the way of the acceptance of the Bible as being the inspired Word of God, is the deeply ingrained disposition in human nature to set God aside and practically to leave Him out of account. "All thinkers have to reckon with this strange bent of the human mind to convince itself of the needlessness of God." This arises from the evil heart of unbelief in the natural man. It thus accounts for the desire of so many to be left alone to carry out their own plans and to please themselves; and it may explain the popularity of the present-day teachings on evolutionary development which on the religious side, culminate in Modernism. We may well beware of a critical spirit towards the Scriptures, which should obscure our only beacon-light in a safe direction.

What Does Inspiration Imply?

In the light of the foregoing considerations, if we inquire what Inspiration is and what we mean when we say the Bible is inspired, we do not gain much by trying to give any exact definition in words. For it is evident that God must have many ways at His disposal by which to reveal Himself to man. The important point is that we have in the Bible what man could not possibly have found out for himself if God had not told him. This is all the more impressive when we compare the Bible with the sacred writings of other religions, and with heathen philosophies; for these are full of speculation and uncertainty, and always more or less tainted by superstition.

The Scriptures begin with a revelation of the personality of God, and with the account of the creation of all things. This at once cuts at the root of idolatry, as well as superstition. For if all things are created by God, it is plainly irrational to worship the moon or the sun (which are amongst the earliest idolatries) instead of adoring God alone. Neither is there any place for superstition; for if everything is under the control of the Almighty, He only is to be feared; and we have no need to be frightened by an eclipse or a comet. These matters are magnificently explained in the light of the doctrine of creation, in Acts 17:24-31; Rom. 1:20-25; and Jer. 10:1-16.

When God as the Creator is lost sight of, and the first and second of the Ten Commandments are set aside, the door is at once opened to degraded ideas of God, and inferior moral standards. This we see in ancient heathen literature, as well as amongst the non-Christian nations at present; and even Christianity degenerated rapidly where image-worship was introduced, as history shows.

Another essential characteristic of the Bible is that everything is dealt with from God's standpoint. Even in nature, it is His sun that shines upon the earth; He sends the needful rain; the stormy wind fulfils His word. All that happens is considered as His direct act; and secondary causes or connecting links with His power are overlooked. In relation to man we find the same Divine viewpoint. When the prophets speak to the people, they do not pose as men possessed of superior wisdom, fit to admonish others. They make nothing of themselves, but come before the people with a message direct from God, to tell them what the Most Holy One thinks of their conduct and their ways.

Without an inspired Bible, we could have no certainty regarding God's interest in man, His concern for mankind and the plans and purposes for the benefit of men which He has in mind. Such things which concern us so closely, would ever remain as unanswered questions and could not be definitely known to us unless He is pleased to reveal them. This in general, is the main theme of Scripture; giving it unity throughout as these plans and purposes are made more clear by further communications from God; and they culminate in Christ, with the revelation which He brings to us.

Our Attitude to Scripture. To understand and appreciate a work by any author, it is surely reasonable to make some endeavor to grasp the point of view it presents, and the general theme with which it deals. It would be very unfair to depreciate a book because it does not take a different viewpoint, which we might prefer. If we approach the Bible in a critical spirit, taking for granted that it is probably wrong or at least untrustworthy, it is very unlikely that we will succeed in understanding its real meaning and purport. We can put no greater obstacle in our way than by regarding the Bible with suspicion, looking upon everything it says from an unfriendly standpoint, as we read it.

Let us then make a genuine effort to divest our minds of all prejudice and suspicion of the Bible, which in these days is so subtilely insinuated or openly preached; and even though the Scriptures are accused of being full of myth and misrepresentation, allow them to speak for themselves and present their own case. We will at least find that the story they tell is consistent throughout; and that the various authors corroborate each other in a remarkable manner. Multitudes in the past have given heed to the appeal of the Scriptures; and we also may find them more convincing than we might have supposed. For there is a higher claim still which the Scriptures make; that because they are the Word of God and inspired by Him, the enlightenment of the Holy Spirit is given to those who honestly and humbly seek to know the truth.

The General Theme of Scripture.

The general topic with which the Bible deals, is the relation between God and man; and to comprehend this, we must begin at the beginning. We are informed that man was created originally in the image of God; in a state of purity and holiness, and capable of holding direct intercourse with God. While man was innocent, this was most simple and natural; for "he heard the voice of the Lord God in the cool of the day." There was thus no need of any special revelation; or to put it otherwise, the revelation of God was in open conversation.

But it had pleased God to endow man with free will, by which he could make the great choice: whether he would live and act in harmony with the will of God, or whether he would disregard the will of God and choose his own way for himself. He made the fatal choice. Beginning by doubting the word which God had spoken and distrusting

His warning, he disobeyed the one command which God had given him; and by so doing, he lost touch with God. To be out of touch with God is spiritual death, as God had warned him; and into this condition man fell from the high estate in which he had been created.

The question at once arose, which is of transcendent importance to the human race: What will God do now? Will He leave man to himself to take his own course as he may please,; or can the Lord God devise some way, consistently with His own righteousness, by which man can be restored? The decision regarding this which God made is immediately recorded; and the beacon light thus set up illumines the future of the whole human race with hope. Henceforth, the main theme of the Scriptures is the way of reconciliation and restoration for man.

From this grave crisis at the outset, in the relation between man and his Creator, as shown in Gen. 3:1-15, three great foundational truths stand revealed:

(1) The character of God, and His attitude towards man. In all religions which are without a revelation from God, the agitating question is whether spiritual beings are friendly or hostile to men. But here in the Bible, we find revealed the deep concern of God for the welfare of man, even at the cost of a supreme sacrifice on His part. Expiation and reconciliation necessarily originate with God, as it is not possible for man to retrace his steps or to cleanse his own heart.

(2) This crisis was brought about by the Serpent, who thus stands revealed as the great Enemy of mankind. This thought runs throughout the entire Bible to the end, where the final fate of "that old serpent, which is the Devil and Satan," is portrayed. At the culmination, when Christ undertook the deliverance of man, He was manifested "that He might destroy the works of the Devil." The manner of Satan's working is also revealed here at the beginning; for he succeeeds in the subversion of man by throwing doubt on the reliability of the Word of God.

(3) There is a distinct indication of a Redeemer, when God said to the Serpent regarding the seed of the woman: "Her seed shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel." There was therefore to be enmity and conflict and suffering also for the coming Deliverer before victory was achieved. In the first recorded act of worship, when Cain and Abel offered their sacrifices, there is already an indication of atonement through sacrifice; for God accepts the sacrifice of Abel and rejects the other. These foundational ideas, in their incipient form, are brought to light by these primal events and happenings which transpired; and further indications of them can be discovered in the early chapters of Genesis.

The great theme of the Scriptures and the revelation which they convey to mankind is thus outlined at their commencement. There appear to be thereafter three main lines along which this theme develops throughout the Bible, which may be thus indicated: (1) A way of reconciliation to bring man back to God, by means of atonement for his wilfullness and disobedience. (2) A personal Redeemer, Who shall retrieve the Fall of man by bearing his sin, and restore him to communion with God. (3) A kingdom of heaven to be established in righteousness, when God shall again dwell with His people; and they shall truly be his sons and His daughters.

It is surely very plain that such things as these can only become known to men by a revelation imparted by God. For they are the plans and purposes in His own mind. We are even informed that God foresaw the possibility of man's failure and fall; just as a father may foresee that his little boy, notwithstanding the best of advantages, may go wrong; and he may already have a plan in mind for winning him back. We read accordingly that Christ was the lamb slain from the foundation of the world; for this Way of Redemption was already in the mind of God. How then, can man by searching find out God? Who hath known the mind of the Lord, or who hath been his counsellor? How unsearchable are His judgments and His ways past finding out.

The means and methods which it has pleased God to adopt in revealing Himself to man, we will best understand by tracing them through the Scriptures. We will see that those to whom He communicated His revelations, were men whom He chose. He further made choice of a particular nation to which He gave special training in preparation for the Redeemer Who was to come into the world. Prophecies concerning this Redeemer were also given to identify Him unmistakably. The great end in view is the restoration of man to his primary fellowship with his Maker, by bringing him back from his wrong choice and his disobedience. There is thus a consistent plan throughout Scripture, which is harmoniously developed; and the outlook in the closing book of the Bible sets forth the final accomplishment of this purpose of God. For even though many may not enter the Way which God sets before them, it is not possible that the Lord Himself should fail (see Isa. 43:1-4).

If we believe in a Creator at all, an all-wise and all-powerful God, can we deny Him the right to devise plans for the welfare of the human beings He has created? Can we hold that it is beyond His capacity to find a way of communicating with men? Can we suppose it impossible that He should foresee an outcome beforehand, or predict what He intends to do? Can any one have the audacity to criticise what He declares, or to challenge the Way that He has devised to accomplish His purpose?

The Higher Critics and the Modernists who follow them, may well take warning lest they fall into this attitude; when they maintain that the Bible is to be brought before the human mind for judgment, that prediction is impossible, and that atonement for sin is unnecessary although it is the main theme of Scripture. Truly, the most fatal sin is, through criticism, to reject the Way of God; the pathway to life that He sets before us. Let us then proceed to look into the main body of Scripture, on the lines above indicated, to follow out their development of the great purposes of God; with an honest desire to understand.

(To be continued.)

OH, DEAR!

Britons Pen Potent Verses to Milady's Ever-Shortening Skirts.

The venerable Bishop of Ely and the royal, by marriage, Viscount Lascellees, the king's on-in-law, are debating the authorship of a new form of campaign against the modern short skirt.

The campaign started with this rhyme:

"Half an inch, half an inch, half an inch shorter,
The skirts are the same for mother and daughter.
When the wind blows each one of them shows
Half an inch, half an inch more than she oughter."

Viscount Lascelles announced the bishop was the author. The bishop in an article, denied authorship, but contributed another rhyme of his own:

"Mary has a little skirt,
So neat, so bright, so airy
It never shows a speck of dirt.
But it surely does show Mary."

FAVORITE SCRIPTURE VERSES

(In this space each week will appear a favorite passage of Scripture as sent in by a different reader. Every one is, therefore, invited to send us their favorite verse. It is suggested that all who can, join with the rest of us in committing to memory the verse which so appears here each week, including its location in the Holy Book; and in due time your memory chest will be laden with choice eternal treasures, indeed. "Thy word have I hid in my heart, that I might not sin against thee," Ps. 119:11.)

This week the following verse was submitted by Mrs. Eugene Austin Robertson, "Pine Knots," Chelsea, Ridgeland, South Carolina:

"We all with open face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord" (2 Cor. 3:18).

Who will send one from the far-away places as well as very near us?

IS TWENTY-TWO LANGUAGES.

A million Bibles in twenty-two languages, to be used only in New York City, were ordered some months ago from the New York Bible Socity. Marvelous book is the Bible. Book that travels more highways and walks, more bypaths and knocks at more doors and speaks to more people in their mother tongue than any book. So shall it ever be. The Lord hath spoken it.—Dr. R. G. Lee.

AN APPEAL AND A WARNING

By Lord Brentford

"DESTROYING THE VERY FOUNDATION OF GOVERNMENT AND MORALITY."

I QUOTE the following pregnant sentence from the Memorandum or Resolution issued by the bishops for submission to Convocation this week—it is, in fact, the first sentence:

> "The worship of God is in every generation a primary concern of the Church."

But the Resolution and the speeches of the bishops in Convocation on Wednesday all proceed upon the assumption that the Church means the bishops, or, at all events, the bishops and the clergy, instead of which the Church means not only them but the whole of the laity, and the worship of God is as much a matter of importance to every layman or laywoman, however humble, as it is to the Archbishop himself.

If I am right in this contention, and surely there is nobody who would deny it, the bishops are taking upon themselves the most serious responsibility in authorizing a book which the laity, by its duly elected representatives in the House of Commons, has rejected.

What is the position? Every clergyman at his Institution to a parish, and every bishop at his Confirmation as bishop or Archbishop, makes the following solemn declaration:

> "I assent to the Thirty-nine Articles of Religion and to the Book of Common Prayer, and of the Ordering of Bishops, Priests, and Deacons. I believe the Doctrine of the Church of England as therein set forth to be agreeable to the Word of God, and in Public Prayer and Administration of the Sacraments I will use the form in the said Book prescribed, and none other except so far as shall be ordered by lawful authority."

The Layman's Logic.

To a layman it is difficult to see how a bishop can get behind this. The ecclesiastical mind, I know, rejoices in thinking that it has a power of dispensation, but it cannot dispense itself from the terms of an oath which it takes as the preliminary to obtaining a bishopric.

I know that from time to time bishops act as if they were above the law, and claim some shadowy rights under the name of 'Jus Liturgicum" to set aside the laws regulating public worship. But the Royal Commission of 1906 tersely swept away all these eccentric notions with the one sentence: "The Acts of Uniformity bind bishops as well as other clergymen."

This is true. The Church and all its officers are bound by the Acts of Uniformity. You may call this Erastianism if you like, but the obvious answer is that they needn't have joined a Church founded upon and bound by the Acts of Uniformity.

Out of Control.

Moreover, they know this perfectly well; otherwise why did they come to Parliament and ask it to assent to the revision of the Prayer Book? They knew, in spite of all their convocations and their synods and their inquiries and their meetings, that they could do nothing without the assent of Parliament. Not once but twice did Parliament decline to give its assent.

Parliament knew, and the bishops knew, that the sole reason for trying to alter the Prayer Book in an Anglo-Catholic direction was that by their own supine behavior they had allowed an illegal school to grow up in the Church of England. They had pandered to and promoted its supporters until the whole Church was honeycombed with illegal doctrines and illegal practices.

They came to Parliament and said: "We can do nothing without this new Prayer Book; we have let this thing go too far—we can't check it." Parliament said, in effect: "That isn't our business; it is yours. Put your house in order—but don't ask us to revoke the Reformation settlement."

> Now what are they doing? They are proposing to authorize the use of the Book which Parliament, the final authority, has twice declined to authorize. "I will use the form in the said Book prescribed." How is an individual Bishop to get over that? It is breaking the law if he were to try to do so. In my own view, if such bishop were prosecuted, there would be no defence.

"A Scrap of Paper."

It is true that in minor matters the prescribed order is not regularly followed, and, therefore, it has been suggested that no one can complain of a new Communion service or of a permanent Reservation, even although it be used for Adoration. I cannot deal with that curious statement better than by quoting the reply of the Dean of the Arches, the chief ecclesiastical judge of today:

> "Equally it might be said that as it is impossible to insist upon twenty miles an hour as the maximum speed for motors, therefore you must abstain from punishing arson, burglary and rape."

I notice that the Archbishop of Canterbury, in his speech in Convocation, claims the right to authorize the Book because it was approved by the Church Assembly and by the House of Lords. But what special pleading is this? When the Enabling Act was passed power was reserved to Parliament to deal with and, if necessary, veto its proceedings.

Well may the Bishop of Exeter, himself, as is well known, the brother of Lord Hugh Cecil, refer to the establishment of the Church Assembly as a treaty which is now to be dealt with as a scrap of paper.

> We fought for the maintenance of a scrap of paper in the Great War: all law-abiding citizens abide by their signature to a scrap of paper—and it is left to the bishops, in the words of one of their own number, to tear up a solemn document as if it were nothing more than a mere scrap of paper.

The Way to Anarchy.

This is not the way to bring peace to the Church. This is not the way, in these revolutionary days, to set an example of the maintenance of law and order to the laity. If the bishops claim a discretion to disregard the law, why not the clergy who have made the same declaration, neither more nor less, than the bishops? If the clergy, why not the laity?

> All laws are not pleasant. But England allows no man to revoke laws for his own pleasure: therein lies anarchy.

Every man has his right as a voter to control the legislation of the country. But bishops have the same right: neither more nor less. If they do not like the Acts of Uniformity: if they do not like the connection between Church and State—let them have the courage of their own convictions. Let them come to Parliament and say:

> "We want to Romanize the old Church of England: we want to get free from the shackles of the Elizabethan Reformation. We want to go as we please in matters of ritual, unrestricted by Parliament and the Courts of Law. We want, in effect, to be disestablished."

The Bishop of Durham has the courage of his opinions—but unfortunately for him few other people share his opinions. He is a great leader, but he has a small following.

Promoted Law Breakers.

> At the moment the conflict is one between the bishops and the House of Commons: do they desire to convert it into one between the Church and the Nation? It is too late, even at this hour, for myself, a Churchman all my life, a worker in and for the Church, to appeal to the bishops not to act in this way?

It is not fair to say that they cannot control their clergy. They have allowed the law to slide and to be disregarded for thirty years, and have promoted the law-breakers. Let us have thirty years of resolute government—thirty years in which no law-breaker should be promoted to a good living or to a bishopric, and in the meantime let them devote themselves to the management of their own dioceses, to the uplift of the Church and the nation as a whole, to efforts to deal with sin and infidelity—and, still worse, indifference in the people of our country. There is ample work for them.

But, although I make no threats, I do say to them with a sense of the responsibility of my words:

> If they persist in this course they will not only do great, probably fatal, harm to the Church itself, but they will destroy the very foundations of government and morality by telling the people of this country, with all their great authority, that if you don't like a law you may dispense yourself from its observance, and incidentally, apparently, you may dispense yourself from any oath you have taken.

Gage of Battle.

I know that I have been urged not to raise fresh controversy. I appeal to my fellow-countrymen: have I ever gloated over the decision of Parliament? Have I ever tried to score over the defeated party? Have I not for the whole of this year remained silent on Church questions in order that no word of mine should add to the bitterness of the subject?

But it is the Bishops themselves who have today revived the controversy, who have fanned what I hoped were the dying embers of bitterness, and have thrown down the gage of battle which the Protestants of this country must take up.

Brentford.

Viscount Brentford (Sir William Joynson-Hicks,) the former Home Secretary, foremost among leaders of the Protestant movement, largely contributed by his vigorous criticism to the defeat of the Prayer Book measure in the House of Commons.—The Evening Standard, London.

(Rev. O. L. Millican, Huntsville, Ala., in The Alabama Christian Advocate.)

"Youth Creedless but Religious." This is the main text of an article purported to come from the pen of Prof. Samuel Lucas Joshi, who holds the chair of Comparative Religion at Dartmouth. The article by this professor appeared in the New York Evening Post, and was so juicy, the Literary Digest gave it wider publicity. The aforesaid article related itself to articles by students who have worked under Prof. Joshi, and who had submitted papers for his perusal. Evidently they met with his approval, since he offers no criticism. If any one can be creedless and religious at one and the same time, they can be bloodless yet possessed of a vital circulation; as still as death but mightily alive; without brains but wonderful thinkers; as weak and wobbly as a day old calf, but as strong as a lion. Creed means belief, particularly religious belief. How can people be settled on anything without faith in something?

Did the founders of our leading denominations have any creeds and believe anything? What say the historians of the Church of that age? It was necessary then so the Church leaders thought to believe something definitely to be able to live heroically. Now, according to some present-day teacher, the more people know the less they need to believe. You do not need a creed, just be religious without believing. The more you know the less necessary it is to believe anything, and if you will keep on acquiring knowledge of a certain kind, you can get so full of it after awhile that it will not be necessary for you to believe anything, for you will be the very thing itself. One of the youngsters who came along under Professor Joshi' tutelage says: "I would accept no theology and attend no church as they do not fit in with my scheme of life." What his scheme of life is he does not say, but Adam and Eve tripped on the same snag, and the same animal whispered it to them. The Church is not ignorant of all of this free lance stuff that is going on in many theological schools and other schools of so-called religion. To my way of thinking it constitutes a far greater menace to the Church than the grosser immoralities that are naked and unashamed in their defiance of the teachings of righteousness. It is stated in another one of these illuminating articles submitted, that "The Church and Scriptures should have little authority over the lives of any one—that only reason and experience should control." What monuments of reason has youth erected and what extensive fields of experience have the youths of our land explored that have never been mapped before?

We hear much of flaming youth, but the result of it depends altogether on what side it flames. Absalom and Rehoboam were flaming youths. The Prodigal Son ignited a smaller taper also, but it was blown out when he went to herding hogs. When youth is aflame for God and righteousness its leadership is wonderful, but when it deserts the Church and the Scriptures, it is almost universally certain to flame more hereafter than here. The scanty theological attire that some are coming out clothed with from some so-called schools of religion is no more nor less than a few atheistic fig leaves that have been nipped by the chilling frosts of infidelity. It is just as sensible to say that a wonderful religious symphony can be produced on the great organ of life without the player knowing a single note of religious music, as to say the Church and the Scriptures can be ruled out in the development and completion of Christian character.

WELL STATED.

Dr. R. H. Harper, Editor of The New Orleans Christian Advocate, in a late issue of that publication thus discerningly remarked:

"'It is funny' how some men, who inveigh against creeds, fall naturally into the statement of their own creed before they cease speaking. How could it be otherwise? The man who said that he would like 'to burn up all the creeds in the world and bring all men together at the foot of the cross' did not seem to realize that he was most emphatically declaring his own creed—his own belief in the atonement made on the cross—and showing his zeal to bring all men to his creed. And we hope he will succeed in that. But he can no more burn up the creeds than he can destroy the mystic fabric of the mind.

"It is funny hod some men are saying over and over again that the chief emphasis of Methodism has ever been upon experience, when they are getting ready to assault some of the doctrines that Methodism has cherished and emphasized. Methodism has placed emphasis upon experience, but not as a means of discrediting the doctrines that Methodism has stressed. If there were a mysticism, a power of immediately apprehending God in all his fulness, there would seem to be no need of the divine revelation unto men, no need of the eternal Word becoming flesh, and no need of preaching the gospel unto men. It is good that the average man still believes that belief and experience are directly related to each other—that a man's experience depends upon what he believes."—The Southern Methodist.

THE VALUE OF CREEDS.

The Bishop of Gloucester made good points in his lecture before the Nicene Society at King's College on Monday night. Our conventional morality, which lies at the basis of Christian civilization, depends on the reality of the Christian belief. Since, therefore, it is fundamental to protect that belief, creeds are essential. A new creed is impossible. Hence the Nicene Creed stands as the guardian of the faith. The emphasis laid by the bishop on this point was all the more valuable, as he found it necessary to remind his hearers that agreement on all points which may be deduced from fundamentals is hopeless. We must, if we are to have unity, hold firm to what is essential, and be tolerant of the different deductions that various persons and religious groups will draw from those fundamentals. This applies both in the Protestant and in the Catholic direction. Unity demands discrimination between what is universal and what is individual and temperamental. One other point Dr. Headlam rightly stressed. The world is becoming impatient because Christians cannot agree and be seen to agree on fundamentals. Those who complain that Christianity has lost its moral authority must look in this direction for one of the main causes.—The Guardian.

MEN PAY ATTENTION TO WHAT HE SAYS.

Extract From the Will of J. Pierpont Morgan.

"I commit my soul in the hands of my Saviour, full of confidence that, having redeemed it and washed it with His most precious blood, He will present it faultless before the throne of my Heavenly Father.

"I entreat my children to maintain and defend, at all hazard, and at any cost of personal sacrifice, the blessed doctrine of complete atonement for sin through the blood of Jesus Christ once offered, and through that alone."

LIBERAL EPISCOPALIANS: ARCHBISOOP WHATLEY

ALMOST one hundred years ago (September, 1831), Richard Whately, D. D., Principal of Alban Hall, Oxford, then in his forty-fifth year, was visiting his friend, Dr. Arnold at Rugby. One morning he received a letter from the Prime Minister, Earl Grey, glanced at it, and went on with the talk of the breakfast table, saying nothing of its contents. An hour or so later, he went into the grounds and amused a visitor whom he had not seen before, as he had often amused undergraduates and shocked dons on the banks of the Cherwell, by exhibiting the feats of his dog Sailor. Up and up a tree the dog was sent, and then left at the top whining for leave to jump down. "Now, what do you think of that?" said Whately. "I think," said the visitor, "that some besides the dog, when they find themselves at the top of the tree, would give the world to get down again." "Arnold has told you?" said Whately quickly. "Told me what?" "That I have been offered the Archbishopric of Dublin this morning." "I am very glad to hear it," said the new acquaintance, "but I had not an idea, when I spoke, that such a thing was even probable."

This anecdote—which, unlike some ascribed to Whately, is strictly authentic, being told by his friend Bishop Hinds, and endorsed by his daughter—happily illustrates certain peculiarities that marked the distinguished liberal Churchman, and gave a piquant flavour to his whole life, public and private. With splendid attributes of intellect and heart, he combined a singular disregard for conventionalities, a resolute determination to connect himself with no party in Church or State, and what seemed a total insensibility to the honour which cometh from man. The pleasure he derived from playing with his dogs, or pursuing investigations in natural history, was really far greater than any which he could receive from occupying the third seat in the House of Peers, or ruling over an ecclesiastical province. It is very likely that he strolled out that morning with Sailor, fearing his recreations of this sort must in a few days finally cease, and reflecting that his Master would not send him to the discomforts of the top of the tree without wise care as to bringing him down again. For he was as little attracted by the prospect of £8,000 a-year as by peerage and power. He offered, before entering on the see, to consent to the diminution of its revenues during his life if the general interests of religion in Ireland could be thereby promoted; and during thirty-two years he never applied these revenues to his private use. That chance observation of the stranger hit the mark precisely: Whately would have been thankful to find an escape from the unlooked-for elevation. He went to Dublin only in obedience to a stern sense of duty, and accurately foreseeing that nothing but hard work and various trials lay before him for the remainder of his life, against which the lofty station and the large emoluments were not even an offset. His tenure of the see lasted through the generation of storms in the Episcopal Church of Ireland following the Catholic Emancipation Act, and preceding the revolution by which it received that privilege of governing itself for which he often longed; and his influence did much to prepare it for using that privilege well.

Richard Whately was the ninth child of the Rev. Dr. Joseph Whately, Canon of Bristol, and was born 1st February, 1787) six years after the eighth child, "when," says his daughter, "the family had been long supposed complete, and the nursery in the house had ceased to exist. The arrival of the new-comer was an unlooked-for, and scarcely a welcome, event. He was feeble in health, and his slight and puny appearance must have strangely contrasted with the powerful, tall, and well-proportioned form of his maturer age. His friends have often heard him remark that the earliest event of his life was his being weighed against a turkey, to the advantage of the bird."

He was a precocious child, learning to read and write very early. Between his sixth and tenth years he displayed an astonishing power of calculation; for instance, telling a gentleman over sixty years of age how many minutes he had lived with perfect correctness. He was happy for long hours together if allowed to pursue his calculations, or to watch the habits of insects and birds in the garden, or to indulge in castle-building. This last was not the idle and foolish amusement common to children, but took the form rather of philosophical speculations on government, civilization, the reason in animals, and the like themes, many of which were pursued in riper years. His thoughts being thus drawn off from ordinary things and concentrated within, he became marked and laughed at for absence of mind; and so inveterate did the habit become, that he said of himself, at the age of twenty-five: "I am ignorant of the streets and shops and neighboring villages of the town where I live. Nor do I even know, unless I inquire and examine diligently and with design, how far it is from one place to another, what hour the coach starts, or what places it passes through. I am frequently forced to evade questions in a most awkward manner, from not daring to own, nor indeed being able to convince any one of, my own incredible ignorance." Distressing self-consciousness and shyness naturally grew out of these peculiarities, and he was accustomed often to say, with emphasis, that "if there were no life but the present, the kindest thing one could do for an intensely shy youth would be to shoot him through the head!" About the period when manhood was beginning, he put an end to his own sufferings by a determined act of will, resolving, and with success, "if he must be a bear, to be at least as unconscious as a bear."

But these things were of the hard shell: within, there was a sound judgment, a generous heart, and high principle governing all. Shaking off a constitutional tendency to indolence, he became a hard student, rose at five, summer and winter, lighted his own fire, and had put into his day two hours' work and a long walk before others were rubbing their eyes. The rewards for which he thus labored were the acquirement of knowledge and the ability to support himself without burdening his widowed mother; and these he had attained as a Fellow of Oriel and M. A. by the time he was twenty-four.

Richard Whately was a born teacher. Even without the honorable ambition of achieving independence, he would have developed in that direction. And the passion remained growing to the last; by his Easy Lessons on Reasoning, on the Christian Evidences, on Morals, on Money, on the British Constitution, he popularized knowledge, and has helped teachers far and wide. One of the principal occupations of his later years lay in directing the Irish Education Board; and he did not think it beneath the dignity of an Archbishop, as it was not, to issue in 1850 Proverbs and Precepts for copy lines. One of his early pupils gives a lively account of his first interview with his tutor:

> "His apartment was a small one, and the little room in it much reduced by an enormous sofa, on which I found him stretched at length, with a pipe in his mouth, the atmosphere becoming denser and denser as he puffed. Not being accustomed to smoking, my eyes burned, and my head was affected. All, however, was soon forgotten in the interest of the interview. There was no ostentatious display of talent and acquirement. Never did tutor in his teaching seem to think so little of himself, and to be so thoroughly engrossed with making his pupil comprehend what he taught. As was his custom, he often digressed from the lecture proper into some other topic, but was always instructive and entertaining. We immediately took to one another; I parted from him dazzled and fascinated."

By this time, his decision to serve Christ had been taken, although there is no record of the fact, nor of any circumstances connected with it. This was to be expected from the lofty, almost proud, independence of the man; he was strictly reticent as to his personal experiences; the results must speak for him. The nearest approach to an utterance of this kind that I find, until his last year, was his writing out, on the flyleaf of his first note-book: "Let the words of my mouth, and the meditations of my heart, be acceptable in thy sight, O Lord, my strength and my Redeemer." But the results did speak for him. It was conscience—enlightened by faith in Christ, guided by the Word of God, directed by the Holy Spirit in answer to daily prayer—that produced the high and noble character which all men about Oxford soon came to respect, and for which he was beloved by such as knew him well. Arnold said, "I am sure that, in point of real essential holiness, as far as man can judge, there does not live a truer Christian than Whately."

He rose quickly but surely, so that, when he was, in 1825, appointed Principal of Alban Hall, he left the parish of Halesworth in the hands of a carefully chosen curate, and made Oxford his home. It was a singular instance of his absence of mind that he neglected to resign this living when appointed Archbishop, thereby nearly rendering the appointment invalid, and causing an awkward delay in his consecration.

The six years of his principalship were marked by large literary productiveness. To these belong the Essays on "The Peculiarities of the Christian Religion," on "The Difficulties in the Writings of St. Paul," and on "The Errors of Romanism, traced to their Origin in Human Nature," which laid the foundation of his theological reputation, and also the Treatises on "Logic" and "Rhetoric", which made his name famous. It is no part of our purpose in this paper to attempt a critical estimate of any of Whately's many writings; but it must be said, in order to explain his sudden elevation, that by those just named he had fairly earned for himself the character of a courageous and independent thinker, an earnest Christian teacher, and a writer possessing remarkable powers of luminous exposition and exact reasoning. At the same time he had given proof, in his capacity as a tutor and head of a house, that he possessed unusual skill in the wise managing of human nature, so that, while all were surprised, and some were grievously offended by Earl Grey's choice for Dublin, there were others, such as Copleston and Arnold, who regarded the Prime Minister as having done a thing not more bold than sagacious.

Among those with whom the appointment of Whately to high office was unpopular were Newman, Keble, the Froudes, Pusey, and the party, then in gremio, of which these men were leaders. The "Tracts" were not yet; two years had to pass before the first of them, nine years before No. XC. appeared; but the following words from Newman's "Apologia" give us a most pathetic glimpse of how deeply the disastrous influence was already working from which these most pernicious writings were to spring:

> "And now as to Dr. Whately. I owe him a great deal. He was a man of generous and warm heart. He was particularly loyal to his friends, and, to use the common phrase, 'all his geese were swans'. While I was still awkward and timid, in 1822, he took me by the hand and acted the part to me of a gentle and encouarging instructor. He emphatically opened my mind, and taught me to think and to use my reason. He had done his work toward me, or nearly so, when he had taught me to see with my own eyes and to walk with my own feet. . . . His mind was too different from mine for us to remain long on one line. . . . I have always felt a real affection for what I must call his memory, for thenceforward he made himself dead to me. . . . I believe that he has inserted sharp things in his later works about me; they have never come in my way, and I have not thought it necessary to seek out what would pain me so much in the reading."

Of course, the latter part of this passage relates to a period ten years later; but one can see too sadly why such men should not like Whately's elevation. They knew that another of the high towers of the Church was now occupied by a man of keen intelligence, intense earnestness, and uncompromising boldness, and were tormented before the time by dread of such exposures as came in "Cautions for the Times." On the other hand, the words of Newman suggest what was undoubtedly a defect in Whately: in his own simple honesty and passion for reasoned truth, he never reckoned for such deliberate closing of the eyes on the part of others as his old pupil so frankly acknowledges.

From the close of 1831 to his death (October, 1863), Archbishop Whately was identified with the history and struggles of the Episcopal Church of Ireland. It is perhaps to be regretted, for the sake of England, that the sphere of Whately's influence was changed from Oxford to Dublin. His writings with reference to the principles involved in that great Tractarian movement of which we have not yet seen all the issues, those on the theory of the Church and on Apostolical Succession, and in particular the "Cautions for the Times", no doubt did much to influence thought in England; but their effect would have been greater had he occupied one of the more prominent English sees. It is by no means time yet for these writings to be laid aside as out of date; the battle with Anglican exclusiveness and sacerdotalism has still to be fought out, and those who are on the side of Scriptural authority and the liberty of conscience which that secures, will find in these writings weapons of keen edge and sterling temper. What Henry Rogers, an Independent, was doing almost at the same time in the Edinburgh Review, in the way of exposing the falseness of the claim made to an unbroken succession of ecclesiastical authority descending from the apostles, this prelate was doing with equal thoroughness in his charges and tracts. He vindicated the supreme authority of Scripture, and expounded its teaching concerning the Church as involving the right and duty of Christians in each age and country to organize themselves, in dependence on the presence among them of the Spirit of Christ, according to the principles of the New Testament and without any servile regard to history, much less to tradition. In this he anticipated the repudiation of a transmitted authority—apostolical and coordinate with that of Scripture, and therefore necessarily involving exclusion of all whose orders are not thus derived—which was soon after made by Bishop Stanley at Norwich, and in which the better sort of English Churchmen are prepared to join today. In this he was so decided and so strong that Presbyterians who have to fight the battle against Anglican exclusionists will always find him a valuable ally. At the same time, his teaching was equally destructive of the other great principles of Anglican exclusion—the claim of a priestly office in the sense of human mediation, which has received and is receiving such portentous and disastrous development in England. Nearly ten years before his elevation, in the Bampton Lecture for 1822, Whately had published views of the Christian Priesthood destructive of sacerdotalism; and these he continued, more suo, to repeat and urge against the whole ritualistic movement from the very hour of its birth. But, alas! that movement has gone on, in the spirit of its author Newman, doing its fatal work by appealing to unrenewed human nature, and ignoring all appeals to Scripture and sound reason. Reaction, however, must come ere long, vindicating both the Reformers in the days of Laud and Charles II., and such worthy modern successors as Archbishop Whately. He often said, in reference to the Anglican Establishment, "The horse is not quite free so long as it drags its halter." May the proverb, too sadly proved, be laid to heart, and the halter got rid of.

We have left ourselves no space to give illustrations of the bright and racy wit which distinguished his table-talk; it might not be of the highest sort, but it had the excellence of entire spontaneity, welling out from the exuberant fertility of his brain. Being told that our best flowers, when transplanted to the soil of China, lost their fragrance, he said, "I did not know before that the Chinese were such dis-scent-ers." Some one repudiated rather vigorously his sweeping assertion that we are all taught religious intolerance and persecution in our nurseries. "Think again," said Whately; "were you not taught, as soon as you could speak, to say—

" 'Old daddy long-legs won't say his prayers; Take him by the left leg and throw him downstairs' "?

The briefest sketch of Archbishop Whately would be seriously defective if it did not mention his remarkable munificence. "It was known by his friends that the whole of the income he derived from the see (with the exception of the expenses absolutely necessary to maintain his position) was entirely devoted to charitable objects, and the promotion of the welfare of the Church in his diocese.

Two of his deathbed sayings are characteristic. A chaplain was reading to him Phil. 3:21, from our English version, "Who shall change our vile body." "Read the words," said the archbishop; and the chaplain again read our version. "Read his own words," said the dying scholar; and the chaplain, from memory of the Greek text, said, "Who shall change this body of our humiliation." "That's right," said he, "not vile; nothing that He made is vile." "One of the friends in attendance on him had remarked that his great mind was supporting him; his answer, most emphatically and earnestly given, was, 'No; it is not that which supports me. It is faith in Christ: the life I live is by Christ alone'."

Thus—

> "From the pillow of the thinker, lying
> In weakness, comes the teaching, then best taught,
> That the true crown for any soul in dying
> Is Christ, not genius, and is faith, not thought."

It is very pleasant to reflect that, while the influence of Whately will long survive in some of his writing, the fruit and fragrance of his faith and love are still being diffused through our religious literature, and are carried even to the swarthy children of Egypt, in the writings and labours of his daughters.

A. Macleod Symington.

Catholic Presbyterian.

A good deed is never lost; he who sows courtesy reaps friendship, and he who plants kindness gathers love; pleasure bestowed upon a grateful mind was never sterile, but generally gratitude begets reward.—Basil.

"Devilish" Submarines

A Bishop's Plea.

In commenting last week on the loss of life consequent upon the sinking of a British submarine we concluded: "We can only pray and work for the time when submarines will be forever banned by civilized nations."

The Bishop of Winchester (Dr. Woods) presiding at the session of the Anglo-American Religious Conference at St. Martin-in-the-Fields, said: "There is an agitation we can help to foment on both sides of the Atlantic. That is for the abolition of that abominable method of warfare, the submarine.

"We bow our heads in homage for the heroism of those men who found a watery grave off the Welsh coast this week. There are hundreds of men ready to face precisely the same fate, but most thoughtful people must agree that of all instruments of warfare the submarine is the most abominable. It is purely destructive, and it is contrary to every notion the Anglo-Saxon has of clean fighting and fair play. This peculiarly devilish form of warfare need not go on if the naval Powers would agree to discard it. I have not the slightest doubt that the smaller nations would agree to it, and the two greatest naval Powers, the United States and Great Britain, would accept it if they had their way."

The First Lord of the Admiralty, Mr. A. V. Alexander, speaking on Saturday at Sheffield, took up the plea. He said: "What a great thing it would be if we could persuade the nations of the world to abandon the submarine. It must be said, however, to the credit of this country, that such a proposal was made years ago by Britain, but it has not yet been possible to achieve international agreement."

That is the crux of the matter. At the Washington Conference of 1921 the Earl of Balfour and Lord Lee of Fareham pleaded that no more submarines should be built, but the conference would not agree primarily on the ground that submarines are the most powerful weapons of the smaller naval Powers. It is true that certain clauses were passed prohibiting the use of submarines against merchant ships, "unless the crew and passengers had been first placed in safety." Since then naval officers in the United States and elsewhere have protested against these proposals, but we hope the First Lord will not be satisfied until these devilish implements are banned. It makes us shudder when we recall how they were used during the war against helpless merchant vessels, passenger ships, and even hospital ships. Let those who have a spark of humanity vow that they will not rest until such a disgrace to humanity becomes impossible. Obviously our nation cannot act alone, but Britain can give a lead.—The Church of England Newspaper.

Book Reviews

MEMOIRS OF A GOTHIC AMERICAN: By Anne Kavanagh-Priest. Cloth. Pp. 500. Published by the Macmillan Company, New York City. Price, $2.50.

The literature of reminiscence seems to be in the front of the stage. Ex-President Coolidge in his current contributions is stimulating the mood. And this fair writer adds the charm of femininity with her keen perceptions and delicacy of touch.

Here is the unfolding of a life lived in the seclusion of the hills of New Hampshire, mingled with the fragrance of mint and lavendar and leisurely suggestive of slow locomotion, limpid streams, dense forests, gorgeous meadows, while in the home we are greeted by the tallow dip, the open fireplace and such generous logs as we do not see in our gas illumined substitutes, the hall clock and the whole wonderful world of antiques, the envy of the present-day hunter of relics of that past age.

The author frankly avows that she would fain contrast the settled, contented and restful life of that era (though she is but sixty) with the insipid world now peopled by women of "painted finger nails, powdered noses, French heels and gauzy stockings". The reader will instinctively embellish this pictude of departure from the staid ways of the past.

If Mrs. Kavanagh-Priest indulges in personal matters and openly employs the first person singular, we may be the more won to her deliniation of days when people really looked upon life with a sober and vital concept. When she introduces her family, devotes a long chapter to, "I Lose my Grandfather," we are charmed by the winsomeness with which she would inveigle us into the secrets of her life. And her tid-bits of philosophy and touches of religious feeling enhance the attractiveness of her record.

Kenneth Mackenzie.

BETWEEN THE LIGHTS: Fany B. Bates. Thomas Y. Crowell Coompany, New York. $2.

A Scripture reference, a quotation from a religious writer and a poetic selection for the quiet hour of each day in the year. The book has its high lights and its low. Alongside of such names as Jeremy Taylor and Andrew Murray, men true to the faith, we find such strange lights as F. W. H. Myers (spiritualist), James Martineau (Unitarian), and Swedenborg. Our reaction is that some of the lights too uncertain, and the selections too quiet, we feel the need of something more searching.

Frank Cox.

THE GOSPEL OF GOD: By Herbert Kelly, S. S. M. The Morehouse Publishing Company, Milwaukee, Wis. Price, $1.80.

The writer appears mentally a little tired. A good deal of the book is not robust enough for one who is looking for real convictions convincingly expressed. He reaches somewhat conservative conclusions, but you are worn out trying to follow his gyrations in arriving.

Frank Cox.

GREAT MEN AND MOVEMENTS IN ISRAEL: By Dr. Rudolph Kittel. Cloth. Pp. 465. Published by the Macmillan Company, New York City. Price, $5.

Unquestionably the most suggestive and helpfully devised method of presenting Scriptural truth is through the biographical gate. To see the men of the ages of the development of the divine plan as portrayed in the Scriptures is at once appealing to the lay mind and applicative to the lay heart. What more fascinating work could be devised for the modern preacher than to make these ancient men and women stand out in their reciprocal humanity with our own, to tell how they lived and suffered, joyed and triumphed Dr. Kittel has reached out for this accomplishment that he might stimulate the reader to think out for himself in the unwritten lines of this exhaustive history of the great characers of he nation of Israel.

Dr. Kittel makes an incisive separation in the prophecy of Isaiah and holds to the dual authorship of that book. But though we may not agree with his postulate and conclusions, we must drink deeply with him of the wells of experience with which the prophet is so strongly imbued.

Kenneth Mackenzie.

Letters to the Editor

In this Department the Editor will at all times welcome communications expressing opinions on the various topics which are engaging the attention of the Church. But the Editor will not hold himself responsible for such opinions

No "Letters to the Editor" will appear in our columns except those coming to us signed by writer.

Mr. Editor:

Several correspondents have discussed the widespread failure to meet apportionments; and now Mr. Marsilliot, in your issue of June 15, attributes it to a (1) proximate cause, i. e., a falling off in giving, and (2) a final cause, Anglo-Catholic practices. As this would seem to be, in Mr. Marsilliot's opinion, the basic reason for every calamity that has or can afflict us, I shall not attempt the hopeless task of trying to disabuse him of it. But is there, as a matter of fact, any falling off in total giving?

It might be useful, before leaping to any conclusion, to add the sums given in response to the great special drives (which have been such a feature of late) to the sums paid in on apportionment and to compare the result with similar totals computed for other years. It may or may not appear, as the result of such computation, that the will to give is on the wane.

If there be an actual falling off, it need not be attributed to the naughty practices of Anglo-Catholics. Perhaps it should not be. I am not writing to plead their cause: but we shall defeat our own purpose if we allow prejudice to make us ascribe to the wrong cause a state of affairs which we seek to remedy.

The Evaluation Committee, whose report to the last General Convention was one of the most valuable documents of its sort ever offered to the Church, seemed to be aware of what may be described as a growing sense of disillusionment. That committee was a well-balanced group, as regards churchmanship: it made very searching investigations. It reached a unanimous conclusion: but it did not attribute financial losses (if any) to Anglo-Catholic activities.

My own impression, gained during a recent furlough and widespread travel in the United States and fortified by my study of the report of the Evaluation Committee, is that there is a small but growing feeling that there is a disproportionate emphasis being laid upon departments of work which are not directly concerned with the spread of Christ's religion as this Church has received the same. A great many people like to feel that, when they give to missions, the greater part of what they give will be devoted to the preaching of the Gospel of Christ to non-Christians. The idea that this can be better done by indirect methods (as e. g., institutions) makes no immediate appeal to them: though a large measure of success has attended skillful efforts to "sell" it.

But the moment people begin to suspect that the propaganda used in "drives" is not entirely based on fact, there is bound to be a great revulsion of feeling, with consequent falling off in giving. As compared with this, I do not think that any animosity aroused by Anglo-Catholics, or by attacks upon them, amounts to a drop in the sea: if, for no other reason, because the whole of our missionary machine has been built up since the Oxford Movement and what is now known as Anglo-Catholicism became matters of widespread controversy in the Church. The attack upon them came to a head during the General Conventions of the "seventies" of the last century, has been continuous ever since, and yet it is during this period that our missionary enterprise has had its greatest growth. Anglo-Catholicism may or may not have been a deterrent to that growth: but it is certainly not a new deterrent and cannot account for a fresh falling off.

If we really are face to face with such a falling off, it might be well to seek it where there is some chance of finding and remedying it.

John Cole McKim.

Church Compound,
Koriyama City, Japan.

LABOR SUNDAY MESSAGE.

Mr. Editor:

I am enclosing a copy of the Labor Sunday Message for 1929. You will notice that it is short and practical in its suggestions. May I ask that you find a place for it in the columns of the Southern Churchman?

I have been urged repeatedly to send this Message to every clergyman in the Church, and I have refused to do this because I have preferred to use the columns of the Church papers. It seems to me that this is the kind of material that the Church weekly wants, and that it is a better policy to have our clergy and people look to the columns of the Church paper for knowledge of events about Labor Sunday.

I hope you may feel that you can in the editorial columns of your paper, draw the attention of the people to this message, and suggest that it be read in the Church, or that it be used in the sermon for the day. Our research into the history of industrial relations in the Church has shown that way back in the 80's and 90's, CAIL (the Church Association for the Advancement of the Interests of Labor) was presenting to the clergy the urgent suggestion that they remember labor on Labor Sunday. There is a tradition of long standing for this in the Episcopal Church. Bishop Henry Codman Potter was behind this suggestion, and it would seem a pity that it should in any way fall into desuetude.

The Department will appreciate very much indeed anything you can do to draw attention to Labor Sunday on September 1.

Charles N. Lathrop,
Executive Secretary,
The National Council, Protestant Episcopal Church.

Mr. Charles N. Lathrop, Executive Secretary,
The National Council,
Protestant Episcopal Church,
281 Fourth Ave., New York City.

Dear Mr. Lathrop:

Your letter of the 1st inst. received.
It is vitally important to preach simple faith and the truth of the Bible, and if the Ministers would confine themselves to real Evangelism and preaching the truths of the Bible, we would not need these sidetrack socialistic and communistic movements. I am one hundred per cent for the ministers confining themselves to preaching the truth of the Bible. "Make us eternal truths receive, and practice all that we believe." We must not be led away by sidetracks of superficial patchwork. The fundamental principles of Christianity and the Christian plan of salvation as set forth in the Holy Scriptures is what the world needs most today. We do not need so many sidetracks as some organizations attempt to tack on the Episcopal Church and other Christian Churches.

If the Government would give me one-half of the money now spent on prohibition, and let me spend it on consecrated men of God to "Go into all the World and preach the Gospel", twice as much good would be accomplished as spending money on policemen and armament.

Yours very truly,
Langbourne M. Williams,
President.

Mr. Editor:

Will you find enclosed $10.00 for which will you please pay my subscription to the Southern Churchman and use the rest as you think best. I wish I were able to send a copy of the Southern Churchman to many, who would appreciate its great value, and that there were more who would read its instructive pages. I wish I had a picture of Mr. Alfred B. Williams; I hope he and his co-laborers for this good work will not be made vain by the love and admiration of us old Church people, but regard themselves as instruments raised up to show forth the true Gospel of our Salvation.

With every kind wish, I am, ever,

Mary Louise Erwin.

Morganton, N. C.

JUNIOR BROTHERHOOD OF ST. ANDIEW.

Mr. Editor:

At this time when Bishop Cook's committee has called attention to the need of more good men for the ministry, it is interesting to remember that the Junior Brotherhood has furnished a supply of men of excellent quality entirely out of proportion to its numbers. For over thirty years the Brotherhood has been training boys to do the kind of work which a clergyman must do to be effective. Many of the boys find they like this work.

A prominent educator made the statement to me a few years ago that practically all the candidates for the ministry in the Middle West were coming out of the Junior Brotherhood.

If the clergy and lay leaders want to take the time to train the boys in the Junior Brotherhood, they will recruit effective leaders, both clerical and lay.

H. L. Choate, President.

A HYMN FOR NAZARETH CHILDREN.

The boys and girls at Nazareth are now taught in Christian schools to know and love Him who spent His school life there. They have a little special hymn, which only they can sing:

"We are little Nazareth children
And the Lord has placed our home,
'Mid the olives and the vineyards,
Where of old He used to roam.

For the Lord who loves the children
And was glad to hear their praise,
Cares that Nazareth children know Him,
Do His will, and choose His ways.

Cares that they should keep in memory,
All that sacred life spent there;
Try in heart to walk beside Him,
Safe and happy in His fear;

And we know that He is coming,
Every knee to Him shall bow,
And the joyous shouts to greet Him,
Shall begin in Nazareth now,

Jesus, Saviour, dwell within us,
Make a Temple of each heart;
Pure and loving, true and holy;
For Thy service set apart."

—Selected.

Church Intelligence

New Parents Greatly Needed.

(From The Watchman-Examiner.)

We are hearing much in our day about wayward children and "flaming youth". Where does the blame for the present situation lie? Sympathetic as we may be with parents of our acquaintance it will have to be acknowledged that parents in general are much to blame. In The Training of Children in the Christian Family, published by the Pilgrim Press, the author, L. A. Weigle, quotes anonymously this paragraph from a modern educator:

"I do not hesitate to say that in my opinion the children of today do not need vocational guides so much as they need a new set of parents: parents who have spunk enough to climb back upon the thrones in their own households which they have abdicated in favor of their children; parents who have energy enough to get their children out of bed in the morning early enough for them to wash their faces, comb their hair, and lace their shoes without the school's being obliged to give promotion credit for their doing so; parents who, when the shades of night begin to fall, look after their boys with the same degree of care that they give to their bull pup, which they chain up lest he associate with the stranger cur on the street. We have state autocracy enough in education; what we need most is authority in the home."

Morals of Young People.

It is gratifying to be told on so high an authority as Miss Hardwicke, secretary of the Liverpool Diocesan Board of Moral Welfare, that the morals of young people are much better than they were a few years ago. It is true that knowledge of sexual matters are far more widespread and discussed with more freedom than formerly. Referring to marriage, Miss Hardwicke said that this was vastly changed. In the past marriage meant to a woman freedom, a home, motherhood, and a place in the world. Now a woman did not get married in order to gain economic independence or freedom. In fact today marriage was more of a tie. "It means that marriage is taking its place as a true vocation and it is not entered into without thought or love. Most people today regard marriage as a most serious thing."—Church of England Newspaper.

Russian Church in America.

Inasmuch as Kedrovsky, who claims to be the Russian Archbishop of North America, is from time to time, through the courts in different states, trying to get hold of the Russian parishes under Metropolitan Platon, it will be of interest to many of our clergy, to whom Russians often appeal, that a judgment against Kedrovsky was recently sustained in Connecticut. Only the New York State Courts, and possibly one in Colorado, have decided against Metropolitan Platon. Out of the several hundred Russian priests in America, Kedrovsky has never been accepted by more than a handful, all but three or four of whom have been ordained by him since his usurpation.

Over a year ago Kedrovsky undertook to suspend the rightful priest, Fr. Burdikoff, in Meriden, Conn., and obtained an injunction. The case was then tried on its merits. Kedrovsky lost. He appealed, and on June 5, Judge Jennings of the Superior Court in New Haven sustained the decision of the lower court.

This sustained judgment brought out the points that although there seems

Old Bruton Parish Church, Williamsburg, Virginia.

"The history of Bruton Parish really begins with the expansion of settlement beyond Jamestown. In 1632 Middle Plantation (afterwards Williamsburg) was 'laid out and paled in' seven miles inland from Jamestown. Middle Plantation Parish was created, also a Harrop Parrish established. These were united and called Middletown Parish. Later a Marston Parish was formed, and subsequently, in 1674, Marston and Middletown were merged under the name Bruton Parish.

"Washington makes mention in his diary of attending service here and adds, 'and lasted all day'. The good Bishop Meade recounts that when the decisive step was about to be taken by the Colonies, in relation to the mother country, after they had denounced and renounced her as a cruel stepmother and were about to take up arms and appeal to the god of battles to aid them in their just rights, the patriots determined to do this with the most solemn forms of religion.

"So, on the 24th day of May, 1774, the members of the Assembly, at their meeting in Williamsburg, after setting forth in well written preamble the conditions of the country, the evils oppressing us, the dangers to be feared and their determination to assert our just rights, 'Resolved to set apart a day for fasting, humiliation and prayer; and ordered that the members of the house do attend in their places, at the hour of ten in the morning, on the first day of June next, in order to proceed with the Speaker and the mace to the church in this city for the purpose aforesaid; and that the Rev. Mr. Price be requested to read prayers and the Rev. Mr. Gwatkin preach a sermon suitable to the occasion'. Where could we find a more vivid picture of the intensity and depth of feeling engendered, and of how Old Bruton Parish Church served the life of the young Nation?

"In the old churchyard and in the aisles and chancel of the church itself were interred many whose names and deeds are outstanding memories of the times."

to be no question that Kedrovsky was appointed by a Holy Synod, that Holy Synod had its foundation in the Sobor of 1923, which was in no sense a proper Sobor of the Russian Orthodox Church; further, that although the rules of the Russian Church make provision for complaint against and investigation and suspension of a priest, no such complaint or investigation was made in this case against the priest in Meriden; and that all the substantial elements in the Church in Meriden will under no circumstances recognize the authority of Kedrovsky or have anything to do with him.

Sadhu Sundar Singh on the Bible.

The British and Foreign Bible Society has received a letter from Sadhu Sundar Singh written in Urdu—he has also supplied a translation—respecting his appreciation of the Bible. In it he says, "In reading the Bible I have found such untold and eternal wealth of riches of which I never thought nor dreamed before: and now in passing on its message to others and sharing it with them, its blessing to me and to them continually increases. . . . If I had not known this Book, which is God-given, how should I ever have known the infinite love of God which was revealed on the Cross? . . . I shall ever be thankful to the British and Foreign Bible Society who translated and made it possible for me to get this treasure in my own language. May God grant that many more like me will receive eternal life from the living Saviour by reading this precious Book."—The Church of England Newspaper.

Great Cathedral at Prague Completed.

The great Cathedral of St. Veit, under construction on the heights of the Hradschin for six hundred years, is completed at last and the people of Prague are preparing for a joyous celebration this autumn. The cathedral, in a sense the fulfillment of a thousand-year-old dream, crowns the site of the former Bohemian royal palaces in the center of the city, a scene of gothic majesty from any part of the Czechoslovakian capital. Early in the fourteenth century King Charles came out of Paris to establish his residence in Prague. He brought with him plans for making a second Paris of the city, and foremost among them was one calling for erection of a beautiful cathedral. In 1541 fire destroyed a considerable part of the uncompleted structure. Two German architects, Hans Tirol and Bonifazius Wohlgemuth, actually completed the bell tower, but the thirty years' war hindered the task. By 1873 construction was again permitted to proceed after war had again intervened, and it was decided to follow as far as possible the gothic style originally adopted and thus preserve the symmetry and harmony of the structure. In the fall thousands of persons from all parts of Europe and America are expected to attend the ceremonies which will mark the formal dedication.—The Presbyterian Banner.

Italy.

Lovers of Italy and of peace must regret that Signor Mussolini is raising the age of compulsory service in the army reserve from 39 to 55. This will largely increase the country's war establishment, and is sadly consistent with his idea that education aims at producing little conquerors. It is lamentable to see one of the great European Powers thus deliberately flouting the post-war feeling of the rest, the aims of the League of Nations, and the spirit of the Treaty for the Renunciation of War which she has signed. It is no valid excuse, indeed, it is not put forward as an excuse, that Italy has had lately some fighting on her hands in North Africa. Still less is it put forward as an excuse that, having now prospects of peace in her colonies since the spectacular and welcome submission of the leading insurgent tribesmen a few days ago, Italy can now turn her attention to the long delayed questions in dispute about the frontier between her colony in Tripolitania and the French Protectorate of Tunisia.—The Guardian.

Nicaraguan Brotherhood Chapter Formed.

Two clergy and sixteen laymen of St. Mark's Parish, Bluefields, Nicaragua, have just been granted a charter as Senior Chapter of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew. This is the first chapter to be chartered in that country by the Brotherhood. Like the chapter at St. Paul's University, Tokyo, Japan, the men preferred to be part of the Brotherhood of the United States, rather than of their own independent organization.

The only other chapters of the Brotherhood in Central America are at Panama.

H. L. C.

Findings of Clergy Conference—Kanuga Lake.

The undersigned clergymen, constituting a Findings Committee of the Conference on Evangelism, conducted by Dr. W. J. Loaring-Clark, at the Clergy Conference for the five Carolina Dioceses held at Lake Kanuga, Hendersonville, N. C., July 17-28, 1929, beg leave to submit the following statement to their brother clergy and to the National Commission on Evangelism:

1. With the renewed appreciation of the outstanding importance of Evangelism gained in this Conference we commend the National Council for the place which it has given Evangelism in connection with the Church's Program and further, request that the Council afford the largest possible opportunity to the National Commission for developing their work.

2. We desire to commend most heartily the National Commission on Evangelism for the wise and zealous leadership which marks their efforts to stimulate our clergy and laity to greater evangelistic emphasis and effort. They have produced a program for evangelism which is characterized by evangelistic leaders in other Communions as the best in America. We thank them most sincerely for their leadership and we pray earnestly that the Holy Spirit will continue to control, inspire and strengthen them in their work.

3. We realize, however, that while our program for Evangelism is superior our performance in this field of activity is inferior. We believe that the responsibility for this lack of performance rests chiefly upon our clergy, to whom the laity are even now looking for a more aggressive leadership in evangelism.

4. We would, therefore, respectfully and earnestly urge our brethren of the clergy to interest themselves more actively in the work and program of the National Commission on Evangelism and more specifically we would suggest that they use their influence to have one or more two or three-day Clergy Training Conferences for Evangelism held in their respective dioceses by Dr. Loaring-Clark or other representatives of the National Commission on Evangelism.

We believe that the natural and inevitable result of such Training Conferences would ultimately be the holding in many parishes, rural as well as urban, of annual evangelistic parochial missions as a normal and necessary activity in the parish program.

5. We also believe that in the lay representative of the Commission on Evangelism, Dr. Larkin W. Glazebrook, our Church has a most effective personality for commending evangelism to the laity, particularly the men, and we earnestly recommend to our brother clergy that they secure his invaluable assistance in informing and inspiring their parishioners for the work which is theirs equally with the clergy—that of helping men to find and know the risen Jesus. We suggest a larger use of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew and the Daughters of the King for the promotion of Evangelism among the laity.

6. We thank God for the new sense of our privilege and high calling which has come to us from our consideration of Evangelism under Dr. Loaring-Clark's splendid leadership and we urge a larger use of Dr. Loaring-Clark for this particular work among the clergy.

We earnestly pray that, by the grace of God, we may all, clergy and laity alike, become more effective witnesses unto the living Saviour through a deeper consecration to a more earnest and widespread Evangelism.

Malcolm S. Taylor,
Upper South Carolina.
Harold Thomas,
South Carolina.
J. N. Bynum,
North Carolina.

Confidence in Work of Church Army.

Church Army has been further honored by the bestowal of The Cross of Honor of the Order of the Sangreal upon its founder, Prebendary Wilson Carlile.

That Church Army work in this country is enjoying the confidence of leaders in different fields of Church Work is evidenced by recent requests for workers in Seamens Institute work in New York City and Detroit; Visitors and Missionaries to jails and State Institutions in Rhode Island and New Jersey; and a Social Worker among Railroad Construction Workers along the Hudson Valley, N. Y., in the Parish of Wappingers Falls, the Rev. Maxell Rice. For this latter work a commodious house has been taken at New Hamburg, N. Y., and opened as a Recreation Centre for the Railroad men and will become also a House of Evangelistic Adventure.

Clergy are asked to recommend suitable men for training in all-round Evangelism. Write Captain Mountford, Diocesan House, 416 Lafayette Street, New York, N. Y.

National Association of Organists to Meet in Canada.

Chorus of two thousand to sing for convention of the National Association of Organists and the Canadian College of Organists, to be held at Toronto, Canada.

For the first time in the history of the National Association of Organists, the members of that organization instead of meeting at an important city in the United States for their annual convention, will journey to Toronto. There they will join with the Canadian College of Organists in celebrating its twentieth anniversary, on August 27-28-29-30.

In view of the international aspect of that meeting, many notable events have been prepared. On Thursday evening, the twenty-ninth, the Toronto Exhibition Chorus of two thousand voices will give a special program in honor of the convention delegates. Preceding that concert the Directors of the Toronto Exhibition will give a dinner to the visiting organists.

At the new Royal York Hotel, which boasts of having the largest organ to be found in any hotel, and which will serve as Convention Headquarters, there will be demonstrations and recitals by men of note. Four American and two Canadian recitalists will poin in other recitals to be held in the important churches of Toronto.

Another feature of the convention will be the playing of the organ compositions which won the cash prizes donated by the Skinner Organ Company in a competition under the auspices of the National Association of Organists during the past year. A large attendance of both American and Canadian Organists is expected for this convention. A complete program of the convention may be obtained by writing to the Association at 49 West Twentieth Street, New York City.

The Retiring Fund for Deaconesses.

It was a retired Deaconess who gave the first hundred dollars toward a retiring fund. Other gifts followed and in September, 1927, the Retiring Fund for Deaconesses was incorporated in the State of New York. There is a Board of Directors composed of seven deaconesses; there are two advisors, Mr. Richard T. Stevens, Treasurer of the New York School for Deaconesses, and Mr. Charles A. Tompkins, Assistant Treasurer, National Council of the Church The Bank of New York and Trust Company is the custodian of the funds. The House of Bishops endorsed the Fund in General Convention in 1928, when it was presented by the Rt. Rev. Philip Rhinelander, Chairman of the Commission on Deaconesses.

The first objective of the Retiring Fund is fifty thousand dollars; when this has been obtained, the payment of annuities and allowances will begin. There is no item to be lost for there are some who should even now be receiving help from this Fund. The Deaconesses of the Church are not eligible for help from the Clergy Pension Fund; they work for inadequate salaries in most cases; their parishes are not always able to help them at the time when they must cease active service. A general fund, such as the Retiring Fund for Deaconesses, carefully invested and safeguarded, is the best solution for providing care and comfort in their latter years for those who have served the Church.

There is now thirteen thousand dollars in the Retiring Fund for Deaconesses. The bank balance continues to grow towards the next purchase of bonds or mortgages. This entire amount has come in sums from fifty cents to one thousand dollars, from deaconesses, their friends, bishops, clergy, woman's auxiliaries, special offerings at services. Large bequests are needed, but small sums are also solicited by the Directors. Leaflets may be had on application to the Secretary. Checks may be sent to the Treasurer or to the Bank of New York and Trust Company.

The present officers of the Fund are: President, Deaconess Romola Dahlgren, 419 West 110th Street, New York City; Secretary, Deaconess Mary C. West, 129 East 52nd Street, New York City; Treasurer, Deaconess Edith C. Smith, 61 Franklin Street, Morristown, New Jersey. Other members of the Board of Directors are: Deaconesses Mary S. Johnson, Effie M. Brainerd, Claudine Whitaker, Lillian M. Yeo.

Rev. Wallace Rollins, Formerly of Asheville, Teacher of Teachers at Kanuga Lake.

The Rev. Wallace Rollins, formerly of Asheville, who is at the head of the Department of Church History at the Virginia Theological Seminary in Alexandria, Va., was a welcome guest at Kanuga Lake, the Episcopal Conference Centre, where he had the outstanding position of being a teacher of teachers. Dr. Rollins taught Dean Nes of New Orleans, who has just closed a course at Kanuga, where he ranked as one of the instructors of national repute. Dr. Rollins and the Rev. George Floyd Rogers, rector of Trinity Church, Asheville, were guests at Kanuga, where the latter comes frequently for the various conferences in which the Diocese of Western North Carolina takes part. Dr. Rollins, has many relatives and friends in Western North Carolina, as he is the son of the late Major Rollins, for years the postmaster of Asheville, and his mother was a member of the large and well known Gudger family. He has been the guest in Asheville of his brother-in-law and sister, Dr. and Mrs. Jos. Sevier. Dr. Rollins said: "I went over to Kanuga to see the grounds and the conference leaders. I was much impressed with Kanuga as a conference center and think it has great possibilities. The great need of the Church at the present time is the development of the teaching function of the Church. This is being done by many conferences in the Church. I hope to return to Kanuga soon to see my former students —Dean Nes is one of them—and other friends among the clergy and laity."

Dr. Rollins will lecture to a clergy conference in the Diocese of Newark, New Jersey, from September 1 to September 13.

M. W.

Date of Meeting Changed.

The Synod of the Province of Sewanee will meet in Trinity Church, Columbia, S. C., on Tuesday, November 5. instead of Tuesday, October 22. The change has been made at the request of the Diocese of Upper South Carolina because of a conflict of the original date with that of the South Carolina State Fair, which will meet in Columbia in October.

This change has been made by the President of the Synod after complying with the requirements of the ordinances of the Province.

John H. Brown,
Secretary of the Synod of the Province of Sewanee.

Advice Asked on Racial Handbook.

The Foreign-Born Americans Divisions is planning a much needed Handbook. Its purpose is to help our clergy understand sympathetically and minister effectively to the people of various racial origins within their cures. Books previously issued are out of date. Our Church has learned much and accomplished much since their publication. We have persistently tried to do away with the idea of "foreign" differences. Nevertheless, there are certain differing racial and religious heritages, attitudes and customs, that ought to be known by us.

We are asking specific advice from a number of those who know, as to what to put into this Handbook in regard to each of the various races. It will attempt to detail concisely such things as are peculiar to each race and are useful for our clergy to know in order that they may the better minister to people of each racial origin.

We ask that those who read this request will send in advice, specific or general, as to what the Handbook should contain. Please address the undersigned Secretary of the Division, at 281 Fourth Avenue, New York.

(Rev.) Thomas Burgess.

Dr. Elliott Tells of Innovations In Children's Department.

Dr. Mabel E. Elliott, head of the Children's Department of St. Luke's International Hospital, Tokyo, who is now in the United States speaking in the interest of the Hospitals' fund-raising campaign, has the distinction of being the first woman to be granted a physician's license in Japan. She is the only American doctor on the St. Luke's staff besides Dr. Rudolf Bolling Teusler, Director of the Hospital.

The methods being instituted by Dr. Elliott in the care of children, like the work in all departments of St. Luke's, is revolutionary for Japan. Accustomed to live, eat and sleep by their children's very bedsides in Japanese hospitals, the mothers at first found even the requirement that they leave their children entirely in the Hospital's care a startling innovation. However, the rapid improvement in their children's condition soon convinced them of the wisdom of the modern methods.

Diseases of children in Japan are similar to those of children in America, according to Dr. Elliott, except for diphtheria, which is more serious there because of the lack of propaganda in the interest of prevention, and trachoma, a disease of the eyes which afflicts entire families. This latter disease is attacked by treating not only the child who is found to be suffering with it, but all the members of his family.

Gratifying results are being obtained in the Hospital's public health work affecting children, according to Dr. Elliott. She cooperates with Dr. Kameyo Sadekata, a remarkable Japanese woman physician educated at Ann Arbor, in the maintenance of maternity clinics, pre-school and school clinics, the first ever established in the Empire. Ten thousand children of Kyobashi Ward are examined regularly at the St. Luke's school clinic and 602 babies were enrolled in the "well-baby clinic last year. The significance of this work is indicated by the figure on the mortality rate for infants coming under the Hospital's jurisdiction, which is 2.5 per cent as compared with the mortality rate for infants in Tokyo as a whole, which is 20 per cent, or the lowest rate found anywhere in Japan, which is 14.5 per cent.

"Japan is watching the public health demonstration which the authorities of the City of Tokyo asked us to conduct, with the greatest interest," Dr. Elliott reports. "The most encouraging factor in relation to our work is not merely the immediate results, though they are so convincing that the Japanese urge an expansion of our service. The encouraging factor is that the Japanese people, once they are convinced of the feasibility of modern hospital methods, will spare no pains in having them adopted throughout the Empire. Thoroughness is one of their national char-

(Continued on page 22.)

Family Department

AUGUST.

1. Thursday
4. Tenth Sunday after Trinity.
6. Tuesday, Transfiguration.
11. Eleventh Sunday after Trinity.
18. Twelfth Sunday after Trinity.
24. Saturday, S. Bartholomew.
25. Thirteenth Sunday after Trinity.
31. Saturday.

COLLECT FOR ELEVENTH SUNDAY AFTER TRINITY.

O God, Who declarest Thy Almighty power chiefly in showing mercy and pity; Mercifully grant unto us such a measure of Thy grace that we running the way of Thy Commandments, may obtain Thy gracious promises, and be made partakers of Thy Heavenly treasure; through Jesus Christ Our Lord. Amen.

For The Southern Churchman.

HINDERING TALENTS.

F. B. Stone.

Let not the talents Thou hast given men,
Be hindrances to turn their feet from Thee,
Nor let their intellects so keen, so deep,
Prove their undoing, their betrayers be.

Let not their wisdom, like a beacon false,
Lead them to every good except to Thee;
Nor let the beauty of Thy Universe,
So hold their eyes Thyself they cannot see

The beauty of Thyself, Lord, show to them,
The love that sacrificed itself to give
To them a larger, fuller life while here,
And fit them evermore with Thee to live.

Oh! give to them the spirit of a child,
That Thou to them Thy wonders mayest reveal,
Not only of Thy Universe, my Lord,
But Thy deep interest in their soul's true weal.

To childlike faith that takes Thee at Thy word,
To such Thou dost Thy purposes unfold,
And dost today work wonders through that faith,
As Thou didst work through men in days of old.

If a Man Die, Shall He Live Again?

A man whose early life was spent in California tells of a child who lived in the Southwestern part of our country where there are so many great gulches like the Canyon of the Colorado. This child had a nurse who was very fearful lest some time when her eyes were off her, the child should wander away, and going too near the edge of the canyon, would fall over and be lost. So she told the child that she must keep away from the canyon; that the canyon was full of hobgoblins, and if she went near the edge of it they would catch her and eat her up. The child often looked at the canyon, but always with feelings of terror. At last an older brother who had been away at college came home. He had his little sister out walking with him one day. As they came near the edge of the ravine he suggested that they go down the path into it. The child drew back in terror. She warned her brother of the danger of it. She told him about the hobgoblins, and the cruelties they would inflict on any one who came into their power, and she begged him not to go. Her brother laughed at her fears, but she stood her ground. Then pointing into the ravine he said to her, "Do you see that little hill on the other side of the gulley?" She said she did. Then he said, "If I go down there and stand on that hill, and come back safe and sound, will you go down with me?" That was a fair test and the child said "Yes." Down into the ravine the brother went. He was out of sight for a moment, and the little girl's heart was in her mouth. Then as she watched, he appeared again, and mounted the hill, and as he stood there he gaily waved his handkerchief, and she waved her hand in return. Then he started back; was out of sight again for a brief while, and then he reappeared at the top of the path down which he had gone. When she found there was no sign of harm on him she put her hand in his and went down without fear.

So we are not shut up to the hints of nature for One has gone down into the ravine of death, He came back alive and showed Himself to His friends, and we know there is a future life.

A Bishop tells the story of a man and his daughter. There came a time when she was going to be married. Her father's custom had always been to tuck that girl in bed at night. Whatever time of the night he came in, he would always go in softly and tuck her in and kiss her. And sometimes she would partly awaken, and say, "Hello, daddy," and he would say, "Goodnight, sweetheart." And so it came to the last night that she should be under his roof and under the shadow of his love, and he tucked her in; and she put her arms around his neck and drew him close, and he put his arms around her and said, "My daughter"; and she just said, "Daddy".

So God in the last night that we are to be in our home on the earth, will come down and tuck us in. When our eyelids droop, and our voices falter, and we can hear no sound; some One will be there. He will plant the kiss of love on our cheek and we shall enter the Valley of the Shadow arm in arm with Him, journeying toward the eternal sunrise. The morning cometh.—Chester E. Tulga.

The Master's Marching Orders.

The marching orders to the Church are simple, plain, direct: "Go ye into all the world," "Disciple all the nations," "Preach the gospel to every creature." Truly has it been said:

"Obeying, the Church and its people may be called Christians; disregarding that supreme command, whatever they may be called, they cannot claim the name of Him who inquired, 'Why call ye Me Lord, and do not the things which I say?' Missions are the supreme business of the Church. It is the supreme business of any person who calls himself a Christian. In this crusade to make Christ reign in every nook and corner of this world we can hold nothing back. It demands the utmost sacrifice of life and treasure."

For this supreme cause and all the other vital causes that constitute our Church's complete budget let us do our best by prayer, by sacrifice, by heroic giving. Shall the conveniences, the comforts, the luxuries which the average church member enjoys be swift witnesses against him at the bar of God in proof of what he might have done for the advancement of his Saviour's Kingdom?

It is as true now as it was in Jerusalem that Jesus sits over against the treasury and beholds how the people cast money therein.

It is also as true now as it was in Galilee that His eye of love is upon each of His disciples and to each He is saying, "Lovest thou me?"- Exchange

For The Southern Churchman.

THE HEALING SERVICE.

Eleanor Glenn Wallis.

Candles like brides are white and beckoning flames:
The wistfulness of old beseeching hymns
And tremulous prayers are mounting with the claims,
The hopes, the faith of the fourscore oppressed,
Who, halt or blind, or mentally distressed,
With crippling heartaches and misshapen limbs,
Have come to lay affliction at the feet
Of Him, Who gives the heavy-laden rest.
And as, long since, they thronged the village street
To hear a Voice and touch a garment's hem,
So now they crowd the sanctuary rail,
And he, through whom the blessing's given them,
Sees each one rise secure against defeat,
Armoured in trust as knights of old in mail.

The Field Is the World.

The first missionary boat that ever sailed from the love and light of home to a foreign port bore the Lord Jesus Christ. The Father knew and the Saviour knew the needs of that age and of every age. His call to us is large and commanding—a call to share the spirit and purpose of His own mission to mankind.

The instructions are definite, "Go ye into all the world." A Sufficient Saviour for all the world is not an insufficient Saviour for any part of the world. That first Church refused to shrivel up the command of Christ—"to every creature" merely to a few individuals in every nation. If Christ is good tidings for all, what right have we to withhold Him from all people?

The peril of the Church has ever been shortsightedness, selfishness. "If any man have not the spirit of Christ, he is one of his." A man who doubts the final triumph of Christ is not a Christian, and needs to be born again. The army of occupation, boasting of apostolic succession, must become the army of conquest, boosting for sacrificial succession, manifesting that same quenchless zeal for the salvation of the world for which He died, as did those first disciples.

We enlisted on God's terms. His Son, on that day, became the Captain of our salvation. His command is, "Go!" We must either obey His command or cease calling Him Lord.

Jesse Wilson, of the Student Volunteer Movement, says, "That religion which is best for any people is the one best for all. If the people of other parts of the world do not need Jesus Christ, neither do we need Him, and if we do not need Him, neither do they. The truth is, we all need Him, and for the same reason: 'to save man in the face of his sin-tormented life everywhere'."

"How shall they believe in Him whom they have not heard?" The Jerusalem Council, assembled on the Mount of Olives this last year, answered that question as follows: "As together, Christians of all lands, we have surveyed the world and the needs of men, we are convinced of the urgent necessity for a great increase in the Christian forces in all countries, and for a still fuller measure of cooperation between the Churches of all nations in more speedily laying the claim of Christ upon all the unoccupied areas of the world and of human life."

Each Christian pastor has a definite responsibility for presenting and interpreting this call to every Church of Christ and each and every Christian in each Church throughout the whole world. "If the trumpet give an uncertain sound, who will advance to the battle?" Standing among the graves of our heroic dead, our sainted leaders, our martyrs and missionaries who fought a good fight and finished the course, kept the faith, and have received the crown of righteousness; "surrounded by so great a cloud of witnesses", our Churches, our brethren, should rise to unparalleled heights in spirituality and in giving, and in carrying out the program of our Lord and Master.—Charles R. Scoville, in World Call.

THESE ARE THE GIFTS I ASK.

These are the gifts I ask
Of Thee, Spirit serene:
Strength for the daily task,
Courage to face the road,
Good cheer to help me bear the traveler's load,
And, for the hours of rest that come between,
An inward joy in all things heard and seen.

These are the sins I fain
Would have Thee take away:
Malice and cold disdain,
Hot anger, sullen hate,
Scorn of the lowly, envy of the great,
And discontent that casts a shadowy gray
On all the brightness of the common day.

And hold of dearnest worth:
Light of the sapphire skies,
These are the things I prize
Peace of the silent hills,
Shelter of forests, comfort of the grass,
Music of birds, murmur of little rills,
Shadows of clouds that quickly pass,
And, after showers
And the smell of flowers
And of the good brown earth—
And best of all along the way, friendship and mirth.

—Henry Van Dyke.

The Presence of God.

I was married very young, and knew but little of housekeeping, and would often find myself in difficulty over my household duties, and not know what to do. And then, in the midst, I would hear the front doorbell ring, and my mother's voice would ask, "Is Hannah at home?" And I would exclaim with a sigh of relief, "Oh! there is mother!" and all my troubles would vanish, as though they had never been. My mother was there, and would manage it all. And over and over again in my spiritual life the words, "Oh! there is God." have brought me a similar but far more blessed deliverance. With God present, what can there be to fear? Since He said, "I will not fail thee, nor forsake thee", every heart that knows Him cannot but boldly says, "I will not fear what man can do unto me."—Mrs. Pearsall Smith.

Kreisler on Stewardship.

Said Fritz Kreisler, the violinist, on Christian stewardship: "I was born with music in my system. I knew musiscores instinctively before I knew my A B C's. It was a gift of Providence. I did not acquire it. So I do not even deserve thanks for the music. Music is too sacred to be sold. And the outrageous prices the musical celebrities charge today truly is a crime against society. I never look upon the money I earn as my own. It is public money. It is only a fund entrusted to my care for proper disbursement.

I am constantly endeavoring to reduce my needs to the minimum. I feel morally guilty in ordering a costly meal, for it deprives some one else of a slice of bread—some child, perhaps, of a bottle of milk. My beloved wife feels exactly the same way about these things as I do. You know what I eat; you know what I wear. In all these years of my so-called success in music, we have not built a home for ourselves. Between it and us stand all the homeless in the world!—Ex.

Man and Animals.

An individual man or woman seems small when compared with the precision of the equinoxes, but every intelligent person should measure worth by the qualitative method. Kant, who spent nearly the whole of the eighteenth century in thinking and meditation, places the individual man on a par in sublimity with the starry heavens. It will not do to consider human beings as transitory or insignificant. The symphonies of Beethoven, the poetry of Shakespeare, the art of Raphael, did not come either from machines or from material substances. Man is sublime and I believe he has a sublime destiny. Man is like the lower animals in many things, but the features that distinguish man from the animals are much more striking than the similarities. A good man is enormously better than a good dog, and a bad man is very much worse than the worst horse. Perhaps the chief difference between man and the lower animals lies in creative power. The physical strength, agility and sense perceptions of the lower animals are superior to those found in men and women, but when it comes to mental power, there is an immense difference between animal cunning and creative genius. No elephant or snake has ever been an artist. The purpose of religion is to unite man with God, to bring him into intimate contact with sources of inexhaustible power, to develop his mind and soul to their highest possible capacity. Thus sincerely religious people, no matter through what difficulties they may pass, are optimistic. — Professor William Lyon Phelps.

Christian Calmness.

We notice people of God who are anxious and fretful, and cause a great deal of misery for people round about them by always worrying, fidgeting and being in a state of nervous excitement. But holy souls who abide in Christ take everything calmly. You can remember such persons, both men and women; whatever happened, they remained unmoved, patient and cheerful. Great losses came in the course of business, but the brother did not lose his balance; sad bereavements came, but the sister did not repine. If the believer endured a sharp affliction, his chief concern was that the Lord would sanctify it to him; if people persecuted or slandered him, he was not surprised, for he expected to be hated of the world when he became a follower of Jesus. If he prospered, he did not get into a heat of pride. In patience he possessed his soul. —C. H. Spurgeon.

For The Southern Churchman.

The Armor of God.

Rev. Alex. C. D. Noe.

You say you had no armor on?
Of course you suffered badly.
With naked breast—without a sword,
You made the plunge, but madly.
No helmet, breast-plate—girded not:
No shield, nor love shod feet;
And all the hosts of evil out,
Intent on your defeat.

God doesn't send His soldiers thus,
To suffer shame and loss;
Although we seem to think He did,
When Jesus bore the Cross.
He arms them as He did His Son,
With Truth and Righteousness—
Salvation, Spirit, Gospel Shoes,
And Faith for any test.

The Best Gift.

The Macedonians "first gave their own selves to the Lord." That was the secret of all their giving, the root out of which this noble generosity grew and blossomed. When the center of the circle moves, every point on the circumference moves with it. When a man gives himself to the Lord, everything that belongs to him goes with him. The best gift we can give to others is not money, but self, personal sympathy and helpfulness; and the greatest gift we can give to God is our own selves. He wants this gift first, for when He gets this He will easily get all things else. —The Presbyterian Banner.

Too Much For the Cat.

Mrs. Key was visiting some friends, and she left the following note for her nearest neighbor:

"Dear Mrs. Garrison: Would you please put out a little food for the cat I have been feeding this winter? It will eat almost anything; but do not put yourself out."—The Booster.

Some of Bishop Brent's Last Words.

Activity without the background of relationship with God is apt to be footless, even mischievous.

A background of God-consciousness should form the canvas upon which all life is painted.

Fifteen minutes a day of intensive effort God-ward can change the whole complexion of life, raising it from weakness to power, from bondage to liberty.

The inner forces of personality reach their zenith in the exercise of faith.

Jesus Christ is not a theory or an idea, but key-personality.—Exchange.

Be glad! Make life a jubilate, not
A dirge. In storm, as in the sunshine, sing!
The clouds hide, in their sombre folds, the smile
Of God. Trust, sing and wait! The mists will turn
To gold; the angry winds be still, and peace
Brood like a gentle spirit o'er thy life.

—Mattie Crane Newton.

For the Young Folks

MY PRAYER.

If I be loyal I must do all that God would have me do.
I must be brave, big-hearted, staunch, and true.
I must look up, and always keep His Cross in view,
And know that back of it, the sun will shine anew.

If I be loyal, I must never fail
The ones who love me trust me, help me through the vale.
And as through life I steer my fragile bark
I must be ever listening, I must ever hark
To that small voice that speaks from out the dark.

And so, dear God, I pray that Thou wilt plant in me
A seed from which shall grow true loyalty.
And with my eyes on Thee—my hand in Thine,
I can not fail, but conquer for all time.
—Author Unknown.

How the Telescope Was Discovered.

Little things and little people are often responsible for great results, and maybe you do not know that the discovery of that important instrument, the telescope, may be traced to the curiosity of a boy, and this is how it came about:

The little boy I am telling you about was the son of an optician who lived in Holland. He and his sisters loved to play about their father's work bench, and often they amused themselves by looking at the sea through the little smooth concave glasses which their father used in his work.

Now, one day it happened that the boy, while playing with two of those glasses, chanced to hold them before his eyes in such a way that the face of the cathedral clock seemed very near.

This surprised him greatly, for the clock was so far away that he could scarcely see the hands with his naked eyes.

For a while he stared at the clock, and then at the glasses, each of which he tried in turn, but the clock was as far away as ever, and so it remained. turn them as he would, until by chance again he held both up together, when. lo! as if by magic, the church stood beside him.

"Oh, I know!" he cried aloud. "It's the two together." Then in great joy he ran to his father and told him of his remarkable discovery.

The father tried the glasses in his turn and found that the boy had spoken the truth, when he said he could bring the great church clock nearer.

So this was the way people learned that putting a concave and convex glass together in just the right position, would make distant objects seem near. Without this knowledge we should never have had the telescope, and without the telescope we should have known little of the sun, moon or stars.

So if you ever have a chance to look through a telescope, and see the wonders it has to reveal, just remember the little boy who once lived in far-off Holland.—Brooklyn Eagle.

WHEN AN INDIAN BOY BECOMES A BRAVE.

An Event in the Life of the Cheyenne Indian.

Some time between the ages of ten and fourteen, an Indian boy becomes a brave, and a man. One day he is a boy, doing as he wishes, all day and every day. Three days later, he is a man, a member of the tribe, and a brave.

How many American white boys would care to go through those three days? After you have read their story, you can decide.

For three days and three nights he must keep a watch, or vigil, all alone, in the wilderness. If he can do this, he is fit to be a brave.

It is the boy's father who decides when he is old enough to keep his vigil. Like boys of other races, some Indian boys are brighter than others, and can keep their vigil earlier. When a boy can remember all about one year of Indian life and the customs of his tribe, when he knows the order of the seasons, the times for hunting and fishing, the feasts and holidays of the year, then his father judges him old enough to be a brave.

Then the boy and his father set out alone from the village. They seek a hill far enough away to be out of sight or hearing of the village. When they reach the place, the Indian father gathers wood for the night. He tells his boy once—and only once—to keep the fire going all night, and then he leaves his son alone, and goes back to the village.

The boy is used to the outdoors, and he finds plenty to amuse himself with at first. Then darkness begins to fall. Never has he been away from his family at night before. He is getting hungry, too, but there is nothing to eat, for he must prove that he can endure hunger, loneliness, sleeplessness and danger before he can be a brave.

As it grows dark, over the plains he sees a gray figure coming toward him —then another—and another—and another.

He hastens to light his fire and blow up the blaze. Then he crouches behind it, with the hill at his back, for these gray forms are wolves, who have gathered to devour this lone boy. But they will not pass the fire; so long as he keeps that burning he is safe. All night he stays awake, and keeps his fire bright, while in a half circle beyond his fire, he sees the wolves' eyes shining in pairs like coals of fire. It seems to him that the night will never end, but at last a light appears in the sky. It is the dawn, and as the wolves slink away, our Indian lad jumps to his feet with a shout of joy, and, extending his arms to the sun, he thanks the Great Spirit for keeping him safe during this fearful night.

In the daytime there is little, if any, danger, but our Indian boy is very hungry and very sleepy. Can he sleep during the day? No, indeed, for he is keeping this vigil so that the Great Spirit will visit him, and give him a message which is to direct his whole life. It is hard to keep awake, but he gathers wood enough for several nights, then he plays and sings, and keeps moving about so that he shall not fall asleep.

The second night comes. Again he builds his fire, and watches the ugly gray forms gather to share his vigil. He is not so frightened tonight, yet there is no temptation to sleep, for should the fire go out, instantly a dozen wolves would be at his throat.

This night passes also. The third day is the hardest. He must not sleep, and yet lack of food has made him weak enough, so that it tires him extremely to keep moving.

Perhaps this is the day he receives the expected message from the Great Spirit.

Again night and the wolves come together. Again he keeps the fire burning. Again the sun rises, and now his vigil is nearly over. He waits until his father comes and they go home together.

His mother has prepared a meal of the foods her son likes best. But he cannot satisfy his hunger; he may eat only a few mouthfuls. Then he enters his teepee and sleeps two or three hours. When he awakes he takes his bow and arrow, goes out on to the prairie and shoots a small animal which he takes home. This animal is ever afterward his totem, and its image is painted on his shield and his tent, and is worked into his beadwork.

Most white boys would immediately have told their families everything that had happened during these exciting and perhaps dreadful days. Not so our Indian boy. No one questions him and he tells nothing to any one.

But if he fails in his vigil, what happens to him? Oh, terrible! Terrible! He is put into dresses like a girl!

But if he succeeds, as most boys do, then glory is his! He is a brave and can wear a feather in his hair. A hole is made in a small stone, and through this hole, the hair on the crown of his head is drawn. This is his scalp-lock, left there as a dare to his enemies, saying, "Take me if you can." Into this opening, the feather is also placed, and a thong fastens it around the head.

Now he must be dignified. He can no longer play tumbling games, for his feather, the blade of his new dignity might get broken or displaced.

Well, after all, what of it? We must pay for everything, and he pays for being a brave by giving up many of his boyish games.

Thus he becomes a brave.

Good-bye, Indian boy. Hail, Indian Brave!—The Beacon.

A Boy Who Would Skate.

Maybe you know Johnnie Griggs; he lives just outside of Griggsville by the four corners, and "Griggses Pond", where the college boys go skating in winter, is on his grandfather's farm. The year when Johnnie was seven his Aunt Melissy gave him a pair of skates on his birthday, and his birthday was in August, so you may imagine how far away ice-making weather seemed to be

Johnnie has a little brother Jimmy; in fact, Jimmy was only a three-year-old baby when Johnnie was seven, but he was full of ideas and he could talk as plainly as his older sisters. Johnnie said so much to Jimmy about how to go skating that, long before the first cold nights, baby Jimmy was teasing for skates, too.

When freezing weather came at last, Johnnie learned to skate in his own back yard on ice that formed from water pumped on smooth and frozen ground. That kind of a pond was too small for him, though, and he began to tease to go skating on the big pond, long before the college boys came out from town to test the ice. At first, Johnnie listened patiently to his father who told him over and over that the ice on the big pond was too thin to hold even a small boy safely. After awhile Johnnie began to think that his father didn't know what he was talking about; the ice stretched from shore to shore in a solid-looking floor.

"It is just as safe as—as anything," said Johnnie to Jimmy, and he was more sure he was right than ever when six big college boys came out one day and skated all the afternoon and nothing happened except that the big boys had a gay, laughing time and went home with shining skates clanking from their shoulders.

"May I go skating tomorrow?" Johnnie asked his father that night as he was going to bed.

"In a few days, if this cold weather continues," answered his father, "you may go skating on the pond, but not before, because the ice is not safe yet!"

Johnnie's feet went thumping hard up the stairs when they carried him to bed, and Jimmy's feet went no less softly.

"Daddy doesn't know everything!" declared Jimmy.

"He knows most things," Johnnie straightway reminded his little brother, "but he has forgotten about the thickness and thinness of ice, and I am afraid he will never let you and me go skating, not even when the ice goes clear through the bottom of the pond to China!"

Johnnie was so cross, his mother said his tones were enough to make the weather weep. "Such talk is enough to break old Jack Frost's heart!" she said, when Johnnie scolded more because his father would not let him go skating on thin ice.

Sure enough! Next morning, if you please, the very icicles were crying! "Drip! drip! drip!" the tears fell; out came the sun, and the snow on the roof began to shed great sparkling tears.

That day Johnnie's mother put a tub out by a corner of the woodshed to catch the drippings. "We must not let all that good, soft water go to waste," she said. By night the tub was full and running over. Jimmy called it a pond and sailed little boats of bark from shore to shore. That night the weather turned cold again. In the morning the water in the tub was frozen.

"I am going skating on my pond!" said Jimmy.

"No, no," Johnnie warned him; "that ice isn't strong enough to hold you, and next thing you know, you would be swimming for shore!"

"The ice is thick enough to hold you up," Jimmy answered, "and I am going skating!"

Now, Johnnie didn't think Jimmy would climb up on that tub and try to go sliding on a little circle of ice, so he only laughed and went on about his business, which just then was feeding the chickens. Next minute Johnnie heard screams, mother heard screams, so did father and the little sisters! They all came running to see what in the world was the matter with Jimmy!

Johnnie was first to reach the tub. "I told you not to! I told you not to!" he shouted when he saw Jimmy trying to climb out of deep ice water.

The little fellow didn't answer; he couldn't, he was so cold and shivering. Father lifted him, dripping with that icy water, and carried him into the kitchen beside the kitchen stove. He began to undress the child while mother ran for warm blankets. Poor little Jimmy's teeth were chattering, and tears were running down his face. Just as soon as mother could fill the bathtub with warm water, father put the baby in it. Then Jimmy was wrapped in dry, warm blankets again, and father was holding him by the open oven door, mother made him drink hot ginger tea. Jimmy did not like ginger tea.

"I told him that ice wouldn't hold him!" Johnnie explained to the family. He was dreadfully sorry for Jimmy, but, even so, he blamed him for not listening.

"The baby probably thought he knew more than you did about ice," father said as he cuddled little Jimmy tighter. "Now I know a little boy who thinks—"

Just then a neighbor's boy came running up the path to the house, and, although he knocked, he didn't wait for anybody to say "Come in!" but in he bounced.

"A college boy was almost drowneded just now!" he announced. "Three of 'em came up to the pond to go skating for half an hour before class, and one of 'em broke through! The other two pulled him out, because Mr. Tampkins happened to be driving by to town and he helped! My sakes, Mr. Griggs, it is lucky that didn't happen to Johnnie and the rest of us!"

"Why, it couldn't have happened to us," interrupted Johnnie, "because father says he will tell us when the ice is safe, and—and father knows!"

At that every one in the kichen laughed, including Jimmy, who sat up straight in his father's lap and pointed at Johnnie as if he knew something too funny for words. No wonder Johnnie blushed a most uncomfortable red.

"Well," he insisted, looking straight at the cat, "father does know, and I'll never tease to go skating again when he says the pond ice is too thin, because he knows what he is talking about, same as I did about tub ice!"—Frances Margaret Fox, in the Congregationalist.

Christina Rossetti and Her Pets.

The very name of the author of the lovely little book called "Sing-Song" is a poem—Christina Georgina Rossetti.

Her parents were Italians. Her father was a poet, who had left his native land and come to London. He taught the beautiful language of his own country in a great college there. Her mother was a teacher, too—a governess. It was in London that Christina was born a little less than a century ago.

There were two brothers and a sister, all older, to share the playtime and the lessons of the small dark-eyed Christina. She never went to school, but had her lessons at home with her own dear mother for a teacher. Her father taught her sometimes, too. She learned the Italian tongue as well as the English, in which she was to prove so skilled a writer.

Perhaps the greatest pleasure that this little city girl ever knew came with her visits to her grandfather in the country. He lived thirty miles away and that meant a long, long ride in the stage-coach. On and on between green fields she went, coming at last to Grandfather Polidori's cottage and garden, the best of all sights.

In that garden lived, you may be sure, caterpillars, "brown and furry", and garden-mice, "little and timid". Over it flew the swallows, sailed the clouds, and arched the rainbow. Through it blew the wind which the puzzled little girl could never see.

Her greatest pleasure in London was to go with her brother, Dante Gabriel Rossetti, to visit the Zoological Gardens. There were more birds and animals than she ever saw in the country. But they were less happy than the wild creatures. Much as she loved to see them, she could but feel sorrow for them in their captive state.

So was it with the tiny caged canaries. They were a source of pleasure and of grief. Once she dreamed of these little friends of hers. It was that every canary in the city escaped from its cage by night and flew away to a beautiful park and was free. Only till sunrise did this freedom last. Then like a great yellow cloud the pretty, singing creatures returned to their cages.

Her brother, who was studying to be an artist, considered this dream worthy to be painted. Do you not agree that it would have made an exquisite picture? But it has never been done. Other things occupied the busy brother, and other things the little sister, who could paint quite well, too.

She began to write in rhyme when she was very young. Verses about her cats and kittens and pets were carefully copied by her sister in a little notebook. These were kept until Christina was sixteen, when they were published in a tiny book, illustrated by herself.

Somehow, Christina never did grow up. She retained her fondness for toads and frogs and little wild creatures always, and was ever ready to take them in her hands if need be. Perhaps this will remind you of the good St. Francis and his "little brothers and sisters" of the fields and streams and air. As for children, Christina adored them always, and they her.

Her beautiful poems won for her high place among the poets of England and the world.

It is, as you will have noted, almost impossible to write of her without writing of her famous brother who was artist and poet, too. She went often to his studio where the most curious and delightful of pets were kept.

At one time he had an owl—very affectionate and interesting when tamed a woodchuck, a deer, and that quaint little Teddy bear from Australia called the wombat. It was like a zoological garden, or better still, a Wonderland. And who should come there frequently but that very funny man, whom you know as Lewis Carroll, to study and to make photographs of them.—Christian Science Monitor.

Your Own.

You will often hear it said: "I believe in Jesus Christ, but I have no love of institutional religion." Institutional religions means, as I understand it, the arrangement of what will best help each individual to do his part in worship and in work. You will hear: "Why doesn't the Church do this or that?" The Church is made up of separate men and women—you, and you, and you. If "the Church" is to do it, it means that you are to do it, and you, and you. The anwerableness lies there, not only in the clergy or the officers, they are helpers to the rest. It is your own. Transform the question: "What is the Church here for?" to "What am I here for?" and ask God to help you to the answer.—From Archbishop Davidson's Farewell Sermon.

Jesus, by Thy wounded Feet,
O guide my feet aright.
Jesus, by Thy wounded Hands,
O keep my hands from wrong.
Jesus, by Thy parched Lips,
O curb my cruel tongue.
Jesus, by Thy pierced Heart,
O knit my heart to Thee.

Classified Advertising and Notices

All notices and advertisements, excepting positions wanted, will be inserted in this department at a rate of 20 cents per agate line, each insertion. Special rates to contracts of any length. A rate of 15 cents per line is made to persons seeking positions. No advertisement accepted for less than 50 cents.

Copy for this department must be received not later than Tuesday of the week in which it is intended that the first insertion shall appear.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

ANTIQUES.

WE PAY THE HIGHEST CASH PRICES for old-time furniture and antiques of all kinds. H. C. Valentine, 309 East Franklin Street, Richmond, Va.

RELIGIOUS TRACTS.

GOOD RELIGIOUS TRACTS MAY BE had by writing to LEVI C. SULLIVAN, blind tract minister, P. O. Box 43, Roanoke, Va. Some excellent tracts for prison work.

FOR RENT—VIRGINIA BEACH, VA.

TWO LOVELY ROOMS WITH PRIVATE BATH in attractive bungalow; best location Virginia Beach. Address "Box 5", Virginia Beach, Va.

—CATHEDRAL STUDIOS—
Washington London

Church Embroideries and Vestments, Silks, Fringes, Gold Thread, Stoles with crosses from $7.60, Burse and Veil from $15. Surplices and exquisite Altar Linens, Church Vestments imported for the Churches free of duty.

MISS L. V. MACKRILLE,
11 W. Kirke St., Chevy Chase, Washington, D. C. Telephone Cleveland 52.

SITUATION WANTED.

WANTED, POSITION AS TEACHER, Academical or Industrial department in home, or institution. Experienced. Address Miss Leislie L. Rucker, Pedlar Mills, Va.

Deaths

IN MEMORIAM.

Miss Lucia Beverly Scott.

We, the members of the Woman's Auxiliary of Manakin Church, Powhatan County, Va., wish to record our sorrow and loss in the death of our beloved coworker, LUCIA BEVERLY SCOTT, who entered into life eternal on December 31, 1928. Never physically strong—yet ever ready to do her part, she has left us an inspiring example of courage and faithfulness.

"When we at death must part,
Not like the world's, our pain;
But one in Christ, and one in heart,
We part to meet again."

M. G. C., President.

MRS. FANNY BAYLOR BRITTON.

Entered into eternal rest at her ancestral home in Warrenton, Virginia, on May 25, 1929, FANNY BAYLOR BRITTON, in the eighty-sixth year of her age, widow of John Blodget Britton, of Philadelphia.

Mrs. Britton was a member of one of the oldest families of Warrenton, one of the six daughters of Joseph and Eliza Baylor Horner, and identified with all of the best traditions of her noble ancestors. She was a true gentlewoman in its best sense, which implies not only gentle blood, but a gentle and generous heart, with great Christian fortitude.

Her works will truly follow her, and those who knew her, will rise up and call her blessed, for as God's child He took her as His own to be with Him in Paradise.

"For all the saints who from their labors rest,
Who Thee by faith before the world confessed,
Thy Name, O Jesus, be forever blessed.
Alleluia."

A. H. S.

CHURCH INTELLIGENCE.

(Continued from page 16.)

acteristics. This is demonstrated in the way they safeguard the public against hydrophobia, innoculating every dog in the land against rabies automatically when the animal is registered, and also by the success of their attack upon beriberi, which is rapidly being stamped out."

House of Bishops Called to Hold Meeting.

A call for a meeting of the House of Bishops of the Episcopal Church in Atlantic City, N. J., October 2, 3 and 4, has been issued by the Rt. Rev. John Gardner Murray, D. D., Bishop of Maryland and Presiding Bishop of the Episcopal Church.

This call puts under way a new departure in the government of the Church. Heretofore, the only stated meetings of the House of Bishops have been held at the triennial General Conventions of the Church, special meetings of the House at other times having been called when, in the judgment of the Presiding Bishop, an emergency existed making such meetings desirable. Experience having shown that a full attendance of the Bishops was not always possible at these meetings, the House at Washington Convention in 1928 amended its rules to provide for annual meetings of the body except in General Convention years, and the call which Bishop Murray issued provides for the inauguration of these annual gatherings.

Among the important matters to be discussed at the first annual meeting of the bishops will be the election of missionary bishops for Wyoming and Honolulu; but the call also summons the bishops to meet "for the receipt and consideration of matters of reference, and the transaction of any other business that may be lawfully presented at such session". This excludes any general legislation requiring the concurrence of the House of Deputies in General Convention, but otherwise opens up a wide range of other Church matters which the bishops may discuss, and if so disposed, act upon.

Coincident with the calling of the session of the House of Bishops, other boards and commissions of the Church are also arranging for sessions at Atlantic City at the same time. The session of continental Missionary Bishops and Bishops of Dioceses receiving aid from the National Church, have arranged to meet for their Annual Conference on Budgets for 1930 in Atlantic City on September 28-30, immediately preceding the meeting of the House of Bishops; and the National Commission on Rural Work plans also to hold its Annual Conference at some time during the gathering. It is expected that other bodies will fall in line and that these annual gatherings of the House of Bishops will take on something of the aspect of a Triennial Convention, minus, of course, the presence of the House of Deputies. Practically the entire week from September 28 to October 5, will be given over to the discussion of various phases of Episcopal Church work. The sessions of the House of Bishops will, in all probability, be held in the Hotel Chalfonte.

An interesting phase of the gathering will be the formal launching of plans for the celebration of the Sesquicentennial of the Diocese of New Jersey, by Bishop Matthews of that Diocese, who will be the host of the House of Bishops at the October meeting. It was in the Diocese of New Jersey that the first steps were taken in 1784 for the organization of the American Church. A committee headed by Bishop Matthews, and including a group of prominent citizens and members of the Church in the Diocese of New Jersey, is at work on the Sesquicentennial, and the committee is planning now to secure from the Triennial General Convention in 1931, its approval of Atlantic City as the place of meeting for the Convention of 1934, as a part of the Sesquicentennial observance. Other plans include the cooperation of the Diocese of Newark, formerly a part of the Diocese of New Jersey, and other adjacent dioceses in the proposed one hundred and fiftieth anniversary.

Beginning on Saturday, September 28, the missionary bishops will meet in conference, and resume their deliberations on September 30. Tuesday, October 1, will be devoted by the members of the House of Bishops to a Quiet Day, which will be conducted by the Rt. Rev. Theodore Du Bose Bratton, D. D., of Mississippi, in the Church of the Ascension. The business sessions of October 2 and 3, will be preceded by an opening service of Holy Communion in St. James Church at 10 A. M. At this service the entire membership of the House will attend in their vestments in the picturesque processional which precedes all such gatherings. It is expected that two full days will be given up to the transaction of business. Incidental to the meeting there will be a luncheon to the bishops on October 1, in the Guild Room of the Church of the Ascension, and that evening Bishop and Mrs. Matthews will give a reception to the bishops and their families and to the local clergy. On the evening of October 2, there will be a banquet in honor of the visiting prelates, at which it is expected that the Presiding Bishop will deliver a brief address. The final day of the meeting will be given over to the election of the two missionary bishops which must be preceded by a service of Holy Communion in St. James' Church.

SOUTHERN VIRGINIA.

Rt. Rev. B. D. Tucker, D. D., Bishop.
Rt. Rev. A. C Thomson, D. D., Coadjutor.

Convocation.

The thirty-seventh annual Convocation of the Diocese of Southern Virginia met in St. Paul's Memorial Chapel, Lawrenceville, Virginia, the Rev. J. Alvin Russell, M. A., rector, August 5-7.

Officers of the Convocation are: the Rt. Rev. B. D. Tucker, D. D., LL. D., President Ex-Officio; the Rt. Rev. A. C. Thomson, D. D., Vice-President Ex-Officio; the Ven. Archdeacon James R. Russell, D. D., LL. D., President; the Rev. E. H. Hamilton, B. D., Secretary; the Rev. H. T. Butler, Treasurer.

The program was as follows:

Monday, August 5, 8 P. M.—Evening Prayer and Sermon, preacher, Rev. E. H. Hamilton, B. D. Welcome address by Archdeacon Russell. Response by Rev. B. W. Harris.

Tuesday, 9:30 A. M.—Holy Communion: Celebrant, the Bishop of the Diocese. Organization, election of officers; appointment of committees; address of the Bishop; address of Bishop Coadjutor; address by Archdeacon Russell. Report of delegates to the Diocesan Council; Report of Treasurer of Convocation; Report of Executive Board; Election of members of Executive Board. Brief Report on the progress of our Church Work.

Afternoon Session—Election of delegation to the next Council. Report of Layman's League. Presentation of the Program—Rev. B. W. Harris. Discussion on the report of the Southern Bishops on Missionary Jurisdiction for Negroes.

Evening Session—Missionary meeting. Address by Rev. C. E. Green. Address by Mrs. Ida Harris. Address by a layman.

Second Day—Morning Prayer. Sunday School Convention. President's Address. Paper by Miss Lucille Hatcher. Reports.

2:30 o'clock—Woman's Auxiliary—public meeting. Addresses, reports, etc. Business meeting of Convocation. Reports of committees. Adjournment.

SOUTHWESTERN VIRGINIA.

Rt. Rev. Robert C. Jett. D. D., Bishop.

Final Payment on Rocky Mount Rectory.

There is much rejoicing in the congregation of Trinity Church, Rocky Mounty, at the fact that on July 1 the last payment was made cancelling the debt incurred in building their handsome brick rectory.

The Rev. Douglas I. Hobbs came to Rocky Mount November 1, 1923, from Live Oak, Florida. Just a year later the new rectory was completed, at a cost of $11,500. An offer of $15,000 has since been made for the property, but was of course declined. The building of rectory necessitated a debt, the size of which seemed a rather heavy responsibility for a congregation with less than fifty communicants. Steady progress has been made, however, on the reduction of the obligation. A great deal of credit for this is due to the Ladies' Guild. Assistance was also given by Mr. Hansom H. Brown, of Wichita Kansas, a brother of Mrs. Hobbs.

Also chiefly due to the activity of the ladies, a Moller pipe organ has been installed at Trinity and was ready for use on the first Sunday in August. It is a two manual instrument in quartersawed oak with gold bronze pipes and so arranged that it is capable of considerable expansion later.

Mr. Frank M. Valentine, a member of the congregation, formerly of Long Island, New York, will be the organist and greatly assisted in the selection of the instrument. Mr. Valentine is also a lay reader, and frequently conducts services in the absence of the rector.

Trinity Church is being beautified in other ways as well. Some months ago an altar was given by Emmanuel Church, Covington. More recently a beautiful bronze altar cross and a pair of candlesticks have been given in memory of the family of Judge Peter H. Dillard, who has served many years as Senior Warden.

Mr. Bussingham Conducts Mission at Nora.

The Rev. Alfred C. Bussingham, rector of St. Peter's Church, Roanoke, held a preaching mission from July 18 to 26 at St. Stephen's Church, Nora, Virginia. This is a point in the coal mining section of the Associate Missions field in the west side of the diocese; Deaconess Margaret D. Binns being the missionary-in-charge and serving under the Rev. Herbert H. Young of Bluefield, Virginia, Dean of Associate Missions. On three nights Mr. Bussingham was assisted by the Rev. J. J. Ambler, Jr., of Dante, who read the service. An especially interesting feature of the mission was a series of three lantern slide pictures given by Mr. Bussingham on the Life of Christ and other scenes from the New Testament. This was the first time that many of those present ever saw a stereopticon picture. On several occasions special music was rendered by Mrs. Bussingham who sang and played on the cello.

On Saturday, the twentieth, the service was preceded by a picnic on the lawn. The attendance at the services was very good, with especially large congregations on Saturday and on the final night At the last service the Rev. Mr. Ambler had four baptisms.

While in the neighborhood Mr. and Mrs. Bussingham visited the missions at Dante, "Grace House" and "Sandy Ridge".

On August 2, Mr. and Mrs. Bussingham left Roanoke for a month's visit to relatives in Buffalo, New York. The last three weeks in August St. Peter's will be supplied by the Rev. J. C. Wagner, rector of Grace Church, Petersburg, and a member of the faculty of Bishop Payne Divinity School there.

WASHINGTON.

Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman, D. D., Bishop

Active Brotherhood of St. Andrew.

The Brotherhood of St. Andrew, in Washington, by its splendid work at the time of the General Convention, gained inspiration and an impetus to go forward, which is showing itself more and more in these weeks and months following. In addition to active work for increased membership in the Brotherhood and a varied number of lay activities, a very concrete result is seen in the organization of the Potomac Assembly. At a recent meeting of its Executive Board it was decided to indorse the Kernehan religious census of Washington and vicinity, and the campaign of visitation evangelism. It is planned to make the religious census in February and the visitation evangelism campaign in March, 1930, and all parishes and missions in the diocese will be asked to cooperate and pledge their help in this work. The Potomac Assembly will also plan and sponsor the Annual Men's Corporate Communion service to be held on February 22, at Washington Cathedral.

One worthwhile piece of work reported at this meeting of the Executive Board was that of St. Thomas' Chapter in acting as big brothers to the boys at the Episcopal Home for Children. Many other forms of work were reported by the several chapters.

The Executive Committee adopted a resolution stating it to be the sense of the Assembly that the Diocese of Washington has sustained a severe loss in the death of Commander C. T. Jewell, U. S. N.

Members of the Executive Committee of the Potomac Assembly are: J. Harris Franklin, president; Donald E. Gerow, vice-president; James V. Guthrie, secretary; Harry D. Omiss, H. Lawrence Choate, Lloyd T. Cox, J. W. De Grange, Francis W. Glaze, Busey H. Howard, Raymond K. Jones, Arthur W. Lind, George Nicholson and John H. Parsons.

Epiphany Church.

The Rev. James M. Morris, associate rector of Epiphany Church, has returned to the city after a short vacation, to resume charge of the parish in the absence of the rector, Dr. Phillips, who is away on an extended leave on account of his health. The services at Epiphany Church are being held in the parish hall, while the redecorating of the church is being carried forward, and during the month of August a volunteer choir will provide the music. Announcement is made that the work in the church is progressing well and that it is expected that services in the church will be resumed by the first Sunday in September.

M. M. W.

NEW YORK.

Rt. Rev. William T. Manning, D. D., Bishop.
Rt. Rev. A. S. Lloyd, D. D., Suffragan.
Rt. Rev. Herbert Shipman, Suffragan.

St. Margaret's in the Bronx Enlarging Plant and Property.

With four-fifths of the Bronx population unattached to Church or Synagogue, St. Margaret's Episcopal Church at Dawson and East 156th Streets, Dr. Lyman P. Powell, rector, is now preparing to render a larger community service without sacrifice of its Episcopal integrity.

By careful survey of a large section of The Bronx, the Church's situation is now well understood. The number of families served has been tripled in a year. Thirteen races now worship on Sundays side by side. All records for both Church and Sunday-school attendance have been broken. New lights beautify the church, and the grounds around have been converted into a little park to which in the recent hot weather people have come from far.

The money is now being rapidly secured for improving the parish house. The new quarters adjoining the parish house for the deaconess include rest and conference room and private bath and the walls are already rising. The work begins at once on the rectory, which is to have an extension toward the church park, including a sunlit dining-room, and above a guest room and bath, releasing front rooms for office uses. The work is to be finished by Labor Day.

Early in the autumn the Sunday service in Chinese for the Chinese will begin. The Woman's Auxiliary will be organized, and the religious week day school started. The Church Army has been asked to conduct evangelistic services. The Rev. Norman V. Levis, D. D., Dean of Philadelphia, will come over once a month to be the special Sunday evening preacher. There will also be a new forum on World Affairs named in honor of the late General Charles H. Taylor of the Boston Globe, and addresses will be given at frequent intervals by men eminent in the newspaper world. This is believed to be the first distinctively Newspaper Forum to be established by any Church anywhere, and guests are expected at the first meeting in October, from Boston, Philadelphia and Virginia, as well as New York.

To date ninety in New York and elsewhere have contributed to the fund to make the improvements and to enlarge the plan and Dr. Powell predicts the one hundred mark will be reached in a few days.

PERSONAL NOTES.

The Rev. Henry G. Lane, of Raleigh, N. C., will supply at the evening services at St. Paul's, Norfolk, during the month of August.

The Rev. George W. Lay, D. D., of Chapel Hill, will have the services at the Church of the Good Shepherd, Raleigh, N. C., during the absence of the rector, the Rev. Henry G. Lane.

THE POSTAL SERVICE OF THE CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA

A FEW INTERESTING FACTS ABOUT THIS UNUSUAL BOOK

The author served his apprenticeship under the last living men who printed the bonds, money and stamps for the Confederacy, and their reminiscent chats form the nucleus of his story; while permission to search the "Rebel Archives" in the War Department in Washington yielded the documents which give answer to all the mooted questions of the years. Confederate scrap-books, war-time letters, records of adventure, and stories told by Confederates supply the bits of human interest throughout the book.

Nearly thirty years of research and intense study were given to this work. It required one year to set, revise, print and bind the volume. Its 462 pages cover every phase of Confederate postal history and every detail of stamp and printing process employed. Nearly 1,000 explanatory illustrations—many of them detail drawings—are shown throughout the story, representing all processes of the graphic arts. The forms were distributed immediately upon the completion of the work.

NO OTHER BOOK LIKE IT!

Nearly 1,000 illustrations and maps in black and colors, with two multi-color inserts, appear in the book. Size, octavo, 7 inches by 10 inches; 460 pages; weight, 4½ pounds.

Absorbing, Entertaining, Replete with Human Interest and Facts! No Other Book Like It!

PUBLISHED IN THREE STYLES OF BINDING AND GRADES OF PAPER

Popular Style, gray cloth, gilt lettering..... $10.00
Library Style, gray cloth, red leather back, gilt lettering..... 15.00
De Luxe, genuine gray Morocco leather, gilt lettering and embossed on cover and backbone (only 75 copies printed—very beautiful)..... 50.00

All books sent boxed and postpaid

Order your copy and a copy for your local society or library now. Less than 400 copies left. Use this blank:

THE DIETZ PRESS, Date.....192...
109 East Cary Street, Richmond, Va.

Gentlemen:

Kindly send immediately to the address below.....cop....of THE POSTAL SERVICE OF THE CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA.

My check, money order, for $.....is enclosed in full payment for the..... style as stated above.

Name.....

Address.....

.....

Sent by.....

NOTE.—If you wish to present your local library or society with a copy, please sign your name here. A card will be enclosed with the book by the publishers.

SOUL-WINNING BOOKS FOR WORKERS

Remarkable in Sterling Gospel Truth, Remarkable in Extensive Circulation
Remarkable in the Way God Has Blessed to Souls

PENNY BOOKS are supplied singly or assorted, 10 for 1/ or 25 cts.; 1/3 per doz.; 7/6 or $2 per 100; 65/ per 1000 post free.

TWOPENNY BOOKS, 2/4 doz.; 15/ or $4 per 100 post free.

GOD'S WAY OF SALVATION. By Alex. Marshall. Now in its five million issue. Translated into 22 languages. Blessed to hundreds of conversions. Special Edition for broadcast distribution, ½d. Pocket Edition, Royal 32mo size, 1d.; with monogram, 2d. Large Type Edition, illustrated, 2d. In French, German, or Gaelic, 1d. each.

THE GOSPEL IN A NUTSHELL. A racy and simple setting of John 3:16. By HyP. 205,000 issued. Owned of God in definite conversion. Pocket Size, 1d. Large type, illustrated, 2d.

THE REASON WHY. A Plain Message to his Assistants, by R. A. Laidlaw, Auckland, N. Z. New Pocket Size, 1d.

THE SOUL AND ITS DIFFICULTIES. By H. W. Soltau. Meets many questions and points. Greatly blessed in early days. New Edition, 4d. (4/6 per doz. post free).

GOD'S WAY OF PEACE AND REST. By Dr. Horatius Bonar. A book for Inquirers. 2d.

THE TRAVELLER'S GUIDE from Death to Life. Compiled by Mrs. Menzies. Millions sold, used to lead thousands into light. 6d.

(As we are Trade Agents, quantities at lowest rates.)

THE SAILOR'S GUIDE for they that go down to the sea in ships. Compiled by Capt. Carre, of the Merchant Service Officers' Christian Association. 6d. (8d. post free.) Special Prices for Quantities for Free Distribution.

GOD'S WAY OF LIFE and How to Find It. By G. R. Harding Wood, M. A. A book designed to help those who would help the inquirer. 2/6 net (2/10 post free).

MARKED TESTAMENT, with 200 verses, dealing with the Way of Salvation underlined and marked in margin. Handy Pocket Size. Cloth boards, 6d. (by post 8d.).

INDEX TESTAMENT. Size 4¾ by 3¾. New Testament indexed and marked on all subjects connected with the theme of Salvation, by J. G. Lawson. Cloth, 2/ post free.

THE BRITISH EVANGELIST. Founded by the late Dr. W. P. Mackay, Author of "Grace and Truth," "Abundant Grace," etc., to publish the Gospel of the Grace of God. Edited by his widow. Large oblong size. 12 pages. Sterling Articles by well-known authors. Sunday Scripture Readings, etc. 1½d. monthly; 2/ per annum.

PICKERING & INGLIS
229 Bothwell Street, Glasgow, C. 2
14 Paternoster Row, London, E. C. 4

DESIGNED FOR THE PROMOTION OF PRACTICAL PIETY, THE DIFFUSION OF RELIGIOUS AND GENERAL INTELLIGENCE, AND THE MAINTENANCE OF THE PRINCIPLES OF THE PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL CHURCH

Southern Churchman

DOMINUS FUSTRA ISIN 1835

Vol. 94. RICHMOND, VA., AUGUST 17, 1929. No. 33.

THE ATONEMENT

There is no doctrine more painfully misunderstood than that of the atonement made by our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ on Calvary's Cross. It should never be forgotten that the atonement originated in the love of God for guilty man. For "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son," even unto death, and that the death of the Cross, that by that priceless sacrifice He might forever put away sin. If Christ had not died God could never have justly forgiven our sins. But now He is "just, and yet the justifier of the believer in Jesus." We have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous, and He is the propitiation for our sins." That saintly scholar, the late Bishop Handley Moule, clearly defines "propitiation." He says: "It has but one meaning in Greek or English. It means sacrificial pacification of an offended power." That other famous Bishop of Durham, the late Bishop Lightfoot, said while here below: "It is the infinity of the price paid for our redemption which is its essential characteristic. . . . Try to realize the significance of this death—its magnitude, its condescension, its goodness: and when you have realized it, go and sin if you dare! . . . This Cross of Christ, this strange, repulsive thing, did give to a hungry world just that food which alone could allay its pangs."

These words are as true as they are memorable. And a third Bishop of Durham, immortal Wescott, bears similar testimony. Here are his imperishable words: "Other religions have dreamed of an incarnate God, but no other religion ever dreamed of an atoning God." The atoning Cross has no counterpart in the non-Christian world. Every man stands in utter need of a Saviour, and that Saviour is found in the cruicified Redeemer and in Him alone. Christ does not and cannot save us by His stainless example and matchless teaching only. He died that we might live. He lives that we may live also, and reign with Him forever, justly and freely forgiven.

It was an educated Christian Brahmin who said: "I felt myself a sinner and found in Christ one who had died for my sins, paid the penalty due to my sins, This was the burden of the thoughts of my heart: Christ had died and in so doing had paid a debt that man could never pay. This conviction, which has grown stronger and stronger with my growth in Christian life and experience, has now become part of my life. It is the differentiating line between Christianity and all other religions." And he adds this crowning statement: "A God all mercy Is a God unjust continues to be my creed unto this day." Moreover, in that faith he died and has gone to be with Christ.

If I may close with a personal testimony, I would humbly say that, after half a century in the Christian ministry, I have absolutely no hope save in the Cross of my atoning Redeemer. In the Divine love that passeth knowledge Christ was "made sin" for me, that I might be the very "righteousness of God" in Him He is my all in all.

"I would not work my soul to save,
For that my Lord has done:
But I would work like any slave
From love to God's dear Son."

G. OSBORNE TROOP.

Halifax.

EDUCATIONAL

The Gundry Home and Training School For The Feeble Minded

Falls Church, Fairfax County, Va.

Established 1892.

For terms and information address

MISS M. GUNDRY.

The General Theological Seminary

CHELSEA SQUARE, NEW YORK.

The next Academic year egins on the last Wednesday in September.

Special students admitted and Graduate Courses for graduates of othre Theological Seminaries.

The requirements for admission and other particulars can be had from THE DEAN, 1 Chelsea Square, New York, N. Y.

The Bishop Payne Divinity School

The accredited Seminary of the Church for training colored men for the ministry. The curriculum covers the full course for Deacon's and Priest's Orders. The degree of B. D. is awarded.

For catalogue and information apply to Rev. F. G. Ribble, M. A., D. D., Dean, Petersburg, Va.

The Protestant Episcopal Theological Seminary Virginia

The One Hundred and Sixth Session Opened Wednesday, Sept. 19, 1928.

For catalogue and other information address The Dean, Rev. Berryman Green, D. D., Theological Seminary, Alexandria, Va.

Schermerhorn Home School

Located six miles north of Richmond on the Washington Highway. A Home School for Children who need Special care and Training.

SUE I. SCHERMERHORN,
Box 57, West End Sta,
Richmond, Va.

STUART HALL

STAUNTON, VA.

Episcopal school for girls, maintaining best Virginia traditions of refinement and culture.

Thorough College Preparation. Varied General Course. Outdoor Life.

EIGHTY-SIXTH YEAR BEGINS SEPTEMBER 18, 1929

For catalogue, address
MRS. H. N. HILLS, Principal

Episcopal Theological School

Cambridge, Massachusetts.

Affiliated with Harvard University.

For catalog address
The Dean.

Chatham Hall

A Church School for girls in Southern Virginia. Thorough college preparation. General and graduate courses. Art, music, expression, home economics, secretarial course. Superb location; 175 acre estate, gardens, dairy; modern, well equipped buildings. Riding, swimming, golf. Address Rev. Edmund J. Lee, M. A., D. D., Box S, Chatham, Va.

Southern Churchman

SOUTHERN CHURCHMAN COMPANY,
628 E. Main Street - - - Richmond, Va.

LANGBOURNE MEADE WILLIAMS
President
ALFRED B. WILLIAMS..Associate Editor
THE REV. FRANK COX
Associate Editor
THE REV. JAMES W. MORRIS, D. D.
Associate Editor
MRS. CONRAD H. GOODWIN,
Associate Editor
MISS SUSANNE WILLIAMS..News Editor
JOHN H. COOKE..Secretary and Manager

Entered at the Post Office in Richmond, Va., as second-class mail matter.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE.

$3.00 a year in advance. To the Clergy, $2.00. Six months, $1.50. Trial subscriptions, 3 months, 50 cents; 10 cents a copy. Foreign postage, 50 cents additional.

For the convenience of subscribers, subscriptions are continued at expiration unless otherwise ordered. Notice of renewal, discontinuance or change of address should be sent two weeks before the date they go into effect.

RECEIPT OF PAYMENT is shown in about two weeks by change of date on address label. If date is not properly extended after each payment, notify us promptly. No receipt for payment will be sent.

Notice post office address. The exact post office address to which we are directing the paper at the time of writing MUST ALWAYS BE GIVEN. Our mailing list is arranged by post offices and not alphabetically.

Make all checks and money orders payable to the Southern Churchman, and not to an individual.

ADVERTISEMENTS—Rates quoted on request. For classified see head of that department.

Representatives wanted in each Parish; liberal commissions.

News concerning the Church at large always welcome.

CONTENTS

	Page.
Thoughts for the Thoughtful	4
Editorial—James W. Morris, M. A., D. Sc.	5
The Holy War Against Atheism—William H. Matthews	6
The Need of the World Today—Edgar A. Guest	7
The Inspired Bible and Human Opinion—W. Bell Davison	8
The Jamboree	10
All Quiet Along the Potomac—Thaddeus Oliver	11
A Sane and Decent Life	11
The Locomotive Celebrates	11
The Best Memory System	11
Peace Garden on Border Planned	12
Favorite Scripture Verse	12
Alone	12
Book Reviews	12
Letters to the Editor	12
Church Intelligence	13
Family Department	17
Children's Department	19
Personal Items	23

THE HANNAH MORE ACADEMY

The Diocesan School of Maryland. Founded 1832. A Country School for Girls—fifteen miles from Baltimore. College, Preparatory and General Courses. Music, Art, Supervised Athletics.

Principal, LAURA FOWLER, A. B.,
Reistertown, Maryland.

National Cathedral School

A Home and Day School for Girls
The Bishop of Washington, President Board of Trustees. Mrs. Marvin Bristol Rosenberry, Acting Principal. Mount St. Alban, Washington, D. C.

Five Virginia CHURCH SCHOOLS

FOR BOYS: St. Christopher's School, Richmond; Christchurch School, Christchurch, Middlesex County.

FOR GIRLS: St. Catherine's School, Richmond; St. Anne's School, Charlottesville; St. Margaret's School, Tappahannock.

(For Catalogs, address Principals.)

LEGAL TITLE for wills: Church Schools in the Diocese of Virginia (Inc.).

(About gifts or bequests, address Central Office, 110 West Franklin Street, Richmond, Va.)

HOBART COLLEGE Geneva N. Y.

A Church College for men, founded 1828. Four year liberal arts course, leading to the degrees A. B. and B. S. High standards; faculty of thirty. For catalogue and information, address
REV. MURRAY BARTLETT, D. D., Pres.

St. Margaret's School

Tappahannock, Virginia.

A Church School for girls with modern equipment and moderate cost. Intermediate and College Preparatory. Accredited.

Country life and simplicity without isolation. Beautiful grounds on Rappahannock River. Three dormitories for different ages. Supervised Athletics.

EDITH LATANE, Headmistree.

St. Anne's,

Charlottesville, Va.
Box G.

Beautiful location in far famed Blue Ridge Mountains College preparatory and elective courses. Fully accredited. Open gymnasium allows sports in the fresh air in all weather. Sleeping porches. Riding taught by expert. Music. Art. Bishop of Virginia President of Trustees. Margaret L. Porter, M. A., Principal.

St. Paul's Boys' School

Rogers Avenue, Mt. Washington, Md.
Boarding and Day Pupils—Fifth grade to college.

WALTER B. LAWRENCE, M. A., Headmaster.

Faculty all College Graduates.

REV. ARTHUR B. KINSOLVING, D. D., President Board of Trustees.

Enrollment limited to Fifty Boarding Pupils. Tuition $450. Choir Scholarships. Next sesison begins September 11, 1929.

HAMPDEN-SYDNEY COLLEGE

Invites your careful consideration of its Faculty, Courses of Study, Wholesome Christian Atmosphere, and Physical Equipment.

For catalogue write,

REGISTRAR
Hampden-Sydney, Virginia

The Emergency Hospital

School for Nurses,
Washington, D. C.,

offers a three years' course to High School Graduates. Credit given for college work. Classes admitted January and September. Accredited School. Hospital 200 beds. $10.00 monthly allowance. Affiliations provided. School announcement on request Superintendent of Nurses, 1711 New York Avenue.

CHURCH EQUIPMENT SERVICE

R. GEISSLER, INC.
56 W. 8th STREET, NEW YORK, N.Y.
Church Furnishings
IN CARVED WOOD AND MARBLE · BRASS · SILVER FABRICS + WINDOWS
EST. 1877

DEAGAN
Tubular Bell
Tower Chimes
Standard Sets $4875 up.
A living memorial—a lasting tribute.
Write for information.
J. C. DEAGAN, Inc.
112 Deagan Building, Chicago
Played Direct From Organ Console

EMBROIDERED ALTAR LINENS, SILK ALTAR HANGINGS.

Burses, Veils, Stoles, Markers, Chasubles, Damasks, Fringes, Altar Laces, Embroidery Supplies. Materials stamped for embroidering. MISS M. C. ANDOLIN (formerly with Cox Sons & Vining), 45 West 39th Street, New York. Hours 9 to 1.

Church Furniture
Pews, Pulpits, Chancel Furniture
Sunday School Seating
American Seating Company
1029 Lytton Bldg., Chicago

HINNERS
PIPE ORGANS
Highest quality. Superb tone. Modern accessories. Durable construction. All sizes.
Write for catalog of Pipe Organs, Reed Organs, or Electric Blowing Outfits.
HINNERS ORGAN CO.
PEKIN, ILLINOIS

VIRGINIA COLONIAL CHURCHES

An interesting and illuminating series of sketches by qualified writers of the early Churches in Virginia.

$5.00 A COPY POSTPAID.

To students of history, biography and research, this book affords a fund of information as to the amazing effect which Churchmen had on the founding of the colonies and the tremendous part they played in the upbuilding of the nation.

Cloth bound, 318 pages, 35 full page illustrations. Order now from

SOUTHERN CHURCHMAN CO.,
Richmond, Va.

CHURCH FURNISHINGS
Gold, Silver and Brass
Church and Chancel Furniture
Write for Catalogue for Episcopal Churches.
W. & E. SCHMIDT CO.
308 Third St., Milwaukeee, Wis.

For The Southern Churchman.

II. CHURCH AT NIGHT.

At night
The church spire
Is the hand of a
Prophet pointing toward
The stars.

WHILE IN RICHMOND LET US KNOW IF YOU LIKE OUR FOOD
Mrs. Cook's Cafeteria
Near St. Paul's Parish House
Richmond, Va.

INCORPORATED 1882
Virginia Fire and Marine Insurance Company
Of Richmond, Va.
Assets - - - $3,640,152.88
Fred'k E. Nolting, President.
B. C. Lewis, Jr., Secretary — J. C. Watson, Treasurer
J. M. Leake, General Agent — Wm. P. Hill, Asst. Secretary

J. & R. Lamb
23-25-27 SIXTH AVENUE NEW YORK
MEMORIALS IN STAINED GLASS
MOSAIC · MARBLE · STONE · GRANITE
CARVED WOOD · METAL · ETC.

Woody's Art Glass Shop
Art Stained and Leaded Glass.
Church Windows a Specialty.
513 East Main Street, Richmond, Va.

BEVERLEY HEATING
The Best for Homes, Churches, Stores and Buildings for all uses.
R. C. BEVERLEY HEATING CO., INC.
308 E. Main St., Richmond, Va.
QUALITY—SERVICE.

LINEN for the CHURCH
PURE IRISH LINEN FOR ALL CHURCH USES, yard or piece lengths, at lowest import prices. New Special Number for Cottas, eighty-two and one-half cents. Samples on request.
MARY FAWCETT CO.,
350 Broadway, New York.

CHURCH VESTMENTS
Cassocks, Surplices, Stole.
EMBROIDERIES
Silks, Cloths, Fringes.
CLERICAL SUITS
Rabats, Collars, Shirts.
COX SONS & VINING,
131-133 E. 23d St., New York.

Church and Sunday School Furniture
THE SOUTHERN DESK COMPANY,
Hickory, N. C.
Send for Special Catalogue.

$50 TO $100 IN SPARE TIME
Write for Schwer's CHRISTMAS CARD & NOVELTIES PLAN. Popular and different from others. $50. to $100. easily made. No investment. Great for Home Effort. Write at once to CHARLEY C. SCHWER, DEPT. 186 WESTFIELD, MASS.

When in need of
MONUMENTS and TOMBSTONES
and want honest treatment see
BURNS & CAMPBELL,
Granite and Marble Works
PETERSBURG, VA.
Designs furnished on application and all orders receive prompt attention.

CHURCH FURNITURE
Pews, Pulpit and Sunday School Furniture. Catalog on request.
T. W. ALEXANDER & SON,
Box 147. Waynesboro, Va.

Washington Cathedral

A Witness for Christ in the Capital of the Nation

♦ ♦ ♦

THE CHAPTER appeals to Churchmen throughout the country for gifts, large and small, to continue the work of building now proceeding, and to maintain its work, Missionary, Education, Charitable, for the benefit of the whole Church.

Chartered under Act of Congress.

Administered by a representative Board of Trustees of leading business men, Clergymen and Bishops.

Full information will be given by the Bishop of Washington, or the Dean, Cathedral Offices, Mount St. Alban, Washington, D. C., who will receive and acknowledge all contributions.

♦ ♦ ♦

Legal Title for Use in Making Wills:
The Protestant Episcopal Cathedral Foundation of the District of Columbia

VIRGINIA TRUST CO.

Richmond, Va.

THE SAFE EXECUTOR,

Was organized in 1892 to act as Executor-Guardian and Trustee.

Many prudent men and women in every section of the State have named this Company Executor and trustee in their wills.

Inquiries cordially invited—no cost and confidential.

Capital Stock .....$ 1,000,000.00
Surplus earned .....$ 1,500,000.00
Held in trust.....$45,000,000.00

SELL
CHRISTMAS CARDS

at forty to fifty per cent, commission. The best line of Box Assortment and Personal Christmas Cards on the market.

Write for Details.
ARTISTIC CARD COMPANY
Dept. 15. Elmira, N. Y.

XANTHINE

Will hereafter be sold in the new style bottle and package. Always best for the hair. Not a dye, but restores the color, promotes growth and prevents dandruff.

Price $1.00 at druggists, or sent prepaid by us.

XANTHINE CO., Richmond, Va.

CARPETS for CHURCHES

We carry a large stock of Church Carpets, embracing a wide assortment of designs, colorings and qualities and at prices to meet every requirement. Write and our representative will call with a selection of patterns and give an estimate, or we will send samples, at our expense, for your consideration.

Sydnor & Hundley

700 E. Grace Street,
Richmond, Va.

Thoughts For the Thoughtful

"He giveth more grace when the burdens grow greater,
He sendeth more strength when the labors increase,
To added affliction He addeth His mercy,
To multiplied trials, His multiplied peace."

Preparedness will prevent war, they say. You've noticed how peaceable gangs are since they got machine-guns. —Buffalo News.

He that avoideth not small faults, little by little falleth into greater.—Thomas a Kempis.

Do your work—not just your work and no more, but a little more for the lavishing's sake; that little more which is worth all the rest. And if you suffer as you must, and if you doubt as you must, do your work. Put your heart into it and the sky will clear. Then out of your every doubt and suffering will be born the supreme joy of life.—Dean Briggs.

In having to do with things that are spiritual the pulpit is unique, and herein lies its charm and glory. If it turns aside to secular things, it loses its distinguishing characteristic and places itself upon a parity with other public platforms.

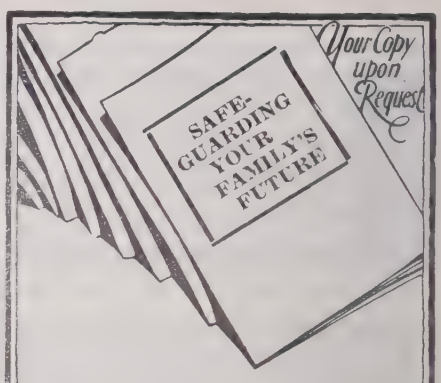
Chrstian old age is heaven's borderland.

When we are alone, we have our thoughts to watch; in our family our tempers; and in society our tongues.

There is a time in every man's education when he arrives at the conviction that envy is ignorance, that imitation is suicide; that he must take himself for better or for worse as his portion; that though the wide universe is full of good, no kernel of nourishing corn can come to him but through his toil bestowed on that plot of ground which is given him to till.—Emerson.

Is it reasonable to suppose that He who has provided for every legitimate desire of the body should neglect the soul and forget to provide for the satisfaction of its supreme desire—immortality?—Rev. G. W. Price, D. D.

Don't say you are doing everything that can be done. Not one of us is doing that.



Faith ought to grow stronger as the Christian life progresses, because the more experience we have in dealing with God the more manifest it is that He can be trustfully relied upon. With unlimited knowledge, all power and infinite goodness and mercy, never will He fail us.

In all Christian work God is the mightiest factor.

BE OUR AGENT

In your Church or Society for our Christmas Greeting Cards. Most beautiful box out. Big profits; everybody buys. Be first in field. Write today.

COLONIAL GREETING CARD CO.,
37 West Market Street, York, Pa.

The American has just printed a booklet which gives authoritative information on the important subject of wills and modern methods of "Safeguarding Your Family's Future" (this is its title).

It will gladly mail you a copy, with no obligation on your part, upon request, as long as the supply lasts.

Kindly mention this paper.

AMERICAN
BANK AND TRUST COMPANY
Richmond, Virginia

TIDEWATER TALES

A book into which is gathered the folklore, traditions and history of Tidewater Virginia. Written in a delightful informal style by Prof. William C. Garnett.

The President of a College in South Carolina writes: "I have never read a work of this kind the style of which I have found more attractive, simple and yet elegant, interesting but never monotonous."

A prominent representative of a Publishing Co. writes: "This book will be read by our children and children's children. I could read 'A Fox Hunt 'Fo de War' every week."

A prominent attorney in Washington writes: " . . the charming description of the old homes, the history and traditions, and the true-to-life stories in local color, combined to delight me."

A professor in one of the Virginia Universities writes: "You have put posterity in your debt by presenting so skilfully to them characters that have passed to the beyond."

Price, $4.00 per copy. Order from WM. GARNETT, Dunnsville, Va.

SOUTHERN CHURCHMAN

Catholic for every truth of God; Protestant against every error of man.

EDITORIALS

Vol. 94. RICHMOND, VA., AUGUST 17, 1929. No. 33.

MAN'S FIRST DISOBEDIENCE

The above is the title of a little book recently published by Dr. Keyser, of Hamina Theological Seminary. It is a simple exposition of Genesis 3, showing the reasonableness of the belief in the historic verity of the story of Man's fall, and at the same time the unsatisfactory character of contrary theories. Of course, the reality of the Genesis story has been the accepted belief of the Church in all ages and is today the conviction of the great mass of Christians of every name. Of course, too, it is evident that this narration was assumed to be actual history by our Lord and His Apostles and upon it were built many of the basal teachings of Christian theology. But in spite of this, it is now the custom of most writers on the Old Testament, claiming to be scholars, to deny the historicity of the Genesis stories. The new commentary edited by Bishop Gore relegates these accounts to the status of myths or legends, having no more historic value than the story of Pandora's Box, or the tales of King Arthur and the Round Table. It seems to be thought that the inspiration of the Bible and its claims to be the record of the revelation from God are very much better maintained by the notion that stories told as actual fact by the writers and clearly believed by them to be such, were nothing more than childish legends based upon the heathen myths of Babylon.

It is good to have a plain, sensible book, short and easy to read like this by Dr. Keyser, exposing the destructive character of the modern theories and proclaiming the literal truth of what in our Holy Bible is certainly told as a record of actual fact.

Some one has said, "If the literal sense is good sense, why look for any other sense?"

Dr. Keyser shows with a reasonableness that should appeal to every one, that the historic sense of these passages in Genesis is good sense, and, indeed, the best sense. It is a meaning that does not need the aid of theories that are confessedly guess-work. It is a meaning that is in accord with all the Science that we know; for surely no science is able to give us any certain account of the origin of rational life in the world. It is a meaning that fits best with all we know of history; for ancient records that are being unearthed show that the very earliest ages had purer ideas of God than the later ones. It is a meaning, too, that is in full agreement with the entire redemptive plan of which the Bible is the record and Jesus Christ the consummation.

It is well to heed Dr. Keyser's warning that any real divine inspiration is practically repudiation on the theory of the unhistoric nature of this Genesis story. It would seem to be unbelievable that the God of Truth should inspire Moses or some unknown writer to reveal the original state of man through corrupt and idolatrous Babylonian myths. That a writer inspired of God, instead of telling a plain tale, should take a set of heathen stories and after eliminating their polytheistic corruptions, put forth the legendary result as the history of man's first days on earth, seems quite unreasonable. That Moses, the man of God, should have been possessed of the pure traditions of the human race and should by divine guidance and inspiration record them in their original purity, would seem to commend itself to both reason and sight. Clearly, in the Bible we have this original inspired tradition, of which the crude Babylonian stories with their senseless polytheism, are corrupted forms.

Certainly a lot of human legends, however capable of being used to teach moral truths, is the strangest sort of medium through which God could convey the tremendous truths contained in Genesis 3. Especially as these supposed legends are so presented as to claim the authority of inspired history.

The reader of Dr. Keyser's book will find sound reasons for holding that the conditions of our first parents, their opportunities and surroundings, the moral test to which they were put, were the wisest and the best. He will see that while man could be created pure and innocent, he could not be made virtuous and holy by divine fiat. He need not have fallen; but he had to be tested, disciplined, and trained in filial obedience. The test was, as it should be, simple, direct, profoundly fitted to put to proof and bring out man's loyalty to his Maker. The tree was not the "tree of good and evil"—but it was the tree of "the knowledge of good and evil". Our first parents chose to know the difference between ease and evil, by the short road of doing evil. It was God's plan that they should come to this knowledge through the gradual process of persistent obedience to God in the practice of goodness. In Eden man was given all the essential elements for his growth and training, physically, mentally, socially and spiritually. He had an adequate knowledge of God, and his conditions were suitable for the development of body, mind and spirit. And as far as we can see, and as far as anything in Nature and history can teach us, these conditions were not only the best possible, but the only possible in the case. We may well apply to this early account of our first parents St. Paul's words:

"O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and the knowledge of God! How unsearchable are His judgments and His ways past finding out! For who hath known the mind of the Lord? or who hath been His counselor? or who hath first given to Him, and it shall be recompensed unto Him again? For of Him, and through Him, and unto Him are all things."

Dr. Keyser's book is published by McMillan & Co., and may be obtained through any book seller.

James W. Morris.

THE HOLY WAR AGAINST ATHEISM

By William H. Matthews

Rev. 12:7.—"And there was war in Heaven; Michael and his angels fought against the dragon."

THIS text, together with the context, was much in Bunyan's mind, as he wrote "The Holy War." The underlying message of "The Holy War" is that which we present to the supporters of the Society, when we take for the title of this years' report, "The Holy War Against Atheism."

This book has been translated into many languages and seems, in a special way, to meet the spiritual needs of the foreigner. Colporters of the American Tract Society find that it has a ready sale, especially among the Russians. Its message is a call to action to defend the individual souls of God's people and also the soul of our cities which are fast becoming the crucial centers in which the struggle between faith and infidelity is being carried on. Here in New York City are the offices of the American Association for the Advancement of Atheism, and the Anti-Bible Society, together with their publishing house, which is turning out scores of reprints of old atheistic books and godless periodicals, and hundreds of thousands of atheistic leaflets, circulars and tracts, ridiculing modernists and fundamentalists alike, together with nearly all the characters of the Bible, including Christ Himself. Cartoons of the Patriarchs are broadcasted by these Atheistic Associations. Working hand in hand with these people are those who handle the vast amount of Russian propaganda, which is sent to our shores, in which God and Christ are ridiculed and cartooned in blasphemous fashion.

At a dinner of the Greater New York Federation of Churches, all denominations were asked to enlist in the warefare against Paganism.

Weapons of our Warfare.

To ignore the assaults of the forces of Diabolus as they seek to enter our cities through "Eye Gate" and "Ear Gate" is to encourage individuals and cities to submit to the reign of Satan. In Emmanuel's campaign to recover Mansoul, "He took with him fifty-four battering rams and twelve slings to whirl stones." These weapons refer to the sixty-six books of the Bible.

The books of the Bible are the chief weapons used by the American Tract Society in its Holy War against Atheism. Bibles with Notes in English and Spanish are a part of the constant output of the Society. New ammunition for the fight against infidelity is being manufactured by the hundreds of thousands in the shape of Scripture tracts, prepared in twenty-one languages through the generosity of Mrs. Finley J. Shepard. Letters from all parts of the world have come to tell us of the effectiveness of these missiles.

Historic Victories.

Throughout its entire history of one hundred and four years, the Society has confined itself to spiritual weapons in carrying on its warfare against infidelity. Nelson's "Cause and Cure for Infidelity," first published by the Society in 1841, is still counted as one of the most effective weapons in dealing with Atheism. A recent request came from the Sunday School Times for the republication of this book, together with Lord Lyttleton's "Conversion of St. Paul", and Gilbert West on the "Resurrection", first published by the Society in 1836, when this nation was fighting against infidelity in the colleges of our country, in the same manner that we are struggling today.

From 1825 to 1928, the Society published Christian literature in 179 different languages and dialects. During this period, it distributed leaflets, tracts, pamphlets and periodicals through its various agencies to the number of over $25,000,000. During the same period, it gave away over two and three-quarter million dollars' worth of literature, and distributed gratuitously, but with discrimination, over five and one-half million pages of tracts. Its colporters have visited 2,500,000 families and have placed 18,000,000 volumes. While doing this, the colporters conducted 650,000 religious meetings, pointing non-church-going people to Christ as the one Saviour of the world.

Training at West Point.

In campaigning for Christ, the Society has recognized the strategic importance of West Point. No cadet has graduated from this institution during the last fifty-five years without being presented with a handsome and substantial Bible. Bibles have also been given during the past two years to the Freshman and Sophomore Classes for their study in English. The making of the Bible a text-book in English has largely come about through the American Tract Society and Chaplain Wheat, who is now a professor in the English Department. Miss Annie Miller, of this city, has for the past five years furnished the funds for the Bibles at West Point. She has rendered this important service in memory of her father and mother.

The Battlefields.

After aiding in establishing local churches in needy districts, the Society withdrew its colporters and passed on to more remote fields. Now after hundreds of churches have been closed, it is back in many of its former fields, doing the same gospel work that it did a century ago.

The Society has made large grants of literature and cash to missionary stations throughout the world. Eight hundred and five thousand, eight hundred and sixteen dollars and forty-nine cents in cash has been appropriated for the production and circulation of Christian literature in foreign lands. It has appeals for funds from many foreign countries asking for fifty times the amount of money it is able to furnish. Books like "Pilgrim's Progress" need to be reprinted in foreign countries, but there is no money to do it. Once translated into 125 tongues, it is doubtful if "Pilgrim's Progress" could now be secured in more than twenty-five or thirty languages. While Christian books cannot be printed for lack of funds, the old arguments of Atheism are being reprinted and circulated in more countries than ever before.

Christian literature was sent by the Society last year to the following countries: British West Indies, Mexico, all South America, Greece, England, Canada, France, Checko-Slovaka, Africa, Roumania, Poland, India, Mesopotamia, Ireland, Phillipines, China, Latvia, Bulgaria, Holland and Soviet Russia. Other countries aided in printing literature at their base of supplies were as follows: Siam $300.00; India $200.00; Persia $200.00; and Japan $100.00. The Society also granted permission to print "Road's Bible Dictionary", published by it in English, Spanish and Persian.

New England, the North West, the South and the Mormon country are special battlefields for the Society. It likewise furnishes ammunitition in the shape of Christian literature for all others who are fighting the battle against infidelity.

Colporters who serve in the army of the Society have special instructions to make straight for "No Man's Land", even though Diabolus has this part of the battlefield covered by his cleverest sharpshooters and filled with barbed entanglements which threaten the bravest soldier of the Cross.

It is our plan to serve where "No Man" is serving, and not duplicate work well done by the various denominations. It is said that 60 per cent of our population seldom enter the inside of a church. It is especially to defend these exposed people from the fiery darts of Diabolus that the Society is carrying on its Holy War against Atheism.

Protecting Our Ports of Entry.

It is generally acknowledged that Ellis Island is one of the most important centers of activity for welfare and religious organizations in carrying on their warfare against ignorance, disease and infidelity.

Recognizing this fact, the American Tract Society has carried on its work at the ports of entry for over half a century. First these strangers were welcomed by its representatives at Castle Garden, then at Ellis Island, and now under the new arrangement for receiving immigrants at other places of entry besides Ellis Island. The Commissioner at Ellis Island showed his confidence in the Society by placing it in charge of the Ellis Island Library. Here, books, periodicals and tracts are supplied to the immigrant during the tedious period of waiting through which many are called upon to pass. Rev. John Kweetin, a well-known Latvian minister, who speaks several languages, meets the immigrant at whatever place in the city his ship docks, and seeks, through the distribution of religious literature. Americanization pamphlets and sympathetic words, to give him a Christian welcome to this glorious country of ours. Mrs. Alice A. Frey, an educated, cultured and musically trained woman, is also employed by the Society to minister to the spiritual needs of the immigrant.

One of the most helpful tracts of the last year has been the one printed for the immigrant. It is called "Welcome to the United States". All denominations commend it, as it emphasizes the welcome extended by the churches of the United States and tells what the churches have to offer to the strangers from foreign lands. This leaflet was published in co-operation with the Home Mission Council and Council of Women for Home Missions.

The Holy War in Latin-America.

Latin-America is a part of the Society's battleground. Missionaries in Latin-America tell us that nearly all of the anti-Christian books published in Europe and the United States are immediately reprinted in the countries of Latin-America. This fact makes our work even more important than years ago, when we began to publish books, pamphlets, tracts and hymnals in Spanish.

The Latin-American is breaking away from his old religious ties and looking for truth outside the Roman Church. Unless he is furnished with Christian literature, he will fall an easy prey to the atheistic propagandist. The demand for our Scripture Tracts is greater in Latin-America than in any other part of the world. Editions of 150,000 in Spanish are quickly exhausted. These leaflets contain the best-known Scripture passages, and, through the generosity of Mrs. Finley J. Shepard, are furnished in unlimited quantities to those who distribute them with discrimination. The American Tract Society has the only Spanish New Testament with Notes published for the Latin-Americans.

Each of our books as "Sloan's Concordance," "Rand's Bible Dictionary," "History of the Bible," "Stalker's Life of Paul" and "Life of Christ," Nelson's "Cause and Cure of Infidelity," Narille's "Problem of Evil," Fisher's "History of the Reformation," "Bible Commentaries," the "Spanish New Testament with Notes," and many others are used by all denominations in preparing the native ministry to serve in the army of the Lord.

Artillery Against Atheism.

No modern war ever succeeded without publications to arouse the people to action and keep up their morale while in action. Printing presses are the artillery in the war against Atheism. General U. S. Grant would never have had the courage to "carry on" without the constant use of the Bible and the publications of the American Tract Society. Colonel Theodore Roosevelt was so interested in the character of the Society's publications that he wrote the forword for a devotional book published by one of its Secretaries, and prepared one of the best tracts ever written.

If the "Big Berthas" of the German army menaced Paris, how much more the printing presses of Russia menace not only Paris, but London, New York City and the whole civilized world. Last year the Society made large use of the huge printing presses of New York City in sending forth messages that have already encircled the globe. For every book, tract, pamphlet or leaflet hurled from the presses in Moscow, for the purpose of undermining faith in God and the foundation of our Government, the American Tract Society is seeking to send forth Christian and Americanization literature. Recognizing the Society's usefulness, President Herbert Hoover has accepted the position of Honorary Vice-President of the Society.

Songs of Emmanuel's Soldiers.

A beautiful Christian hymn is the strongest kind of a weapon against Atheism. We are now publishing and distributing hymnals in Spanish, Italian, Bohemian, Russian, Swedish, Hungarian, Polish, Chinese, Dakota Indian, Ruthenian and Slovak languages. The new Spanish Hymnal, in both word and music editions, is on the press. This new hymnal has five hundred hymns with responsive readings. Its publication was requested by all of the leading denominations working in Latin-American countries. It will be one of the best and most complete hymnals ever published in any language. The sale of the entire first edition will only reimburse the Society for a part of the money put into its publication, but its influence on the lives of the thousands of Spanish people who will make use of it will be beyond calculation.

The Slovak hymnal, just off the press, is recognized as being equal to any of the best English hymnals. If all of the nationalities who are using our foreign hymnals could be gathered together in one place to join in the song, "Like a Mighty Army Moves the Church of God," the scene would be laid for another Penetcost, where people of all nations would thoroughly understand each other. With nations singing the same Christian songs, victory for the cause of Christ is inevitable. Our only English Hymnal, "Good News in Story and Song," has passed into many editions and has been distributed by hundreds of thousands.

Annuity Agreements for Liberty Bonds.

During the World War our Government issued billions of dollars' worth of Liberty Bonds. Many people still have them laid away to provide an income for their old age. A much larger income can be secured by surrendering these bonds to the Society in exchange for annuity bonds, which not only provide an income for life, but aid in carrying on a great work after the death of the annuitant. Up to 9 per cent is offered to annuity bondholders.

The proceeds of these bonds begin to aid the Society at once, because of the larger plans which can be safely made for the future. The annuitant is fully protected by the investment of the amount of the bond in guaranteed mortgages. During the past year more people have availed themselves of this double privilege of making a gift and securing an increased income than in any year in the history of the Society. Liberty or other saleable bonds are taken over at their market value. Annuity agreements are dated the day that checks or cash are received.

Carrying on Through Legacies.

The Holy War against Atheism can be continued by the friends of the Society long after they have come to the point where they can say with Paul, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith; Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day."

It is a sad fact that those who are most interested in waging a Holy War with Atheism are fifty years of age or upward. These veterans know as the younger generation does not know what would be the result if atheistic forces were permitted to go on unchecked in their attempt to destroy the faith of our youth. It is fortunate for the Society that many of God's saints have fully realized that, having fought the good fight themselves, they must provide for the equipment of others who will continue the war against Atheism after they have passed on. The interest on the Society's investments makes possible its large program. Legacies the past year have nearly equalled the total received from donors for the general activities of the Society.

THE NEED OF THE WORLD.

The world is needing you and me
In places where we ought to be;
Somewhere today it's needing you
To stand for what you know is true,
And needing me somewhere today
To keep the faith, let come what may.

The world is needing me and you
To share the tasks it has to do;
It needs high-minded men to stand
Against the thoughtless of the land;
Men who will scorn to stoop to wrong
To win the favor of the throng.

The world needs humble men to toil,
Men who will till a patch of soil,
Men who behind their work can see
More than its gold and silver fee
And choose to serve where best they can
Their country and their fellowman.

The world needs honest men today
To lead its youth along the way,
Men who will write in all their deeds
The beauty of their spoken creeds
And spurn advantage here or gain
On which deceit must leave its stain.

The world needs men who will not brag,
Men who will honor freedom's Flag;
Men, who, although the way is hard,
Against the lure of shame will guard.
The world needs gentle men and true
And calls aloud to me and you.

The world needs men of lofty aim,
Not merely men of skill and fame,
Not merely leaders wise and grave,
Or learned men or soldiers brave,
But men whose lives are fair to see,
Such men as you and I can be.

—Edgar A. Guest.

THE INSPIRED BIBLE AND HUMAN OPINION

By W. Bell Dawson, M. D., D. Sc,

PART II.

THE DIVINE GUIDANCE AND CHOICE.

WHEN we examine the Scriptures from an unbiassed standpoint, one of their most remarkable features is their consistency throughout. There is increasing light and greater clearness as we go on; but the foundational ideas which first appear in the days of Adam and Abel (as already discussed), although further developed and built upon, continue throughout the Bible to the closing book of Revelation. This is the more striking when we consider that the various writers lived in different surroundings and in different ages during at least sixteen centuries.

We may see this unity of the Bible more clearly in contrast with the writings of philosophers elsewhere, or with the manner in which knowledge progresses in our own day. For example, Aristotle, one of the greatest philosophers of Greece, claims that his views are entirely original. He said: "I found no basis prepared; no models to copy. Mine is the first step, and therefore a small one, though worked out with much thought and labour." It is also quite within the recollection of any one who follows the progress of science, that new discoveries necessitate a radical revision of our previous ideas. But we never find this amongst the writers of the Bible at successive periods. No later writer contradicts an earlier one, or puts forward some new philosophy of life to supercede what his predecessors had written. Even Christ Himself declared at the opening of His ministry: "Think not that I am come to destroy the law or the prophets: I am not come to destroy but to fulfil."

The explanation of this is, that the writers of the books of the Bible were men chosen of God; and what they wrote was communicated to them by Him, which necessarily made it consistent. It is plain that the choice originated with God when some of them were chosen before they were born, as was Samson; and it was foretold of John the Baptist before his birth, what his preaching would accomplish (Luke 1:15-17). This choice on the part of God, was also related to the situation in which His providence placed them. The propets were thus specially fitted for the communications which God desired to make to them; or they even became object lessons themselves, to illustrate their message.

It is also clear that they were not eager propagandists with new views of their own to set forth. For, several of the prophets were quite unwilling to deliver the message which the Lord gave them to communicate. That they knew their message to be from God, is further brought out, on the negative side, by which is not included in the sacred Scriptures. The writers evidently realized that they were to write only what the Lord intended them to write; and not to describe even historical events from the ordinary worldly standpoint.

The Historical Books. There is real significance, therefore, in what is not recorded in the historical books; and to understand the purpose of inspiration, it is important to notice these omissions. There were several prophets who wrote chronicles or histories of David and other kings, which are not included in the Scriptures. Nathan, Gad, Iddo, and Shemaiah are mentioned amongst these; and even Isaiah wrote annals of kings which are not preserved (see 1 Chron. 29:11; Chron. 9:29; 7:15; and 26:22). It is said repeatedly in the books of Kings and Chronicles, regarding the various Hebrew kings: "The rest of his acts and all that he did, behold, they are written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah and Israel,"—or elsewhere as indicated. This statement is made in almost identical words, regarding thirty-one kings, besides David and Solomon. It is also incidentally mentioned that what is omitted has reference to exploits in war and important works of construction; which are the very things that the kings of other nations erected, special inscriptions to commemorate. (See, for instance, 1 Kings 22:45 and 2; Kings 20:20.)

It is thus very evident that the books of the Bible do not concern themselves with many things which the ordinary historian would regard as outstanding events and achievements. We may conclude that what we find in the Bible, is not mere history with a moral lesson; it is recorded under the direction of God for a definite purpose, and it is thus properly speaking inspired. Its transparent truthfulness is also evident when it so often depicts the disastrous consequences of disobedience and wrong-doing; and sets in such strong light the sins of the best men, like Moses and David. There is nothing to encourage national boastfulness or kingly pride; and this stands in marked contrast with the records on the monuments of other nations in those times.

The Scripture history is thus a selected account, dealing chiefly with the relations of God to the people which He had chosen specially for training. We may therefore expect to find salutary spiritual lessons throughout the account. It may also be that many of the personages are, in themselves or in what befell them, typical of the coming Redeemer and Deliverer; as for example, Joseph, Moses and David; as well as others to a more limited degree, in some aspects of their lives.

Unwilling Prophets. This unwillingness is strong proof that the prophets were chosen by God. A detailed explanation of this is given regarding the attitude of Moses himself, when God appeared to him at first in the burning bush, and commissioned him to convey a message to the Israelites in Egypt. He made one excuse after another, and at last requested that God would choose some one else; saying, "O my Lord, send, I pray thee, by the hand of him whom thou wilt send." He was thus a prophet distinctly chosen for great deeds and even greater writings. (See the whole discussion, Ex. 3:7 to 4:17.)

Some of the prophets realized that the message which they were given to deliver would be very unwelcome to those to whom they were to give it; and others felt their own insufficiency and unfitness to receive and communicate revelations from God. Jonah affords a well-known example of this, in his endeavor to escape from conveying the message of God to Nineveh. Jeremiah also foresaw the consequences, if he communicated the Word of the Lord to the people; because he was sent to reprove them for falling away from the true worship of God, and to declare that the time of their chastisement had come. It was God's purpose that they should go into captivity, and Jeremiah was to tell them to surrender to the Chaldeans. The people, as he anticipated, took his words to be his own and not from God; and imprisoned him for disloyalty to king and country.

From the first, Jeremiah exhibits a diffidence which seems almost timidity; for he says: "Ah, Lord God! behold I cannot speak; for I am a child." Yet the Lord tells him that before he was born, he was ordained a prophet; and says to him: "Whatsoever I command thee thou shalt speak"; and God further assures him: "I have made thee this day a defenced city, and an iron pillar, and brazen walls against the kings of Judah . . . and against the people" (see Jer. 1:4-7 and 17-19). As another example, when Amos found that they complained of his prophesying, he exclaims: "I was no prophet, neither was I a prophet's son; but I was an herdman, and a gatherer of sycamore fruit: and the Lord took me as I followed the flock, and the Lord said unto me, Go, prophesy unto my people Israel."

The faithfulness of Daniel was conspicuous when called upon to interpret to Nebuchadnezzar a dream in which God had revealed what was to befall him. Daniel warns him with tactful consideration that the meaning is against him: "The dream be to them that hate thee, and the interpretation to thine adversaries." Yet he tells this mighty king unflinchingly what its purport is.

These examples show that throughout the Bible the initiative and the choice is with God, in selecting those to whom He is pleased to make his revelations. They show also how the prophets regarded themselves, and what their attitude was towards the Revealer, and towards their message. They felt the sacredness of their task and their responsibility to say or to record what the Lord told them to write, and to add nothing of their own. They never suppose that because God called them to be prophets, they have a right to set forth their own views. Some of them wrote only once in their lives, and then with brevity; and in the longer books, there are often intervals of years between the revelations given; as, for instance, in Ezekiel.

The Choice of the Time If we could enter upon an examination of the dates at which revelations were made to the various prophets, we would be equally impressed with the sovereignty of God in choosing the time. These dates are often of the highest significance; because the year in which the Word of the Lord came unto the prophet, is not recorded without purpose. For instance, when the captivity in Babylon was about to begin, it pleased God to reveal to Jeremiah in the fourth year of Jehoiakim that it was to last seventy years. Counting from this date, the seventy years end with the decree of restoration by Cyrus in the first year of his reign. This is also correlated with the outstanding dates in the book of Daniel, and his prayer to God pleading for the fulfilment of His promise (Dan. 9: 1-3; Ezra 1:1, 2). The whole chronology of the life of Christ on earth, is based primarily upon the date at which "the Word of God came unto John the son of Zacharias in the Wilderness." The date which God thus selected, is carefully defined in Luke 3:1, 2; and the Ministry of Christ opened in the autumn of the same year, when He announced: "The time is fulfilled." This again refers to the prediction of the period of the "seventy weeks" in Daniel, which were to run to Messiah the Prince, attesting His claims. The dates that the Lord God thus selects, on which to make communications to His prophets, may therefore be of the first importance in connection with His plans. There may equally be significance in the fact that a book of the Bible is not dated; in view of the message it conveys. Inspiration therefore implies that nothing in the Bible is either recorded or omitted without a definite and Divine purpose.

The Critical Standpoint. It may be well to recall that there are two main branches of Biblical criticism: (1) Textual Criticism, together with the correct meaning of words; to ascertain the true text of the Bible as originally written, in case of any differences in the manuscripts. (2) Higher Criticism, which scrutinizes the authorship of the books of Scripture and the historical accuracy of their statements. It is manifest that in this second type of criticism, a sceptical attitude must necessarily be taken, for every author's name must be challenged and every historical statement in the Bible must be distrusted and looked into. The critics also take as their primary principles, that the miraculous is impossible, and that there can be no such thing as prediction of the future. As explained in a recent book, they regard prophecy as religious poetry not to be taken seriously, and visions are religious tales.

The discussions which centre upon Higher Criticism and the diversity of opinion amongst the Critics themselves, are chiefly concerned with the question of evidence for the conclusions they reach. We must here confine ourselves to the bearing of the "findings" of the Critics, upon the character of the writers of the Bible; as this is what we are at present considering. It is very strange that the Critics and Modernists fail so entirely to perceive the logical outcome of their views, in regard to the character of the men who wrote the Scriptures.

The early history in the Bible is discredited, because the Critics suppose it to be put together long afterwards; and the various "editors" who thus undertook to compile the records of their predecessors, put into them remarks of their own, so cunningly inserted that it is almost impossible to distinguish what is really original. The Critics also hold that all through the historical books, the writers mixed into the story a quantity of fiction and myth, if it be that miracles and direct instructions from God are impossible. Yet these are so skillfully interwoven that the story becomes meaningless without them; and the writers also declare in the most solemn language that they are the truth. If we accept such views, we are forced to conclude that the writers of the Bible were themselves without character, with no pretence to the honesty of the ordinary historian.

In regard to prediction, the case is worse again. It is definitely stated in Jeremiah that the duration of the Captivity in Babylon was revealed by the Lord God at its beginning, in the fourth year of Jehoiakim. If this was not written till after the event, the date was falsified. Earlier still, in Isaiah, Cyrus the Persian king is mentioned by name as the one who should issue the decree for the rebuilding of Jerusalem and the Temple. In this prediction concerninfg Cyrus, the Holy One of Israel claims that as the Creator He can also ordain the future: "I have made the earth and created man upon it; I, even my hands, have stretched out the heavens, and all their host have I commanded. I have raised him (Cyrus) up in righteousness . . . he shall build My city, and he shall let My exiles go free." And further in the same passage: "I am God, and there is none like Me; declaring the end from the beginning, and from ancient times things that are not yet done." According to the Critics, this passage was written by a "Second Isaiah" of late; and what can be said of the character of such a man, who cannot concoct such a falsification after the event, setting it forth with such solemnity in the Holy Name of the Creator? He then puts his fabrication under a well-known name, to pass it off as a prediction revealed to an earlier prophet before his own time. Truly, we have here a sacrilegious audacity unparalled in the whole annals of literature.

Some essential parts of the Book of Daniel are also involved in the predictions above cited. According to the Critics, that book was written by some unknown writer of late date; and in it he made up an account of a prayer which Daniel offered to God, in which he besought Him to remember His promise made to Jeremiah to deliver the people from captivity in Babylon (Dan. 9:1-3). The date of this prayer is definitely stated, and also the miraculous character of the prompt answer which is vouchsafed to it; yet if prediction and miracle are impossible, both the promise which is pleaded and the answer to the prayer are fictitious. When the holy Name of God is so closely interwoven with such incidents as this, as with other messages to the prophets, it would become difficult to exonerate the writers from a charge of blasphemy, if the Critics were right. It is out of the question to excuse deliberate fabrications of this kind, which the Critics claim to discover in many places, by holding that if a book contains good moral lessons, it does not matter when it was written.

Another type of falsification which exposes the character of its perpetrators, is forgery to attain an object. The Critics tell us from their investigations, that whole passages and even an entire book of the Pentateuch, were written as late as the Captivity times; for the purpose of setting forth a new type of ritual which it was then desired to introduce. The priests who fabricated these documents skillfully concealed their own names, and attributed the writings to Moses to give weight and prestige to these new ideas of their own. The endorsement of God for this forgery is claimed; for it is repeatedly stated in the documents that He enjoined this ritual upon Moses, before the Israelites entered Canaan. This is a species of literary fraud so dastardly when done with a deliberate motive, that no author who had any character left, would resort to it.

Conclusions. In the examples above cited, as to the authorship and date of the books of the Bible, we have not touched at all upon the question of evidence for the conclusions reached by the Critics, which they claim to be based on literary methods. We deal only with the necessary sequel, in the character which the writers of the Scriptures must have, if the findings of the Critics are accepted. We are thus confronted with a most extraordinary situation; because the Bible is universally acknowledged, even by non-Christians, to present a more exalted conception of God and higher motives for right conduct, than any of the sacred books of other religions. Yet the conclusions of the Critics would necessitate the belief that those who wrote the Bible were themselves utterly unprincipled and unscrupulous. For the very men who assure us that God knows their thoughts afar off, and that nothing is hid from His sight; who entreat the Lord to search their hearts to see if there be any wicked way in them; these men can turn round and write in the name of God, with entire disregard of truth and with every fraudulent devise ever heard of in base literature.

There is, however, one salutary result from the criticism of the Scriptures. It makes it more and more clear that a choice must be made. The Bible is evidently consistent throughout, and it must either be accepted as inspired by God, or it must be discarded as worse than untrustworthy. There is little in the way of middle ground now remaining on which a compromise view can be based.

These contrasting positions are well put by Professor T. Jollie Smith (of Ormond College, University of Melbourne) in explaining his own attitude: "There is no necessity for me to cut Scripture to bits, as the Rationalists and historical critics do. Scripture is a rock blocking their path; so they must cut it to pieces: for me it is a foundation-rock; so I build on it." (The Criticism of the Old Testament, p. 2.)

THE CONSISTENCY OF SCRIPTURE.

No one can hope to understand the consistency of Scripture without first making an earnest effort to grasp the viewpoint that Scripture presents in regard to the relations between man and God. Even a non-Christian may be asked to do this, because it is the only way that is fair to any book or any subject, even if the viewpoint as presented is not accepted.

The Bible depicts man as being originally created in the image of God and having open intercourse with his Maker. When man sinned, this relationship could no longer continue; and thenceforth the general theme throughout Scripture is, how this intercourse with God can be restored. The subsequent attitude of man is a persistence in his primary sin; by which he continues to choose his own way and refuses to conform to the will of God and to obey Him. If this attitude becomes permanent, it must result in final separation from God, and the eternal ruin of man. The problem with which the Bible deals is therefore, how man can be reconciled to God; and the answer which the Scriptures give throughout is by atonement for his sin, through sacrifice. The great difficulty, even then, is that man has fallen so low that he does not desire reconciliation with God; and he must be persuaded to accept it by taking the Way which God has prepared as the only avenue of access to Himself. It is a marvel presented for our contemplation, that God was able to devise this Way without the violation of His own attributes of justice and mercy, and that He was willing to make the supreme sacrifice required. This constitutes the song of the redeemed, when at last God dwells amongst them in restored communion.

This, in brief, is the standpoint of Scripture, from which the greatest of moral problems is regarded; and we find accordingly that its most prominent theme is pardon for sin and reconciliation to God through sacrifice. As the revelation of Scripture is unfolded, it becomes manifest that there is only One Sacrifice which has inherent or intrinsic efficacy; and that is the Sacrifice which God Himself made, when He spared not His own Son but delivered Him up to be the propitiation for our sins; by pouring out His soul unto death. This Sacrifice was offered once for all, and cannot be repeated. It follows therefore that no sacrifices can have a true significance unless they are types or symbols of this unique Sacrifice. Any other view regarding sacrifice necessarily misrepresents its meaning, by bringing in conflicting ideas.

In the teaching of Scripture the view is nowhere found that sacrifice is intended "to propitiate an angry God." The propitiation needed is for ourselves and for our sins; it is not God Who needs to be propitiated. There are few, even amongst heathen nations, who have so entirely lost sight of primary truth as thus to misunderstand. For the most part, they regard the supreme God as good in a distant way; or at the least sufficient beneficent not to do them harm. But their direct concern is with evil spirits, who bring sickness or calamity upon them; and these spirits require to be propitiated, which is the purpose of the offerings they make. The Modernists should therefore be careful not to disparage the doctrine of Atonement through the Blood of Sacrifice, by associating ideas with it which the Scriptures do not teach.

To make the true meaning of sacrifice evident to the human race, the Lord God chose a special nation which He instructed by object lessons, from generation to generation, that without shedding of blood there is no remission of sin. Day by day, morning and evening, the Hebrew people were reminded of this. It is also made quite clear in Scripture that this choice of the descendants of Abraham was God's own act; and that His purpose in so doing was through them to bring blessing to all the families of the earth. For, at the beginning of their national career, at the Exodus, they are told pointedly and very fully, that it was not because of any merit of their own that they were thus selected; which they were sometimes tempted to suppose. (See Deut. 7:6-8; 9:4-7.)

At the opening of Leviticus, where the various sacrifices are so fully described, the first that is dealt with is the Burnt Offering. This represents consecration to God; the dedication of the worshipper to do His will. It is thus made plain at the outset, that the final object in view is to retrieve the Fall of Man and to bring him back into harmony with the will of God. But an atonement for sin by means of the Sin Offering, must first be made before man can begin to please God. This order of thought remains unaltered in the New Testament dispensation, where the type of sacrifice represented by the Burnt Offering is still possible in its place. For we are called upon to present ourselves a living sacrifice, as the logical outcome of having accepted the mercies of God in the Sin Offering; so that we may know and do His will (Rom. 12:1-3). By so doing, truthfulness and honesty would dwell in our inmost thoughts, and all our activities would become service to God.

The two outstanding sacrifices during the course of the year which the Hebrews were commanded to observe were: The Passover, in the spring, in remembrance of the blood of the lamb on the door-posts of their houses, which stood between them and death at the time they left Egypt; and the Day of Atonement in the autumn. On that day, two goats were taken to set forth the complete picture of propitiation; one was slain and its blood was sprinkled on the Mercy-seat in the inner sanctuary, which was entered only once a year on this occasion; and on the head of the other goat (called the Scape-goat) the sins of the people were confessed and it was led forth to perish in the wilderness.

The outstanding features of these two great annual sacrifices are very noteworthy. They were extremely simple, no reliance being placed on elaborate ceremonies to impress the people. The Passover service was held in their own homes; and the sacrifice on the Day of Atonement was not even within a building; but all that the people saw took place in the open-air. There is no trace of the idea that a costly gift or devout worship in itself can expiate sin; for expiation is not accomplished by man, but by God.

These pre-eminent sacrifices, though sometimes neglected, were observed throughout the Old Testament times. On the return from the Captivity, nine centuries after the Exodus, the Passover was observed as soon as the Temple was rebuilt; and in the time of Christ, five centuries later again, it was still carefully commemorated. The symbolism which these sacrifices afford is used to set forth the views of God regarding sin in later times; in the Psalms and by the prophets. For example, in the Psalms: "As far as the east is from the west, so far hath He removed our transgressions from us." This is evidently the idea of the Scape-goat bearing away sin; and there is the same thought in Isaiah, when he says regarding the Messiah to come: "We have turned every one to his own way; and the Lord hath laid on Him the iniquity of us all." John the Baptist, in pointing out the promised Messiah, also says: "Behold the Lamb of God, Who taketh away the sin of the world."

The connected thought throughout the Old Testament, in regard to atonement through the blood of sacrifice, is therefore made manifest by its pointing back to the Fall and the need for restoring man to harmony with the will of God, and also by its pointing forward to the coming Redeemer. For it was plainly revealed to kings and to prophets that even the sacrifices appointed by God were not in themselves efficacious. Their outlook was forwards for it was not possible that the blood of bulls and of goats should take away sins. This is stated in the language of strong contrast in Psalms 51: 16-9 and 40:6-8. The final result in obedience to God and conformity to His will is thus kept steadily in view; showing that man's conduct cannot be pleasing to God until reconciliation through atonement has first been accomplished.

This rapid survey of Scripture may at least indicate its consistency on this great theme; and we also find that none of the later writers in the Bible ever set aside the foundational view that the pardon of sin can only be through the blood of atonement. From the first intimation of this in the approval given to the sacrifice of Abel, there is no inconsistency to be found. When the great law-giver and the representative of the prophets, Moses and Elijah, meet with Christ at His transfiguration, their topic is: "His decease which He should accomplish at Jerusalem." The special training in sacrifice given to the Israelites, is the basis of New Testament teaching on the same lines; in the Epistles of Peter, John and Paul, and in Hebrews; where the full light breaks forth after the Supreme Sacrifice has been offered. In the closing book of the Bible, the saints in heaven praise the Lamb, saying: "Thou art worthy; for Thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by Thy blood." No writer throughout Scripture explains away this doctrine, or treats it as a primitive idea to be outgrown when the intelligence of man develops further.

This consistent treatment of the vital question of forgiveness and reconciliation to God leads to the conclusion that we have here a divine revelation; portrayed in the sacrifices, culminating in the Offering of Christ, and explained by the Holy Spirit in the Epistles and Revelation. This consistency throughout the Bible is a manifest fact. It is impossible therefore to maintain that the epistles of Paul present some special "Pauline theology"; for they are consistent with the whole tenor of Old Testament teaching, as well as with the epistles of Peter and John, in regard to sin and atonement. Those who discard Atonement through Blood, cannot limit their contention to discrediting the epistles of Paul, as though the doctrine could thus be overthrown; they must take their stand against the Bible as a whole from Genesis to Revelation.

It is strange that the Modernists cannot perceive this thorough consistency of the Scriptures, when it is manifest to an open opponent of Christianity, like Robert Blatchford, who exclaims: "But—no Adam, no Fall; no Fall, no Atonement; no Atonement, no Saviour. . . If there never was a Fall, why should there be any atonement?"

(To be continued.)

THE JAMBOREE.

England is this month welcoming about 50,000 Boy Scouts, from the Dominions, Colonies and thirty-four other countries. Many strange tongues will be heard at Birkenhead, where the chief event is being held, but there will be one common purpose and ideal animating the great gathering—the ideal of fellowship and service. The two million Boy Scouts, said the Dean of Westminster at the Abbey service last week, represent "the most praiseworthy movement towards world peace that the world has ever seen". That being so—and few who know anything of the movement will challenge the claim—we hope that no attempt will ever be made to divert Scout activities into purely military channels. It has been the proud boast of the movement that it is non-military, non-political and non-class. When it departs from any one of those characteristics its present world-wide influence and its vast potentialities will begin to wane.—The Guardian Aug. 2.

"ALL QUIET ALONG THE POTOMAC."

By Thaddeus Oliver.

"All quiet along the Potomac," they say,
"Except now and then a stray picket
Is shot as he walks on his beat to and fro
By a rifleman hid in the thicket."
'Tis nothing—a private or two, now and then,
Will not count in the news of the battle,
Not an officer lost—only one of the men
Moaning out, all alone, the death rattle.

All quiet along the Potomac tonight,
Where the soldiers lie peacefully dreaming;
Their tents in the rays of the clear autumn moon,
Or the light of the watch-fires are gleaming;
A tremulous sigh as the gentle night wind
Through the forest leaves slowly is creeping;
While the stars up above with their glittering eyes
Keep watch—for the army is sleeping.

There's only the sound of the lone sentry's tread,
As he tramps from the rock to the fountain,
And thinks of the two on the low trundle-bed,
Far away in the cot on the mountain;
His musket falls slack—his face, dark and grim,
Grows gentle with memories tender,
As he mutters a prayer for the children asleep—
For the mother, may heaven defend her.

The moon seems to shine as brightly as then
That night when the love yet unspoken
Leaped up to his lips and when low-murmured vows
Were pledged, to be ever unbroken.
Then drawing his sleeve roughly over his eyes
He dashes off tears that are welling,
And gathers his gun close up to its place
As if to keep down the heart-swelling.

He passes the fountain—the blasted pine tree—
The footsteps are lagging and weary,
Yet onward he goes through the broad belt of light
Toward the shades of a wood dark and dreary.
Hark was it the night-wind that rustled the leaves.
Wasn't the moonlight so wondrously flashing?
It looked like a rifle—ha, Mary, good-bye",
And the life-blood is ebbing and splashing.

All quiet along the Potomac tonight,
No sound save the rush of the river—
While soft falls the dew on the face of the dead—
The picket's off duty forever.

Thaddeus Oliver fell, mortally wounded, on the field of battle, in an engagement between the Federal and Confederate forces, on Johns Island, S. C., whence he was borne to the hospital in Charleston, where, after lingering six weeks in the agonizing throes of death, he breathed his last. August 20, 1864. Requiescat in pace.

Thaddeus Oliver is buried in the old Lawson graveyard, on Big Creek, near Lawson Bridge, in Houston county, Ga., about nine miles west and a little north of Hawkinsville, Ga.

He married Penelope, a daughter of Hon. Hugh Lawson, a large and wealthy planter, prominent in the General Assembly and in the Constitutional Convention of Georgia.

Mr. Oliver was Solicitor General (State Attorney) of the Chattahooche Circuit of Georgia, in which the city of Columbus was and is located.

He had two children, Rev. Hugh F. Oliver, a Baptist minister, and Rear Admiral James Harrison Oliver, in the United States Navy. Both are now dead.

A SANE AND DECENT LIFE.

Mrs. Jerome Napoleon Bonaparte, a woman of distinguished name and social position, in an article in Collier's says something worth repeating in all circles of life. "Society," she says, "is necessary in our competitive scheme of existence which makes it impossible to escape the human appetite for distinction. But brilliant social success avails nothing when our personal accounts are finally balanced. The measure of real content is a sane and decent life." Sounds something like what we have read that our life is not meat and drink, but righetousness and peace. Probably few people are more restless and discontented than those who flit about as butterflies of wealth and fashion. Whatever they may have they are always feverishly seeking something else. They may have many clothes but nothing they want to wear, and many houses but no home. Real contentment is a state of mind, and may be had in very narrow circumstances and even amidst hardships, and may be missed and utterly lost in the most affluent circumstances and amidst the social excitement and dizzy whirl of the most fashionable society. Peace is the most democratic thing in the world and there is plenty of it to go around. "The kingdom of God is within you."—The Presbyterian Banner.

THE BEST MEMORY SYSTEM.

Forget each kindness that you do
As soon as you have done it;
Forget the praise that falls to you
The moment you have won it;
Forget the slander that you hear
Before you can repeat it;
Forget each slight, each spite, each sneer,
Wherever you may meet it.

Remember every kindness done
To you, whate'er its measure;
Remember praise by others won
And pass it on with pleasure;
Remember every promise made
And keep it to the letter;
Remember those who lend you aid
And be a grateful debtor.

Remember all the happiness
That comes your way in living;
Forget each worry and distress,
Be hopeful and forgiving;
Remember good, remember truth,
Remember heaven's above you,
And you will find, through age and youth,
That many hearts will love you.

—Selected.

THE LOCOMOTIVE CELEBRATES.

On August , 1929, young Horatio Allen climbed into the Stourbridge Lion, a locomotive which the Delaware & Hudson Canal Company had sent him to England to order, pulled the throttle and lumbered off into the forest at Honesdale, Pa. It was the first time that an engine had run on rails in the United States. Allen was alone, having decided that "if there is any danger in this ride it is not necessary that the life and limbs of more than one be subjected to danger". Danger there was, not because the Lion was a fierce and undomesticated mechanical creature, but because the track—hemlock stringers covered with strap-iron—was too flimsy for a roarisg weight of eight tons. Indeed, because no one yet knew how rails should be made and laid, the Lion never entered ocmmercial service, but ingloriously gave parts of himself to drive the machinery of a factory.

Although the honor of having first hauled freight and passengers in America goes to the Best Friend, West Point and De Witt Clinton, all built here, the hundredth anniversary of the Stourbridge Lion's demonstration deserves more than passing notice. There were justified doubts of any locomotive's possibilities even in England, despite Stephenson's brilliant success on the Stockton & Darlington in 1825. Some of the ablest British engineers, among them the builders of the Stourbridge Lion, were of the opinion that stationary engines driving winding drums and thus hauling carriages up inclines, from the other side of which they could descend by gravity, were more to be trusted than independent engines on wheels. The famous Rainhill competition, in which Stephenson with his Rocket was destined to triumph over Ericsson's Novelty and other engines, and which was to bring about the adoption of locomotives on the Liverpool & Manchester, was to be held exactly two months after Horatio Allen for the first time in his life ran any kind of an engine. Yet here was a group of conservative business men, who had little practical experience to guide them, and who had risked considerable capital in organizing a canal company to haul anthracite—a strange, new fuel—to New York, boldly deciding to experiment with a form of traction of which its very British originators had their doubts.

It was the same sprit of romantic adventure that animated Vanderbilt, Train, Villard and Hill, that has threaded the country with shining steel rails, that inspired Harriman's unrealized dream of new broad-gauged tracks which could carry cars as wide as drawing rooms, that has given the American locomotive, one of which has been fittingly named after Horatio Allen, its colossal dimensions, hauling power and speed, and that has allied the airplane with the railroad. Money alone never built a railroad. In commemorating the hundredth anniversary of the Delaware & Hudson's experiment railroad men pay tribute not so much to the Stourbridge Lion as they do to that still-living spirit of initiative and daring.—New York Times.

PEACE GARDEN ON BORDER PLANNED.

400-Acre Plot Would Be Memorial to Canada-American Peace.

Toronto, Ont., August 8.—(By Associated Press.)—A proposal to create a 400-acre garden on the border between Canada and the United States to be known as "the international peace garden", a memorial to the peaceful relations existing between the two countries for the last one hundred years, was discussed yesterday at the annual convention of the International Association of Gardeners.

The question of the site for the garden was put over until a future meeting.

A suggestion was made that a fund of $5,000,000 be created by a 25-cent contribution from each adult in Canada and United States, and a 5-cent contribution from every school child.

It is proposed to have 200 acres of the garden on the Canadian side and 200 on the United States side of the border to be admiistered by a joint committee of Canadians and United States citizens.—Times-Dispatch.

FAVORITE SCRIPTURE VERSES.

(In this space each week will appear a favorite passage of Scripture as sent in by a different reader. Every one is, therefore, invited to send us their favorite verse. It is suggested that all who can, join with the rest of us in committing to memory the verse which so appears here each week, including its location in the Holy Book; and in due time your memory chest will be laden with choice eternal treasures, indeed. "Thy word have I hid in my heart, that I might not sin against thee" Ps. 119:11.)

This week the following verse was submitted by Robert Harris, Leaksville, North Carolina: "But speak thou the things which become sound doctrine." Titus 2:1.

Who will send one from the far-away places as well very near us?

ALONE.

It is human to stand with the crowd, it is divine to stand alone. It is manlike to follow the people, to drift with the tide; it is Godlike to follow a principle, to stem the tide.

It is natural to compromise conscience and to follow the social and religious fashion for the sake of gain or pleasure; it is divine to sacrifice both on the altar of truth and duty.

"No man stood with me, but all men forsook me." wrote the battle-scarred apostle in describing his first appearance before Nero, to answer with his life for believing and teaching contrary to the Roman world.

Truth has been out of fashion since man changed his role of fadeless light for a garment of faded leaves.

Noah built and voyaged alone. His neighbors laughed at his strangeness and perished in style.

Abraham wandered and worshipped alone. Sodomites smiled at the simple shepherd, followed the fashion, and fed the flames.

Daniel dined and prayed alone. Elijah sacrificed and witnessed alone. Jeremiah prophesied and wept alone. Jesus loved and died alone.—The Burning Bush.

Book Reviews

THE WAY OF VICTORY. By Dr. William L. Poteat. Cloth. Pp. 83. Published by the University of North Carolina Press, Chapel Hill. Price $1.

Another and appealing treatise on the need of the expression by professing Christians of the motives and methods of our Lord Jesus Christ. It is amply illuminated by testimonies and opinions of eminent men to show that the regeneration of the individual unit must affect society in the ratio by which its influence can be made effective in the lives of others.

A university young woman recently addressed her father, "You and mother seem very fond of bridge; and you spend much of your time in pursuits and enjoyments which make me wonder. Are you really Christians?" Her perplexed father replied, "Of course we are. Do we not follow Christian ways in the matter of church-going and benevolences?" "Yes, you do; and that is what sets me to thinking. Do you believe that Jesus would live the life you do, if He were here?" "Of course not. Times have changed and people too." "But," she said as she turned sadly away, "He has not."

What a conflagration of holy living might be set burning if the children of God would rise to the realization of their potentialities Godward and manward! Dr. Poteat makes us wish they would.

Kenneth Mackenzie.

THE SOUL COMES BACK. By Joseph Herschel Coffin, Ph. D., Professor of Philosophy, Whittier College. The Macmillan Co., New York. Price $2.

The professor has given us a most readable book. He carries the reader with him in thought and attention even to the end of the book, though at the end he may find it difficult to agree with the writer in his deductions and conclusions. As the soul comes back from its wanderings through the mazes of the various "isms and ologies" he deals with these lucidly and informatively which makes the book helpful and useful.

It is unique in calling to the witness stand, as he says, individuals, with fictitious names, of course, as he discusses these various "popular life philosophies". This gives a personal touch, which is always pleasing. It is unique again in that he writes in "language understanded of fhe people", avoiding technical terms usually, but "psychosomatic", which is a useful favorite, is somewhat of a jaw-cracker. Again, he is rare, if not unique, in always writing of Christianity and religion wth reverence and deference. Too many of the writers of today, as is the case with the very readable book, the Story of Philosophy was greatly the pleasure in reading by these needless jibes at Christianity. This author takes his "Mercurius, the Chief Speaker", from a Christian home and allows him to get his training in an old-fashioned Sunday school.

But there is a cocksureness, which crops out now and then, reminding one of the Bruce Barton Nobody Knows books. The title of the book again—The Soul Comes Back—suggests that the author has found a lodging place for an aforetime homeless wanderer. Where has it been all these years? Nobody knew of its absence. This author, by a process of "selective synthesis" has enticed it back from somewhere.

With this "selective synthesis" working apparently overtime, the soul comes back "as the core of personality, which is a psychosomatic organism". "Soul is personality at a self-conscious level." "John Doe" works out and up a high-grade personality which entitles him to a soul; but what about morons and "inconsequentials"? These need not apply. In other words, the soul comes back to him, and him only, apparently, under this process, who has mental, moral and physical ability and capacity to produce a peculiar personality. No place for weaklings, but the author hopes that as these are parts of the cosmos—the universe—some provision will be made for them in another world, where evolution is to be continued endlessly. Yet the book is readable and helpful in its estimates of the "popular life philosophies".

J. R. Ellis.

Letters to the Editor

In this Department the Editor will at all times welcome communications expressing opinions on the various topics which are engaging the attention of the Church. But the Editor will not hold himself responsible for such opinions.

No "Letters to the Editor" will appear in our columns except those coming to us signed by writer

Mr. Editor:

Among a great many letters of similar import, I have just received one from a lady residing in a New York Diocese which so perfectly illustrates conditions prevailing to a very large extent throughout the United States that I believe that the readers of your paper should have the benefit of it.

"Aug. 6, 1929.

Hon. C. L. Marsilliot,
Memphis, Tenn.

My Dear Sir:—

I wish to acknowledge with gratitude your very kindly letter of June 25th. Illness in my family has prevented my doing so at an earlier date.

People say to me "Oh, why get so exorcised over this matter" (the Anglo-Catholic, or Romanizing, movement in the Church), and it is this indifference that mystifies some of us so much. It saddens and depresses one to be obliged to lose confidence in our Bishops and Clergy, and we are fast doing so.

We have been so fond of our own Rector until since the last Convention last Fall. He seems to be trying to compel us to believe as he does; tells us to try to remove the barriers that prevent us from the belief that the bread and wine mysteriously become the real Body and Blood of Christ and similar beliefs. I can but wonder why the majority do not go right into the Church of Rome.

The condition of affairs in our own little Church saddens me, for I believe there is a field ripe for the harvest were we to have a real Protestant Episcopalian here.

Hopefully yours,

. . . . . ."

I do not give the name and place of residence of the writer of this letter, as I have no permission to do so, but it comes from a lady who has devoted a large part of the best years of a long life to the service of the Church.

Let indifferent Protestant Episcopalians read and ponder.

C. L. Marsilliot.

Mr. Editor:

I enclose check for $3 for my subscription from July, 1929, to July, 1930. I enjoy the "Churchman" every week, and could not do without it. It is fine.

Mrs. H. H. Edmunds.

Halifax, Va.

Mr. Editor:

Your great "The Assassination of President Lincoln" that appeared in your paper of the twenty-seventh of July was most interesting and instructive. I have read in your paper of the third where you bestow credit of same to Dr. L. G. Tyler's Quarterly. I wish that article could be read by all.

Have just finished reading the great gift of Dr. Landon C. Bell's "The Old Free State". He gave me this work in two volumes, with a most beautiful inscription written in his own handwriting on the first page. He also sent me his address, "Robert E. Lee", and the other one, "Confederate Soldiers on Johnson's Island". At least, this is the substance of the address.

Miss Mary D. Carter recently sent me "The Real Lincoln" and "Youths' Histor yof 1861". She is a most wonderful help to carry on the fight for truth to our Southland and nation.

I am on the Publicity Committee for "Stratford on the Potomac" for Georgia. I have access to the papers that come in here to the newspaper offices, and save all editorial sheets that mention Stratford. These papers come from all over the Southland from Richmond News Leader to Houston Post and Dispatch, Houston, Texas. Mrs. Charles D. Lanier is so appreciative of everything that I can do for her, and I do it gladly.

When you find time drop me a line, and I will appreciate it. You and your great work will certainly bear good fruits for years to come. Spiritual and educational will make humanity better souls for our few years here and our future salvation if we keep and work in our Lord's vineyard.

Oliver Orr.

Mr. Editor:

I have just read with a great deal of pleasure a review in The Confederate Veteran for August by Captain T. A. Ashe, of "The Old Free State", by Dr. Landon C. Bell. If you have the two volumes please lend them to me to read, and after reading I will return them to you, paying postage both ways. The Southern Churchman of last week excellent, especially the article, "Here a Little, There a Little", by the Rev. Mr. Lucas. Amen! to his summary. My position is this: "Others may base their religion on sentiment. I base mine on the Holy Scriptures," etc. "True to the Word of God, true to the faith of the fathers—on that rock I stand." Amen. "Who will stand with me?" I will.

Giles B. Cooke.

Mathews C. H., Va.

Church Intelligence

The Proposed New Theological Seminary.

(From New York Tribune, July 26.)

Plans to establish a Presbyterian theological seminary in Philadelphia moved swiftly forward today at a meeting of the sponsors of the project. The school, which is being formed as a protest against "a falling away of the Princeton Theological Seminary from its historic doctrinal stand", will be called the Westminster Theological Seminary, according to a tentative decision reached today.

The meeting appointed Sub-Committees on Finance, Faculty, Students, Promotion and Selection of Temporary Site. It was further decided to engage a registrar and secretary at once. The school will open in the fall. The following statement was issued at the close of the meeting:

"The first meeting of the committee appointed by Presbyterian conservatives on July 18 to establish a new theological seminary in Philadelphia was held today at 18 South Sixth Street, where an office has been placed at the disposal of the movement by Morgan H. Thomas, of the Garrett-Buchanan Company, who will act as treasurer.

"The Rev. Dr. Robert Dick Wilson, the Rev. Dr. Oswald T. Allis and the Rev. Dr. J. Gresham Machen, who have served in Princeton Seminary prior to the recent reorganization, were present with the committee in an advisory capacity

"The committee includes Fred M. Paist, the Rev. Dr. Charles Schall, the Rev. Dr. Samuel G. Craig, the Rev. Dr. Frank H. Stevenson, Morgan H. Thomas, Edgar Frutchey, T. Edward Ross, Roland K. Armes, John L. Steele, James L. Rankin, James F. Shrader and the Rev. Dr. Roy T. Brumbaugh.

"The name, 'Westminster Theological Seminay', was tentatively chosen as the name of the new institution. Sub-committees were appointed as follows: Finance, Edgar Frutchey, chairman; Faculty and Students, the Rev. Dr. Robert Dick Wilson, chairman; Promotion, the Rev. Dr. Frank H. Stevenson, chairman, and Selection of Temporary Site, Fred M. Paist, chairman.

"It was voted to secure the services at once of a registrar and secretary. The temporary site, which will be in Philadelphia, will be chosen in the near future.

"The movement is, therefore, regarded by its promoters as definitely launched and they believe it will receive widespread support from evangelicals in the Presbyterian Church, who think the action of the General Assembly of 1929 in removing the former Board of Directors of Princeton Seminary and placing a new board in control, deprived the evangelical congregations of their chief source of ministerial supply, and makes necessary the establishment of a new seminary which shall maintain the old Princeton tradition of unswerving loyalty to the Bible and to the reformed faith."

The Rev. Drs. Wilson, Allis and Machen, who acted in an advisory capacity at the meeting, resigned from Princeton during the controversy on the ground that "the reorganization there presages a falling away from the seminary's historic doctrinal stand". It is said that they, with four other outstanding members of the Princeton faculty, will form the nucleus of the staff of the new seminary.

Bethany School—Liberia.

Miss Olive Meacham, who arrived in Liberia last year just before the death of Maryland Nichols, and has taken up Miss Nichols' work for the present, writes home to Trinity Church, Seattle:

"At first my evenings were a long-drawn-out last-night-ever! Centipedes on the floor, lizards on the walls, flying cockroaches fully two inches long darting about, and I just sat with my eyes glued, first on one, then on the other pest, and waited to get hit. Now I can go on undressing at night and only look half a dozen times at the giant spider (four-inch span) which lives on my medicine shelf. But I sink under my mosquito net and put out my candle with a quick gasp of relief. I'm still whole! After a few moments of darkness papa and mamma rat start training the little rats around the walls, and then Charlie, our pet house-snake, drives them off and quiet reigns. Fifty wiggling little girls above my head roll on the floor all night, or at least until 5 A. M., unless it's a holiday, when they get up at 4:30.

"Here at Bethany School we have seventy-five girls, and in the day school a few more than two hundred. The boarders range from four to twenty years. Many of them have been redeemed by the mission from slavery, and many of them are cast off from their tribes, as too many girls are not welcome. They cannot work enough to pay for their food in the way the natives secure food in their hit and miss style. But many of them are very bright, and they all are interesting in one way or another. We teach them 'book' and also to care for their own homes and babies by and by, to cook and sew, wear clothes and talk English, for which one needs an interpreter the first few weeks one spends here. Besides that, we train them to be good Christian girls. They love to sing hymns, and the amount of the Bible and Prayer Book which they memorize is astonishing.

"The boys all learn a trade, and there are boss carpenters, printers, tailors, masons, gardeners and cooks among them."

On Evangelism.

At the Clergy Conference for the five Carolina dioceses held at Kanuga Lake, N. C., closing July 28, resolutions were adopted commending the program of the National Commission on Evangelism and especially the services of the two field workers of the commission, Rev. W. J. Loaring Clark, D. D., and Larkin W. Glazebrook, M. D.

The clergy were urged to arrange institutes on evangelism where practicable, and in particular to make larger use of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew and the Daughters of the King as a means of promoting evangelism among the laity.

L. C. P.

From the Madison Conference.

The growing tendency of recreation leaders to take young people on week-end outings to the disregard of Sunday observance and church attendance was seriously deplored by the group of rural clergy and other workers at the Madison Conference. It is highly commendable in the recreation leaders to give their time and efforts to providing wholesome recreation for their young people over the week-ends, but it is lamentable that so often they make not even the simplest provision for worship.

The group at Madison also urged a definite interest in the vocational guidance of rural boys and girls, through camps and conferences, through personal interviews and other methods, believing that the opportunities for such constructive leadership are practically unlimited.

It was suggested that close contact be maintained between the Church, Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., and other agencies endeavoring to promote Christian life in country communities, and that the Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A. and other organizations of like character endeavor to direct those whom they serve to definite affiliation with, and loyal adherence to, some recognized Christian communion.

Since difficulties among college students are both moral and intellectual and since these difficulties require constant pastoral care, it is urged that pastors keep in close touch with the young people of their communities who are away at college.

As the rural newspaper is potentially a valuable aid to Church promotion and religious education, every clergyman is urged to make a thorough study of Church publicity methods. The rural clergy are asked to know the publicity facilities in their fields; they should make complete use of diocesan and general Church news service and, whenever possible, use stereopticon slides, lectures and moving picture films.

The Madison Conference recommended a greater use of the Church Army, and the Church Mission of Help. They expressed their deep appreciation of the help rendered to the Conference by the Woman's Auxiliary.

The Rural Fellowship at its annual banquet presented with much enthusiasm a gift of $100 to Prof. Colbert in recognition of his very great interest in the rural work of the Church in general and the Madison group in particular.

Aquia Church, Stafford County, Virginia.

Aquia Church.

The earliest Englishmen, men and women, making the first permanent settlement in America, May 13, 1607, were a God-fearing people, as evinced by their prayers and thanksgivings which immediately followed their safe landing on Jamestown Island. They built the church at Jamestown,(and as they settled up and down the James River, churches were built and worsnip was conducted in every neighborhood.

But the early F. F. V.'s could not be circumscribed; settlements were made upon the banks of the York, the Rappahannock and the Potomac. Stafford, between the Rappahannock and the Potomac, was made a county in 1666, and Overwharton Parish is supposed to have been formed about the same time, though no date is named in connection with it until 1730 when Hamilton Parish was taken from it. According to Bishop Meade, Rev. Alexander Scott was the first permanent clergyman—1710-1738.

To him the parish is indebted for a handsome communion service of beaten silver, now in the possession of old Aquia Church.

At that time the limits of the county were not well defined. It was inhabited about eighty miles along the Potomac and from three to twenty miles in the interior. There were six hundred and fifty families, from eighty to one hundred communicants, one church and several chapels. "The church and chapels were as full as they could hold". Mr. Scott never married; he had as his assistant, a short time before his death in 1738, Rev. John Moncure, a Scotchman, descendant of a Hugunot refuge who fled from France at the revocation of the edict of Nantes. During Mr. Moncure's rectorship of 26 years the present church was built.

Potomac Church was the oldest in the parish, but there are no records concerning it, so Aquia Church stands as the oldest, it is in Overwharton parish and Stafford County, both of which take their names from the corresponding ones in England. After this fashion are we constantly reminded throughout the earlier Virginia settlement of how the home ties pulled at the heart strings—for names, customs and laws kept alive either the memory or the traditions of the homeland across the great water gap.

Over the old south doorway may still be seen this anciently worded inscription:

"Built in A.D. 1751. Destroyed by Fire 1751 and Rebuilt A.D 1757 by Mourning Richards, Undertaker, William Copein, Mason."

Vestrymen: Peter Hedgeman, John Mercer, John Lee, Mat Doniphan, Henry Tyler, Williams Mountjoy, Benjamin Strother, Thomas Fitzhugh, Peter Daniel, Warden; Travers Cook, Warden; John Fitzhugh, John Peyton.

Mr. Moncure was rector until his death in 1764. His descendants still form a large part of the congregation. Many of them are scattered and many of them have filled high places in the nation. His wife was Miss Frances Brown, daughter of Dr. Gustavus Brown of Maryland. So great was the devotion of this happy pair that they nearly always sat hand in hand, and even on horseback their hands were intertwined.

Mr. Moncure was succeeded by Rev. Mr. Green, Clement Brooke, Robert Buchan, Thomas Allen, etc. The church was neglected when Bishop Meade visited it in 1838, and it seemed doomed to decay. Better times came—the descendants of Rev. John Moncure came to the rescue, and when some years later the good Bishop returned he had a different story. The whole place had been renovated, the road had been cleared, the house repaired and repainted, and there was a fine congregation. Rev. Mr. Henry Wall was the rector and all things looked promising. "It appeared one of the best and most imposing of our temples." But during the "War Between the States", the building was temporarily occupied by Federal Troops, and as a result was desecrated and defaced. Again it was restored by the descendants of the same families who had built it.

Old Aquia is a remarkable and unique example of early church architecture, one of the finest of Virginia Colonial day churches, built of brick and ornamented with artful stone work. In shape it is cruciform and surmounted with a curious tower or observatroy, and is loved and cared for by the whole countryside. It stands upon an eminence just off the Washington-Richmond Highway, and not far from Stafford Court House, and is approached by a steep road almost impassable in winter. It is surrounded by a church yard, where rests the remains of former worshippers—names famous in the annals of the Nation. The original building stands unchanged from Colonial days. There is a three-tiered pulpit which is unusual—only one similar is known to be extant. The old fashioned square pews are still preserved; there are three entrances, front and sides, and there is a "cuddy" under the pulpit—dark and mysterious.

Nation-wide Evangelistic Program to Celebrate Pentecost.

Celebrating the 1,900th anniversary of "Pentecost", the birthday of the Church, which will be observed by the churches throughout the world during the coming year, the Commission on Evangelism and Life Service of the Federal Council of Churches, of which Dr. Charles L. Goodell is the secretary, has just announced a program which includes a campaign of personal evangelism, a church attendance crusade, a Sunday-school drive, the re-establishment of a family altar in every home, a series of 'upper-room" prayer meetings to be held in churches, homes, shops, offices and stores, and a simultaneous reading of a chapter a day of the Gospel of St. Luke and the Acts of the Apostles.

This program, which will begin this fall and continue through the winter and spring, ending June 8, the day of Pentecost, is the culmination of a series of conferences recently held by the leaders in evangelism of the principal denominations in the United States. Nearly all of the national religious bodies in America have already committed themselves to this observance at their official conferences, assemblies and synods.

It is proposed to make the coming year one of the greatest in the history of the Church in the field of evangelism, although it is being suggested that the preaching be done by the pastors themselves, rather than by professional evangelists, through an interchange of their pulpits for given periods of time. Instead of making Easter Sunday, as has been the custom, the climax of the season's work, it is recommended by the Commission that the day of Pentecost be emphasized, observing the 1,900th birthday of the founding of the Church. Associated with Dr. Goodell in the proposed campaign are all of the secretaries of evangelism of the principal denominations, as well as those specially appointed by the various communions.

Christian Indians in Council.

On July 19-21 the little town of Mission, on the Rosebud Reservation, in South Dakota, was the scene of a colorful and impressive gathering, when the fifty-sixth Niobrara Convocation of the Sioux Indians assembled for a three-day session. Some 1,500 delegates and visitors were present from the ninety-six chapels which carry on the Indian work of the Church in South Dakota.

The central booth, with tree-trunks for pillars, pine boughs for thatch and planks for pews, where the services and chief sessions were held, was situated on the rolling pasture land of Hare Industrial School, a half-mile west of that institution. About it were grouped some three hundred tents, large and small, with special quarters for the Woman's Auxiliary and the Young People's Fellowship. Bishop Roberts and Archdeacon Ashley occupied old-time tipis near the booth.

Friday and Saturday were devoted to services and sessions of the various organizations: the Convention proper, the Woman's Auxiliary, the Young People's Fellowship, the Brotherhood of St. Andrew and the Brotherhood of Christian Unity. The Bishops gave addresses, a class was confirmed, the annual offerings were gathered.

The white visitors to Convocation were cared for at Hare School. One of the useful features of this gathering was the opportunity which it gave to both whites and Indians to become acquainted with the admirable work which is already being done in this new venture for the effective training of Indian boys. The splendid farm of 900 acres, the efficient and interested staff of teachers, and the beginnings of an adequate plant for carrying on the work produced a most favorable impression.

The Convocation itself, though smaller in numbers than some held in former years, was marked by an unusual spirit of earnestness and devotion. The presence of three veteran Dakota priests, Luke Walker, Philip Deloria and Amos Ross—all showing undaunted spirit and keen interest despite their bodily infirmities—was a good lesson in Christian courage.

The climax of the Convocation was in the services of Sunday, July 21. Several hundred made their communions at the early Eucharist; at 10 o'clock Bishop Burleson ordained Iver Eagle Star to the priesthood, Bishop Roberts preaching the sermon. At this service also Bishop Burleson, at the request of its chaplain-general, decorated the Rev. Philip Deloria with the Cross of the Order of the Sangreal, "because he heard the voice of Christ while the pagan chief of an Indian tribe, and renounced all to follow the Master; and because for fifty-three years of service in the ministry he has not ceased to set forth the glory of the love of God.

Early Sunday afternoon were held the final meetings of the various groups, and at 3:30 a united meeting, at the close of which came the induction of helpers and catechists.

During the three days of Convocation there had been more or less excessive heat. This found its climax in a severe thunder-storm about 5 o'clock, during which the wind blew down a few tents and did some other small damage; but by the time of the evening service all was peaceful. Another confirmation class was presented, the offerings, amounting to some $4,300, were formally presented and placed upon the altar, and final words of comment and counsel were spoken by the Bishop.

A touching incident occurred at the close of the service. The recessional hymn had been begun when the Bishop saw an Indian mother with a boy of four years standing at the entrance to the chancel. They were there to make a thank offering for the boy's recovery from illness. The mother placed a silver dollar in his hand, which he gave to the Bishop, and after fishing eagerly in the pocket of his little blouse he finally brought up two nickels, which he also presented with a shining face. These were placed promptly upon the altar, and were surely not the least among the loving sacrifices made by devoted hearts at this most helpful Convocation.

H. T. P.

Liberia's Tribute.

The name of James L. Sagley, educational adviser to Liberia, has become so well known among our Church people that the news of his death is a shock felt very widely. A cable received on June 29 announced his death in Monrovia, from yellow fever. We like this simple tribute, which came from Liberia:

A long farewell, Liberia's earnest friend,
With all your zealous labor but begun,
Yet you have shown her youths the path to wend
And how life's greatest prizes can be won—
So rest in peace, your duty nobly done.

Items—Here and There.

It was Alexander Smith Cochran, who died recently at his home in Yonkers, New York, who some time ago made an anonymous gift of $350,000 to the College of Preachers in Washington. He also provided an annual endowment of $50,000, and now in his will he leaves the college an additional million. An editorial in the Yonkers Herald spoke of him as a man of wide and sound social vision, whose policy in the conduct of the carpet manufacturing business created by his grandfather, was of direct benefit to thousands of workers and of indirect benefit to the entire community.

Here is an inspiringly practical suggestion for the early fall. The student chaplain at William and Mary College mentioned one day that he looked forward to the time when an increase in his salary would permit the services of a maid on Sunday, so that he and his wife could invite students for meals on that day. The Woman's Auxiliary forthwith provided $100, and now a Sunday maid enables them to have six students at dinner and six at supper. Perhaps one has to be a student, sick for home or sick of the campus, to appreciate this.

During his few months as rector of St. Chrysostom's Church, Chicago, before he left to become Bishop of Lexington, Bishop Abbott presented a class of seventy-six for confirmation and had about twenty more persons under preparation.

The unpronouncable place where Rockwell Kent's little boat went on the rocks the other day, Bodthaab, is the capital of the Danish colony of Greenland. There is a seminary here where about thirty Eskimos are in training for the ministry of the Danish Church.

The Bremen, the great airplane which made the first westward flight across the Atlantic, in 1928, has been on exhibition in Grand Central Station, New York. Captain Hermann Koehl, one of the three men who made the flight, has accepted the position of director of aviation for a Roman Catholic Missionary society, "Miva", which is attempting to carry Christianity into Africa by airplane. Germany has one air-pilot priest, according to the Associated Press report, the Rev. Paul Schulte, who served with Captain Koehl in the same air squadron during the war.

Friends of Bishop Brent and General Wood, and friends of the Cathedral in Manila, are placing two memorial windows over the Cathedral altar in memory of those two great Churchmen with whom the Cathedral has been so intimately associated. Subscriptions may be sent to Mrs. Halsted Dorey, Office of the Governor General, Manila, P. I.

Next time you feel a bit despondent about the progress of civilization, send for a copy of the "Review for 1928" of the Rockefeller Foundation (61 Broadway, New York,) and read about the amazing world-wide work the Foundation carries on. See also a brief report of the Health Organization of the League of Nations, in The League of Nations News for June, 1929. (6 East 39th Street, New York. Ten cents.)

The New York Telegram regards the recent compact between the Roman Catholic Church and the Mexican Government as a formal recognition that "there must be complete separation of Church and State, in letter and in spirit".

From Mexico City came an Associated Press dispatch, that the religious agreement signed by President Portes Gil of Mexico, embodied the following: (1) The Government will allow the Catholic hierarchy to designate those priests who are to register in compliance with Mexican laws. (2) Religious instruction, while not permitted in the schools, will be allowed in the churches. (3) The Church may apply for modification of the Constitution in the future through recognized Government channels. Says the Richmond News-Leader: "Nothing now remains but to obtain the sanction of the Pope. There are few who doubt that he will grant it, although he withheld it a year ago when a similar, if not identical, accord was reached with President Calles."

Says Henry Ford: "After a few of the old soaks die off you'll never hear of Prohibition."

Dr. Austin H. Clark of the Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D. C., is recognized as one of America's greatest scientists. Because of his standing, his recent opposition to Evolution is being taken seriously by many scientists. What the effect of his explosive statements will be remains to be seen. Certainly he is causing many cock-sure evolutionists to examine their evidence again. Because of his standing he has access to scientific journals. Persons rejecting Evolution are usually relegated to the sphere of "human fossils" by the present day intellectual oligarchy, but Dr. Clark has earned for himself the privilege of being heard.

"Missing Link Theory Held in Disrepute"—this head-line appears in the July 10th issue of The Detroit Free Press. Then following is a report from Dr. Austin H. Clark, of the Smithsonian Institution. He says there are "GAPS" between humans and animals which never have, and never will, be bridged.

Instead of a single "Family Tree" of Evolution as taught in High school textbooks and elsewhere, Dr. Clark paints life as a flat plane in which is rooted a number of evolutionary trees, one for each of the major group of animals. He believes that on this flat plane of life there was planted an original germ for each of the groups of animals. Man forms a Tree of his own, growing out of this flat plane, and was from that beginning unlike the animals. He thinks that man had "a common and unknown ancestor". Dr. Clark was influenced in this belief "through the discovery of fossils by the late Dr. Charles D. Walcott in the Middle Cambrian rocks of British Columbia."—The Defender.

The more educated America becomes the more crime increases. A recent Literary Digest report says: "The mentally defective comprise only from one-fourth to one-third of the average prison group." An ignorant devil is bad; an educated devil is worse. Give us more Bibles for our school room. Give us more religious teachers. Give us more old-time reverence for the things of God. Give us less Godless infidelity in our text-books. Give our children an opportunity to know God and His Book.

On the walls of the Antwerp Fine Arts Museum, in Belgium, hung a painting by David Teniers, five by seven inches, called "Singer and Guitarist", valued at $20,000. As the halls were being closed on the evening of July 7th, it was noticed that the small canvas had been cut from its frame. Because of its size, the art robber had no difficulty in concealing the picture upon leaving the Museum.

"Fluctuation in the price of wheat never seems to affect the high price of wild oats."—Boston Herald.

"A study in logic these hot days is to be found in the stockingless fad combined with the fur neckpiece."—Wichita Eagle.

"A heathen country is one in which the pay-roll can be transported without an armored car."—Brooklyn Times.

Vicars: "And what parable do you like best, my son?" Boy: "The one about the multitude that loafs and fishes."—The Defender.

Findings—Southern Conference on Religious Education.

Sewanee.—Evangelism through Religious Education was the keynote of the Southern Conference on Religious Education held at Sewanee, Tenn., July 29-31, followed by the meeting of the Provincial Department of Religious Education on August 1.

Ten dioceses were represented by clergy or lay workers, including a number of diocesan executives in Religious Education. At the closing session the Findings Committee brought in a report summarizing the conclusions reached during the Conference. This was unanimously adopted and transmitted to the Provincial Department of Religious Education, which also approved and adopted it. Of special interest among the findings were the following:

V. Believing that the spirit of evangelism should permeate our Church School and be expressed in our curriculum for pupils and our training program for teachers, we recommend:

(a) That the Church School be recognized as an agency for reaching and winning to Christ and His Church the non-Christians of the community as well as an agency for its religious nurture of the Church's children.

(b) That the membership goal of the Church School be considered as being (1) all members of the parish and (2) all persons in the community who are not actively affiliated with any other religious body. We further urge that in accordance with this principle each Church School definitely endeavor through the personal efforts of officers, teachers and pupils to enlist in its membership both of these classes.

(c) That a course on personal evangelism be included among the alternative courses offered for use by senior high or adult classes in the Church School, and by such other groups as may desire to use it.

(d) That the Department of Religious Education of the National Council be requested to include a training course on the principles and methods of personal evangelism among the units of the N. A. T. A. series.

(e) That in any event such a course be included hereafter in the Sewanee Summer School.

IX. In view of the new policy of our National Department of Religious Education in regard to the Church School Service Program, we recommend that our Provincial Department undertake such a correlation and utilization of existing organizations for boys and girls and young people (as, for example, the Girls' Friendly Society, the Junior Brotherhood of St. Andrew and the Junior Daughters of the King and others) as will most effectively meet the need thus created.

Leon C. Palmer.
Brotherhood of St. Andrew.

Rural Mission Work in Japan.

The Rev. J. Kenneth Morris writes from Shimogama, Kyoto, of rural mission work, apostolic in its nature:

I have been doing some work among isolated Christians as a side line and in addition to my work at Shimogamo.

This work for the isolated has opened up a wonderful field for mission work. Most of these people live in villages where there is no Christian work of any kind, and often there is only one Christian in a village. Most of them are eager for the ministrations of the Church, and in many villages the people are receptive to the Christian message.

So wherever there is an opening we go, first to visit the Christians and give them what encouragement we can and the Holy Communion (if this is possible; some of the family sometimes abject and all that is possible then is to visit them); second, to preach the Gospel to the other people in the village in such a way as to commend it to them and thus seek to break down any opposition that might be in their minds towards Christianity. This makes it easier for the isolated Christians there to practice their faith.

In most places we have been very hospitably received by the village people. We go forth as Carey did, asking great things of God and expecting great things from God, and we have never been disappointed. We go in the spirit of prayer and humility, trusting God to open up the way for us and He always does. Aside from the spiritual strength we (my helper and I) have received from this work, there has been also the adventurous and romantic side. I never knew the missionary life today could be so thrilling.

Not long ago we visited a fishing village where we have only one Christian, a girl who graduated from St. Agnes School four years ago. We had to travel on a little oil boat for four hours and then we reached the quaintest little village imaginable. I think it has not changed for centuries, except for a new warehouse built by the father of our Christian there. He is the leading man in the village and a man of some wealth. When we left there the next day he sent us to our next destination, a village down the coast two hours' ride, in his own private launch (not luxurious as we think of launches, but nevertheless his own and a nice one at that).

The village was right on the coast and we went ashore in a small row boat. They were expecting us and were on the shore with many other people to welcome us. We went to their home and they said we were to have a bath and supper and the meeting for the villagers would be at eight o'clock. But country people here do not trouble much about

(Continued on page 22.)

Family Department

AUGUST.

1. Thursday
4. Tenth Sunday after Trinity.
6. Tuesday, Transfiguration.
11. Eleventh Sunday after Trinity.
18. Twelfth Sunday after Trinity.
24. Saturday, S. Bartholomew.
25. Thirteenth Sunday after Trinity.
31. Saturday.

COLLECT FOR TWELFTH SUNDAY AFTER TRINITY.

Almighty and everlasting God, Who art always more ready to hear than we to pray, and art wont to give more than either we desire or deserve; Pour down upon us the abundance of Thy mercy; forgiving us those things whereof our conscience is afraid, and giving us those good things which we are not worthy to ask, but through the merits and mediation of Jesus Christ, Thy Son, our Lord. Amen.

COLLECT FOR ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S DAY.

O Almighty and Everlasting God, Who didst give to Thine Apostle Bartholomew grace truly to believe and to preach Thy Word; Grant, we beseech Thee, unto Thy Church, to love that Word which he believed, and both to preach and to receive the same; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

For the Southern Churchman.

PILGRIMAGE.

Anna Hamilton Wood.

I do not ask for quiet pilgrimage
Along the road of life, but let me be
Storm-tossed and shaken, and for heritage
A pride the generations built for me.

No taking of the easy path! Blood-stained
My footsteps as they climb the upward way;
No faltering until the crest be gained
With all my banners in a brave display!

For only so would it be worth the fight,
And I be worthy of the name I wear
As I stand waiting in my Captain's sight,
My victor's heart the only gift I bear!

The Touch of God.

The Gospel for today records one of the most beautiful of our blessed Lord's miracles of healing, for it has such a very special application to all our human needs—the needy of body and of soul. There is in the story of this helpless sufferer alienated from the comradeship of his fellowmen, inarticulate in prayer and praise a record of a specially intimate contact with the Lord of all life.

Responsive to the urge of human sympathy, the friends of the deaf and dumb man had done all that they could; they brought him into the gracious presence of One, who, little as His divinity and the purpose of His mission was understood, was yet noted for His compassion and His power to give relief to the sick and suffering and outcast. And their action has for the intercessors of our fellowship a note of inspiration; we too, torn by anxiety, overwhelmed sometimes by the sense of our own powerlessness to help take our place with the intercessors of all the ages; we enter into their labors when we bring sufferers into the presence of the Incarnate Christ, "beseeching Him to put His hand upon them" and there leave them, confident that in the silent, mysterious workings of His Providence He can and will in His own good time lay His healing hand upon body and soul in intimate comprehension of their needs.

"He took him apart from the multitude." There is in this phrase—one of the "graphic touches" of St. Mark's Gospel—such a wealth of meaning. For are we not all—in our thoughtful moments—conscious of the silence, the privacy of God's intimate dealings with each one of us. Our powers of religious comprehension vary very greatly; many of us have but a very elementary experience of the things of the Spirit, and yet deep down within us, in the inner consciousness of our mind and soul we recognize the Divine Guiding, the moulding of our lives by the invisible hands of Love. It was all so exactly expressed in George Eliot's vivid story, "Silas Marner", when the weaver, blinded by the gloom of miserliness to the sunshine of life, was led back into the path of human contacts and gracious relationships by the joyousness of a little child.

"There's good in this world—I've a feeling of that now; and it makes a man feel as there's good more nor he can see i' spite o' the trouble and the wickedness . . . the child was sent to me: there's dealings with us—there's dealings."

And the point is that we yield ourselves in unquestioning faith and simple trust to these dealings: just not to be so busy and so self-sufficient in the management of our own affairs, but so to place ourselves and those dear to us in the Divine Presence that we may feel the touch of God.

There is another expression of the same lesson in a book, which has lately been read by many of us, "Christ of the Indian Road". In his zeal to spread the Christian message, the author, relying on human powers and faculties, was on the verge of human exhaustion. Responding to the question of an invisible Speaker, "Are you yourself ready for the work to which I have called you"? he replied, "No, Lord, I am done for. I have reached the end of my rope." The Voice replied, "If you will hand that over to me and not worry about it I will take care of it." The sense of personal intimacy with the Divine Master spelt calm and peace and resulted in a force of successful enterprise which has had far-reaching results.

How can we apply the lesson to ourselves? Surely by a zealous guarding of those moments, when He has promised us that we shall meet Him—the moments of our comunions—of meditation, of private and public prayer. Even so will He take us too "apart from the multitude", and by His touch laid upon us our ears will be opened to the sound of the Divine Voice, the string of our tongues will be loosed and we too shall "speak plain" in the voice of prayer and praise.—Healing Church.

WISE FOLLY.

It is folly to suppose that we can fulfill our destiny merely by processes of emotion or of thought. Every kind of progress in life is due to three factors. They are thought, emotion and action. The man who rests his case in a purely mental process is a theorist. If he adds emotion to thought and stops there he becomes a sentimentalist. It is only when thought tinged by emotion results in work that he really achieves any practical result.

So we have academic religion, and emotional religion and practical religion. The first begins and ends in a classroom; the second begins and ends in a revival; the third is a conscious effort which ultimately ends in permanent character.

Those who put their trust in mental processes turn the Church into a debating society, in which everybody argues and no one convinces anybody else of anything.

Those who find their satisfaction in emotional ecstacies turn the Church into a petting party in which God coddles His elect.

Those who carry their religion into the house of God, and the haunts of men turn the Church into a workshop or a vineyard in which they are willing to bear the burden and heat of the day.

In all lines of employment certain basic principles are true. First, we take the labors of those who went before us as the asset from which we begin. Most of the wealth of the world today has been accumulated by those who rest from their labors. The great war dissipated billions of wealth, which had been accumulated in the remote past. The farmer who plants his seed is unconscious of the fact that human effort has developed that seed so that it produces five times as much as it did five hundred years ago. The mechanic who goes to work uses the accumulated wisdom of centuries to aid him in production.

Few people are so foolish as to go into the virgin wilderness, cut themselves off from contact with civilization, and be content with the meagre returns which they would get from the wilderness. It is only in religion that men think that they can scrap tradition and produce treasure de novo. We, especially those of us who use the Prayer Book, are the beneficiaries of those who have lived better lives than we are living, and are grateful for the treasure that we appropriate.

We look with amazement at men who are unable to solve the mystery of a blade of grass, and yet who confidently believe that they understand the processes of a human soul. It is not wisa principle which enters into every line dom to destroy the treasure that other men have accumulated in order to demonstrate our own independence and importance. "Other men have labored and we have entered into their labors" is of human achievement. To destroy the past is to become a savage.

Next we add to the labors of our forefathers whatever of initiative and genius we possess; but note that it is only gradually that we replace the primitive machinery with that which is more modern. The Church is not static, but it is conservative in adopting new methods of using the ancient ways.

The railroad superseded the stage coach, and possibly the aeroplane may supersede the railroad, but they are all modes of locomotion, and start from the same point and pursue a similar route to the objective. Possibly some day television and the radio will make travel unnecessary, and we can see and converse with our friends afar off, but we will still see with the same eyes and talk the same language.

Let us always remember that our progress is made possible by the things that are already attained. Man doesn't pass directly from an Indian tepee to an aerial transport. You cannot leap over the intervening spaces.

So religion progresses from things which have been experienced into new experiences; but it does not pass from crude materialism into spiritual heights without any intervening processes. I would not apply to a spiritual savage, even if he were a Ph. D., for spiritual direction.

Finally, religion has its own technique. It is more like music than it is like algebra or logic. Music has its technique, and those who would follow after this must learn it. Because a man is an expert in biology, mathematics or electrical forces does not qualify him in the slightest degree for becoming a musician or a musical critic. It is true that his mental processes ought to equip him for this task, but not unless he will accept the standards of musical training as the basis of his operations. He may be a great mathematician and a musical dud, with no ear, no voice, no harmony. It is folly to attempt to evaluate music, friendship or religion in the crucibles of a laboratory or in the formulae of a class-room. They are at the best but distant relatives.

If religion can produce any beauty or harmony or peace, it is due to certain processes which are foreign to the clinical laboratory. As well dissect your mother to ascertain the source of her many virtues.

Thinking is valuable and so is emotion, but neither of them by themselves can solve the riddle of man's purpose in the universe.—Bishop Johnson in Winona Churchman.

THE LOST WORLD.

And if at last my heart has ceased to wonder,
To wonder at the flashing of a wing;
To marvel at the trumpetings of thunder
Blowing down the sky; to wonder at the spring
That lifts the tulips' cups and gives a stem
That long was bare a sudden burst of flame—
To thrill at seeing how a diadem
Of stars makes hills too lovely for a name—

And if at last I fail to see the splendor
Of plum trees white as nuns; a shattering rose
That gives its petals in a faint surrender
When summer with her tattered garments goes—
God, let me seek a child beneath the skies
And find my whole lost world within its eyes!

—Daniel Whitehead Hicky.

When Are We Going Home?

Once upon a time it became necessary, because of change of ownership in the property, to move from our suburban home, temporarily, into a "flat" in the closer built-up residential part of the city, not being able to find, at the time, what we wanted, where we wanted it.

This "flat" was spacious and new, on the corner of two streets, with beautiful maple shade trees guarding the sidewalk, and the neighbors stared in surprise as a family with two small children was allowed to move into this latest spic and span addition. But brand new wall paper, polished floors, and all the things which some landlords declare are not for small children, had no charms for the small children inside. As father and mother moved back and forth trying to discover, out of the chaos, the materials for the evening meal, the little children wandered back and forth disconsolately, from trunk to packing box, misplaced bedstead to couch all askew, trying to understand what it was all about. This was their first experience in "moving", and at last the smaller of the two small boys asked plaintively, "Mama, when are we going home"?

When are we going home? Although it is years afterward, for, as I said in the beginning, once upon a time, and there have been several other changes in the meantime, I can still hear the tragedy in that little voice as he asked, "When are we going home" Another child in another home cried himself to sleep because of a similar change; cried because all that he had learned to love as home, and all his childish companions were to be left behind as the family locked the door of the former home to go on to the new.

Fortunately, childhood soon forgets—or, does it? Instead of forgetting, does not the child seek solace in new experiences, new companions, new sources of happiness? Nothing in the home life of a normal child is forgotten. Perhaps temporarily, but only to come to the surface at some later period, and early memories of home are the ones we carry with us through the years.

"Oh! what a looking kitchen!" exclaimed a mother in despair one day.

"You don't need to worry about the looks of your kitchen," spoke up her little boy, loyally. "You ought to see some of the kitchens where I call, and the people don't have a houseful of children, either," he added.

Quick tears of contrition for her hasty words sprang to the eyes of that mother as she realized that to this little child, this was home in spite of its frequent disorder.

In a recent magazine a father of a houseful of children writes, in a humorous vein, of a visit to a rich man's home. The dinner was "some dinner", the house—beautiful, and in the nursery a hired nurse kept the children "while the rich man's wife wrote addresses on child study. And it was all very fine."

When they returned to their own modest home, before they sat down they took a ball and a mitt out of one chair, a doll out of the other, skates were hanging on the back of another and school books were lying in the next, and the father said, "We have seen a perfect home".

And the mother said, "I do not think so".

And he said, "I did not refer to the home of our friends, but to this one".

And she answered, "I do not know a thing about child study. I only know that I love my children. And I cannot keep my house looking like a palace, for I will not make it a penal institution for my children."

That mother said she didn't know a thing about child study, but—what was it the father said?

Angelo Patri, another father, in commenting on "laboring children", said, "Schools and homes today do not offer enough scope for action. We have still to accept the fact that the intelligent child is the active child."

Going through the shops of the Washington school, during the inspection trip of the Federation of Mothers' Clubs, at every turn we met eager, happy boys, doing the things boys ought to do, for an active child is a happy child, but there was not one activity going on in those shops that could not have had its birth in the home workshop—attic, basement, shed, garage, or even a corner in the kitchen or bedroom. Everywhere we are hearing today, let's get back to the home. Yes, let's!

When the children help to make the garden—flower or vegetable—assist in trimming the trees or hedges, painting the house or garage, inside or out, whitewashing the basement, building the radio or helping with the repairs, putting up the preserves, or whatever it may be, the home is their workshop and this home that they have helped to make and to maintain is home to them always, where happy memories linger. They may laugh, as they grow older, at their first creative attempts, but the creative instincts fostered in the home are often the forerunners of happy adjustments in later years.

As we approach that inevitable period of spring cleaning, perhaps spring moving, and as we take an inventory of things needed for the house, take an inventory also for the children. Take an inventory of the back yard—what does it offer for the child? The attic, basement, garage or unused room—what possibilities do they offer? Later on commercialized activities and amusements will attract them, but if in their childhood years all these embryo activities have had their try-out in the home, under home supervision, there will not be the bewilderment and the indecision that is one of the causes of the unrest and instability that is worrying many a home today, for at least they will approach the future with some little experience, some little understanding with which to interpret what lies ahead, and they will have the memory of a real home. When are we going home?—Parent and Teachers' Magazine.

Petition and Guidance.

"A good many years ago," a Christian writes, "I was sailing in the desolate seas off Cape Horn, hunting whales. One day while we were beating directly south in the face of a hard wind, we were making very little headway. About 11 o'clock, as I stood at the wheel, the idea suddenly came into my mind: 'Why batter the ship against these waves? There are probably as many whales to the north as to the south. Suppose we run with the wind instead of against it?' In response to that sudden idea I changed the course of the ship and began to sail north instead of south. One hour later, at noon, the look-out at the masthead shouted, 'Boats ahead'! Presently we overtook four lifeboats in which were fourteen sailors, the only survivors of the crew of a ship which had burned to the water's edge ten days before. Those men had been adrift in their boats ever since, praying God frantically for rescue; and we arrived just in time to save them. They could not have survived another day."

Then the old whaler added: "I don't know whether you believe in religion or not, but I happen to be a Christian. I have begun every day of my life with the prayer that God would use me to help some one else, and I am convinced that God that day put the idea into my mind to change the course of my ship. That idea was the means of saving fourteen lives."—News and Truths.

The Church must repent of its intolerance and must abandon its caste of goodness and give up the artificial distinction between the saved and unsaved. The Church must repent of its own sins and go out as an agency adventuring in quest of the Christ life instead of quietly assuming that goodness is achieved by its membership.—G. Bromley Oxman, President of DePauw University.

"Christ is as much needed for this life as for any possible life. Nay, He is more needed; for this life is the beginning and the seed-bed of all that is to come."

For the Young Folks

THINGS WE CAN'T AFFORD.

We can't afford to win the gain
That means another's loss;
We can't afford to miss the crown
By stumbling at the cross.

We can't afford the heedless jest
That robs us of a friend;
We can't afford the laugh that finds
In bitter tears an end.

We can't afford the feast today
That brings tomorrow's fast;
We can't afford the farce that comes
To tragedy at last.

We can't afford to play with fire,
Or tempt a serpent's bite;
We can't afford to think that sin
Brings any true delight.

We can't afford with serious heed
To treat the cynic's sneer;
We can't afford to wise men's words
To turn a careless ear.

We can't afford for hate to give
Life hatred in return;
We can't afford to feed a flame
And make it fiercer burn.

We can't afford to lose the soul
For this world's fleeting breath;
We can't afford to barter life
In mad exchange for death.

But blind to good are we apart
For Thee, All-Seeing Lord;
Oh, grant us light, that we may know
The things we can't afford.

—Selected.

When Grandfather Took a Canoe Trip.

"Oh, grandfather," cried Jack, running across the lawn to a big armchair where the old man liked to sit in the shade, "I paddled a canoe today. Did you know that it is the one who sits in the back of the canoe that guides it?"

"Yes," replied the grandfather slowly. "I learned that—well, let me see—about seventy years ago. I remember I was ten years old when I took my first ride in a canoe. Joe Brown made it."

"Oh, Joe Brown was the Indian boy who was your chum, wasn't he?"

"Yes, I've told you before how we lived near an Indian settlement. The Indian boys used to play with us, and Joe Brown was the best friend I had. I admired him because he knew how to make real bows and arrows, and do many other things better than we other boys could. And how Joe did like to make things for me."

"Joe Brown wasn't his real name, was it?" Jack said, remembering another story his grandfather had told him. "But did he make you a canoe?" he added quickly. "Tell about your first ride in one."

"I can't remember the boy's Indian name," mused the old man. "It was because his real name was so hard to pronounce that every one called him Joe Brown. No," continued the grandfather thoughtfully, "the canoe wasn't mine; and yet I think Joe made it with the idea of giving me a trip up among the Thousand Islands as much as he did to have it for himself. We lived at the edge of a town that was on a large river. About a mile north of the town was a group of islands called the Thousand Islands. One of them was named Horseshoe Island. I had never seen that, and I was very curious to know how an island in the shape of a horseback would look."

"I'll make a canoe and take you up there, Davy," Joe promised one day. And I knew then that he really would do it. For you could always depend on the Indian boys to keep their promises. I think that was one reason why I liked Joe so well.

"I wasn't surprised when I went to Joe's place a few days later and found him bending stout young ash limbs and binding them with thongs to hold them in a curved position.

"When the framework of the canoe was finished, Joe took big slabs of birch-bark that had been carefully cut from the trunks of birch trees. He had a kind of gum which his father made from something he found in the woods. That gum was used to cement the edges of the birch-bark so the canoe would be water-tight.

"Well, one afternoon I heard Joe give some peculiar whoops. This was a signal that the canoe was ready to use, and that we could go to Horseshoe Island. I remember my father cautioned me before I left home about moving in the canoe. He said that kind of a boat would upset much more easily than a rowboat.

"But when I stepped proudly over the end and onto the slab of wood that ran through the middle on the inside of the bottom of that canoe, I knew father's precautions had been unnecessary. For Joe wouldn't let me get in until I had agreed to do just what he told me. He said he didn't intend to let me upset that canoe.

"I'll never forget," smiled the old man, "how pleased I was when Joe said I might sit in the front of the canoe and use one of the paddles. I thought I would do the steering then, but when I asked Joe to tell me how to guide the boat, he laughed and said he would sit in the stern and do that.

"We sat on our heels as we paddled that canoe upstream. Between us in the bottom of the canoe was a bow and arrow, which Joe planned to use to shoot some fish. There was a flint-stone to make a fire, and also a piece of punk to help kindle it. To get punk the Indians took the inside of a rotten log and dried it by hanging it near their open fire.

"Joe watched for fish as we paddled along. He said the only way one could shoot fish was to find a place where they were sunning themselves. Otherwise the fish did not come near enough to the surface of the water. I had brought some sandwiches in my pocket, and if we could catch a good fish we would have a meal.

"Presently we came to the first of the islands. It was fun to make the canoe go close to its shore. Around among the islands we paddled until we came to a place where we were almost surrounded by land. 'This can't be the end of the river, can it?' I asked. 'But we are coming to shore here and there is land all around us and—'

"Joe looked wise, but he didn't say anything for a minute. When we were landing against the far shore, which seemed like the end of the river, he asked solemnly, 'Weren't you looking for Horseshoe Island'?

"You see, we had paddled in at the open side of the horseshoe that made the island. And the rest of it was much wider than I had expected it would be.

"Because we hadn't found a place where any fish were sunning themselves, Joe concluded we couldn't use the bow and arrow to get fish that day. So we took hooks from our pockets, pulled them out of the corks that held them, and began to look for bait. Then we sat down to fish on some big stones which were near the place where we had landed the canoe.

Well, we fished and we fished. But not a fish would bite that afternoon, even for Joe, who usually could catch fish when none of the rest of us were getting any. The longer we fished the more hungry we became. 'You eat the sandwiches,' Joe finally said, 'and I'll eat when I get a fish.' Indian boys are accustomed to going without food for a long time, and Joe was always very good to me.

"When it was nearly sunset Joe left me and went off to fish by himself. He was determined to catch something before we started home in the canoe. As it became more and more dusky, I began to wonder about Joe. I wandered off in the direction he had started, and called and called. But no answer came. 'Joe is lost,' I concluded gloomily. As it became dark I suddenly realized that I was lost too. I had no idea in which direction town and home was. The thought gave me a queer feeling."

"Couldn't you tell by where the sun had been when it set?" asked Jack eagerly. "When you know what time it is, you can always tell directions by the sun."

"Yes," smiled the grandfather. "But I had wandered around that island looking and calling for Joe until I had no idea where the sun had set. I knew my folks would be anxious when I didn't get home by dark. And now I began to wonder if I ever would get home. I was quite sure by this time that something had happened to Joe. I didn't know how to guide the canoe. And if I had known how to make the canoe go in the direction I wanted it to go, I didn't know where town and home were. And that island with the dark water flowing by was a lonesome place.

"Suddenly I heard a screech owl. I wonder if there is anything that makes one feel more lonesome when in a lonely place than a screech owl! The call of this one came nearer and nearer. Usually the call seems to get farther and farther away. Then there was a whoop that I knew. It was Joe. He had been imitating the screech owl to fool me.

"Triumphantly the lad held a big fish up in the dim light. Only some one who knows how an Indian boy hates to give up before he accomplishes what he sets out to do can realize how happy Joe was to catch that fish.

"'Where's the flint-stone and the punk?' Joe asked eagerly. 'We'll cook this fish in no time.'

"'Well, I am afraid my folks will be worrying,' I began doubtfully. 'I should have been home by dark, I didn't tell Joe that I was anxious too, because we didn't know which way to go to get home. I never liked to let him know when I was afraid. I guess that was because I admired his bravery.

"Joe agreed to wait until we got to town to cook the fish. After all, it was the catching of the fish and not the eating about which he had been most eager.

"We put the canoe into the water and climbed carefully into it. Then I asked Joe the way to go to get out of the islands.

"Well, Joe told me to put my hand into the water and feel the current. He said the river flowed in the same direction among the islands that it did anywhere.

"I knew then, of course, that we weren't lost. All we had to do to get to town was to paddle downstream, since we had paddled up the river to get to the islands.

"So," finished the grandfather with a smile, "we got home safe. And that is the story of my first ride in a canoe."—Junior World.

For No Reason Whatever.

June Douglass.

"You boys," said Mr. James severely, "are somewhat like lobsters."

"How's that?" cried both boys in unison, their quarrel forgotten at once.

"Because, like lobsters, you quarrel for no reason whatsoever," answered Mr. James, laughingly.

"I didn't know lobsters were such fighters," said Earl, hoping that Mr. James would tell them something about lobsters.

"They are the worst scrappers in the world," answered Mr. James.

"They even pull one another's legs off in their anger."

"And that is the end of them," said Bert.

"You are mistaken," said Mr. James, "for lobsters have the 'funny habit' of growing new ones."

"That's the first time I ever heard that," cried Earl. "Please tell us more about them, Mr. James."

"The general shape and appearance of this unique fellow is so well known I won't need to describe him," began Mr. James, delighted to see that the boys had forgotten their little quarrel.

"Before Mr. Lobster is cooked he is bluish-black in color—not the bright red that we see him, when he is served on our tables. Mrs. Lobster carries her eggs about with her wherever she is inclined to go. She lays them in autumn and they hatch the next midsummer.

"Mr. Lobster seems to be always lying in wait for somebody to come along so that he can fight—that seems to be his chief occupation. Lobsters do not rove much.

"Lobsters are caught in traps in which bait has been placed. They are very fond of meat, whether it be fresh or tainted. The traps are made of slats, through which the water flows freely. The entrance is through a funnel-shaped passage, with the large end facing outward, like the wire rat traps. It is easy for Mr. Lobster to get into, but not so easy to get out of.

"Lobster meat is expensive, and consequently they are much sought after. But some of the fishermen are very careless and lobsters are getting scarce. They are hardy creatures and will live a long time out of water if packed in ice. Consequently they can be shipped long distances. Perhaps, for the simple reason that a new leg or claw will sprout from the scar, where the old one comes off, is why the lobster will fight for no reason whatsoever."—The Presbyterian.

Mother's Face.

A long, long time ago there dwelt a father and mother whose little daughter was as beautiful as the sunlight itself.

It was a quiet little village in Japan where these three happy people lived, but one day the father was called away to the great city and was gone several weeks. When he returned his wife and daughter were very glad. They never tired of listening to the marvelous stories he told them of the wonderful far-off city.

After the daughter had retired for the night the father handed his wife a box, saying: "I have brought you something very strange for a present. It is called a mirror; something we have never before had in our village and of which you never even have heard."

Of course the wife was much interested in seeing her own reflection in the new mirror, and often took it out to look at her mirrored face. Then one day she thought, "How vain I am! I will look no more in the lovely mirror," and she hid it away and almost forgot about it.

Years passed. The little child had grown into a beautiful girl, as beautiful as her own mother. Indeed, she was so exactly like her mother that one could scarcely tell them apart, except that one was a little older than the other.

One day the good mother grew very ill. She knew that she had only a short time to live, and her heart was very heavy. She had tried to teach her daughter to know and love Jesus as she herself loved Him, but it made her very sad to think that she would no longer be with her daughter to help her to do right.

So she took the little mirror out from its hiding-place and called the daughter to her.

"Dear child," she said, "I am going to leave you. But here is a little mirror. Promise me that every morning and night you will look into it, for you will see me there, and then you will know that I am watching over you always. When you are happy, you will see that I am happy; and when you are sad, you will see that I am sad with you. When you do right, when you conquer yourself as did Jesus, you will be happy, and you will see that I am happy. When you fail to live as Jesus would have you do, you will be sad and will see that I am sad, then you will ask God to forgive you, and next time you will try harder to do right."

Then the mother died and the child was left alone with her father. But she was not sad because she had the wonderful mirror. Every night and morning she looked into it and saw what she thought was her mother's face looking into hers. Every night she told the face in the mirror all that had happened during the day. Whenever she had conquered her own selfish wishes and felt happy, her mother seemed to smile back at her from the mirror. So the child grew on, becoming sweeter and more lovely every day; for she thought only such thoughts as she felt would please Jesus, and thus would make her mother glad.

"Dear mother's face grows sweeter and kinder every day," she said to her father one day.

The father's eyes filled with tears. "Yes, dear child," said he, "it does; and your own face grows every day more and more like your mother's."

It was not until years later, when the Japanese daughter moved to the city, that she learned that it was her own reflection in the mirror, and knew that her mother had taken this way to help her to do right and to conquer herself.—Selected.

The Dying Captain.

There is the affecting tale told of the captain of a small sailing vessel who was taken ill. They were far from land and the vessel carried no doctor. The captain, realizing that death was approaching, became troubled in soul and very anxious. He sent for his mate, but the difficulty was beyond the mate's power to solve; he could only mutter a vague hope that " 'He worn't as bad as 'e thought". The captain then ordered him to send down the bos'n, but he was still inarticulate when confronted with the question, How to prepare for dying. He was sent on deck, where he gave it as his opinion that the "ole man" was "goin' off 's 'ead", and the crew were sent down one by one with the same result, until in despair the captain summoned the poor cabin-boy. Johnny gave it as his opinion that if his mother were there there would not be any difficulty, so in agony the captain asked him what did he think his mother would do. Johnny replied that the very first thing his mother would do would be to ask for a Bible. When directed by the captain, who began to see a ray of hope, Johnny found a Bible, he said that the next thing she would do would be to turn to the fifty-third of Isaiah, and this the dying man begged him to do without delay. When after some difficulty he had found it, his face brightened and he said, "Cap'n, me mother always taught me to read a bit ov it in dis way: 'He was wounded for Johnny's transgressions. He was bruised for Johnny's iniquities. The chastisement of Johnny's peace was upon Him, and with His stripes Johnny is healed." The poor face on the pillow was turned questioningly towards the reader, and the fast darkening lips framed the question, "Who is He, Johnny"? "Jesus, cap'n," said the boy. Still the same longing look till the boy humbly suggested with an inward tremor, for a captain is a great man in the eyes of his cabin boy. "Suppose, cap'n, you read it with Jesus' name and—and with yours." So they began, the man's deep voice, upon which the hush of death was fast falling, following the lad's clear treble. "Jesus was wounded for Cap'n Smith's transgressions. * * *" The ship rose and fell rhythmically to the slow swell, the timbers creaked and the bulkheads groaned, still the deep voice, growing more indistinct now, toiled after the treble until silence fell. Then, whilst an ineffable look of supreme content crept over the storm-battered face and a light into the upturned, fast-glazing eyes, his lips were seen to move, "Jesus * * * with Jesus' stripes I am healed."—Pentecostal Herald.

A Story of Lights.

The night had come. The sun had disappeared, and birds had tucked their heads beneath their wings to rest. A night bird flew close to an electric light.

"Of what use are you?" asked the bird. "You give so little light compared with the sun!"

"I do the best I can," said the light. "Think how dark this corner would be if I were not here! People walking and driving might run into one another and some one might get hurt."

"That's true," said the bird, and away he flew. Then he came near a gas light, standing apart from houses and busy streets.

"Of what use are you?" asked the bird. "You do not give as much light as the electric light!"

"I do the best I can," said the light. "Do you not see that steep bank beyond? If I were not here some one might fail to see it and fall."

"That's true," said the bird, and away he flew. Soon his sharp eye spied a lamp in a window.

"Of what use are you?" asked the bird. "You do not give even as much light as the gas light."

"I do the best I can. I am in the window to throw light down the path, that Farmer Brown may see the way when he comes home. I do my best."

"That's true," said the bird, and away he flew.

But again his sharp eye spied a light,

a tiny candle light in the nursery window.

"Of what use are you?" asked the bird. "Your light is so small! You do not give as much light as a lamp."

"I do the best I can," said the candle, "and I can be easily carried from room to room. Nurse uses me when she gives the children a drink at night or sees them snugly covered up in bed. I do the best I can."

"That's true," said the bird, and away he flew, thinking: "The little and great, all are helpers."—Kindergarten Review.

For the Southern Churchman.

CHANGES.

Maude F. Mumma.

Amid the changing scenes of time,
What have we that is not Thine;
What to make the spirit proud,
What that speaks not of the shroud?

Why the struggle and the sigh,
When so soon we pass them by;
Why the heartache and the tear,
When the Father's love is near

O ye, of little faith, how prone
To take each sorrow as thine own;
Why not through the shadows dim,
Cast your every care on Him?

O how vain to strive and plan,
Before we see His guiding hand;
How much wiser than by far
To leave the plane and seek the Star.

Put On Your "Thinking-Cap".

What has a mouth and runs, yet has neither head nor feet? A river.

What has a face that it never washes and hands that are always in motion? A clock.

What is good on the inside, of little value on the outside, yet the inside would be useless without the outside? A lead pencil.

What can you hear and feel, yet never see? The wind.

What has eyes that it doesn't see with and feet that it never uses for walking? A tape measure.

What can't stand alone, yet can go farther in a day than a horse and carry as great a load? A bicycle.

What dish is like a foolish fellow? An empty mug.

What dish never drinks, although it has a mouth? A pitcher.

What has an eye and no head? A needle.

What has no head and no mouth, but a hundred teeth? A comb.

WILL YOU HELP?

The object of the Aquia Church Association is to raise money to build a new road to make the church accessible between the highway and the church door. An arch at the entrance of the road is to be given by the U. D. C. in memory of the veterans of all the wars. $4,000 is needed for the road.

You, as one who reveres these churches which show that our forefathers were faithful in reverence and worship, or you who are descendants of these families who frequented old Aquia, or you who believe in preserving and restoring the history and landmarks of the days that are gone, help us in our efforts to make this church accessible so that "whosoever will may come".

AQUIA CHURCH ASSOCIATION,
Miss Pickett Waller, President,
Widewater, Va.

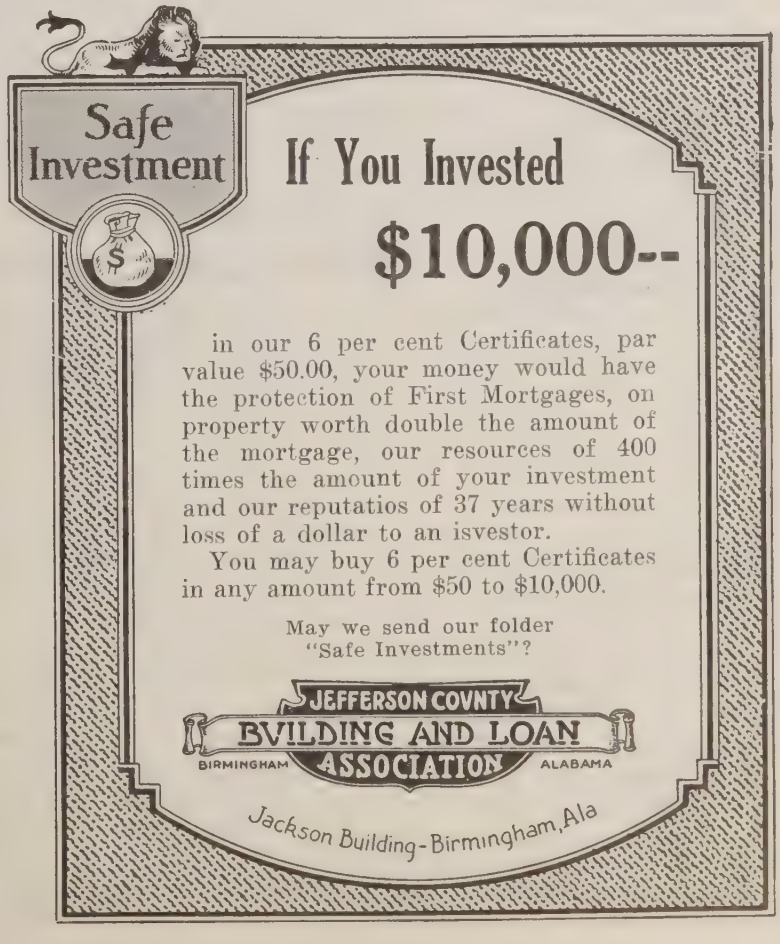
Mosquitoes Die, or Money Back

Flit is the world-famous "sure thing" in killing mosquitoes, flies, roaches, bed bugs, ants and fleas. More people use Flit because it kills faster (thanks to more insect-killing ingredients), and is easier to use in the handy Flit sprayer. More for your money in the quart size.

FLIT

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

© 1929 Stanco Inc.



AMERICAN TRACT SOCIETY

Seven West Forty-fifth Street, New York.

President: WILLIAM PHILLIPS HALL
General Secretary: WILLIAM H. MATTHEWS, D. D.
Executive and Recording Secretary: REV. EDWIN NOAH HARDY, PH. D.
Treasurer: COL. CHARLES ELLIOT WARREN.
EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE:

William Phillips Hall, David G. Wylie, D. D., Hugh R. Monro, Silas F. Hallock, M. D., Frederick H. Knubed, D. D., Robert Watson, D. D., Robert Scott Inglis, D. D., S. V. V. Huntington, Simeon B. Chapin, Robert M. Kurtz, Finis S. Idleman, D. D., Frank A. Hosmer, D. D., Carlton E Hunt, J. Frederick Talcott, Phillip S. Suffern, William Albert Harrison, J. Stanley Durkee, D. D., Henry W. Tiffany, Th. D.

Donations for the work should be forwarded to the
AMERICAN TRACT SOCIETY,
7 West Forty-fifth Street New York, N. Y.

Classified Advertising and Notices

All notices and advertisements, excepting positions wanted, will be inserted in this department at a rate of 20 cents per agate line, each insertion. Special rates to contracts of any length. A rate of 15 cents per line is made to persons seeking positions. No advertisement accepted for less than 50 cents.

Copy for this department must be received not later than Tuesday of the week in which it is intended that the first insertion shall appear.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

ANTIQUES.

WE PAY THE HIGHEST CASH PRICES for old-time furniture and antiques of all kinds. H. C. Valentine, 209 East Franklin Street, Richmond, Va.

RELIGIOUS TRACTS.

GOOD RELIGIOUS TRACTS MAY BE had by writing to LEVI C. SULLIVAN, blind tract minister, P. O. Box 43, Roanoke, Va. Some excellent tracts for prison work.

FOR RENT—VIRGINIA BEACH, VA.

TWO LOVELY ROOMS WITH PRIVATE BATH in attractive bungalow; best location Virginia Beach. Address "Box 5", Virginia Beach, Va.

SITUATION WANTED.

WANTED, POSITION AS TEACHER, Academical or Industrial department in home, or institution. Experienced. Address Miss Leislie L. Rucker, Pedlar Mills, Va.

WANTED, POSITION AS SUPERINTENdent of small institution, assistant to large, or case-worker for same, by lady trained and experienced in each. Address "X-X", care of Southern Churchman.

YOUNG LADY DESIRES POSITION AS Companion to an old lady, or semi-invalid, by October 1, if possible. Can give good reference. Address "A. G. C.", care of Southern Churchman.

WANTED: MATURED WOMAN OF VAried experience, student of Lewis Hotel Training Course, efficient in secretarial work, desires position as matron, or supervisor in school; manager of apartment house, or assisant manager of tea-room. Excellent references. Address Mrs. Ada B. Lloyd, P. O. Box 115, Moorefield, West Virginia.

Deaths

LUCY WALKE CRUICKSHANK.

Entered into life eternal, at Galena, Maryland, July 27, 1929, in the eightieth year of her age, LUCY WALKE CRUIKSHANK.

"Be still my soul! Thy God doth undertake
To guide the future, as He has the past.
Thy hope, thy confidence, let nothing shake,
All now mysterious shall be brought to light at last."

CHURCH INTELLIGENCE.

(Continued from page 16.)

the time. It was seven before they said the bath was ready, we having arrived at six. After a good Japanese bath, supper was announced at eight. I asked about the service and they said, "Oh, do not worry, we shall have it at nine". The room in which we were entertained was off at one end of the house and our meal was brought on trays carried by several women, servants and friends, I think. The main dish was a tremendous red lobster deliciously prepared.

About nine o'clock they said we would go next door to a friend's house where a few people were gathered to hear what we had to say. Twenty-one were assembled. Mr. Honda took charge and we had a very simple meeting. He explained that Christians always began their meetings with prayer and that although many of them would not understand, yet if they would do as we did they would probably understand our spirit at least. So we bowed our heads (we were sitting Japanese fashion) very reverently and so did they. Mr. Honda prayed very simply and then we sang a simple hymn.

After this we told them something about Christianity and the Christian life. After this I said what I could in Japanese about the Christian God and his love for all men. We had prayer again. But the people did not want to go and so we stayed and talked with them further about the wonderful news until eleven o'clock. They still did not want to go, but finally, for fear we might overdo it, and rather wanting them to leave wishing for more, we told them that would be all and promised to visit them again.

The next morning we had the Holy Communion for the Christians. We found a very earnest Congregational girl there also; neither of these girls knew the other was a Christian. It was a beautiful service and the presence of our living Lord was tremendously felt. Some of the people walked with us two miles across the peninsula to the other boat, and we went on our way rejoicing.

At our next place we visited a Christian connected with a culture pearl factory. That night he arranged for a meeting in the mess hall and eighty men came, some from the factory and some from the village. They listened most attentively. Next morning we had the Holy Communion for the Christians.

So far, in six weeks, we have visited five such places and have arranged for a pastor to visit them once a month. In one place they are paying the expenses. Of course they always provide the room and usually the meals. We hope that in each place they will soon be able to pay all expenses connected with a visit. We are bringing back into the Church many who have drifted away, and we are finding many places where Christion work can be opened with little or no expense to the Mission. Of course we go only to those places that are promising. We are now working on a library for these people.

Please remember this work in your prayers.

NEW YORK.

Rt. Rev. William T. Manning, D. D.,
Rt. Rev. A. S. Lloyd, D. D., Suffragan.
Rt. Rev. Herbert Shipman, Suffragan.

A gift of $50,000 to St. Stephen's College, to endow a chaplaincy, has been given by Trinity Church, New York City.

Daily Outdoor Preaching at Calvary.

Every day in the week, excepting on Saturday and Sunday, an outdoor service is held on the little strip of grass that separates Calvary Episcopal Church, Twenty-first and Fourth Avenue, from the stream of trucks and motors that swirl around the corner of the church. Two great amplifiers stand, one pointing through Twenty-first Street, the other down Fourth Avenue, and on an improvised soap box, speaking through a microphone, Mr. Theodore Dorsey, a summer member of the staff of the church, gives daily the message of how he who had been a soldier, a sailor, a gambler, a drunkard and a prize fighter, had become an evangelist working to bring an experience of Christ to any man who would listen. Thanks to the microphone, the people who hear the noise of the music which he plays first from a Victrola attaced to the amplifier, come to the windows of the office buildings and apartment houses which surround the church, and are able to hear his voice quite plainly when he begins to speak. There is usually a thick crowd on the sidewalk outside of the church, but the little groups that form on the other side of Fourth Avenue, or down Twenty-first Street, can hear as plainly as those nearer. Sometimes some other member of the staff gives his testimony also of what Christ has actually done in his own life. After the two short services at 12:00 o'clock, noon, and 5:00 in the afternoon are over, Mr. Dorsey and members of the staff mingle with the crowd and seek opportunities for talks with anyone who is interested in finding a deeper religious experience. All kinds of people listen. They are mostly the people who work in nearby buildings, but there is also the driftwood that floats through any main street anywhere. There is usually a sprinkling of clergymen. The other day after one of the meetings, an indignant conservative Episcopalian came to see us at Calvary House to tell us how absolutely he disapproved of us. "The Episcopal Church has always been respectable," he said. "We have always worked with respectable people. What is the good of talking to the other kind? Even if you get them, you don't want them." They do not feel that way at Calvary. No one is too poor, or too down-and-out, just as no one is too rich or too important, to make them impossible as messengers for Christ.

On Sunday night the clergy and a volunteer choir in vestments march from Twenty-first Street to Twenty-fourth Street and Madison Square at 7 o'clock where on an improvised soap box half a dozen people give testimonies about what Christ has done for them. The choir joins in singing familiar hymns, the words of which are on leaflets that are distributed to the crowd.

The evening service at 8 o'clock is crowded with the people who march back from the Square to take part in the service.

The Thursday night meetings, which have been going on now for nearly four years, continue all summer. In spite of the heat in July, often more than two hundred people came.

Calvary Church takes no summer vacation. Even though a large number of the regular congregation go away for a month or two, there are always people who either take no vacation at all or for whom it is only a brief two weeks. These and the visitors from out of town keep the clergy and staff fully as busy as they are in winter.

This summer there have been about a dozen people beside the staff spending July in Calvary House, 61 Cramercy Park, North. These are all people who want to learn how to share with others their own religious experience. It seemed to the rector and his assistants that the best way to help them would be to have them share in the fellowship of Calvary House by living with the staff for a month. They would see not only the way we work but the way we play.

Every morning for two hours this group, with any other visitors, meets with the staff. Someone leads off the meeting with a talk about some characteristic phase of the work done at Calvary. The following subjects and others like them have served as starting points from which interviews are held later:

"Sin, the Hindrance."
"How to Keep a Quiet Time."
"Guidance."
"How to Give Away a Religious Experience."

The Church School goes on all summer. It is smaller, of course, than in winter, but the children who come, get a great deal from it and will be very helpful in the larger classes of next winter.

Three people from Calvary will speak on the radio this summer. Mr. Shoemaker has preached once over the radio. Mr. Theodore Dorsey has also spoken, and on August 1st, at one o'clock, daylight saving time, Mrs. Paul Reynolds spoke about "New Lives for Old" over Station WMCA. Mrs. Reynolds is the author of "New Lives for Old", a book published on June 1 by Fleming H. Revell & Co.

Most of the staff and the summer visitors are young, so there will be many good times at Calvary House. On Saturday night there is to be a dance on the roof.

This roof is a great institution. On any clear afternoon the rector and his assistants may be found playing Deck Tennis or Medicine Ball. Other members of the staff will be stretched out in steamer chairs, reading or writing.

Mr. Shoemaker, the rector, believes in play, although he and his staff work very long hours indeed. Almost every week some of the staff spend the day in Westchester County at a club on the Sound, where they can swim and where Mr. Perry Faeth organizes ball games on the spur of the moment.

Miss Olive Jones is the director of Calvary House. She is away during August, when the assistant director, Miss Mary Reynolds, is in charge. Vacations are so arranged at Calvary that none of the activities have to slow down. Even the rector himself only takes five weeks.

During August Mrs. Ray Purdy will be the chaperone of Calvary House.

St. Margaret's, the Pivotal Church of the Bronx, Has Good Friends.

"Ten races and seven religious beliefs were represented at the altar rail at St. Margaret's on the first Sunday in June. Many people, natives of foreign lands, with their "old country" religious backgrounds, are finding their Church home in this active parish."—The Diocesan Bulletin.

"It is a rare thing for a church the size of yours in a situation as difficult to render the service you are rendering and indeed to command the friendship of an entire section of the city."—Edmund de S. Brunner, International Survey Expert of the Institute of Social and Religious Research.

"It is a long time since I have seen a situation set forth with a plan to meet it, with so much of real statesmanship and so fine a mingling of the ideal and the practical."—Dr. Charles S. Macfarland, General Secretary of the Federal Council of Churches.

"You are making a gallant stand in a neighborhood which under less courageous leadership would undoubtedly have been surrendered at an earlier date. You deserve the support of those beyond the borders of your immediate parish."—Dr. Charles E. McAllister of Baltimore.

"A field of great opportunity of which advantage is being taken in a most hopeful way."—Dr. W. Russell Bowie.

"I do trust that some liberal-hearted Church people will give the support your work deserves."—Dr. Hutchins C. Bishop, rector of St. Philip's.

"You and your people are really bringing things to pass, and I personally believe that the diocese should stand squarely behind you."—Dr. James A. Hamilton.

"With warmest appreciation of all that you and people are doing to spread the spirit of fellowship, and to bring religion into the lives and homes of the people in your neighborhood."—Bishop Manning.

"Anything I can do to further your good undertakings will give me real satisfaction."—Suffragan Bishop Lloyd.

"I sympathetically understand how much has been accomplished and how much still remains to be done under your leadership."—Suffragan Bishop Shipman.—Bronx Home News.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

Rt. Rev. Albert S. Thomas, Bishop.

The Annual Church School Institute of the Colored Churchmen of the Diocese of South Carolina, was held on July 25-28 inclusive, in the Church of the Good Shepherd, Sumter, S. C., of which Rev. William H. Brown, Jr., is rector. The address and lectures before the Institute were very instructive and to the point.

A resolution was passed by the Ingram were Archdeacon Elliott, of Upper South Carolina, and Archdeacon Baskervill, Revs. William H. Brown, Jr., William E. Forsythe, C. A. Harrison, Isaac I. McDonald and William M. Morgan, Prof. A. W. Hoursey, Dr. W. S. Wilkinson, and Messrs. W. F. Bultman and F. C. Stoney and Miss E. B. Levan.

Aresolution was passed by the Institute, conveying its deep appreciation to the Rector, congregation and friends of the Good Shepherd for their bountiful hospitality.

One of the features of the Institute was a visit to the Church of the Holy Cross, Staatsburg, where Mr. Saunders, one of the leading laymen of the Church took the delegates through the building and gave them an interesting account of history, which went back to 1788.

The Church of the Holy Cross is one of the most beautiful Church edifices in the South. E. L. B.

BETHLEHEM.

Rt. Rev. F. W. Sterrett, D. D., Bishop.

St. John's, Hamlin.

Extensive repairs are being made to the Church and Rectory at Hamlin this summer. This rural mission was for a number of years undecided whether to live or die. It has taken on a new lease of life, and is rallying splendidly to the efforts of Mr. Kappes, a Divinity Student at Nahotah. This is his second summer in Hamlin. During the rest of the year the Rev. Mr. Allen, of Grace Church, Honesdale, ministers to the people.

Recovering.

The Rev. Wallace Goodfellow, of St. Paul's Church, Montrose, has been very ill for several months. His physician now reports that he has passed the crisis and is rapidly recovering. He hopes to begin his work about the middle of September. The whole Diocese rejoices in his promised recovery.

Supplying.

The Rev. Robert F. Kline, of Calvary Church, Wilkes Barre, is taking the services during August in the Church of The Redeemer, Sayre, Penn., Rev. Glen B. Walter, rector.

The Rev. H. W. Stovall, who was assisting the Rev. Mr. Neikirk for some time during his illness has been requested to continue to supply the Church of the Epiphany, Glenburn, until September.

Visiting.

The Rev. and Mrs. Frederick B. Hornby, of St. Thomas' Church, Morgantown, are spending their vacation in visiting parts of Kansas and Iowa, where Mr. Hornby served missions before coming East.

H. P. W.

ORDINATIONS.

Isaac Ernul Brooks was ordained to the diaconate in Grace Church, Hulmeville, Pa., on July 26, by the Rt. Rev. Thomas C. Darst, D. D., Bishop of East Carolina. Mr. Brooks was presented by the Rev. Henry R. Gummey, D. D., professor of Liturgics and Canon Law, Philadelphia Divinity School. The sermon was preached by the Rev. Addison A. Ewing, D. D., professor of Homelitics, Philadelphia Divinity School. The Litany was read by the Rev. John R. Crosby, D. D., the Epistle by the Rev. Waldo Parker. The Rev. W. F. Allen assisted in the Communion service. Mr. Brooks has been lay-reader in charge of Grace Church for the past year and will continue his work at this place during the remainder of his attendance at the Philadelphia Divinity School, where he will be a member of the Senior Class. He was a Candidate for Holy Orders from Christ Church, New Bern, Diocese of East Carolina.

S. G.

HOW TO OBTAIN AN IDEAL MEMORIAL.

Attractive Booklet FREE.

A very helpful booklet which has just been published by the Winnsboro Granite Corporation, Rion, S. C., tells how you can obtain an ideal Memorial. The ideal Monument it explains must possess four essentials—beauty, durability, strength and legibility of inscription. This booklet contains many very pleasing Memorial designs and much practical information that every buyer of Monuments should have.

Readers of this publication are familiar with the sterling qualities of Winnsboro Granite, which is quarried by the above corporation, and shipped to all parts of this country. Winnsboro Granite has proven to be the finest quality Monumental material to be found in America. It is known far and wide for its beauty, permanence, strength and legibility of inscriptions cut therein. Scientifis tests show Winnsboro Granite contains less deleterious ingredients, such as lime, iron and water, than any other American gray granite. This is an important factor buyers of Memorials must consider. Like all high quality materials, Winnsboro Granite is sometimes confused with the many inferior substitutes which resemble this granite on first appearance, but do not possess its lasting qualities and permanent beauty.

Write for your FREE copy of this attractive booklet on Memorials, and see the many beautiful designs for family Monuments. It explains how you can avoid substitutes and obtain genuine Winnsboro Granite. Address Winnsboro Granite Corporation, Rion, S. C.

REVISED PRAYER BOOK AND BURIAL SERVICE

Editor Southern Churchman:

I have read with deepest interest the articles of Rev. C. E. Lucas on "Here a Little and There a Little" and heartily endorse everything he says about the revised book. I am glad that my active ministry has ceased and I am not forced into open rebellion against the use of some of its services.

A dear friend, the daughter of a grand old clergyman, lately passed away. She was a lovely character. I went with her Rector to the funeral. Her brother officiated and I assisted. He used the revised burial service. It was the first time I had ever heard it, as the revised book has not yet come into general use in the Diocese of Easton. The service grated upon me so fearfully that I said to my brother clergyman as we drove away from the cemetery: If you are around here when God calls me hence, I want you to see to it that the old service is used at my funeral. I have used it for sixty years over many better men and women than I have ever been. I want no prayers for the dead used over me. All the years of my ministry I have taught differently.

Your paper has in it the true ring and I wish you success. You have a bitter fight before you. May the force of your convictions sustain you in it.

S. S. HEPBURN.

Worton, Md.

DESIGNED FOR THE PROMOTION OF PRACTICAL PIETY, THE DIFFUSION OF RELIGIOUS AND GENERAL INTELLIGENCE, AND THE MAINTENANCE OF THE PRINCIPLES OF THE PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL CHURCH

Southern Churchman

Vol. 94. RICHMOND, VA., AUGUST 24, 1929. No. 34.

"THROW OUT THE LIFE LINE"

HE THAT SAVETH HIS LIFE SHALL LOSE IT, AND HE THAT LOSETH HIS LIFE, FOR MY SAKE, SHALL FIND IT.

THE ONLY INVESTMENT THAT IS IMPERVIOUS TO LOSS.

The gift of one man shines out in these latter days like a star. Robert Arthington, of Leeds, a Cambridge graduate, lived in a single room, cooking his own meals; and he gave to foreign missions £5,000,000, on the condition that it was all spent on pioneer work within twenty-five years. A slip of paper was found after his death on which he had written these words: "Gladly would I make the floor my bed, a box my chair, ald another box my table rather than that men should perish for want of the knowledge of Christ." Remembering the Lord's definite statement (Mark 10:30) that the recompense for every such investment is a hundred times the capital, or 10,000 per cent, his requital will be one of the wonders of the coming age; and it is extraordinary how wealthy Christians can overlook such an investment. A little more faith in the literal truth of our Lord's words would work revolution. "When the Puritans made their fortunes, "Lowell remarks, "they lost their religion."—The Dawn.

"He gave them their heart's desire, but sent barrenness into their souls"

"All things come of Thee, O Lord, and of Thine own have we given Thee—

A MERE PITTANCE

"He that giveth to the poor lendeth to the Lord, if you are satisfied with the security down with the cash."

Bishop Rowe has been obliged to cut the salaries, of all American workers in Alaska, by five per cent. For several months he has been in the interior of Alaska. His journeys have been frequent, long and difficult by road, river and air.

(Continued on Page 2)

"THROW OUT THE LIFE LINE."

(Continued from page 1.)

He has found many perplexing problems to solve. By far the most difficult thing he has had to do is to cut down the appropriation for Alaska by $2,669. This is three per-cent of the appropriation recommended by the National Council and approved by the General Convention. The necessity for the reduction arises because so many of the dioceses have notified the National Council that it must not count upon their giving the quotas assigned to them by the General Convention.

"In order to make this reduction," Bishop Rowe writes from Nenana on June 29, "I have been forced to apply it to the meager salaries of the workers. It seems to me that it is not keeping faith with the workers. They are sent out and promised a definite salary which, I think, should be made good. It hurts me more than I can say to be the Church's instrument in such an ungracious act, but I can find no other way of securing the required amount. If I were to take it from the appropriations for our hospitals and schools, that would mean that sick people and school children would have to go without proper food and care. I know that every member of my Alaska staff from Ketchikan to Point Hope and from Eagle to Anvik, would rather have his or her salary reduced. I could almost wish they would join in a protest dynamic enough to arouse our Church members everywhere to realize what happens when congregations and dioceses fail to give their quotas."

The Bishop then gives a list showing a reduction of $50 in the salary of each woman worker and $100 in the salary of each American clergyman. This is approximately five per cent of their incomes. The Bishop's own name heads the list with a reduction of $200. In addition, he gives up $300 for the education of his three boys.—The Witness.

Isn't there something we can do about this vital matter. It does not seem fair that we should be living in luxury at home whilst our brave heroes of the faith, on the firing lines in distant countries are bearing our burdens and carrying out the last instructions given by our Saviour on Earth—"Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to all creatures."

To have these reductions in salaries quickly restored would be heartening to Bishop Rowe of Alaska who has been cut in his appropriation about $2,700. Many members of the Episcopal Church in America are wasting their money in riotous living through automobiles, moving pictures and other wasteful extravagances, whilst tightening their contributions to missions.

One of the saints of the Church, who only lives on what she does not give away to others, writes us that she will contribute $100 to start Bishop Rowe's deficit fund, and the Southern Churchman takes up this torch to help rescue the perishing in our dominions beyond the seas, and will give the second $100 to this $2,700 fund, and earnestly requests all of our Protestant Episcopal Church papers to carry this appeal to make up the deficit in appropriations for missions.

Who will send us a check quickly before it is too late?

All checks should be sent to

Bishop H. St. George Tucker,
Bishop's House,
Richmond, Va.

"Bis dat qui cito dat."

A golden opportunity to aid that valiant soldier of the cross, Bishop Rowe, in Alaska, bearing our burdens in order to fulfil Christ's command to preach the gospel to every creature. Are there twenty-seven Episcopalians in America who will send us $100 each to avoid reducing the food supply line to our substitutes in our dominions beyond the seas?

Send us your check.

Please send check for any amount you wish.

Southern Churchman.

AGAIN AT ARARAT.

Two characters will always be associated with Aratar by those familiar with both the ancient and modern history of that mountain. One is Noah and the other James Bryce. To some the mountain is so sacred that they will not admit that the latter could ever have reached its summit, for to them it would be taken as a miracle. The legend is still cherished that a monk, desiring to venerate the ark, which it was imagined could be seen from the plain, attempted three times to climb the peak, but, falling asleep each time before reaching its summit, found himself when he waked at the foot of the mountain again—the last time, however, with a fragment of the wood resting on his breast as a souvenir. The archimandrite at the Armenian monastery, when told of Lord Bryce's ascent, "smiled sweetly" and said, "No, that cannot be; no one has ever been there. It is impossible".

Yet it had been climbed by several before Lord Bryce reached its top, and has doubtless been by others since, though it is perpetually capped with snow. His description of its impressive setting, of its difficult ascent and of the view from the summit of what seemed "the whole cradle of the human race", from Mesopotamia on the south to the great wall of the Caucasus on the north—the "boundary for so many ages of the civilized world"—is the classic of that region for English readers, and will continue to be though many other accounts will be written before its stately peaks—"if the world lasts long enough"—will have crumbled away. As Lord Bryce saw it, and as it is seen today by travelers approaching across the plain from Erivan at the north, it is the most sublime of mountains in its huge, graceful and solitary mass. And the color from the dun pedestal of the plain to the silver pinnacle of snow, with intermediate zones of green and black, adds a singular beauty to its majesty.

One who has actually seen this mountain, which lifts its pictured height upon the horizon of every man, woman or child who has heard of the ark, will agree with Lord Bryce that "no more imposing centre of the world could be imagined". Man has located his paradise near it and at its foot the Almighty began to repeople the earth. The mountain not far away on whose frosty cliffs Prometheus was chained to the rock is more awesome, but sits much in cloud and amid other mountains whose height lessens its own grandeur. Ararat stood when Lord Bryce made his ascent in 1876 at the converging point of three empires—of the Czar, the Sultan and the Shah. All has changed since then. It would be the centre of a paradise again for a people—some of whom are exiles in the earth and some crowded within the narrow limits of Armenia in Russia—if only their borders could once more embrace the feet of this mountain, sacred in their traditions and dear to their view. It is to be hoped that the Americans who are planning to reach its summit will have read Lord Bryce's "Transcaucasia and Ararat", and so not approach it merely as a mountain of 17,000 feet to be climbed, as a "stunt".—New York Times.

"WHY STAND WE IDLE."

The General Convention of 1928 ordered the Church to live within its income. This position, despite its financial soundness, has worked great hardships on many faithful servants of the Church, and has necessarily caused a drastic reduction in activities that mean education and bodily well being, as well as spiritual care.

Those whom the Church has been serving are not, however, the sole or even the chief sufferers. The hard-worked missionaries, both those who preach and those who heal, have had to face severe cuts in salaries that were already pitifully meagre.

Take Alaska, for example. There a reduction of $2,666.69 has been arbitrarily made. The Bishop, who bore the largest share of the labor, accepted the largest share of the loss, and his salary was made $500 less. Every minister had to take $100 less than he bargained for, and even the deaconesses and nurses had to give us $50 apiece.

To make both ends meet by such methods, is to transfer the deficit of the Alaska Mission from the pockets of the Church members to the pockets of the Church workers. It may be necessary, as a temporary expedient, to keep faith with the General Convention, but if these salaries are not restored, it will certainly be breaking faith with the workers.

The Southern Churchman has very kindly consented to carry this appeal for $2,666.69 in order that the salaries of our representatives in the Arctic Circle may not suffer.

PASTE THIS IN YOUR BIBLE.

An omer was six pints.
A gerah was one cent.
A farthing was three cents.
A sheckel of gold was $8.
A talent of silver was $538.30.
A talent of gold was $13,809.
A cubit was nearly twenty-two inches.
A shekel of silver was about fifty cents.
A hin was a gallon and two pints.
A mite was less than a quarter of a cent.
A piece of silver, or a penny, was thirteen cents.
A day's journey was about twenty-three and one-fifth miles.
A Sabbath day's journey was about an English mile.—World Evangel.

CHURCH EQUIPMENT SERVICE

MOLLER PIPE ORGAN

Endorsed by the most eminent organists. Built in the world's largest factory. Every organ a special creation for a particular use and fully guaranteed. Moller Organs lead all quest.

Booklets and specifications on reother makes for church, school and auditorium use. The Moller "Artiste" Reproducing Organ for residence use is without equal.

M. P. MOLLER
Hagerstown, Maryland.

A NEW BOOK OF ST. JOHN'S GOSPEL.

THE GOSPEL OF DIVINE PERSONALITY

By the

Rev. William S. Bishop, D. D.

"Dr. Bishop handles the Fourth Gospel with great reverence and devotional insight. . . . Will help many readers to find fresh treasures in it."—Church Times.

CLOTH, $1.00
Postage about 10 cents.

MOREHOUSE PUBLISHING CO.,
1801-1811 Fond du Lac Avenue
MILWAUKEE, WIS.

ATTENTION
MISSIONARY SOCIETIES

Increase your gifts to missions
Send us
25 new subscriptions and receive
A CHECK FOR $25.00
SOUTHER NCHURCHMAN,
628 E. Main Street. Richmond, Va.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICES
One Year $3.00. Two Years $5.00
Guilds and Auxiliaries

When in need of

MONUMENTS and TOMBSTONES

and want honest treatment see

BURNS & CAMPBELL,
Granite and Marble Works
PETERSBURG, VA.

Designs furnished on application and all orders receive prompt attention.

Southern Churchman

SOUTHERN CHURCHMAN COMPANY,
628 E. Main Street - - - Richmond, Va.

LANGBOURNE MEADE WILLIAMS
President
ALFRED B. WILLIAMS..Associate Editor
THE REV. FRANK COX
Associate Editor
THE REV. JAMES W. MORRIS. D. D.
Associate Editor
MRS. CONRAD H. GOODWIN,
Associate Editor
MISS SUSANNE WILLIAMS..News Editor
JOHN H. COOKE..Secretary and Manager

Entered at the Post Office in Richmond, Va., as second-class mail matter.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE.

$3.00 a year in advance. To the Clergy, $2.00. Six months, $1.50. Trial subscriptions, 3 months, 50 cents; 10 cents a copy. Foreign postage, 50 cents additional.

For the convenience of subscribers, subscriptions are continued at expiration unless otherwise ordered. Notice of renewal, discontinuance or change of address should be sent two weeks before the date they go into effect.

RECEIPT OF PAYMENT is shown in about two weeks by change of date on address label. If date is not properly extended after each payment, notify us promptly. No receipt for payment will be sent.

Notice post office address. The exact post office address to which we are directing the paper at the time of writing MUST ALWAYS BE GIVEN. Our mailing list is arranged by post offices and not alphabetically.

Make all checks and money orders payable to the Southern Churchman, and not to an individual.

ADVERTISEMENTS—Rates quoted on request. For classified see head of that department.

Representatives wanted in each Parish; liberal commissions.

News concerning the Church at large always welcome.

CONTENTS

	Page.
Thoughts for the Thoughtful	4
Editorial—No Cross, No Crown	5
Whither Are We Drifting—W. E. Cox	5
The Inspired Bible and Human Opinion	7
The Premier Preaches to Preachers	9
Four Immoralities of Christianity	10
At the Place by the Sea	10
Sanctum Sermon	11
An Unbiased View of Russia	11
Italy Inaugurates a New Marriage Law	11
Book Reviews	12
Letters to Editor	12
Church Intelligence	14
Family Department	17
Children's Department	19
Personal Notes	23

CASSOCKS

Surplices, Stoles, Eucharistic Vestments, Choir Cassocks, Cottas, Ties and Collars, Altar Linens, Materials, Tailoring.

J. M. HALL, Inc.
174 Madison Ave.
(Bet. 33d & 34th Sts.)
New York.

R. GEISSLER, INC.

56 W. 8th STREET, NEW YORK, N.Y.

Church Furnishings

IN CARVED WOOD AND MARBLE · BRASS · SILVER FABRICS + WINDOWS

J. & R. Lamb

23-25-27 SIXTH AVENUE NEW YORK
MEMORIALS IN STAINED GLASS
MOSAIC · MARBLE · STONE · GRANITE
CARVED · WOOD · METAL · ETC

Woody's Art Glass Shop

Art Stained and Leaded Glass.
Church Windows a Specialty.
513 East Main Street, Richmond, Va.

BEVERLEY HEATING

The Best for Homes, Churches, Stores and Buildings for all uses.
R. C. BEVERLEY HEATING CO., INC.,
308 E. Main St., Richmond, Va.
QUALITY—SERVICE.

LINEN for the CHURCH

PURE IRISH LINEN FOR ALL CHURCH USES, yard or piece lengths, at lowest import prices. New Special Number for Cottas, eighty-two and one-half cents. Samples on request.

MARY FAWCETT CO.,
350 Broadway, New York.

CHURCH VESTMENTS
Cassocks, Surplices, Stole.
EMBROIDERIES
Silks, Cloths, Fringes.
CLERICAL SUITS
Rabats, Collars, Shirts.
COX SONS & VINING,
131-133 E. 23d St., New York.

Church and Sunday School Furniture

THE SOUTHERN DESK COMPANY,
Hickory, N. C.
Send for Special Catalogue.

CHURCH FURNITURE

Pews, Pulpit and Sunday School Furniture. Catalog on request.

T. W. ALEXANDER & SON,
Box 147. Waynesboro, Va.

Unconquerable.

The tragedy of Christ is the exemplar of all true tragedy, which is the conquering of the apparently unconquerable by the operation of those spiritual forces that solve, with a gesture of human life. Our ceaseless difficulties in things little as well as in things vital, and our conflicts of duty with duty, of right with right, of love with love, are swallowed up and transformed by the tragedy of the Man of Sorrows, acquainted with grief, Who is still willing to walk with every one of us in the road to Emmaus.

EDUCATIONAL

Five Virginia CHURCH SCHOOLS

FOR BOYS: St. Christopher's School, Richmond; Christchurch School, Christchurch, Middlesex County.

FOR GIRLS: St. Catherine's School, Richmond; St. Anne's School, Charlottesville; St. Margaret's School, Tappahannock.

(For Catalogs, address Principals.)

LEGAL TITLE for wills: Church Schools in the Diocese of Virginia (Inc.).

(About gifts or bequests, address Central Office, 110 West Franklin Street, Richmond, Va.)

HOBART COLLEGE Geneva N. Y.

A Church College for men, founded 1828. Four year liberal arts course, leading to the degrees A. B. and B. S. High standards; faculty of thirty. For catalogue and information, address
REV. MURRAY BARTLETT, D. D., Pres.

St. Margaret's School

Tappahannock, Virginia.

A Church School for girls with modern equipment and moderate cost. Intermediate and College Preparatory. Accredited. Country life and simplicity without isolation. Beautiful grounds on Rappahannock River. Three dormitories for different ages. Supervised Athletics.
EDITH LATANE, Headmistree.

St. Anne's,

Charlottesville, Va.
Box G.

Beautiful location in far famed Blue Ridge Mountains College preparatory and elective courses. Fully accredited. Open gymnasium allows sports in the fresh air in all weather. Sleeping porches. Riding taught by expert. Music. Art. Bishop of Virginia President of Trustees. Margaret L. Porter, M. A., Principal.

St. Paul's Boys' School

Rogers Avenue, Mt. Washington, Md.
Boarding and Day Pupils—Fifth grade to college.
WALTER B. LAWRENCE, M A., Headmaster.
Faculty all College Graduates.
REV. ARTHUR B. KINSOLVING, D. D., President Board of Trustees.
Enrollment limited to Fifty Boarding Pupils. Tuition $450. Choir Scholarships. Next sesison begins September 11, 1929.

HAMPDEN-SYDNEY COLLEGE

Invites your careful consideration of its Faculty, Courses of Study, Wholesome Christian Atmosphere, and Physical Equipment.

For catalogue write,

REGISTRAR
Hampden-Sydney, Virginia

The Emergency Hospital
School for Nurses,
Washington, D. C.,
offers a three years' course to High School Graduates. Credit given for college work. Classes admitted January and September. Accredited School. Hospital 200 beds. $10.00 monthly allowance. Affiliations provided. School announcement on request Superintendent of Nurses, 1711 New York Avenue.

Thoughts For the Thoughtful

When God holds us long, often very long, in prayer, the soul is brought into earnest consecration, and opens itself to God for His incoming and bestowment of the Holy Spirit; in that attitude we are just where God wants us. We greatly mistake, when we suppose that all we have to do, is to go and ask God for a gift, that we may enjoy it and be blessed by it, and then go off to our own business, in our own way, irrespective of His will. There is no great mistake. God does not deal that way with us. He does not answer prayer on that basis. He does not come in and give us His best things under any other conditions than that we are to come into harmony with His will.

In the knowledge of the Lord
And in grace we are to grow.
Never once to settle down
Quite content with things we know;
There are heights as yet untrod
In the mysteries of God!

Professor William Lyon Phelps, in his famous "As I Like It", gives this significant incident from his own life. "Years ago I was invited to teach in a certain college, and was asked if I could keep my religion out of the classroom. On my telling this to President Dwight (President of Yale University, 1886-1899), he laughed, and said: 'My own observation shows that college teachers, who are religious never mention it in the classroom; the pupils never find it out; whereas those who are anti-religious impress their views on the students and talk about it continually'."

What is the meaning of prayer but that God would do what we cannot; and how vainly do we ask the help which we do not think we want?—Thomas Adam.

★

FISHBURNE MILITARY SCHOOL

Aim—"Not the largest, but the best"

IN EVERY class each boy recites every day. Contacts with schoolmates from all over the country. Graduates enter all colleges. Certificate privileges. Mild year 'round climate. Easily reached. Full athletic program supervised by experienced men. Modern equipment. Swimming pool. Col. M. H. Hudgins, Box , Waynesboro, Virginia.
Member Ass'n of Military Colleges and Schools of U. S.

★ ★

★

SAINT MARY'S SCHOOL AND JUNIOR COLLEGE

Raleigh, North Carolina.

Rev. Warren W. Way, A. M., Rector.

An Episcopal School for Girls. Have your daughter receive her education in a Church School.

Saint Mary's offers four years' High School and two years' College work all fully accredited by the Southern Association. Also Courses in Music, Art, Expression, Home Economics and Business. 20-acre campus. Gym and Field Sports. Tennis, Indoor Tiled Swimming Pool. Horseback Riding.

For Catalogue and View Book address A. W. TUCKER, Business Manager.

The Gundry Home and Training School For The Feeble Minded

Falls Church, Fairfax County, Va.

Established 1892.

For terms and information address
MISS M. GUNDRY.

The General Theological Seminary

CHELSEA SQUARE, NEW YORK.

The next Academic year egins on the last Wednesday in September.

Special students admitted and Graduate Courses for graduates of othre Theological Seminaries.

The requirements for admission and other particulars can be had from THE DEAN, 1 Chelsea Square, New York, N. Y.

The Bishop Payne Divinity School

The accredited Seminary of the Church for training colored men for the ministry. The curriculum covers the full course for Deacon's and Priest's Orders. The degree of B. D. is awarded.

For catalogue and information apply to Rev. F. G. Ribble, M. A., D. D., Dean, Petersburg, Va.

The Protestant Episcopal Theological Seminary Virginia

The One Hundred and Sixth Session Opened Wednesday, Sept. 19, 1928.

For catalogue and other information address The Dean, Rev. Berryman Green, D. D., Theological Seminary, Alexandria, Va.

STUART HALL

STAUNTON, VA.

Episcopal school for girls, maintaining best Virginia traditions of refinement and culture.

Thorough College Preparation. Varied General Course. Outdoor Life.

EIGHTY-SIXTH YEAR BEGINS SEPTEMBER 18, 1929

For catalogue, address MRS. H. N. HILLS, Principal

Episcopal Theological School

Cambridge, Massachusetts.
Affiliated with Harvard University.
For catalog address The Dean.

Chatham Hall

A Church School for girls in Southern Virginia. Thorough college preparation. General and graduate courses. Art, music, expression, home economics, secretarial course. Superb location; 175 acre estate, gardens, dairy; modern, well equipped buildings. Riding, swimming, golf. Address Rev. Edmund J. Lee, M. A., D. D., Box S, Chatham, Va.

DIVINITY SCHOOL

of the Protestant Episcopal Church in Philadelphia

42nd and Locust Streets.

Graduate Courses in Theology, Privileges at the University of Pennsylvania.

Address: The Rev. G. G. Bartlett, D. D., Dean.

SOUTHERN CHURCHMAN

Catholic for every truth of God; Protestant against every error of man.

EDITORIALS

Vol. 94. RICHMOND, VA., AUGUST 24, 1929. No. 34.

"NO CROSS, NO CROWN"

THE POWER OF THE CROSS OF CHRIST

God forbid that I should glory save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom the world is crucified unto me, and I unto the world. Galatians 6:14.

They that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts. Galatians 5:24.

I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me. Galatians 2:20.

Knowing this, that our old man is crucified with Him, that the body of sin might be destroyed, that henceforth we should not serve sin. Romans 6:6.

The Power of the Cross of Christ.

They were living to themselves; self with its hopes, and promises and dreams, still had hold of them; but the Lord began to fulfil their prayers. They had asked for contrition, and had surrendered for it to be given them at any cost, and He sent them sorrow; they had asked for purity, and He sent them thrilling anguish; they had asked to be meek, and He had broken their hearts; they had asked to be dead to the world, and He slew all their living hopes; they had asked to be made like unto Him, and He placed them in the furnace, sitting by "as a refiner and purifier of silver", until they should reflect His image; they had asked to lay hold of His cross, and when He had reached it to them it lacerated their hands.

They had asked they knew not what, nor how, but He had taken them at their word, and granted them all their petitions. They were hardly willing to follow on so far, or to draw so nigh to Him. They had upon them an awe and fear, as Jacob at Bethel, or Eliphaz in the night visions, or as the apostles when they thought that they had seen a spirit, and knew not that it was Jesus. They could almost pray Him to depart from them, or to hide His awfulness. They found it easier to obey than to suffer, to do than to give up, to bear the cross than to hang upon it. But they cannot go back, for they have come too near the unseen cross, and its virtues have pierced too deeply within them. He is fulfilling to them His promise, "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto Me." John 12:32.

But now at last their turn has come. Before, they had only heard of the mystery, but now they feel it. He has fastened on them His look of love, as He did on Mary and Peter, and they can but choose to follow.

Little by little, from time to time, by flitting gleams, the mystery of His cross shines out upon them. They behold Him lifted up, they gaze on the glory which rays from the wounds of His holy passion; and as they gaze they advance, and are changed into His likeness, and His name shines out through them, for He dwells in them. They live alone with Him above, in unspeakable fellowship; willing to lack what others own (and what they might have had), and to be unlike all, so that they are only like Him.

Such are they in all ages "who follow the Lamb whithersoever He goeth". Revelation 14:4.

Had they chosen for themselves, or their friends chosen for them, they would have chosen otherwise. They would have been brighter here, but less glorious in His kingdom. They would have had Lot's portion, not Abraham's. If they had halted anywhere—if God had taken off His hand and let them stray back—what would they not have lost? what forfeits in the resurrection?

But He stayed them up, even against themselves. Many a time their foot had well nigh slipped; but He in mercy held them up. Now, even in this life, they know that all He did was done well. It was good, to suffer here, that they might reign hereafter; to bear the cross below, for they shall wear the crown above; and that not their will but His was done on them and in them.—Selected by L. M. W.

WHITHER ARE WE DRIFTING?

W. H. Cox

Text: "God is a Spirit: and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth."—St. John 4:24.

THAT there is much misconception and confusion of thought about God in the minds of many people is evident to any careful or even casual observer. Some one has said that many people think of God as a great Policeman, or as a great orthodox Ecclesiastic, and, regarding Him as such, refuse to worship Him. Who would worship God when so understood and thought of? I wouldn't.

There are three things about God that I would have you pause and consider:

1. Jesus said "God is Spirit." St. Paul tells us (Gal. 5:22-23) that "the fruit of the spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance"; and in another place (Eph. 5:9) he says, "the fruit of the Spirit is in all goodness and righteousness and truth."

With these plain Scriptures as our guide, we may confidently say, that, whatever God may be in the depths of His infinite Being, or in relation to the Universe which He has created, in His relation to men and the life of men He is Spirit—the embodiment of Truth, Goodness, Love. The worship of God so revealed to us is designed to develop in us something more than a character of mere moral or legal correctness. It is designed to bring us into possession and manifestations of those gifts and graces which are of His very nature:—love, joy, peace—character as an inward state; longsuffering, gentleness, goodness—character in expression toward man; faith, meekness, temperance—character in expression toward God.

2. Walter J. Carey says that the mind of man is so constituted that belief in God is natural and instinctive. We can't get away from it. It is as natural to believe in God as it is to believe in goodness or truth or honor. We may argue from reason that an intelligible world must have back of it an infinitely intelligent Creator, or that conscience points to a judgment and a Judge; but in the long run the appeal comes back to a general instinct for God, just as we appeal in sport to a general instinct for fairness, or in conduct to a general instinct for justice and right. And if the general instinct for God is wrong, then we cannot trust our human instincts and perceptions at all. We cannot be certain about anything except immediate physical sensations, and even they may be a dream.

3. In Jesus Christ we see God revealed in Man and to men. "God is a Spirit," said our Lord. He also said, "I and my Father are one." The Spirit manifested in Jesus, therefore, and the "fruits of the Spirit"—truth, beauty, goodness, love, wisdom, strength—these are the attributes of God, these are God. And it is a fact of plain observation and experience that those who have known Him as He is, and have accepted Him and His salvation, have been transformed thereby. They found God, and life, and peace, and power. They made an impress upon the world that has altered and uplifted the course of human life in the world. Even today, real through and through Christians have a personality, a look, a character, a peacefulness, which make for life and joy in their possessors, and which influence history and humanity more than any other influence. And the secret of it all is that such Christians put God at the very center of their lives, not in mere sentimental profession, but as the first and supreme consideration in life—God who is Spirit, the embodiment of truth, goodness, love, as we see Him in the life and personality of Jesus Christ our Lord. That is the God and Father whom Christians worship, the God who is the saving and transforming force in all the civilized peoples of the world. That is the God whom the Church presents to the world, and which she calls the world to worship, and love, and serve.

Think what it means, to the individual, to the community, to whole peoples, when every man, woman, and child, hold as their ideal, as the end and aim of their lives, such devotion to and union with God our Father as shall develop in them the graces and attributes revealed in Christ Jesus as of the very nature of God. That is just exactly what the regular worship of the Church of God was designed to accomplish. That is just exactly what it does accomplish when entered into regularly, whole heartedly, and sincerely. To be sure, the whole work of transformation, either in individuals or in peoples, is not done, as by a miracle, in a day, or with one or two visits to the Church. A boy does not become a man in a day. He must grow. Ignorance does not give place to learning in a day. A changed attitude toward and desire for learning may come in a day, but the working out of the new desire and purpose comes by gradual and steady growth in knowledge. A changed attitude toward God, as is implied in the word Conversion, may come in a day—a changed attitude toward the Church, toward the worship of the Church, and toward all that pertains to the love and service of God—but the working out of the results of that changed attitude is a steady growth in grace and in the knowledge of God, even to our life's end. Of Jesus Himself it is said that He "grew", and that He "increased in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and Man" (St. Luke 2:40, 52). Blessed are the people who have their hearts and minds fixed upon God, and who use every means available to them that will help them to grow in grace as they grow in age. Not only will they find blessedness and peace and power for themselves; but they are instruments in God's hand to help others to find them.

Now, there is another side to that picture. What of those who do not love God supremely, and ignore or are indifferent to the means of grace which God has provided for drawing men closer to Him, that He may breathe into them the power of His own life? Simple common sense gives you the answer. You cannot keep physically strong unless your bodies are kept properly nourished. You cannot increase in knowledge unless your minds are steadily fed from the stores of knowledge. You cannot grow in grace unless your souls are steadily and regularly refreshed from the fount of grace. Nor can you hold a stationary position for long. Life is so constituted that it is in constant motion, forward or backward, up or down. Whenever the life ceases to move upward and onward, it pauses for a brief moment, like the ocean at the turn of the tide, and then the ebb tide inevitably sets in. The life that is not steadily developing and enriching itself, physically, intellectually, and spiritually, takes a backward trend, and steadily drifts down, down, down.

Remember, please, that the law of life is that of a gradual movement. Man does not plunge instantly from the heights of saintliness to the depths of degradation. A man with any sort of religious background, or in any sort of religious environment, will go on for some time, living on the religious foundation he inherited from his mother, or that he picks up from his wife or his neighbors—the crumbs of somebody else's religion. It may be that he will pull through to the end on this meager spiritual nourishment, but he can never come to the fulness of spiritual power and peace and joy unless and until he drinks first-hand from the fountain of life. Or, again, it may be that some day there will come a crash, a day when he falls from the heights to the depths. To the superficial observer it will appear that the mad plunge was sudden, but in fact it is never so. It is the climax or culmination of a long process of gradual deterioration, a process of which the man himself is often unconscious, but which nevertheless is going on, his moral and spiritual fiber shrinking and shriveling by unconscious degrees till one day it snaps. It is this slow drift away from what makes for a fine and sturdy manhood, in communities as well as individuals, far more than an occasional and impulsive violation of the moral law, that the ministers of God dread, and watch, and pray over.

With this grave danger clearly in mind—a danger as grave for communities and for nations as it is for individuals—I want to ask you to do two things:

Let me ask you, first, to turn your thoughts, in a serious, earnest, and prayerful spirit, to the members of this congregation as a whole, and ask yourselves if you think that, as a whole, they are keeping sufficient close to their Church, sufficiently close to God's own appointed channels of grace, to keep their spiritual natures refreshed, and nourished, and growing? Are our confirmed members, in your judgment, so neglectful of their spiritual opportunities and privileges as to be subject to that dangerous drift of which we have just been speaking? I want you to notice that I have put emphasis on viewing the congregation as a whole, and for good reason. If you, the faithful few who are regularly here in the Lord's House on the Lord's Day, were the only ones I had in mind, I should never preach a sermon like this to you. It is of that larger group, fully four-fifths of our confirmed membership—who are seldom if ever here, save at Christmas and Easter, to manifest any visible concern about what God means to them or what they mean to God; it is of these I am thinking. It is to these that I want to get the spirit of this message, and I am trusting God to use you as channels through which it may flow to them. Pray for them. Pray that they may be drawn closer, not simply to the Church, but to God through His Church. And be not content with praying and letting it go at that; ask God to use you as instruments in His hand to accomplish His purpose. If you are dead in earnest, and you want Him to use you, He will find a way to do it, and He will make your life count in ways that you never dreamed of.

Now, secondly, I want to ask you to lift your eyes and take a wider outlook. If, we as individuals, or as a congregation, think only of our own salvation, think only of our own moral and spiritual soundness, we shall not be worthy the name Christian. Our Lord told His disciples that they were to be as a light shining out to lighten the pathway of others; that they were to be leaven in the lump, gradually leavening the whole. If we are to be Christians at all, in the largest and truest sense of that term, we must think in terms as wide as humanity itself, and make our influence for good felt as widely as we can make it be felt. Jesus came to save the world, and if we have caught His spirit we shall seek to save the world also, or as much of the world as we can by any possibility reach.

But I am not asking you to think this morning in terms of the whole world. I do ask you to think for a while in terms of the whole of this community in which we live. Do you think that this community as a whole maintains an attitude toward its churches, and is as concerned about the religion for which the churches stand, as it need be for the real and permanent soundness of its moral and spiritual life? Mind you, I am not saying or even intimating, that this community is wholly bad. I know that it isn't, and I have often borne witness to the excellence of many of its people. What I am thinking about, and what I ask you as Christians to think about, is the general trend of its thought, its interest, its purposes, the direction in which its life is drifting. Is its trend, its drift, on the upgrade or the downgrade? Is it in a direction and toward an end that will enrich and ennoble its moral and spiritual tone, or impoverish it; draw it closer to God, or lead it further away from Him? That is the question I want you to face.

By a rough estimate recently made it appears that not more than ten per cent of the people of the District gather for the worship of God on the Lord's Day, and a lesser proportion than that do so with scrupulous regularity. Where are the other ninety per cent, what are they doing, what effect is it having on their moral stamina, not to mention the spiritual tone and quality of their lives? The things that occupy our Sunday hours may not be morally wrong in themselves, and, in their rightful place, may be perfectly proper, but to let any unnecessary thing absorb the service hours on Sunday morning has the appearance at least of ignoring, as if of incidental and secondary importance, the worship and the service of God. That is the serious aspect of the matter.

Now, as I go about in the community, talking to individuals in my pastoral work, I hear two things said by way of reply to what I have just been saying to you. I hear criticism of the Church, as though it and not the people had fallen down; and I hear slighting remarks about this or that preacher, as though the preachers were the stumbling block. It may be that some ministers are not as able or as magnetic and appealing as might be wished, but I do not know a single minister or Christian worker in this community, who is not doing an earnest and consecrated work in God's name for the betterment of this community and its people. If he has his limitations, bear patiently with him, pray for him, and help him in the good he tries to do. In any event, the Church should not be judged by either its minister or its people. It is perfectly true that ministers make mistakes, and sometimes are unworthy of their high calling. It is also true that some Church members are weak and wayward, and true that some, by deliberate intent, for purely personal ends, do things they know to be inconsistent with a true Christian life, and thereby bring reproach upon the Church; but to judge the Church upon the assumption that these represent what she stands for, or that she approves their shortcomings, is unjust if not dishonest. The Christian Church is as old as Christianity, divinely established by our Lord Himself, dedicated entirely and exclusively to making Him and His Gospel known to men, that the spirit and the principles and the power of His life may touch and transform individual and communities and whole peoples. "To follow the example of our Saviour Christ, and to be made like unto Him," is every Christian's profession, explicitly so stated in the Baptismal Service when he was made a member of the Church. "Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done, on earth as it is in heaven;" is the ideal and the great objective for which our Lord taught us to pray; and this petition, with the whole of the Lord's Prayer in which it occurs, is said at every Service of our Church. These are representative of the ideals and objectives of the Church, and by these should she be judged. The Christian Church, as an age-old and world-wide institution, was commissioned by our Lord to carry on in His Name the work He came to do and did do during His earthly life; and when, upon the sending out of His Apostles to the work of their ministry, He said, "He that receiveth you receiveth me, and he that receiveth me receiveth him that sent me" (St. Matt. 10:40; cf. St. Luke 10:16; St. John 13:20), He clearly implied that He would judge the world's attitude toward Him, and toward the Father which sent Him, by its attitude toward His Church and its work. There it is, not on my authority or in my words, but by the authority and in the words of our Lord Himself. That is the solemn truth I want to bring you to see.

One question more remains: What can we do about it? We cannot walk out and issue an edict forbidding this, or commanding that; nor would it be the right way if we could. Our Lord never worked that way. He held up before the world the vision of a truer and better way of life, and appealed to men's deeper selves to rise to that vision. He breathed into those close to Him the spirit and the understanding of that better way of life, then sent them out to breathe a like spirit and understanding into the world around them. How they changed the whole current of the world's life by their appeal to the better way of Jesus, and by their own personal fidelity to that better way, we know. All that I would ask of you is that in your daily lives, wherever you are or whatever may be your environment, you bear loving and faithful witness to the better way into which Jesus calls us, and, like those first disciples of old, let nothing nor nobody make you waver in your own personal fidelity to that better way. Just try to be sure that you are true leaven, such as God would want to put in the lump of this community, and God will take care of its working in the lump. And may you find the joy and peace and power the Lord is ever ready to bestow upon those who love and serve Him.

THE INSPIRED BIBLE AND HUMAN OPINION

By W. Bell Dawson, M. D., D. Sc,

PART III.

THE NEW TESTAMENT.

THE NEW TESTAMENT is quite evidently the continuation and the culmination of the Old Testament; and although there is a flood of further light, the old landmarks remain as they had been since the beginning. There is the same view of the seriousness of sin, and the need of repentance which man in his self-righteousness is so unwilling to recognize; for the opening proclamation is: "Repent." The same craftiness of Satan is revealed, in his temptations and deceit; but the long-promised Deliverer now appears who was to bruise the head of the Serpent; and He enters into that strong man's house and despoils him. Deliverance is proclaimed to the captives; because "they overcome that old Serpent, called Satan . . . by the blood of the Lamb." The final triumph of righteousness is assured, and the Kingdom of Heaven for all who will enter in.

We thus find the same lines of thought that originated at the fall of man, and which run throughout the Old Testament in its sacrifices, its exhortations, its predictions. All the former communications from God now come to their fruition, which He gave to His people during their training in preparation for the advent of the promised Messiah. We find also in the New Testament a far clearer light upon the methods by which it has pleased God to reveal His word; and we may thus better understand the meaning of inspiration.

The Teaching of Christ. When we look into the Gospels from the standpoint of inspiration, three things meet:—

(1) The Lord Jesus is communicating a revelation from God, for He declares: "Even as the Father said unto Me, so I speak." He places His words on a level with the Sacred Scriptures themselves; and from the beginning of His ministry, the people recognized this. "They were astonished at His doctrine; for He taught them as one having authority, and not as the scribes," who limited their teaching to explaining the writings of others. He also makes the supreme declaration: "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away." At the close of His ministry, in His final commission to His disciples to teach all nations, His directions are "to teach them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you"; thus placing His Commandments on a level with those given by God, in requiring all mankind to obey them.

(2) The Lord Jesus also maintains that the prophets of the Old Testament wrote of Him, and pointed forward to Him. He declares even to His hostile critics: "Had ye believed Moses, ye would have believed Me; for he wrote of Me." After His resurrection, on two different occasions, He explained this to His disciples: "Beginning at Moses, and all the prophets, He expounded unto them in all the Scriptures the things concerning Himself." And again He said: "All things must be fulfilled, which were written in the law of Moses, and in the prophets, and in the psalms, concerning Me. . . . Thus it is written, and thus it behoved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day; that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in His name among all nations" (Luke 24:25-27 and 44-47). In offering up His life upon the cross, He is thus the fulfilment of the Old Testament sacrifices.

(3) Christ wrote nothing Himself; but He puts Himself in the place of the Lord God of the Old Testament, in choosing those who were to write the Scriptures. He says to His disciples: "Ye have not chosen Me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you, that ye should go and bring forth fruit." A very important part in that fruit-bearing was the writing of the books of the New Testament; and we thus find again, as in the Old Testament, that the writers are divinely chosen. Another of the writers was specially chosen by Christ after His ascension. When He had appeared to Paul on his way to Damascus, He said also of him: "He is a chosen vessel unto Me, to bear My name before the Gentiles." The Apostle Paul recognizes that he was chosen even from his birth; and that when Christ was revealed to him a dispensation of the Gospel was committed unto him; which undoubtedly included writing as well as preaching. So abundant were the revelations made to him, that an affliction was laid upon him lest he should be exalted above measure. (See Gal. 1:15-16; 1 Cor. 9: 16, 17, and 15:8; 2 Cor. 7:7.)

The Gospels. The nature of the inspiration of the Gospels is made plain by the promise of Christ to His disciples. When about to leave them, He says: "The Holy Ghost, Whom the Father will send in My name, He shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you." This is the guarantee for the accuracy of the Gospel narratives, and the words of Christ therein recorded. On the human side, inspiration is thus primarily a matter of memory, in recalling the words of Christ; as well as severe self-control against the temptation of enlarging on the wonder of the miracles, which are described in plain straightforward language.

This promise, made by Christ, may well apply to others in addition to those to whom it was directly addressed; for only two of the twelve Apostles wrote Gospels—Matthew and John. Of the other Evangelists, it is believed that Mark obtained his information largely from Peter, with whom he was closely associated; and it is evident that Luke made careful inquiry regarding the facts that he records. We may thus trace out some less direct sources of information; but the promise of Christ may have included the Virgin Mary and Zacharias, who must have informed Luke from their recollection of the early happenings which he records. The declaration of Christ that the Holy Spirit would guide and direct the accounts thus written of His doings and His words, will therefore explain the whole. If any special emphasis can be given to this promise, that all things He had said would be brought to their remembrance by the Holy Spirit, it would apply more pointedly to the Apostle John, and the words of Christ which he so fully records.

The Epistles. The inspiration of the Epistles of the New Testament is based in the same way upon the promise of Christ. They foretold that the underlying meaning of His life and death would be made clear eventually. For it is notorious throughout the Gospel story, that the disciples failed to grasp the significance of many things that befell the Lord. When he said plainly that men would kill Him and that He would rise the third day, "they understood not, and were afraid to ask Him." And even after His crucifixion, the disciples speak only of their disappointed hopes: "We trusted that it had been He Who should have redeemed Israel."

In meeting this want of comprehension, the Lord assures the disciples that what they knew not then, they would know thereafter. In His parting words He says: "I have yet many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now. Howbeit when He, the Spirit of truth, is come, He will guide you into all truth. . . . He shall receive of Mine, and shall shew it unto you." And again: "The Holy Ghost, Whom the Father will send in My name, He shall teach you all things." This great promise is the basis of the inspiration of the Epistles which form the bulk of the New Testament.

When we look into the manner in which this promise was fulfilled, we find it to be the same as already indicated by Christ to His disciples; for "He opened their understanding that they might understand the Scriptures." Accordingly, in the Epistles, the Holy Spirit explains the full significance of the sacrifice of Christ, by means of the earlier Scriptures already written. This method of inspiration is conspicuous in the Epistles of the Apostle Paul, where redemption through Christ Jesus is explained in terms of Old Testament teaching from the Fall of Man onwards. In the Epistle to the Hebrews, it is also distinctly stated that the Sacrifices were instituted by the Holy Spirit to exemplify the manner in which access to God was to be opened up by Christ.

In the Epistles, there is also a noteworthy absence of any personal views or opinions of the writers; because of their self-effacement. They were thus enabled to write only as they were "moved by the Holy Ghost," just as the former prophets did. This attitude is specially evident in the Apostle Paul; for at that date the Greek philosophies were fully developed, and were used in arguments against Christianity. (See Acts 6:9, 10.) Paul was eminently capable of carrying on such discussions, yet he is led to avoid doing so; and he resolutely keeps clear of "the wisdom of this world" and "words of man's wisdom." The most searching reasoning in his Epistles is based upon the Scriptures and upon the outcome of the work of Christ, which he expounds by the enlightenment of the Holy Spirit; although he is well aware that to the Greeks such exposition is "foolishness". But he confidently throws out the challenge that the "foolishness of God" is wiser than human wisdom.

The Epistles thus afford a very remarkable testimony to the unity and consistency of the Bible; because the full and clear light which they bring out from the life and death of Jesus Christ in no way obscures the earlier teaching of the Scriptures. The great foundational truths of the Old Testament are further illuminated by the Epistles, instead of being superseded; and conversely, the most graphic illustrations in the Epistles, to bring out the significance of the death and resurrection of the Messiah, are taken from the object-lessons which the sacrifices afford, and the striking types in the services of the Sanctuary. This consistency stands revealed, because all things centre in Christ.

The manner in which the Epistles are inspired is thus entirely concordant with the other Scriptures: (1) They were written by men chosen by Christ Himself; namely, James, Peter, John, and Jude from amongst the Twelve; and the Apostle Paul. The names of Timothy and others are, however, sometimes associated with Paul. (2) They are the outcome of the promise of Christ, that the Holy Spirit would reveal the full meaning of all that had transpired during His life on earth. (3) They are essential to explain and complete the significance of the great themes which run throughout the Old Testament, regarding sin and pardon and access to God. The Epistles cannot be therefore set aside without disintegrating the Scripture as a whole.

Revelation. We obtain in this closing book of the Bible an insight into inspiration of the highest type, in which the human side almost entirely disappears. The nearest approach to it from this standpoint is the account of the Creation of the world, describing what took place before man existed; and the Epistle to the Hebrews, where no author's name is mentioned, so that it may come to us as a direct explanation from the Holy Spirit. This final revelation is also the outcome of the assurance given by Christ to His disciples: "All things that I have heard of My Father I have made known unto you." For the book at its opening is stated to be: "The Revelation of Jesus Christ, which God gave unto Him . . . and He sent and signified it by Angel unto His servant John." This further revelation, which the disciples could not bear while Christ was upon earth, the Father now gives Him to communicate. It is again Christ as the Word, Who declares what God reveals.

The writer of the book states explicitly that he put down only what he saw and heard, in accordance with the Divine instructions given him, (See chap. 1:19; 2:1, etc.) While witnessing all that passes, John may himself take part occasionally in the drama, and he may ask the meaning of what is shown to him, as Daniel did; but there are no views or opinions of his own to be found. Like other prophets, he is impressed with his responsibility to describe accurately the visions divinely shown to him; and he notes with scrupulous care the source of the words he hears, whether spoken by Christ Himself, or proceeding from the throne of God, or otherwise uttered. He was evidently aware that each detail had its significance as a revelation from the Lord; and he closes the book with the most solemn adjuration in the name of God and His power to punish and to judge, that no man is to add unto or take away from the words of the book (Rev. 22:18, 19).

Unless John was convinced that he recorded conscientiously what he actually saw and heard, this closing adjuration would make him a deliberate liar and blasphemer. The more carefully his book is examined, the more inescapable this conclusion becomes. To treat the book as not from God, but merely as the conceptions and conjectures of a visionary dreamer, thus places before us the same dilemma as the rest of the Bible, in regard to the character of the writer.

The consistency of the Scriptures is brought to its climax in this closing book. In the first place, there are in Revelation more than three times as many quotations from the Old Testament, or references to it, as in any other book of the New Testament, either Gospel or Epistle. The leading themes and topics of the Bible all reappear here, like rays of light brought to a focus. The great purpose of God from the beginning, to deal with the sin of man, to put down evil and to cause righteousness to trimph in the end, is seen in its accomplishment. This will be evident to any one who reads Revelation through, without even attempting to interpret its symbolism; for when all the contentions and the judgments are over, God dwells with men, and they become His people.

The three dominant themes of Scripture are portrayed in Revelation in their final phases, and their accomplishment is revealed:—

(1) The great realities that first came to light at the Fall of Man are shown as persisting. The condition of enmity between the Old Serpent and the seed of the woman continues; for the dragon still makes war with her seed, which keep the commandment of God. (See chap. 12.) But, finally, the promise to Adam that the seed should bruise his head is fulfilled; for "the Dragon, that Old Serpent which is the Devil and Satan," the deceiver of man from the beginning, is at last cast into the lake of fire. (Chap. 20.)

Propitiation for the sin of man through sacrifice is as clearly taught as ever. The Unique Offering is constantly referred to; for Christ is designated as "the Lamb" in twenty-seven places. He is seen as "a Lamb as it had been slain." The song of the ransomed is to Him Who has redeemed them to God by His blood. Those in heaven "have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb" (Rev. 5:9, 10; 7:14, 15).

(3) The kingdom of heaven, foreseen and described by the prophets of old and announced by Christ, is manifested when the time arrives. "The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ." The establishment of this kingdom takes place when the King returns to reign in righteousness, and when those who would not have Him to reign over them are slain before Him. This is in harmony with the Old Testament predictions and with the parables of Christ. (See Rev. 11: 15; 19:11-21; 20:4.)

These few prominent features in Revelation will serve to show the consistent character of the Scriptures to the end. There is no failure in the great plan of God for the redemption of man, as revealed throughout Scripture. The failure is on man's part; for many will persist in taking their own way, and will not follow the way of God, though so plainly set forth in this closing book in which all the threads running through the Bible converge together. It also receives the specific endorsement of Christ, Who says at the end: "I Jesus have sent Mine angel to testify unto you these things." The Modernist who disbelieves, explains away, and criticises the essential Way of Salvation, may well be cautious lest he not only fails to perceive, but also leads others astray.

THE SITUATION SUMMED UP.

For man, left to himself, life is an insoluble problem. Why is it that the ills and sorrows of life fall upon the good and the bad alike? When such questions are discussed, as in the Book of Job, the disputants can put one another to silence but arrive at no conclusion. If man turns to amusement and self-indulgence, he finds it unsatisfactory; it is all vanity and vexation of spirit, as Ecclesiastes tells him. If he follows heathen philosophers, and adopts the theory that he has already risen from the lower animals, and can shape his own destiny, he finds himself in a struggle for existence and a competition, for which the best end in view is race suicide. All his highest achievements in science and manufacture may be turned to the mutual destruction of mankind.

Man's efforts in the religious direction have proved equally futile. He has soon become doubtful of his charms and incantations against sickness and calamity. His sacrificial offerings degenerate into a refined selfishness, as a means of obtaining victory in war, or better harvests, as all heathenism proves; and this has led him to discard his religious rites in the long run, as producing no tangible result. More earnest souls have striven to rise higher, and to learn how God regards man and what He really desires from him; but it has not been possible by human wisdom or philosophy to find out God, or to arrive at any certainty regarding Him. This will be perfectly clear to any one who can displace from his mind all Christian ideas, and so study history.

In thus following out the restless strivings of men, the need of a revelation from God becomes evident. The conscience of man accuses him, and he is full of "a divine discontent". He comes to realize that unless God has spoken, revealing His character and His wishes regarding man, that he is destined to grope hopelessly in the darkness. The truly earnest seeker after truth finds this revelation in the Bible, where it culminates in redemption through Christ. The transformation of the dark and troubled soul, especially amongst non-Christians, when the Divine illumination of the Scriptures thus breaks upon it, is the most wondrous happening that occurs upon earth. If it passes unobserved amongst men, at least the angels in heaven rejoice.

The only means or faculty by which man can perceive spiritual truth as revealed by God is by faith. There is, however, much misunderstanding about this; for faith is not credulity. By faith "the eyes of our heart" are enlightened; by faith we understand; by faith we see afar, and are not short-sighted. The sequence is: We believe that we may know. We are here confronted again with the primal error by which the human race went astray; for the original Enemy, who first led Adam and Eve to disbelieve, is still the god of this world who has blinded the minds of them which believe not.

It is here that the great danger lies in a critical and sceptical attitude towards the Bible. The root of the trouble is conceit in those who think themselves capable of sitting in judgment on what God has revealed; whereas Christ says of them who receive not His words, that the word He has spoken shall judge them in the last day. This conceit darkens the heart of those who become vain in their reasonings, professing themselves to be wise; for those who walk in the vanity of their mind have the understanding darkened. It cannot possibly be otherwise, for they obscure and discredit the only available light there is on spiritual realities, by supposing that the light of their own reason and learning is superior. If the light that is in them be darkness, how great is that darkness. (See 2 Cor. 4:4; Eph. 4:17, 18.)

Yet in actual experience who are they that overcome in the battle of life; the victors over sin, that rise above trials? Who are those that have done the most in their day for their generation, on the lines of the highest service? The only answer is: The men of faith, who have believed the revelation that the Lord has given, and trusted in the promises of God. All biography will prove this true. What will those accomplish who blow a trumpet that gives forth an uncertain sound? Half-heartedness and compromise in regard to the Scriptures is an untenable position. A choice must be made, for the Bible is consistent throughout, and it must be accepted with an honest heart or discarded as unreliable.

The inspiration of the Bible is therefore no mere question of opinion for scholarly discussion; it is a matter of vital importance to each individual. For the Word of God is living and active; and quick to discern the thoughts and intents of the heart (Heb. 4:12, R. V.). The Word of God is the incorruptible seed, by which men are born again (1 Peter 1:23). The Church is sanctified by the washing of water with the Word (Eph. 5:26, R. V.), and by it the young man may cleanse his way (Psa. 119:9). The weapon of defence is the sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God (Eph. 6:17); and temptation is met by the Word which is written (Matt. 4:4). It is the nourishment of the soul; for the Words of His mouth are to be esteemed more than necessary food (Job 23:12). Prayer is based on the promise of God given in His Word; and without His promise prayer would be an uncertainty (John 16:24; 1 John 5:14).

We necessarily cut ourselves off from the whole category of blessings such as these, in the measure that we doubt the reliability of the Word of God, from which they flow. If we dim the only source of true light with the uncertainties of criticism, in like degree we leave ourselves to walk in darkness. It is notorious that human opinion is always changing, and can never arrive at settled certainty; but the Truth of God endureth to all generations; the foundation of God standeth sure, and those who build upon it need not fear though the floods arise. Believers now troubled by controversies will be vindicated "when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven, in flaming fire, taking vengence on them that know not God, and that obey not the Gospel."

(The End.)

THE PREMIER PREACHES TO PREACHERS.

On the occasion of the convening of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Ottawa, the Premier delivered an address to that august gathering of ministers and elders that contained some things pertinent to the whole Church today. The two Ottawa papers print a fine synopsis of his telling speech.

After stating that "The worth, influence and power of truth are growing daily," Premier Mackenzie King paid tribute not only to "my growing conviction of the place the Church and religion hold in the life of a nation and the world," but especially to the influence of the rural church and the country preacher. "Ministers in villages and small communities," he said, "all too infrequently realize the far-reaching effect of their work in training young people to play their part in the life of the nation in larger centres. There what these young men and women learn in their youth blossoms forth into the vigor of their being. Behind all the thought of public men on the questions of the day lie all the influences of their private lives. And I venture to say that no influence has been as essential, as powerful, or as helpful as that of the Church."

The Church's Business.

Premier King spoke as a prophet, when he called the Church back to her true ministry. He said:

"The greatest endeavor in the lives of men should be cultivation of what I term the right attitude. And in obtaining that right attitude there is no influence comparable to that of the Church—a Church not diverted by this sideshow and that sideshow, but concerned with the eternal verities.

"I frequently view with cynicism, contempt, and even grief, the advertisements I see outside some churchs, trying to compete with the movies, because I feel that the people who are drawn by that sort of thing go away with as little permanent profit as those attending some other forms of entertainment.

"Let the Church get down to realities; back to her true mission of spiritual things. And if the Church does that then the application of religion will take care of itself.

"If I were a preacher I would preach on this text every Sunday of my life: 'Let this mind be in you which is also in Christ Jesus'—that mind which is concerned with intellectual and spiritual things."

"As I grow older I become more convinced all the time that at the very bottom of things, at the top of things, yes, and all around everything, is the spiritual realm. All the churches, and the Presbyterian Church above all others, must emphasize that fact. All this is what lies closest to my heart, though I have waited many a long day to say it. If I had to sacrifice every other influence of my life, the influence of the Church would be the last that I would sacrifice."

These words from the Premier of Canada contain rebuke, exhortation and encouragement for the Church and may be well pondered by preachers and laymen alike. Whatever their political leanings, every true Christian will welcome such an utterance from our first statesman, who is not ashamed to publicly identify himself with the Church of Jesus Christ.—Missionary Witness.

FOUR IMMORALITIES OF CHRISTIANITY.

An Interview With Dr. E. Stanley Jones, by George W. Gray.

Dr. E. Stanley Jones, home on furlough in 1925, was urged by a Church executive to take a month off and write of his seventeen years' experience as a missionary in India. This book, The Christ of the Indian Road, became a best seller, to the extent of nearly 400,000 copies. Suddenly this modest missionary found himself an international figure. He was being quoted all over Christendom. His Church elected him bishop; he endured the office twenty-four hours and then resigned, praying to be allowed to go back to his work.

Last winter Dr. Jones was home again on furlough. Night after night he addressed great mass meetings in cities throughout the United States.

"I once asked Gandhi, the great Indian leader, what we should do for Christianity in India," said Dr. Jones.

"Gandhi replied: I would suggest four things: First, that you Christians should begin to live more like Christ; second, that you practice your religion without adulterating it; third, that you make love your working force; and fourth, that you study the non-Christian faiths more sympathetically in order to have a more sympathetic approach to the people.'

"I resolved to put these four points into practice. My chief emphasis should be the production of Christlike character. Since then, I have gone all over India and have everywhere received the most cordial reception. I have even been invited to preach in Hindu temples, and have had Moslem and Hindu chairmen preside at my meetings.

"The Indians see a distinction between Christ and Christianity. A 'Christian' is a member of the church system which India looks on as alien, bound up with foreign prejudices and superiority complexes, a prop to imperialism. But a 'Christian man' means a man of Christlike character —and in all India today there is no figure that stands so high as Jesus. That is one of the major developments of the last decade. The Mohammedan leader of India praised Gandhi as 'that Christlike man'. And the leader of the bitterly anti-Christian organization extolled their hero Gandhi as 'this modern Christ'.

"But hundreds of thousands in India who reverence Christ will not go into Christian churches to hear about Him. No wonder! Two years ago a great Christian conference was held in Switzerland. All the leading denominations but one were there, and the purpose was to consider the reunion of the churches. But they were so far apart that the delegates could not even join together in the Lord's Supper.

"In India, prominent Roman Catholics have joined in our conferences, where we meet, not to argue, but simply to share our experience of Christ. It is remarkable how close we find ourselves—Catholics, Protestants, High, Low, and Evangelical—when we simply ignore our denominational label and all they imply, and think in terms of Christ's standards only.

"I travel all over India, but I will not hold a meeting in a city unless the missionaries there unite. We are in a state of Almost in India. Never would united spiritual backing from America and Europe count so much as now—but the mother churches are preoccupied with divisions, differences, petty squabbles for prestige, fundamentalism, modernism, the fear of the Pope. Oh, for a cleansing down to relevancy, to reality—a clearing of the way for Christ.

"Four great hindrances stand in the way. First is this religious snobbery, the ugly side of denominationalism. Second is the appalling dearth of reality in the religious life of great numbers of professed Christians. Third is race prejudice. Fourth is economic exploitation.

"Four great immoralities of Christianity—that is the way the East regards them. Everywhere the world is demanding of religion that it be lived and not merely talked. The greatest Hindu teacher of modern times, Swami Shraddanand, was at the point of accepting Christianity. After a long struggle, he went to a Christian priest to be baptized. But he saw something there that shocked his moral sense, so he turned back and dedicated himself to Hinduism. It is not only the grosser hypocrisies that give the lie to religion. The smugness, the dullness, the mechanical routine that passes for religion and is only religious respectability—these things smother the soul.

"Reality is the deepest demand of this age, despite prevalent materialism. A big business man asked me to have lunch with a group at a very exclusive club. As we talked together after eating, they were no longer millionaires—they were men wanting God. One of them rode with me to my next appointment. 'I want you to pray for me, please,' he said. 'I have money, possessions, everything but the real thing. And I want it.'

"In another American city a wealthy society woman asked me to dine at her home. 'Somebody inveigled me into reading your book,' she said. 'I dipped into it only to keep a promise. After I started I had to read it through. Then I sat down by the fire to think it over, and a warm, healing presence came into my heart. Since then I've been straightening up my heart. I used to be snobbish and use people to my purposes. But now I feel differently—more charitable. I had refused to be president of a musical society because there mere too many Jews in it. Now I'll take the office. I'm ashamed of my snobbery, my selfishness, my hatreds.'

"A person cannot pattern his life after Christ's and at the same time snub or lord it over other people. A recognition of brotherhood must follow.

"Everything in the United States that touches on racial animosities, color prejudices, exploitation of weaker people, is headlined in the Indian papers. Years ago when speaking in the Punjab, a man in the audience blurted out, 'What do you think of the K.K.K.?' I had hardly heard of the revival of the Ku Klux Klan then, yet the Indians knew of it.

"At another meeting I was interrupted with this question, 'What are you doing in regard to the rights of the Indians in America?' And another sent up this written question: 'After the passage of your immigration law in America, aren't you ashamed to desecrate the platforms of India?'

"Asia's grievance is not against our right to exclude immigration, but against our discrimination. If India, China and Japan were put on the same quota basis as the rest of the world, only two hundred and fifty people from these countries would have to be admitted. The subject is such a sore point with Asiatic nations that it is impossible for our government to get their cooperation to stop smuggling many times that number into the United States annually.

"'Jesus is ideal and wonderful,' said Bara Dada, the philosopher of India, 'but you Christians—you are not like Him.'

"When Christian people cease to exploit weaker peoples—when they quit discriminating solely because of race and color—when they adopt religion as a life to be lived rather than a lot of things to do—when the denominations begin to practice genuine good will among themselves and also toward the non-Christian world—then, and then only, will the road be cleared for Christ through the highways of the earth."—The American Magazine.

AT THE PLACE OF THE SEA.

Have you come to the Red Sea place in your life,
Where, in spite of all you can do,
There is no way out, there is no way back,
There is no other way but through?
Then wait on the Lord, with a trust serene,
Till the night of your fear is gone;
He will send the winds, He will heap the floods,
When He says to your soul, "Go on!"

And His hand shall lead you through, clear through,
Ere the watery walls roll down;
No wave can touch you, no foe can smite,
No mightiest sea can drown.
The tossing billows may rear their crests,
Their foam at your feet may break,
But over their bed you shall walk dry-shod
In the path that your Lord shall make.

In the morning watch, 'neath the lifted cloud,
You shall see but the Lord alone,
When He leads you forth from the place of the sea,
To a land that you have not known;
And your fears shall pass as your foes have passed,
You shall no more be afraid;
You shall sing His praise in a better place,
In a place that His hand hath made.

—Annie Johnson Flint.

SANCTUM SERMON.

Dear readers, the theme of our Sanctum Sermon this week is "What Is Public Worship?"

Some go to church just for a walk;
Some to stare and laugh and talk;
Some go there to meet a friend,
Some their idle time to spend;
Some for general observation,
Some for private speculation;
Some to seek or find a lover,
Some a courtship to discover.
Some go there to use their eyes
And newest fashions criticise.
Some to show their own smart dress,
Some their neighbor's to assess.
Some to scan a robe or bonnet,
Some to price the trimming on it;
Some to learn the latest news,
That friends at home they may amuse.

Some to gossip, false and true,
Safe hid within the sheltering pew;
Some go there to please the squire,
Some his daughters to admire;
Some the parson go to fawn;
Some to lounge and some to yawn,
Some to claim the parish doles;
Some for bread and some for coals.

Some because it's thought genteel,
Some to vaunt their pious zeal;
Some to show how sweet they sing,
Some how loud their voices ring.
Some the preacher go to hear,
His style or voice to praise or jeer;
Some forgiveness to implore,
Some their sins to varnish o'er:
Some to sit and doze and nod,
But few to kneel and worship God.

Orange (Va.) Observer.

AN UNBIASED VIEW OF RUSSIA.

The Toronto Star has rendered a real service to its readers in publishing a series of articles by Henry Somerville, written after a tour of Russia. The staff reporter has given such an illuminating picture of things as they are in Russia, that one feels that really the veil has been lifted.

The articles have been very ably written and have been a narration of converse with officials and others, and the story of contacts with every condition of life in Russia.

In his closing article Mr. Somerville leaves the historic and the narration of scenes and events—the stories of things as he saw them—to the consideration or the interpretation of the descriptive utterances of his previous articles.

We have been intensely interested in his summing up of the whole situation. Mr. Somerville is writing for the secular press; he is not speaking from the viewpoint of the Christian; and yet, his interpretation confirms revelation in a remarkable way. He sums up in three paragraphs as follows:

"This brings us to the heart of the problem of Russia. Communism has achieved political stability and has made marked economic progress. It has improved, and continues to improve, the social conditions of the population. So far, so good. But all it has done, it has done as the outcome of its peculiar philosophy, its creed—one might say its religion, though it is anti-religious—that gives everything in Russia a character and tendency alien from, and antagonistic to, the rest of the world, especially the Christian world.

"By the law of its being, Communism feels compelled to wage war on religion. All the children and youth of Russia are educated to believe that religion is a fraud, that God is a bogey, that a future life is a myth exploited to prevent the masses of the people from attending to their material interests in this life, that the family is an institution bound up with ideas of private property and must disappear with the development of Communism, that marriage is nothing more than cohabitation, to be ended at will—not even by mutual consent, but at the desire of either party.

"After my return from Russia I was explaining the Soviet marriage code to the law professor of a world-famous university and he remarked, 'That is simply the old Roman law of divorce except that Roman divorce involved more consequences affecting private property'. I remembered then the terrible description of Roman life in the first chapter of St. Paul's Epistle to the Romans."

We believe that this writer has given us here in his parallel to the Roman conditions and his calling attention to that first chapter of Paul's Epistle to the Romans a vivid picture of the sequel to Communism in Russia. Let our readers refer to that chapter and read over carefully that which the Apostle there depicts when men deliberately refuse to have God in their knowledge. The penalty is sure. Man may do all that he can with modern science to evade the consequences of sin, but there is that which God hath made in the very condition of things that determines the fact that "What a man soweth, that shall he also reap," and "They that sow to the flesh, shall of the flesh reap corruption." Three times in that chapter referred to, the Apostle Paul uses the tremendous statement "God gave them up"; "God gave them up"; "God gave them up."

This God, made a laughing-stock to the boys and girls of Russia today, has simply to withdraw His hand, to withhold Himself, to give men up to their own devices—to bring upon them the most fearful sentence for their sins.

To the Christian, the closing words of Mr. Somerville are of tremendous significance. He says: "Encouraged by its practical success Russian Communism is making itself a dogmatic religion with a world mission of propaganda, ready to spread itself and defend itself, like Islam of old, by the sword."

The Russian situation must be considered by the world and by the Church. No one can remain neutral or indifferent to the menace of Communism to the rest of the nations.

The Christian Challenge in Russia.

While, perhaps, there never was a time in history when mission work in Russia was a more difficult problem than now, the Church ought to stand ready to do all within her power to press the Gospel immediately through every possible avenue.

Mr. Prokhanoff has had an open door presented to him for the spreading of the Word of God; and as leader of the All-Evangelical Christian Union of Russia, appeals to Christians in this country to supply him with means for the printing of the Scriptures, which is still possible, and to aid him in their wide circulation. How long this door will remain open for him or the liberty be granted to him, no one can tell; but at the present time he is appealing for money for the printing of an edition of the New Testament and of the whole Bible, and to aid him in carrying on his work of spreading the Gospel throughout Russia. He is leader of a group of churches scattered all the way from East to West in that great land. His character has been without reproach, and he has been doing everything that he can to maintain the purity of the Church and the teaching of the New Testament amongst all his people. We were recently speaking with one who has known him in Russia for nearly a score of years, and the testimony to his influence as a Christian and to his work in that land was strong and has no shadow upon it.

We wish that our readers would see the opportunity as we see it and that they would respond to his appeal in such a way that there would be no delay in what may be a final opportunity of witness-bearing through the Word of God in that land. All gifts may be sent to this office and will be passed on to him for that work—The Evangelical Christian.

ITALY INAUGURATES NEW MARRIAGE LAW.

Rome, August 8 (A.P.).—Today throughout Italy the new marriage rules and regulations called for by the Lateran Treaties between Italy and the Holy See came into force and wherever young couples went to the altar to be bound in matrimony they listened to the priest's explanation that now and henceforth marriage by the Church is sufficient and marriage by the State is not necessary.

There was a great rush of young couples to avail themselves of the new simplified procedure, many having put off their marriage date until the accord went into effect. Practically every parish priest had several marriages to perform this morning.

During the last several weeks the priests of the kingdom have been studying the instructions issued by the Vatican and at the same time the newspapers have been acquainting the people with what they must do.

Fundamentally the new regulations do not make radical changes. All they do is to bring marriages by the Church, which several generations of anti-clerical politicians in Italy had lowered in standing, equal to the status employed by marriage by the Church in America. Previous to the Lateran accord persons also had to be married by the State, otherwise their Church marriage had no standing in the eyes of the civil law.

Form of Notice Changed.

Accompanying this fundamental change, however, are a number of interesting detailed regulations. Among these is the publication of the intention of the man and woman to marry, which also calls upon any one to offer objections to the union who may have them to offer.

Up to now this publication, consisting of a kind of printed handbill, had been pasted on a bulletin board outside the City Hall. Henceforth a handbill will be posted within the parish churches of the couple for at least eight days before the marriage, and also at the City Hall. The priest will continue the custom of announcing the forthcoming marriage from the altar for at least fifteen days before the wedding.

Close cooperation between the ecclesiastical and civil authorities seems to mark the matrimonial section of the treaties. The priest who performs the marriage notifies the Italian equivalent of the country clerk within five days, giving names and details of the parties to the marriage. The priest explains to the couple not only the regulations of the Church, but also those of the State.

Husband Head of Family.

American women who may have opinions to the contrary will be surprised to learn that the section of the civil code read by the priest stipulates that the husband, and no other, is the head of the family. The section reads:

"Matrimony imposes on the parties the reciprocal obligation of fidelity and assistance.

"The husband is the head of the family. The wife adopts his civil condition, assumes his name and is obliged to accompany him wherever he believes it best to establish his residence.

"The husband has the duty of protecting his wife, of keeping her near him, and of furnishing her with all that is necessary for the needs of life in proportion to his possessions.

"The wife ought to contribute to the maintenance of the husband if he has not sufficient means."

The instructions to the priests issued by the Congregation of the Sacraments declare that a previous marriage by one of the parties performed only by the State will not be a bar to the remarriage of that party to another person, the second marriage to be performed by the Church. But in that case the priest is to refer the matter to the bishop of the diocese, who will make the final decision.

Italians regard the new state of affairs with approval. The change has been made without a murmur of dissent. Citizens expressed appreciation of the new laws, saying they obviate a good deal of duplication and eliminate considerable embarrassment.—New York Times.

Book Reviews

THE GOSPEL OF DIVINE PERSONALITY: THE SELF-REVELATION OF CHRIST IN THE GOSPEL OF ST. JOHN: by William Samuel Bishop, D. D. (London: The Faith Press; and Milwaukee: Morehouse Publishing Company. $1.00.)

The book is a fine specimen of the kind of study of Holy Scripture that is really helpful to believers, bringing them into vital contact with its high spiritual import. The critical approach, necessary though it be for experts and students, is happily absent—happily for the author's purpose.

Dr. Bishop is a very competent writer in Dogmatic Theology, especially in Trinitarian subjects, and in this book he exhibits the proper fruit of dogmatic study—clear apprehension of the spiritual values and applications of sound doctrine concerning Christ. Instinctively, as he turns from the necessary technicalities of theology to the purpose of this book, he writes simply; and he has produced a book for Everyman, rich in devotional atmosphere, in harmony with St. John's Gospel, and the very best kind of introduction to the study of Scripture, the kind which most counts. I am glad too that he reckons the Fourth Gospel as St. John's. The book is full of precious thoughts, too many to permit detailed review here. I can only say that those who follow my advice to get it, and brood through it, will not regret having done so. The book has helped me.—Prof. F. S. Hall, D. D., in The Living Church.

THE CATECHISM TODAY: By the Rt. Rev. G. Ashton Oldham, D. D. Cloth. Pp. 143. Published by Longmans, Green & Company, New York City. Price, $1.00.

Prof. Randall C. Hall, of the General Theological Seminary in the long ago days, was wont to say that in all his teaching nothing remained in his mind with such fragrance of effective ministry as the classes in his parish work in which he taught the Catechism. There are sweet juices in that antiquated document which are as fresh today as they ever were, if in the hands of those who discover them for themselves, there is a longing to impart the knowledge to others.

Bishop Oldham has taken a timely opportunity to arouse in the hearts of indifferent or even hostile rectors and equally unsympathetic Church school teachers, the disposition to look again into this venerable compendium of Church teaching for a fresh vision of its applicability to our modern life. Human nature never changes, though fashions and habits do. Humanity is always the same impressionable wax upon which the wise teacher may make the indelible impress of sound teaching. For what was econcomitent with life when this Catechism was first set forth, is true of the human heart today. Wise is he who sees with his Lord the possibility of bringing out things old as well as new from the treasures of God's providing. Let Bishop Oldham allure you to this pursuit.

Kenneth Mackenzie.

FAVORITE SCRIPTURE VERSES.

(In this space each week will appear a favorite passage of Scripture as sent in by a different reader. Every one is, therefore, invited to send us their favorite verse. It is suggested that all who can, join with the rest of us in committing to memory the verse which so appears here each week, including its location in the Holy Book; and in due time your memory chest will be laden with choice eternal treasures, indeed. "Thy word have I hid in my heart, that I might not sin against thee," Ps. 119:11.)

This week the following verse was submitted by J. G. Holladay Mitchell, Petersburg, Va.:

> There is no fear in love; but perfect love casteth out fear; because fear hath torment. He that feareth is not made perfect in love.—1 John 4:18.

Who will send one from the far-away places as well as very near us?

Letters to the Editor

In this Department the Editor will at all times welcome communications expressing opinions on the various topics which are engaging the attention of the Church. But the Editor will not hold himself responsible for such opinions.

No "Letters to the Editor" will appear in our columns except those coming to us signed by writer.

Mr. Editor:

Thank you very much for letting me see Dr. Cumming's and Mr. Nelson's letters. What it seems to me is needed is to bring together the reasonable people of all the three schools of thought in the Church in order to prevent the extremes from throwing it into utter confusion. There are limits within which differences of opinion and varieties of practice are not only permissible but useful. The moderate High Church, the moderate Evangelical, the moderate Liberal, represent natural differences of viewpoint. The creeds, based on Holy Scripture, the Prayer Book and the laws and customs of the Church provide ample room for these differences, provided they are held in check by a deep sense of loyalty to the Church's standards which restrains one from going beyond them and a sympathetic consideration for the views of others which keeps one from doing or saying what would give offence or be misunderstand even where it might be thought lawful in itself. "All things are lawful, but all things are not expedient." The difficulty now is that both among the Liberals and among the Anglo-Catholics, and doubtless among us Evangelicals also, there are a great many who seem to feel but little restraint. Some of them would make "reason" the only criterion, others "catholic custom", and others their own individual fancies, tastes or impulses.

It is obvious that if each person is free to set his own standards, you get chaos instead of catholicity. It does seem to me that the wisest plan in the present state of the Christian religion is for each person to hold himself within the limits of the particular branch of the Church to which he belongs, provided, of course, that those limits are set wide enough to allow for the different viewpoints which have been recognized in the history of his Church. It may be that ultimately the different branches will be brought together into a Church Catholic whose limits will be much more inclusive than those of any single branch.

We ought, I think, to keep that end in view, to work towards its realization, to pray for it, to form the habit of thinking of other branches of the Church as being just as truly as ourselves a part of the Church Catholic. We ought to perceive and to emphasize the fact that the things that unite go deeper than those which divide, that fundamentally we are "one body". We must learn how to act together against sin and unbelief. Yet at the same time we must act and speak in conformity with and in loyalty to the doctrine, laws and customs of our own Branch of the Church. To disregard these would mean not an approach to the ideal of the Church Catholic but confusion.

I recognize, of course, that it is wise at times to allow individuals to blow off steam or to experiment as the English do in Hyde Park. How far this should be indulged in is a practical problem requiring in its treatment both firmness and sympathy. I suppose we always need in matters involving loyalty and discipline to bear in mind St. Paul's saying, "The letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life."

Pardon this long statement of the principles that, I think, should govern us in dealing with the present situation. If I can find the time I will be glad to write an article for publication. With kind regards, I am,

H. St. George Tucker.

Theological Seminary, Alexandria, Va.

P. S.—. . . I think the danger in the Anglo-Catholic movement is that it is an organized effort to carry the Church to a position which is exclusive of other viewpoints and beyond the limits of the doctrine, worship and laws of our Church.

August 15, 1929.

The Rt. Rev. H. St. George Tucker,
Alexandria, Va.

Dear Bishop:

Referring to your letter of August 3, which we insert in the Southern Churchman with your consent, I would call your attention to the fact that if every member or majority of members in the Church were radical, there would be no steadfastness or security, but if all were too conservative there would be no progress or growth. There is a minimum of belief without which one cannot be a Christian, and there is a maximum restraint which would be destructive of what we consider true Christianity. For example—the claims of the Roman Pontiff.

> "Est modus, in omnibus rebus infra quos extra quos non potest fieri."

When there is an organized Church body with definite and specific doctrine set forth clearly and concisely in our Apostle's and Nicene Creeds, how can one in any honesty or with any consistency of belief cast off all these requirements of belief and still be considered loyal members of the Church organization? Let us have tolerance, but never compromise the vital truths and doctrines of the Christian plan of salvation.

We recognize that "Kind words are more than coronets, and simple faith than Norman blood." It is necessary for us to see that our kind deeds and kindly dispositions and misapplied hospitality, sometimes called tolerance, does not lead us to temporize with and admit like Greek horses into the Church, men of radical views and unorthodox beliefs who would abolish our creeds and deny our beliefs in the Trinity, and deprive us of a Saviour, under color and pretense of liberalizing the Church organization. There are quite a number in the Protestant Episcopal Church today who desire to retain the emoluments of office and the dignity and respect that usually attaches to the office of a minister or Bishop whilst being carried about with every wave of strange doctrines. They seem almost ready to deny the God who made them in their efforts to see, hear and propound some new doctrine like the men at Athens in olden days.

We believe in unity in the Christian Church, provided all those entering into the union will accept the fundamental principles of the faith and creeds of the Church as laid down clearly and precisely in the Apostle's and Nicene Creeds.

Milton tells us: How charming is divine philosophy, not harsh and crabbed as dull fools suppose, but musical as Apollo's lute, and the true Christian plan of salvation based on absolute faith in the Trinity brings full harmony, light, truth and happiness, free of any discord. "One Lord; one faith; one baptism." Let us strive for all embracing unity, but let that union embrace only those who really believe in the same thing. What fellowship hath Christ with Belial, or what fellowship hath light with darkness. So a Christian believer can have no part in any Church Union that embraces those who do not believe in Jesus Christ as our Saviour, and the only Redeemer of a lost world.

Kindest regards,

Langbourne M. Williams.

Mr. Editor:

Permit me to express my hearty appreciation of the work you are doing in the Southern Churchman. I am especially pleased with this week's issue. Your editorial entitled, "Estrays", is excellent and I am equally delighted with the article by Lord Brentford, and that on Archbishop Whately. I should like to see such historical notices of the beloved of the Church in past generations more frequently. John Newton and the Evangelicals of his day ought not to be suffered to sink into oblivion. The Evangelical Revival had its origin in the Church of England, and it was the coldness and indifference of the Church in that day that led to its going off in a split which weakens us today, not only in numbers, but also in sound thinking and spiritual power. I like also your quotation from Bishop Headlam. He is one of our wisest leaders.

Leighton Williams.

Marlborough, New York.

GOING ON A JOURNEY.

Mr. Editor:

